

CLASS

BOOK

EARLHAM COLLEGE LIBRARY

(RICHMOND, INDIANA)

BOUGHT WITH THE LIBRARY FUND

ACCESSION No.

19773

EARLHAM COLLEGE,
RICHMOND,
IND.

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 1.

FIRST MONTH 6, 1916

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 1.

A New Year Greeting

By JAMES RAMAGE

May Faith be with thee thro' the year,
That realizes God is near,
That fills with peace and life and light,
That guides thee in the darkest night,
Whate'er thy circumstances be,
May steadying faith abide with thee!

May Hope be with thee thro' the year,
To smooth thy way and give thee cheer,
To sing to thee in cloudy day,
To pour on thee her gladdening ray,
However drear thy lot may be,
May heartening hope abide with thee!

May Love be with thee thro' the year,
A love that shall make duty dear,
That breathes in word and shines in deed
That's richer, grander far than creed,
That's quick to feel and do and see,
May strengthening love abide with thee!

May God be with thee thro' the year,
Thy hand to hold, thy path to clear,
To feed thee with the bread of life,
To crown with victory in the strife.
In this and in the world to be,
May God himself abide with thee!
—Christian Work and Evangelist.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

The New Year Comes

"The New Year comes with silent tread,
New hope, new joy, new light to spread,
It bringeth something new to each,
And lessons old 'twill newly teach.
It cometh, too, to take away
Old griefs and woes which fain would stay!
Oh, speed them, speed them, glad New Year!
Come, cast our bitter doubt and fear.
Speed in with silent, loving tread,
New hope, new joy, new light to spread."—Ex.

New Year's Greeting

THE AMERICAN FRIEND wishes a happy New Year to its constantly increasing circle of readers. It is a good time not only to make good resolutions, but to put them into effect in daily conduct throughout the year, remembering that he succeeds best who is best able to incorporate into his life the principles of Jesus Christ. May this year prove to be the very best year in your experience.

A Larger American Friend

At the annual meeting of Friends Publication Board at Richmond, Indiana, on December 28, it was decided that conditions warrant an increase in the size of THE AMERICAN FRIEND at an early date. The increase in special pages devoted to the interests of the various Boards and Yearly Meetings makes this decision almost necessary.

Beginning with the issue of February 3 THE AMERICAN FRIEND will contain twenty pages. This decision is particularly gratifying because it marks an increasing service which the paper is able to render to the church as a whole. We trust that interested Friends will pass this announcement along as an inducement to others to subscribe to the paper. The price will remain the same as heretofore, $1.50 per year.

A greater AMERICAN FRIEND ought to mean greater activity on the part of the various departments of the church and ultimately a greater denomination.

Friends Foreign Mission Association

Most Friends in America know something of the work of Friends' Foreign Mission Association of Great Britain. In India and China, in Madagascar, Syria and Ceylon they have done splendid constructive work that has been, and is, a real world-service.

The attenders at the last Five Years' Meeting remember with pleasure the services of Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin, who is the Secretary of the Friends Foreign Mission Association of Great Britain, and many have rejoiced at the splendid uplift given by him to various departments of work during the more recent visits he has made to America.

The terrible war in Europe has brought peculiar burdens upon English Friends. With all others they are taxed upon the right hand and the left, but they also have undertaken notable enterprises of relief upon the Continent which are applauded by all and command our admiration.

As might readily be supposed, the financial situation cuts into the support of their regular work and their foreign missions are seriously suffering therefrom. The Association is now confronted with a deficit of $25,000 for the current year.

It is believed that there are Friends in America who will gladly assist our English brethren in their distress. To these the situation makes a pressing appeal. The undersigned has been asked to receive subscriptions for this purpose. This he will rejoice in doing. He will acknowledge each amount received and will forward all to the Association's office in London.

JAMES WOOD,
Mt. Kisco, N. Y.

A Hebrew Legend

"You teach," said the Emperor Trajan to a famous rabbi, "that your God is everywhere, and boast that he resides among your nation. I should like to see him."

"God's presence is indeed everywhere," the rabbi replied; "but he cannot be seen, for no mortal eye can look upon his splendor."

The emperor had the obstinacy of power and persisted in his demand. "Well," answered the rabbi, "suppose we begin by endeavoring to gaze at one of his ambassadors."

Trajan assented, and the rabbi, leading him into the open air, for it was noon of the day, bade him raise his eyes to the sun, then shining down upon the world in his meridian of glory. The emperor made the attempt, but relinquished it. "I cannot," he replied, "the light dazzles me."

"If then," rejoined the triumphant rabbi, "thou art unable to endure the light of one of his creatures, how canst thou expect to behold the unclouded glory of the Creator?"—Watchword.

Shall we not all resolve to make this new year the best year of our lives, and the best for the Society of Friends?

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 1.

FIRST MONTH 6, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 1.

The Voice of the New Year

"I take special pleasure in commending the work of the Friends. Your Society has never been called to stand at a more important place in its history than where it now stands. The Church must hold to the program of Jesus or deny that Jesus is the Christ. There can be no middle ground on this. We have wasted much time and strength in petty discussions over doctrinal differences, when the acceptance or origin of them was of no value as to spiritual life. Now the time has come when the church must face the great living issue whether the teachings of Jesus are practical or not."

The above excerpt from a recent letter to the editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND from a prominent churchman of another denomination, both in its tribute to the position held by Friends and in its estimate of the mission of the church, is typical of a conviction that is being voiced with increasing frequency in many quarters. Shall it not be accepted both as a challenge to the best in the Society of Friends during the year now beginning, and a call to a more positive and constructive effort to visualize in deeds the high professions which have made our history glorious? Who shall say that this new year is not the call of Jehovah to our branch of the church, to come out of its exclusiveness into the clearer light of leadership toward those higher spiritual realities, which are so insistently demanded in the crisis that is now upon the world?

To George Fox, watchful and expectant, there came a revelation of a new and satisfying truth that the risen Lord of glory, even Jesus Christ, could speak to his condition. Henceforth Christianity had a new meaning for the world, for the presence of the living Christ in daily life became a reality to the multitudes who believed. In this hour of the world's darkness, when whole nations are groping for the light, and when men everywhere are turning with questioning eyes to the teachings of Galilee, there is need again for the voice of impelling prophecy, proclaiming with insistent faith and assurance the seriousness and practical value of the precepts of our Lord, as an answer to every question that concerns the welfare of the race. If at a time like this, the church is to question the authority and practicability of the program of Jesus, then is there no hope for a troubled world. Civilization is bound to rise or fall, measured by the standards of Jesus of Nazareth.

It is the Christian faith, not diplomacy, that is the ultimate salvation of the nations. It is the religion of Jesus, not practical politics, nor big business, nor the dictum of the "four hundred," nor unionism that is the final answer to the deepest questionings of the social and industrial order. It is the Sermon on the Mount, not the enactments of the Douma, or the Reichstag, or Parliament, or Congress, that will mark the climax of regulations for human deportment. It is the program of the Son of God, expressed in terms of human comprehension, that must become the program of brotherhood and good will for the whole earth, and the church of Christ must lead the way to its complete acceptance. Civilization will fail in the end upon any other basis. There is need of a church that will proclaim without flinching the simple but absolute practicality of the teachings of our Lord.

Is our Quaker faith able to meet such a test as this? If it is, then have we indeed a message for this age and all ages, no less important and transforming than was the message of George Fox to his own and succeeding generations. If we fail at this point, then will we fail altogether, and it will be left to some other group with a more heroic faith than we have dared to claim, to lead the way to a more satisfactory understanding of the meaning of Christianity in its relation to human life and its problems. The church is headed the wrong way that yields its convictions to the judgment of materialistic philosophies and fixes its ideals by the standards of the world. The ultimate authority for all men is the truth of Jehovah as revealed in the Son and transmitted to them through the Word and the revelations of the Spirit of God. Upon this foundation should Quakerism build, and all the kingdoms of darkness cannot prevail against it.

But if Quakerism is to be potential for greater service, it must do more than revise the discipline, or adopt resolutions, or speak sermons, or repeat prayers. It must do more, and we say it reverently, than preach sound doctrine, or hold its meetings with punctuality, or maintain its testimony with historic exactness. Creeds are good instruments by which to mark the division of the denominational sheep from the goats, but they are of little value to the man who is floundering and wants a light that will satisfy his soul. If the Society of Friends is to minister effectively to this day and generation, it must get beyond forms and ceremonies and historical observances, and come into the active experience of that abundant life, that not only takes "away the occasion of all wars," but finds therein the curative of all human ills.

There are many of other denominational faiths who believe that the Society of Friends has come to the kingdom for such a time as this. It is not a time when we can emphasize our differences, be they great or small, real or imaginary. Civilization is tarrying, waiting for a vital, meaningful, satisfying interpretation of the message of the gospel in its application to daily human life, to all humanitarian problems. It is looking for a people that dares to live the gospel and that thereby can induce the nations to practise its precepts. Its only hope is in being convinced that the principles of Jesus are practical and not idealistic.

Perhaps the Society of Friends alone cannot work this mighty transformation for the world. But each member of the church can do his part in living out what he professes, and the membership together can resolve to practice in a spirit of fraternity and good will the ideals that have become historic and almost proverbial. And the heaven is bound to work. It is the life of the yeast that counts. But a mighty truth is contagious and spreads with the rapidity of the whirlwind, if it can only find avenues of publicity. The course before us as a religious body is not wholly optional, for the obligation of an extended public service is too positive to be ignored. This new year can become a wonderful year for the Society of Friends and for the advancement of the kingdom of God through our ministrations, if we are only ready to make it such.

The Parting of the Ways

By FRANCIS C. ANSCOMBE.

Israel possessed a peculiar religious genius. As a nation she was able to make a distinct contribution to civilization. She was the first to develop a monotheistic religion; she formulated a moral code that holds good to this day; she conceived of a socialistic basis of society that has been considered ideal. For centuries she pursued her independent way, she was content to be singular; she did not desire a foremost place among the nations. She had a wonderful mission. She was the missionary to the nations. She was the world's evangelist. She was a commonwealth led by men who were seers, men who put conscience and equity before politics, men whose sole aim was to develop the national conscience and purify civic life.

In an evil moment Israel grew tired of her mission, she wearied of her singularity. She saw neighboring nations pursuing an aggressive policy, obtaining "a place in the sun" and extending their boundaries. Short-sighted politicians waited on the Chief Executive and stated the popular desire: "Give us a king to fight our battles for us, so that we may be like all the other nations." The theocratic commonwealth thus gave place to a monarchy. From this time on Israel adopted an aggressive policy, she became a military nation, and her kings were her commanders-in-chief. It proved a tragedy. The first monarch was a dismal failure, the second was called "a man of blood," the third so ruthlessly taxed and oppressed the nation with forced labor for his palaces and temples that at his death a revolution occurred which permanently tore the nation in two. The northern portion, Israel, lasted two hundred and forty-five years. During this period there were twenty kings, representing nine different dynasties. Of these seven were assassinated, one burned his palace over his head after he had been king one week, two were slain in battle, one met with accidental death and one was carried away captive. Four were murdered in forty years, and during two centuries nine stained the crown with blood. The chronicler says that every one of them "did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord and caused Israel to sin." The period was one of revolution, assassination, usurpation and corruption.

Conditions were not much better in the southern division, Judah. The kingdom survived three hundred and forty-five years. There were nineteen monarchs, of one dynasty. Of these five were assassinated, three (or four) were deported, one was slain in battle and one became a leper. Of the nineteen it is said of only four that they "did that which was right in the sight of the Lord." Thus, of the forty-two Hebrew kings, thirty-seven were men whose conduct and character were opposed to the true national development. Her greatest monarch, David, is remembered, not as a soldier king, but as a psalmist. The popular movement "to be like all the other nations" was an error. It resulted in national destruction. As a military power Israel was nothing; as an empire builder she proved a failure. She flung away an unparalleled opportunity to be the ethical teacher of the world for a brief career as a miserable monarchy. Her kings were mere puppets, they exhausted the national resources, they perverted the national faith and they drenched the nation with blood.

The real representatives of the Hebrews were her prophets. These men were the salt of the earth.

They embodied the national conscience, they preserved in some degree the national faith and ideals, they made permanent contributions to the world's ethics. Had Israel grasped the tremendous truth that her national mission was to produce prophets, psalmists and seers and to have evangelized the earth, who can estimate how vastly different the history of humanity might have been? The Kingdom of Heaven might have been established on earth a thousand years ago! Had Israel given her strength to the breeding of men like Moses, Samuel, Elijah, Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Micah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, John Baptist and Paul, who can calculate what the condition of western Asia would have been today? Israel had, as stated at the head of this paper, a distinctive religious genius. She was the logical teacher and evangelist of the nations. The writer of the book of Jonah grasped the fact that it was Israel's mission to convert the heathen. What if Israel had produced a thousand such men and a thousand psalmists and a thousand men like Paul?

The teachings and writings of the Hebrew prophets will endure throughout the ages; her kings are forgotten dust. The twenty-third psalm is universal property, the Davidic Empire is obliterated. It is ever thus. Rome's jurisprudence is observed in every civilized land; the Empire of Caesar is but a memory. The art of Greece is still our standard of beauty; Alexander's empire has gone the way of all the vast world powers. Only that which is spiritual is eternal. The Hebrew literature still survives; it will never perish. The Hebrew faith still lives; it can never be destroyed. These are the spiritual riches of Israel. When she came to the parting of the ways she failed to see realities; she missed her calling, she abandoned her mission. She perished, and the world has been poorer ever since.

It seems to the writer that the United States has, like Israel, come to the parting of the ways. Up to the present time we have been singular, our national policy and our national ideals have been unique. We call this continent the "New World." The United States has already made unique contributions to the world's civilization. It has shown that kings are encumbrances to modern life, that a titled nobility, a landed aristocracy and a state church are anachronisms. It has shaken itself free from caste, and has given the poor boy a fair opportunity to develop his personality. We have written such words as "democracy," "republic," "federal government" and "states' rights" into the world's dictionaries. We have had no great standing army, no colossal navy, no aggressive foreign policy. We have insisted on the policy of minding our own business. We have grown great and rich and strong, largely because we have concentrated our energies upon production and the development of our vast natural resources. Our country has been an asylum for the oppressed and has afforded a new opportunity for the unfortunate. The United States is showing Europe how men of different races may dwell together in untiy; it is showing how nearly fifty self-governing states may exist side by side with common interests and common ideals; it is showing how inland states may have the right to use the harbors of coastal states without discriminatory tariffs; it is showing how it can exist side by side with a neighboring nation without fortress, gunboat or sentry along a three-thousand-mile frontier; it is showing how a government of and for and by the people may be worked out; it is showing how liberty and fraternity and equality lead to prosperity; it is showing how a great nation can deal courteously and patiently with a weak, misguided neighboring people; it is showing in the millions of letters written by its immigrants to their relatives in their homelands how modern ideas and modern methods are to be introduced into old civilizations; it has taught England how to deal equitably with her colonies; it is silently, gradually, yet unmistakably, by its influence and example, making over the thought and life of the whole world. Is not this a wonderful mission? The United States is commissioned to teach civics to the nations. So far the task has been well done, but have we come to the parting of the ways? Have we become blind to our calling? Many would today tell us that we must "be like all the other nations," that we must carry a "big stick" and be prepared to strike hard. Have we not sufficient spiritual vision to discern what Israel failed to see? As we look at the other nations today, do we not say without any spirit of Pharisaism that we thank God that we are not like other nations?

The world is still waiting for some nation, big enough, brave enough, to fearlessly abandon the old way and cleave to the new. We have still much to teach Europe; we can save Europe if we will. If, however, we must "be like all the other nations" and put our trust in battleships and big battalions we shall be renouncing our true vocation. We have a wonderful opportunity. We have shown Europe a new way in national affairs; shall we not go one step farther and give the whole world an example in international relationships? May we not err now that we are at the parting of the ways.

Richmond, Indiana.

How Shall We Meet Our Crisis?

By CLARA E. BIRDSALL.

On a certain Sunday afternoon the writer perused some eight or ten periodicals, all shrieking for Preparedness, from the extravagant prognostications of Cleveland Moffett in McClure's to the fire-eating utterances of Col. Roosevelt in the Metropolitan. I finally took up The Literary Digest, which to my intense satisfaction quoted at length from THE AMERICAN FRIEND as to the ethics of the whole situation, striking the first calm, sustained note of the entire lot.

There is no denying the fact that the press has been captured by the preparedness exponents; that certain classes of "business men" favor the scheme; that the name itself of preparedness has a popular ring about it; that a large number of non-combatants who never take part in any controversy on modern questions, are frankly puzzled as to the attitude they should take on the matter. And if we who DO know very positively our attitude, say nothing and do nothing, the whole unethical scheme will go through by default.

The claim is made over and over again that any one who opposes a large military increase, who pleads for quiet, sane thinking, for the "real preparedness" of a national and international policy of arbitration, and an International League of Peace as against war—such people are termed zealots, fanatics, "mollycoddles," cowards! When real arguments are lacking, ridicule takes their place. The users of such terms involuntarily describe themselves, for "As a man thinketh, so is he."

But the peace party or anti-war people must bestir themselves if they would escape the fate of Germany and Europe. Prof. Bierwirth of Harvard recently stated he was in Germany at the beginning of the rise of the "war party." Small at first and feeble, it increased in energy. The anti-war party sought to restrain its activities. Psychologically, Prof. Bierwirth stated, Germany went through the same processes we are now passing through. Fear of the other nations was argued, distrust of their attitude, the spirit of "patriotism" was called upon, when presto! the thing was done. They have what they feared, and some say, sought, a gigantic war.

How marvelous are the minds of men! A military system of protection in Europe, consisting of fortresses, big guns, bristling bayonets, with their natural accompaniments of fear, distrust, suspicions, high tension, would seem to prove the utter inadequacy of such provisions for safety. Yet by some marvelous sleight of hand (or mind) all this is taken to prove exactly the opposite, and to argue that we, a western nation, with totally different surroundings, influences, ideas and ideals, should instantly follow Europe's lead and arm to the teeth. God grant we may not follow their lead in the result!

Now note the interesting divergence of views, and the mental processes of the two types of mind. The preparedness people, alarmed (are they the real cowards?), jump at once to the conclusion that this chaos, this "neurosis of war," is to continue and is to be the world's portion forever and forever, and no visions of a time when war is impossible, stirs the agitated depths of their minds. The anti-war people (the truly courageous) see beyond the present cataclysm, and think, pray, work and act toward a constructive policy for the world. To turn off the leaky faucet is not enough, but the whole system must be carefully gone over and replaced with a more workable, modern one.

The next few months may decide the controversy, and this is my reason for writing this article. Congress will be besieged by the more energetic on both sides. It may be that no one of the several bills for military increase will go through. The Preparedness people say frankly, "We must act now (hastily), before the present high tide of patriotism (furore) subsides." The anti-war people say, "Let us wait and glean the lessons from the present war, before we make such a radical change in our National policy." Dozens of Preparedness societies have sprung up everywhere, sponsored (and this seems to me significant) by the elite of society, by men well known in financial and military circles. These are able to unite on at least one principle, immediate action. Dozens of Peace societies have also sprung up, of various complexions, sponsored and officered by a different type of people entirely, humanitarians, social workers, "human engineers," as they have been termed. These societies seem unable to unite, because, alas! unable to agree on a specific program.

It will be seen this constitutes a grave menace in the present crisis. It is not that everybody in the United States agrees that we need an elaborate system of Preparedness, but that we do not concentrate our forces. What, then, can we do practically? First, it seems to me the various peace societies should lay aside their various names and unite in one powerful Anti-war Party. We should arise from our lethargy and act, talk, write, use our influence against the childishness of the press in ridiculing, reviling, scoffing at peace attempts, demanding news, but not adulterated news. We should make ourselves felt, proving to the doubting Thomases that we are courageous enough to fight for a better world-order, against our real enemies, ridicule, greed, inertia, materialism.

Every generation has its crisis. How shall we meet ours?

How Compulsory Military Training for Boys Works in Australia and New Zealand.

(Note—The following circular letter will be of interest to readers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND generally, since efforts are being made in many different parts of the country to introduce military training into the public schools.)

San Jose, Cal., XII: 10: 15.

To Educators of California:

Dear Friends: The writer, in this letter, not only calls on recent personal observations in the Antipodes but is also indebted to the publications of the New Zealand Freedom League, and the Australian Freedom League, "Conscription in New Zealand and Australia," "The Repeal," etc.

The compulsory military training of lads of fourteen years old and upward in Australia, and sixteen years old and upward in New Zealand, has been so thoroughly exploited in some quarters than an investigation into the practical operation of such a system, or its dangers, is justifiable at the present time.

Compulsory military training is claimed by some of its advocates to be different from conscription, but in practical operation it proves to be the same. The Defense Act of New Zealand of 1909 was made possible by the agitation of the National Defense League and by influences originating in England. The visit of the United States fleet to Australia resulted in a great wave of military enthusiasm spreading over that land, and one of the developments connected therewith was the demand to arm. The result of a combination of circumstances, seized by the militarists to their own aggrandizement "without any direct reference to the will of the people," and backed at first by some well-meaning educators, was that the men of those countries put their defenseless boys under military discipline to which the voters would not themselves pretend to submit.

Figures supplied by Arthur Watts, organizer of the Australian Freedom League, revealed extraordinary conditions. Even registrations were difficult to get. He shows that in Australia in 1914, despite the fact that the military officers had power to register boys without their parents' consent, the number liable to prosecution for non-registration at the end of the registration period was 7,324.

Official figures quoted in the "Melbourne Age of 31st of May, 1911," disclosed that to that date the total average of attendance for Australia at the statutory parade drills was 59,562 out of the total strength of 88,859 Senior cadets (18 years old and under) stated by the military authorities to be in actual training. The percentage of absentees from drill ranged from about 31 to 52 per cent. The "Age" adds: "It is plain that large numbers of cadets are shirking their legal obligations."

There have been very many prosecutions of boys under the system which in both countries is known as the Defense Acts. Non-attendance at drill from almost whatever cause necessarily constitutes a basis for prosecution. In the city of Auckland, New Zealand, of about 80,000 population, during the twelve months ending at an early date last year, there were, not counting withdrawn cases, a record of 770 prosecutions. There are reported, for instance, as many as 50 defense prosecutions in the police court of the little city of Invercargill, N. Z., at one time.

The administration of prosecutions has been very severe in many cases. The Act in both countries provided alternative service and assumed relief for members of denominations opposed to military service, but no relief for the many others who resisted drill because of religious or other conscientious principles. Here are a very few sample prosecutions reported:

Sydney Crossland, a Quaker lad, was, on account of religious scruples, sentenced to fifty days detention in Victoria Barracks, Sydney being released before half the time had expired. The Minister for Defense is reported as saying that immediate action would be taken to punish the "unruly" cadet. He was visited in a cell by a member of the Freedom League.

"Victor Yeo, a lad of fourteen, was, on August 25, 1913, sentenced to one month in Broken Hill Jail. His release was ordered after serving twenty days, but he served the full term, including another imprisonment of twelve days." A good deal of this time he was on bread and water diet, and for ten days of his second imprisonment he was locked up in a cell for twenty-two out of twenty-four hours.

"J. and W. Size made a statutory declaration that in September, 1913," when in detention in Ft. Largs, they were placed on bread and water diet in a cell with a stone floor. One night nine lads were in the cell, which was about 12 by 9 feet. They had only one blanket each—it was in early spring in that country—contrary to the regulations which provide for three blankets. On a second occasion John Size was kept in solitary confinement for ten days continuously.

"Arthur E. Ettridge was prosecuted in Adelaide in September, 1913," for failing to render personal service. His mother and a physician, Dr. D. W. Ray, gave evidence that the lad had been too ill to work. In spite of this the officer pressed the case, demanding ten shillings cost, which was refused.

"On the 21st of December, 1913, W. Bennett, of Dulwich Hill, N. S. W., was for the second time charged with preventing his son from drilling." He stated to the court: "I have conscientious objections to my boy being compelled against his will to become a soldier." He was fined twice. He had already been in jail for refusing to pay a fine in connection with the same matter.

The writer, when in Australia, met with equivalent cases. Australia seems to have become anything but a free country since it established juvenile military drill. These conditions are not, as far as I can learn, indicated in government reports or mentioned in circulars for intending immigrants.

John F. Hills, M. A., a well-known educator of Australia, has recently stated that in times of peace military imprisonment was inflicted on "over 4,000 Australian boys and youths."

The effect of military drill has been bad. The schoolmaster aims to make the child think for himself, which is exactly the reverse of the work of the drill-master. Dr. Howse, F. R. C. S., V. C. (gained in South Africa), of Orange, N. S. W., says that the present system of drilling boys is distinctly injurious to boys of nervous temperament. It creates indigestion, and distinct physical injury has resulted. He denies the physical benefit of military drill in view of the number of such cases, and states that twenty years of age is early enough to begin training. Thus the "Age, Feb. 18, 1914," when citing some of the hardships connected with the training camps tells of how a medical examination revealed numerous cases of acute dilation of the heart, etc.

The New Zealand Freedom League in its first annual report, 1914, when discussing the prosecutions in police courts which were found necessary in connection with the enforcement of military drill, says: "There are many instances of ludicrous absurdity, many of shameful injustice, and altogether one is impressed with the fact that boys from fourteen years upwards are compelled to mix with the worst characters off our streets, to hear of filth and crime from which they should be protected, simply because they object to be brutalized by the agents of war or because they happen to have been absent from parade." There has also been much testimony to the moral damage done to lads in detention barracks and jails and also to those who willingly participate in the drill.

Those who are opposed to drill from conscientious or other reasons, are often called "liars," "unpatriotic," "traitors," etc., and it is insisted that they do not know whereof they speak. Claims as to the presumed success of military discipline do not seem to be justified by facts. Colonel Heard, when explaining to a committee his difficulties connected with the Act, is reported to have said: "We are placed in a humiliating position; we are open to all kinds of insults; to all kinds of insubordination; and we are perfectly helpless."

An oath is demanded of the boys, which, in New Zealand, is as follows:

"I,, do sincerely promise and swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to our Sovereign Lord, the King, his heirs and successors, and that I will faithfully serve in the New Zealand military forces, according to my liability under the Defense Act at present in force, and that I will observe and obey all orders of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, and of the generals and officers set over me until I shall be lawfully discharged. So help me God."

This oath, we are told, was often forced by threats of fine and imprisonment on boys who were drilling and on those whose parents refused to consent to their boys binding themselves to so drastic a surrender of their consciences into the keeping of the military authorities. We may easily conceive of the attitude created in the minds of thousands of lads at a most impressionable age, toward governmental authority, when many are thus compelled to take oaths and others are placed in a position of disobedience to parental control.

"The Lyttleton Times of the 17th of June, 1912," when speaking of the scruples thus invaded, declares that the objections of parents to their children assuming solemn obligations in this airy fashion should be respected. But the hard facts indicate that after once surrendering to military influences it seems almost impossible to secure religious or civil freedom. They have gone.

"Before New Zealand came under the iron heel of militarism the only person who could inflict a fine upon any one was a magistrate. But today a military officer can impose fines on the boys under his care at his own sweet will, and, what is far more serious, can cause that fine to be collected by a policeman out of the lad's wages" (if he works for wages).

From what the writer can learn, the Military and Naval Board in both countries has acquired an undesirable influence and power over the teachers of state and private schools.

The general unpopularity of these conditions in Australia is proved by the fact that, according to the carefully collected reports of the Australian Freedom League, in two and one-half years up to the last day of 1913, there were 22,143 prosecutions of young people from fourteen and upward. There have been additional prosecutions since then. This was in a population of 4,500,000 persons, or about twice the number then in the State of California. Some church people, and labor unions whose working lads are affected very much by such laws, have been bitterly opposed to military drills. The Amalgamated Society of Engineers of New Zealand, when speaking of the Defense Act, appealed "to all thoughtful citizens to do their utmost to stem this drift into barbarism."

Any efforts to establish military drill in the schools of a democracy carry with them tendencies that are in direct opposition to the moral and political ideals that these schools are primarily intended to develop.

Military instruction of boys is not a valuable moral factor, but in practical operation is apparently the reverse. It does not tend to improve the national health, or seem to foster the sort of discipline that is wanted. The most satisfactory discipline for boys is that which in many excellent schools is obtained without the temptations and moral damage of military associations. The training of children in military ideals, however well intended, is a retrograding step. It tends to lure them from gainful pursuits toward illusive militarism. The burden eventually falls heaviest on the poor. It strikes at civil freedom and in practice leads to compulsory tyranny. A well-known clergyman of New Zealand has said of it, "It represents paganism in excelsis." To maintain this system a propaganda of jingoism and international fears has to be promoted in the community. Even Germany has not taught her boys how to kill. Shall we out-Prussia Prussia?

If you give the military or naval advocates an inch they will take an ell. You never know how far they will lead you. Militarism is the same the world over—first ingratiating, next seductive, then remorseless. Do we want it? Do we want even the thin edge of militarism introduced into our public schools.

Respectfully,

WM. C. ALLEN.

The Old and the New

The year is closed, the record made,
The last deed done, the last word said;
The memory alone remains
Of all its joys, its griefs, its gains;
And now, with purpose full and clear,
We turn to meet another year.

I will make it a year of faith and prayer,
A year of high endeavor;
I will crowd it with deeds both brave and fair,
I will act the hero ever.
I will travel God's path at God's own rate;
I will welcome both gain and loss;
Nor will I rebel when heaven's gate
Looks tragically like a cross.

—Herald and Presbyter.

Marriage a Type (Christmas Thoughts)
By LUKE WOODARD.

"Thy maker is thy husband."

"Christ loved the church and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish."—Eph. 5:25-27.

While the church collectively is the bride of Christ, the type may have an individual application.

Marriage implies union, oneness. He that seeks a bride is not seeking a servant, not her possessions, but herself. And on her part she desires not simply his, but him. She is not grieved at having to forsake all, even her own name. She is gladdened with the thought of what she will acquire, his name, his possessions, and above all, himself, his companionship, his love, his care.

Christ loved the church, his bride. Human lovers often take long and expensive journeys to obtain a bride. The Divine Lover came all the way from heaven to earth. To win His bride He left the bosom of the Father to be a feeble infant lying on the bosom of an earthly mother. He found His chosen deep in debt and paid it all; under sentence of death He died for her; a lost creature clothed in rags, He took of His own royal robes to clothe her; to win her He shed His tears; to wash her, He shed His blood; finding her in poverty, He endowed her with His riches, and made her the joint heir to His Father's Kingdom. Nor was His the love only of yesterday, older than the hoary hills it antedates the birth of creation. Nor is it the love merely of today.

"He loved us from the first of time,
He loves us to the last."

Fountain City, Ind.

Annual Report of Esther A. Balderston.

Much has been written and said about the slowness of the Orient, but in my opinion one thing goes faster in Japan than in any other place I have been in, and that is Time. It seems impossible that it is a year since I was reporting to you how well a newcomer is received here, and how amusing are first struggles with the language.

All the past year has, of course, been spent largely on the same work, going to Language School every afternoon and studying part of the morning at home. There were, however, two very pleasant intermissions in actual study, the first when Alice Lewis went home in Sixth month just at the time that Language School closed, and I took her teaching for two weeks. If anyone thinks it is hard work to teach in a Mission school, my two weeks' experience does not bear out the idea, for it seemed to me like great fun!

The second intermission was the summer at Karuizawa, where, by the advice of my "elders and betters," I did no studying whatsoever. This does not mean that I was entirely free from contact with the language, though, for many letters from the school girls proved very puzzling and taxed my small supply of Japanese to the limit to decipher.

In contrast to this feeling of how little I could understand, imagine the sensation of having a cousin arrive, fresh from America, who thinks, if only for a few days, that her predecessor by a year can understand and say anything! She becomes more disillusioned on that point every day and will soon perceive almost as well as the Language School teachers, how little second year students know. For the language takes a long time to learn and work at school this year seems almost the same as last.

But there are plenty of other things to make the years different. One is the six Sunday Schools which are under my care now. Thanks to Alice Gifford's good management, everything was running smoothly when they came into my hands, and I enjoy trying to help the teachers, who are all girls from our school, in a Normal class, and visiting one school each First day.

I wish you could see these children off the street, 20 or 30 of them, all sitting most properly around the floor of the Japanese home loaned to us, listening raptly to the teacher's story, with just an occasional little burst of mischief, or shift of their snappy black eyes to look at the queer foreign teacher who is visiting today. Some are pretty dirty, and some look as if heredity had handicapped their little lives at the start, but some are bright and quick as you could wish, and after all, they are every one lambs of His Fold.

In connection with the Sunday Schools, we have started having a Bible woman, Suzu Shigezane, to visit in the homes of the children as she can find openings, and to hold Bible classes for their parents and other meetings for the children. She is still in training school, so gives only part time to the work, which is necessarily small at first. This woman is under my care, although I feel I have not the knowledge and experience needed to encourage her in her efforts.

The Bible class I taught last year still continues, and is a great help to me as is also a class in the Meeting Sunday School on First day mornings. These things, together with the oversight of three Post Graduate helpers and a little committee work, serve to fill up my time pretty well and keep me very happy.

My feeling toward the work after one year is something like this. I begin to see more and more the tremendousness of the work and the task, and to feel my utter unfitness for to do anything, but still have a great desire that if our Master can use me in any way, I may not fail Him.

In our great experiences we understand each other. In our deeper joys and sorrows we are one. In our elemental passions, in our hopes and fears, our social distinctions crumble in the dust.—G. H. Morrison.

WITH THE CHILDREN.

THE CHILDREN'S SONG.

Father in heaven, who lovest all,
Oh, help thy children when they call,
That they may build from age to age
An undefiled heritage.

Teach us to rule ourselves always,
Controlled and cleanly night and day,
That we may bring, if need arise,
No maimed or worthless sacrifice.

Teach us to look, in all our ends,
On thee for judge, and not our friends,
That we with thee may walk uncowed
By fear or favor of the crowd.

Teach us the strength that can not seek
By deed or thought to hurt the weak,
That under thee we may possess
Man's strength to comfort man's distress.

Teach us delight in simple things,
And mirth that has no bitter springs;
Forgiveness free of evil done,
And love to all men 'neath the sun.
—Rudyard Kipling.

Not So Fast

"O, mamma," cried Blanche, "I heard such a tale about Edith! I did not think she could be so naughty. One—"

"My dear," said her mother, "before you tell it, we will see if your story will pass three sieves."

"What does that mean, mamma?"

"I will explain. In the first place, let me ask you about your story; is it true?"

"I suppose so. I heard it from Grace White, and she is a great friend of Edith's."

"And does she show her friendship by telling tales of her? In the next place, though you can prove it to be true, is it kind?"

"I did not mean to be unkind, but I am afraid it was."

"And is it necessary?"

"No, of course, mamma; there was no need for mentioning it at all."

"Always ask these three questions first when you are tempted to tell something about others."—Exchange.

A Straight Line.

Robbie was working away at his drawing lesson. Presently the teacher came around to see what progress he was making.

"Look here, Robbie," she said. "That line isn't straight."

"No, it isn't quite straight, I know," answered Robbie, "but I can fix that up later."

"A straight line never needs straightening," said the teacher quietly, as she turned away to look at the work of another scholar.

That simple remark which the teacher made set Robbie to thinking. "A straight line never needs straightening." How much better, then, to make the line straight rather than to draw a crooked line, which would have to be straightened afterward.

Besides, a line that has been partly rubbed out and then made straight never looks quite so well as a line which is drawn perfectly true and straight the first time. So Robbie made up his mind that hereafter he would try to draw the straight lines straight the first time.

A thing that has been done right does not need to be done over again. When we speak the truth we do not have to stop and correct what we have said. Let us try to do and say things in the right way the first time, and we shall find that life is easier, and we shall make far better progress than when we do or say the wrong thing first. Let us always remember that a "straight line never needs straightening."—Apples of Gold.

"Well, Why Don't You?"

By DOVE SATTERFIELD

Deacon Weaver and his grandson had just returned from Sunday School. The good deacon established himself in an armchair on the porch and his grandson sat down on the steps and opened his Sunday School paper, but he did not read; he sat looking straight in front of him. Suddenly he got up, and going to his grandfather's chair leaned against his shoulder.

"Grandpa," he said, "why don't you do it?"

"Do what?" asked grandpa, in surprise.

"Do your best," answered the child.

"What do you mean, William?" asked his grandfather still unenlightened.

"Well," said William, "every Sunday since I've been here this summer, I've gone to Sunday School with you, and every Sunday when you open Sunday School with prayer you tell the Lord we've made many mistakes; we've not lived up to our opportunities and privileges; we've left undone many things we ought to have done, and done many things we ought not; and we've not done for Him what we ought."

"And, Grandpa, why don't you? I've tried ever since I heard you pray that the first Sunday after I came, for I felt ashamed of what God would think of us; and I thought, 'Grandpa won't have to say those things about us next Sunday,' but you did, and every Sunday it's been the same thing. And, Grandpa, if you don't do the best you can, well, why don't you?"

The old man looked into the childish troubled face and realized that not only this summer, but for many years, he had been telling the Lord what had made his small grandson, in sorrow and shame, resolve that he would do the things he should and not do the things he should not. Was it only a set phrase he had fallen into the habit of using, or had he really been conscious of living too indifferently? He thought a moment and decided the latter.

"Well, my boy," he said, "cheer up and go back to your Sunday School paper. Grandpa has resolved, as you did that first Sunday, to so perform his duties that he can tell God something better next Sunday."—Advocate.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA
Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

CONCERNING THIS PAGE.

The American Friends Board of Foreign Missions has long felt the need of some channel through which to communicate regularly with Friends and others in North America who are interested in our work abroad. This department is started for the purpose of supplying such a channel. While it is physically impossible for the secretaries of the Board or for our missionaries on furlough to visit more than a small proportion of all the local meetings during the course of a year, 'The American Friend' can each week enter every home in every Friends Meeting. The Mission Board, therefore, will, through this page, hope to speak each week to the thousands of Friends who read 'The American Friend.' We propose to print here the latest news from our foreign fields and to give occasional statements concerning the work of the Board and the needs and opportunities which it is facing. Further, we hope frequently to describe methods and lines of work which have been used effectively among the meetings in this country for increasing missionary interest.

GENERAL SECRETARY STARTS FOR WEST INDIES.

Charles E. Tebbetts, General Secretary of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, with his family sailed from New York on December 30th for Santiago, Cuba. After spending two weeks visiting our mission stations in Cuba and after a similar visit to stations in Jamaica, they will proceed to Panama where Charles Tebbetts is one of the delegates to the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America, to be held February 10th to 20th. This Congress will be of similar character and importance to the great missionary conference at Edinburgh in 1910. All missionary boards or societies working in South or Central America, Mexico, or the Spanish-speaking West Indies will be represented by their ablest workers and secretaries. We as Friends are especially interested because of the work of the American Friends Board in Mexico and in Cuba and the work of California Friends in Central America.

After leaving Panama, Charles Tebbetts' family will return to Florida, while he expects to attend a conference upon mission work in Cuba at Havana, and to be present at a similar conference on Mexico to be held in Mexico City early in March. He hopes that it may be possible to visit our mission stations in Mexico before finally returning to Richmond about the first of April.

Frequent letters from Charles Tebbetts and other members of the party will appear in these columns, enabling Friends to follow them on their journey and to share the impressions which they gain from their visits to our missions and from the conferences at Panama, Havana and Mexico City.

THE STORY OF NICOLASA DOURINGUEZ.

By LENA A. HADLEY.

One of the most able and most inspiring of our native workers here in Puerto Padre is a woman who was converted a year ago in Raymond Holding's meetings.

When she came to us, she was addicted to the smoking habit, as is the case with so many women here. She has always been rather sickly and at the time of her conversion, had just passed through a severe illness. In accordance with the teachings of the Roman Catholic church, she had made vows that she would do certain penances if health were restored. Nothing had resulted from these and she was discouraged. She felt that she might offend God if she did not continue to keep her vows, yet saw no reason in them. She was very unhappy and dissatisfied and longed for something better. She was an attentive listener as Raymond Holding unfolded the gospel message and as its light broke upon her, she realized that at last she had found what her soul longed for and she accepted Jesus Christ as her personal Saviour.

Perhaps the first step toward her conversion was the placing of her oldest child in our school and Sunday School. He became very much interested and always took his "Apple of Gold" to his people who read and enjoyed it. He also talked enthusiastically of our work and gradually his mother became interested. Her second step, if the circumstances leading to one's conversion can be measured so definitely, was made when she joined the Home Department of the Sunday School under the direction of our native helper, Alberto Lopez. This she willingly did and as she studied her lesson from week to week, her interest continued to grow and her heart was being prepared to receive the message of which her conversion was the result.

Since her conversion, she has made a rapid spiritual growth. There is nothing in which she seems to take greater pleasure than in the study of God's Word and in being present in the services held in His name. I believe that she has abandoned her smoking habit and she says that her joy is complete. She is now a member of the church and is one of the most faithful ones that we have.

She has worked unceasingly to bring others to Christ and her efforts in this way have been quite fruitful. She has succeeded in bringing her husband and three youngest children and a foster child, two sisters and a brother, and a neighbor woman and her three children, making a total of twelve in all. Just in the last week, she brought a young woman whom she is trying to interest in our work. She believes in systematic giving, practices it and is teaching her children its value. She reads her Bible to her friends and explains it as best she can. Her purpose is to win souls to Christ and I believe that she is careful in her approach to those whom she wishes to win. To be sure, she has her defects and makes blunders but her heart is right and she is serving a loving Father who looks on the heart and knows her weaknesses. If we had a great many more as zealous as she is, we might be able to evangelize Puerto Padre. The Lord is wonderfully blessing her work and we thank Him for her life.

Puerto Padre, Oriente, Cuba.

PARAPRAPHS FROM THE FIELD.

The pupils at the Gibara (Cuba) Mission School have recently been much interested in basket making under the direction of Mary Pickett. This bit of manual training will certainly be helpful.

The Christian Endeavor Society at Orange Bay, Jamaica, has conducted the Sunday night meetings the past year and had an average attendance of 49. They have been very active in all lines of church work.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR
JANUARY 16

Topic: Luke 10:25-37.

In explanation of the law of neighborliness Jesus lays bare some very essential facts. In the first place there is no restriction put upon those who can become a neighbor. No language, color, education, nor political prestige is demanded. Nationality is of such minor importance that the term is unmentioned. The unfortunate is simply designated as a certain man. As a needy "fellow-man" he deserved human compassion. Neither Priest nor Levite had any right to allow political or religious enthusiasm to blind his spiritual responsibility to any fellow man.

In the next place there are certain things expected of one who finds his brother in need. The Good Samaritan could have pursued the thieves and murdered them for their shameful deed but the unfortunate would probably have passed away in the meantime and two lives at least would have been lost with no one any better off. Christ shows the wisdom of ministering unto the needs of the fellow man. The outstanding need here was to save life, not to destroy it. The thief could be taken care of at a later date. In the thief's case no doubt as in that of his victim, evil could be overcome only by doing some good.

Again this lesson teaches us that the true spirit of neighborliness is that of an expanding love, one that is not only concerned with the home but the state, the nation and humanity. A love for one's family should not exclude a love for those who live next door. An egotistic family or nation is as much to be pitied as a selfish individual. The family should be challenged by ideals that will not only make home ties sacred but will strengthen the bonds of society. In like manner "love of country, which while true to the highest in one's own nation, at the same time blesses every other."

It is a poor quality of patriotism that will tolerate plague, famine, injustice and vice while billions of money are expended in building engines for greater destructions. Exalt ideals at home and the thought of the world will be raised.

America's greatness must never consist in her power to browbeat her neighbors nor to so arm herself that they will be afraid to attack her. Her future greatness should manifest itself along those lines for which she is already famous. Such as returned indemnities, emancipation of conquered provinces, equipment of Christmas ships and sending food to starving Belgians. This sort of greatness calls forth loyalty from America's best citizens. It is worthy of the respect and love of the world. A warfare waged along these lines cannot fail to do much towards bringing an end to the cause of militarism.

NOTICES.

At the close of the course in Peace Study, suggestions for a public program will be sent to all who so desire.

If any Young People's Society desires up-to-date games for their social gatherings they will be greatly benefitted by reading C. F. Reisner's "Social Plans for Young People," price 75 cents. Send to the Young Friends' Board, Dunreith, Ind.

A handsomely arranged Study Class Manual telling the steps in organizing a Study Class has been prepared by the Young Friends' Board. This has been made up from a number of study class pamphlets issued by the various denominations. These have been adapted especially to Friends needs. The Manual is priced 3 cents.

Every Christian Endeavor Society will be greatly benefitted by observing Christian Endeavor Week. Begin to make plans for this now. Especially plan for Young Friends' Day, which will be observed on February 13. Begin work now for a special program on that date.

Every Endeavor Society will be greatly benefitted by refusing to allow members of the Meeting to read clippings from the Christian Endeavor World. If these are at all used they should be handed out a week in advance during which time each person with his subject that he will not need should have so acquainted himself to refer to his clipping.

This holds equally true in the Peace Study Campaign.

Oh, blessed fellowship divine!

Oh, joy supremely sweet!

Companionship with Jesus here

Makes life with bliss replete.

In union with the purest one

I find my heaven on earth begun.

OUTLINE TOPICS JANUARY TO APRIL.

Since most Christian Endeavor Societies wish to observe the Consecration Sunday at the first of each month, we suggest the following topics:

Jan. 9. The Christian Ideal of World Wide Fraternity. Acts. 10:1-35.

Jan. 16. "Dangers in Modern Nationalism." Luke 10:25-37.

Jan. 23. "The Character and Causes of War." Matt. 5:21-26, 38-42.

Jan. 30. "The Consequences of War." Lev. 19:18; Gal. 5:13-16.

Feb. 13. "The Moral Equivalents of War." 2 Cor. 11:21-31.

YOUNG FRIENDS DAY.

Feb. 20. "Preventives of War." Matt. 18:15-18; 1 Cor. 6:1-6; Isa. 2:2-4.

Feb. 27. "The Independence of the Nations." 1 Cor. 12.

Mar. 12. "The Present Need of Interracial Appreciation and good will." Matt. 7:1-2.

Mar. 19. "World Federation, a Means of International Justice." Ps. 92:7-15.

Mar. 26. "The Peace Movement and other Peace Agencies." Matt. 4:26-32.

April 9. "The Socializing of Christianity; the Spirit of Christ Permeating the Nations." Matt. 25:31-46.

April 16. "The Responsibility of the Christian." Matt. 23:29-39.

April 23. "Christ the Assurance of Permanent International Good Will." Rev. 21:1-8.

APPEAL FOR TEXAS SUFFERERS.

The American Friend is in receipt of another appeal from Rachel W. Middleton of Friendswood, Texas, in behalf of families in other neighborhoods of that state in the vicinity of Friendswood, which have suffered from the great storm there last summer, but which have had no help since that time. They are in need of clothing of all kinds, especially shoes for school children. Mrs. Middleton writes: "I received a letter yesterday from a woman who has six small children and a sickly husband, saying they would be glad to get anything in the way of clothing that she could patch and make over for the children, the tops of stockings or anything. I have nothing on hand to give her, and thought there might be persons who can spare some garments from their wardrobes, who have not sent anything here yet. The need is great as the weather gets colder. There have been some goods sent here through the Wells Fargo Express Company free of charge. Gifts can be sent to me at Webster, Texas."

THE IOWA PAGE

CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelistic, etc.—H. R. Keates, 1314 Lyon Street, Des Moines, Iowa.
 Missionary—H. D. Lane, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
 Educational—D. M. Edwards, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
 Bible School—Golda R. Carroll, Beacon, Iowa.
 Christian Endeavor—Cora M. Mattison, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
 Peace—Alvin Hoskins, Richland, Iowa.
 Temperance—Robert Lincoln, Grinnell, Iowa.
 Items of information should be sent to the above promptly so that they may appear in the "Iowa page."

C. E. DEPARTMENT.

The Christian Ideal of World-wide Fraternity, Dangers in Modern Nationalism, The Character and Causes of War, The Consequences of War, Preventatives of War, The Interdependence of Nations, The Present Need of Inter-racial Appreciation and Good Will, The Peace Movement and Other Peace Agencies, The Responsibility of the Christian, Christ the Assurance of Permanent International Good Will.

Don't those subjects sound interesting? Well, they were taken at random from a little pamphlet published as a supplement to the Messenger of Peace, and recommended for study classes on Peace. Surely Friends, who have always stood for Peace, should not be slow in taking up such study. We should not only stand for Peace, but we should know why we hold these principles. We should be thoroughly informed. And could any time be more opportune for such information to be spread? The leaders of the militaristic forces are doing all they can to inculcate their ideas in the minds of the people. Should we, who believe that when the angels sang Peace on earth, that was the program Christ meant to be carried out, be less diligent in setting forth our ideas? If we are to do this at such a time, we must be up-to-date in our facts and arguments.

The Young Friends' Board is advocating the study of the lessons outlined in this pamphlet during the next few weeks. Will not your society devote at least one or two meetings a month, or parts of meetings, to this study? Please bring this matter to the attention of your members. Copies of this pamphlet may be secured from The Peace Association of Friends in America, Richmond, Indiana. The price is five cents a copy.

"Wealth is the slave of the wise man, the master of the fool."—Seneca.

A NEW YEAR'S CAROL.

Ah, dearest Jesus, holy child,
 Make thee a bed, soft, undefiled,
 Within my heart, that it may be
 A quiet chamber, kept for thee!
 My heart for very joy doth leap,
 My lips no more can silence keep;
 I too must sing, with joyful tongue
 That sweetest, ancient cradle song:
 "Glory to God in highest heaven,
 Who unto man his Son hath given!"
 While angels sing, with pious mirth,
 A glad New Year to all the earth!

—Martin Luther.

CHURCH AT WORK

Muncie, Indiana—William J. Sayers, pastor of the meeting at Muncie, has issued a most interesting letter to the members of his meeting under date of December 28. Among other things he suggests that the members can assist greatly, first, in earnest prayer for God's blessing on the individual heart, for His baptism of the spirit on the entire membership, for the awakening of sinners and for the pastor; second, by being regular in attendance at the meeting, the Bible School, mid-week meetings and business sessions; and third by furnishing information of any who need pastoral attention, by informing non-church going members about the church services and by speaking to the stranger within the gates. He raises six heart-to-heart questions: Do you have regular secret prayer and family worship, do you read God's Word daily, have you a discipline, do you take our church paper, is any of your family unsaved?

Union Center, Indiana—From December 1 to 15 a revival meeting was held at Union Center Friends church near Hartford City, Indiana, with Clifford Pearson of Monroe, Indiana, in charge. There were nineteen seekers at the altar. Much good was done and the church has been edified and built up in the faith. Lucile Kimes of near Fairmount, rendered valuable assistance in the music, in the altar service and in personal work. There were two accessions to the church.

Stafford, Kansas—Eusebia S. Couch, a minister of Haviland, Kansas, recently closed a series of meetings at Stafford, and has returned to her home. She spent nearly four weeks here visiting and preaching the gospel in all its fullness, and her admonitions were received with joyful hearts. On the last Sabbath she spoke from 1 Cor. 4:9 in the morning and in the evening from Matthew 19:20. At the close a young man lingered and soon found Christ in the pardon of his sins. God is blessing the work that has been done here.

Bloomington, Indiana—For several years our Sabbath School has presented a Giving Christmas program. Last year we used the "White Gifts for the King" entertainment. This year an interesting hour was spent with scenes from Ben Hur, beginning with the meeting of the three wise men on the desert and closing with the presentation of the gifts. Then followed the bringing of gifts by the several classes. The primary pupils gave dolls and toys which were forwarded to an institution in Indianapolis. The juniors brought small sums of money which was sent to Clara Ford in Africa. The intermediate class shipped a barrel of apples to L. O. Brown at Hill Crest Mission, Clinton, Indiana.

The older girls' class brought hand-made towels. The class of Boy Scouts made a substantial donation of fruits and vegetables and acted a charade, "Safety First." The young peoples' class gave a large coop of live chickens. The class of older boys gave money for several sacks of flour. Sixty pounds of dressed chicken were shipped to the Bertha Ballard home in Indianapolis for the Christmas dinner by a class of men and women. Other gifts were apples, potatoes, a load of coal, etc. An exercise, "Gifts for the King," was presented by seventeen girls and ended with a pretty tableau. The younger classes in the School received remembrances. The program closed with an impressive talk by the pastor, George H. Moore.

Watseka, Illinois—The "White Gifts to the King" Christmas program was given by the members of the Bible School on Christmas eve. On the same evening, while the pastor and family were at the church, some members of the adult Bible Class went into the parsonage and placed a nice rug upon the dining room floor. We expect to begin a series of meetings on January 16 with W. E. Stanley as the evangelist. Our pastor, Arthur Hammond, has been delivering a series of sermons for seven Sabbath mornings on "The Life and Mission of Jesus Christ," which has been very helpful and instructive.

Four things a man must learn to do
 If he would keep his record true:
 To think, without confusion, clearly;
 To love his fellow man sincerely;
 To act from honest motives purely;
 To trust in God and heaven securely.

BIBLE SCHOOL

JANUARY 16

Subject—Peter's Sermon at Pentecost.

Lesson—Acts 2:14-47.

Golden Text—Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. Acts 2:21.

The student of church history approaches this event with great interest, for this is, so far as we have any records, the first Christian sermon and the methods and contents attract us. We are not to suppose that this is a full report of the message, but probably a fair gist of its leading thoughts. We have here, too, the use of the Old Testament scriptures as authority for certain statements which he desires to make. Thus the precedent was set which the church has followed to this day—that of accepting the Jewish canon as part of the Christian Scriptures.

Jesus is no longer thought of as a political Messiah. Peter, and we may presume the rest of the disciples, had by this time come to a new conception of his mission. He was a man approved of God. The life which he had lived and the wonderful deeds which he had wrought attested that fact. Moreover, his life was so lived that he carried out a well defined plan of God. According to Peter the events even of the closing days were fore-known and approved, even determined upon by God long before they came to pass. Yet from the human standpoint there was bitterness such as is born in iniquity and the men who executed the plan did it because they had wickedness in their hearts.

Here, too, emphasis was laid upon a doctrine which formed one of the great corner stones of Christian teaching. The doctrine of the resurrection was an all important one to Paul. To deny it was to deny the very heart of the Christian message. The event having been so well authenticated it was very easy for Peter to read into the Psalm the prediction that it was to be. Not that he needed the added testimony but for the benefit of his hearers. It was also a pleasure now to see how the events through which they had just passed had been previously revealed to the ancient worthies.

Furthermore, Jesus is represented as being at the right hand of the Father as he sat upon His throne. Luke has another who also asserts the same relation of the Father and the Son. Stephen in his last moments said, "I see the heavens opened and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God." There can be no question about the early belief of the disciples in regard to the exalted position of Him whom a few days before they had expected to restore the ancient kingdom to the Hebrews.

The group seems to have increased in numbers from the first. Many who had deserted at the time of the arrest and crucifixion returned, and others attracted by the new cult and finding soul satisfaction became permanent followers of the Christ.

Historically the Christian Church has demanded belief and baptism as the sole conditions of membership, but in the early days and in more recent years moral fitness has been stressed, and we believe that in the future a moral life and spiritual baptism and communion will so obtain that the more formal side will fall into the background and ultimately cease to be required even by ritualistic churches.

The fellowship of this first group was splendid, even if the form it took cannot be commended. Those were happy days, days of the early spring-time with testing storms sure to follow.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

JANUARY 16

Topic—How to work with others. Isa. 41:1-7.

(Note: The Young Friends Board asks that all Friends' C. E. Societies consider the peace topics for the next three months, comment upon which will be found on the page devoted to the work of the Young Friends Board, the only exception being the consecration meeting the first Sunday in the month. Comment on the regular topic is, therefore, withheld.)

NEWS NOTES.

The meeting at Denair, California, is building a new addition to church building with a dimension of 30x40 feet.

A reception was recently held by the members of the Haviland, Kansas, meeting in honor of the new pastor, L. Clarkson Hinshaw.

A number of students from Whittier College attended the Student Volunteer Conference held at Pomona, California, December 11 and 12.

On November 26 Asahael H. and Martha Hussey celebrated their fifty-third marriage anniversary at their home in Whittier, California.

The Peace and Tract Committee of Denair meeting, California, is holding public meetings to arouse an interest among the people to protest against the increase of armament.

The American Friend desires to acknowledge with appreciation receipt of Christmas greetings from Sadie Stanley Carter and son, home and floral mission workers at Galena, Kansas.

The American Friend desires to acknowledge with appreciation receipt of Christmas greetings from Bertha H. T. Ufford as clerk of the Twentieth Street congregation of Friends in New York City.

An all-day meeting of the Mission Boards of California Yearly Meeting was held on December 8. It was decided to send President Wallace E.

Gill to the Panama Missionary Congress in February and to visit the mission stations in Central America.

Professor S. M. Hadley, dean of Penn College, spent a few days during the holiday vacation in company with Mrs. Hadley visiting their son, Ross A. Hadley at Richmond, Indiana, who is Assistant Secretary of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions. Professor Hadley also attended the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Columbus, Ohio, last week.

EARLHAM COLLEGE NOTES.

During the holiday vacation Professor D. W. Dennis represented Earlham at the Second Pan American Scientific Congress held in Washington City, December 27 to January 8.

Professors Edwin Morrison and Raymond Binford represented Earlham at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science held at Columbus, Ohio, December 27 to January 1.

Professor Harlow Lindley represented Earlham at the annual meeting of the American Historical Association held at Washington City December 27 to December 31.

The current issue of Religious Education contains an article by President Robert L. Kelly on the Co-operation of the Public School and the Church in religious education.

Harlow Lindley and W. C. Woodward are actively at work on the plans for the Indiana Centennial celebration to be held in 1916.

As the result of the liberality of a number of the alumni and other former students a fund of $160.00 has recently been contributed for the purchase of books for the Department of Biology.

QUAKER LECTURES.

A series of Quaker lectures on "International Justice, Law and Order" are being given at Friends' meeting house on Fifteenth Street, New York City. There are to be seven lectures in the course, the first one being given on December 2 and the last on February 17. The speakers are Arthur K. Kuhn, William I. Hull, Cynthia Fuller, Thomas Raeburn White, Mr. Justice Almet F. Jenks, Charles A. Beard and Hon. V. K. Wellington Koo. The price of a membership ticket is $2.00. The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation the receipt of complimentary tickets for this course.

PUBLICATION BOARD MEETS.

The annual meeting of the Friends Publication Board was held at Richmond, Indiana, on December 28. All members were present except J. Elwood Cox. It was decided to continue the printing contract for another year with the Gaumer Publishing Company at Urbana, Ohio. After considerable discussion it was the unanimous feeling that in view of the increasing number of special pages, the time had come to increase the size of The American Friend. With the first issue in February the paper will be increased to twenty pages.

It was decided also that the time had come for the Publication Board office to handle such books and other publications as are of special interest to Friends. This matter was left in the hands of a committee consisting of John H. Johnson, Isaac T. Johnson and the Manager. Considerable routine business was transacted and a hopeful feeling was expressed by all present. S. E. Nicholson was re-elected editor and manager.

WESTERN YEARLY MEETING.

A Word To Busy Pastors and All Other Interested Workers.

If you have a Junior or Intermediate Society visit them as frequently as possible.

If you have a Y. P. S. C. E. and neither of the above, request and encourage them to take up the Junior work.

If you have no Y. P. S. C. E., perhaps there are two or three people who could, would or should be responsible for the work.

If you have a Y. P. S. C. E. and too few children for organized work among them, give them a place in the older society.

If the only way you can really reach them is through the Bible School, take full advantage of the opportunity.

Encourage children in mission work by supplying them with suitable books such as "Around the World with Jack and Janet," "Ann of Ava," "Livingstone, the Pathfinder," etc.

Begin immediately on plans for raising money for the Clara Ford Fund.

MABEL QUIGG,
Junior Supt.

FRIEND ELECTED JUDGE.

J. Hoge Ricks, a member of the Richmond, Virginia, Monthly Meeting, has just been elected Judge of the Juvenile Court of that city. He is an active member of the meeting and has been a leading factor in reform work. City Councillor Haddon in nominating him said: "Mr. Ricks has been with this court since its inception. If elected he will do credit not only to himself, but to the city and to the office. He has the endorsement of all who have been associated with him in the work of this court."

READING THE BIBLE.

Those who have found regular Bible reading difficult because of lack of a definite plan will be greatly helped by the systematic daily readings outlined by Miss Etta Konitzky.

One outline provides for daily readings both morning and evening. By following this, the whole Bible is completed in one year; or the morning and evening readings may be used separately, and a two years' course followed. Psalms and Proverbs and the New Testament are used for the evening readings, while the rest of the Old Testament is outlined for morning readings. Another outline provides for single daily readings in the New Testament only.

This plan is commendable for its simplicity and definiteness. The leaflets and cards giving the readings to be followed can be secured by sending a two-cent stamp to Miss Etta Konitzky, Reisterstown Road, near Kate Avenue, Station E, Baltimore, Md.

STUDENT'S BIBLE

This Special Edition of the Bible has many instructive features that are invaluable in Bible study. Its contents have been carefully arranged with a view to helping those who desire to know the Bible

9—Special Features—9

- 1—A New Chain Reference System
- 2—A New Collected Reference System
- 3—A New System of Paragraphing
- 4—24 Colored Illustrations
- 5—124 Full-page Plates
- 6—Explanatory Notes of the Plates
- 7—Black-face Type; Easy to Read

Specimen of Type

13 And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: 2For thine is the kingdom, and the power,

13 Psa. 40. 8.
14 Gen. 3. 19.
15 Forgiveness.
16 Ver. 12, 14.

not 27
one

- 8—Exceptionally fine and durable Leather Binding
- 9—The 1911 Version. The best for students because it has all the beauty of the Authorized Version with obsolete words modernized.

REV. FRANCIS E. CLARKE, D.D., United Society Christian Endeavor, says: "I shall use this Bible largely in my own devotional readings"

This Valuable Student's Bible $5.00
Your Name in Gold... 25c extra Improved Thumb Index 35c extra sent postpaid

SPECIAL We have a limited supply of "The Bible Reader's Handbook" which gives a plan for reading the Bible in a year and many interesting facts about the Bible which will be sent FREE with every copy of this Bible ordered.

ORDER YOUR BIBLE TODAY

THE AMERICAN FRIEND
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND, Richmond, Ind.
Enclosed find $5.00 for a Student's Bible, according to your Special Offer.
—and 25c for Name in Gold
—and 35c for Index
Name _____ City _____ State _____

ANNA T. WHITE.

Anna T. White, daughter of John and Alice Steddom, was born near Lebanon, Warren county, Ohio, Second Month, 28, 1829. She spent her girlhood days in the Friend's settlement known as "Turtle-Creek" where her parents with a number of other Friends made their homes, having left South Carolina because of their aversion to slavery.

Her early education began in a neighborhood school taught by Oliver P. Nixon. She developed a "style of expression" as marked as many holding places of distinction in the world of letters. Much of her joy in living has been through her pen. She was united in marriage with James White, First Month, 23, 1856, since which time her home has been in and near Richmond, Ind.

For sixty years she has been a member of Whitewater Monthly Meeting. A keenly sensitive nature caused her to sympathize with those in affliction. She was always alive to the things of state and nation, and organizations for the uplift of mankind, and possessed a fine sense of appreciation in all affairs of church organization.

She drew about her a rare circle of friends from those of distinction to the very humble and so-called poorer class. Her one dominant characteristic was faithfulness as a mother and she lived to see her five children "rise up to call her blessed."

The heavy task or the crushing sorrow is often the key that opens God's treasure-house. You have had very little experience either of life or of Christian life, if you have not learned by this time that the harder your work, and the darker your sorrows, the mightier have been God's supports and the more starry the lights that have shone upon your path.—Alexander Maclaren.

"If religion has done nothing for your temper," said Moody, "it has done nothing for your life."

Nicholson & Bro., Richmond, Ind.

Friends' Marriage Certificates:

On Parchment, postpaid$3.00

On Bond Paper, postpaid$1.10

Books at publishers' prices, postpaid.

Remit by P. O. order.

The American Friend, Richmond, Ind.

A weekly religious journal, published by Friends Publication Board, under the direction of the Five Years Meeting of Friends. Price $1.50 per year. Should be in every Friends' family in America.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.

Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue. Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

The school is unusually large this year, yet we have room for a few more. The Winter term opens First Month 4th. We shall be pleased to send our catalogue to any interested friends.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

Dickinson Trust Company

RICHMOND, INDIANA

— Established 1870 —

REAL ESTATE FIRST MORTGAGE LOANS on improved Indiana and Ohio farms and city property, to net investors

From 5% to 6%

Over forty years of successful experience in the mortgage loan business.

EXPENSE TO INVESTORS FOR OUT STANDING

Monthly mailing list of loans sent on application.

Mission Study Books

1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
I. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlien
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 2.

FIRST MONTH 13, 1916

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 2.

While We Are Waiting

R. M. J., in "Present Day Papers"

While we are waiting for this European tragedy to end, for goodness to triumph, for truth to be established, for love to grow into power—for "the thirty-first of April" to arrive, perhaps we, each one of us in his own way, might be making a real, even if modest, contribution to the spiritual stock of the world. There are many things, no doubt, that need to be done, and the children of light must sometimes learn to be as wise and as efficient at the tasks of love as the sons of mammon now are at their aims, but the most triumphantly beautiful contribution after all which any of us can make is the fashioning, up to our highest capacity, of a luminous, radiant, joyous, dynamic personal life.

While we are waiting for the philosophical and theological mysteries to be solved it would make some difference in the interim if we could be quietly revealing the irresistible might of a loving, sympathizing and understanding human spirit, if we could win and practice an optimistic temper of mind, if we could maintain and circulate perennially pleasant inward weather and if we could make these tiny lives of ours transmitting organs for the abounding, invading life of God. This little service of ours would still leave some questions unanswered and some practical tasks undone, but a life like that would at least bring a path of guiding light to every perplexed soul whose orbit it touched and it would make it a little more difficult for anyone to be bad.

Nineteen hundred and sixteen will be a splendid year in which to try the experiment.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Somebody

Somebody did a golden deed
Proving himself a friend in need;
Somebody sang a cheerful song,
Brightening the skies the whole day long—
Was that somebody you?

Somebody thought 'tis sweet to live,
Willingly said, "I'm glad to give;"
Somebody fought a valiant fight,
Bravely he lived to shield the right—
Was that somebody you?

Somebody idled all the hours,
Carelessly crushed the choicest flowers;
Somebody made life loss, not gain,
Thoughtlessly seemed to live in vain—
Was that somebody you?

Somebody filled the day with light,
Constantly chased away the night;
Somebody's work bore joy and peace,
Surely his life shall never cease—
Was that somebody you?

—Ex.

Why Not Do It?

Some interested Friends are accepting the suggestion made in these columns two weeks ago that Friends who are already subscribers to THE AMERICAN FRIEND should subscribe for some other family which is not receiving the paper.

It is well known that certain interested Friends, together with the Yearly Meetings are having to make up a deficiency in the publication of the paper until it can be put on a paying basis. If a thousand of our subscribers would act upon the suggestion herein made, and each send in an additional subscription for another family that is not now receiving the paper, this action would help materially in reducing the deficiency down to a minimum.

Is there any more reason why some Friends should pay from $5.00 to $50.00 than that a number of Friends should pay $1.50 additional, which would not only reduce the deficit, but be the means of extending the patronage of the paper?

A New Department

Beginning with this issue, the Peace Board will have a page each alternate week in THE AMERICAN FRIEND. The work of this Board is of such supreme importance at this time, that this page will undoubtedly prove to be one of the valuable features of THE AMERICAN FRIEND during the present year.

Men's Conference Proceedings

By the time this issue of THE AMERICAN FRIEND reaches its readers, it is more than probable that the printed proceedings of the Men's Conference, which was held at Richmond, Indiana, in October, will be ready for distribution.

Each person who has not paid for his copy should, upon receipt of the book, send the price of it to S. E. Nicholson, Richmond, Indiana.

The price to registered delegates is fifty cents per copy, paper cover; seventy-five cents for cloth bound copy. This reduction in price is made to registered delegates because the stenotypists were paid out of the registration receipts of the Conference. The price to all others is seventy-five cents, paper cover, and one dollar, cloth bound copies. Orders can still be filled by sending same to S. E. Nicholson, Richmond, Indiana.

A Significant Movement

A conference of churchmen, continent-wide in its scope, known as the North American Preparatory Conference, convened at Garden City, Long Island, for three days last week, which gives promise of being one of the significant church movements of this century. This particular conference constitutes the North American division of the World's Conference on Faith and Order, initiated some two or three years ago by Episcopalians, which has already resulted in the appointment of commissions from denominations representing more than twenty millions of communicants on this continent, besides those which have been appointed from the churches of Europe and elsewhere.

It is the purpose, through friendly counsel, to find out the points of agreement and of difference between the denominations, at the same time promoting a spirit of fellowship and Christian unity. It is not designed to promote new organizations, or to seek the corporate unity of old ones. It will be readily seen, however, that if the purposes are carried out faithfully, the movement may have far-reaching consequences.

It is gratifying to know that Friends are having a proper part in this movement. In accord with the action of the Executive Committee of the Five Years Meeting, authorizing the chairman, Allen D. Hole, to name a Friends commission, he has appointed Joseph John Mills, James Wood, Rufus M. Jones and David M. Edwards, and will name a fifth one in the near future. Other conferences are to be held in preparation for a world gathering ultimately, the time and place to be chosen later.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 2.

FIRST MONTH 13, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 2.

Missing an Opportunity

More than once the entire course of history has been turned because somebody failed to meet an opportunity. Man is finite, short-sighted, all too often unthinking, and prone to follow surface leadings, with the result that crises are passed by unnoticed and failure is written large upon his career. Nations, like individuals, turn from the claims of right to follow the rule of expediency, and are caught unawares in the inevitable crash of conflicting tendencies. We are told that opportunity knocks once at least at every man's door, but all too seldom receives a welcome, because the occupant is too absorbed with the things of self to read the sign boards of his own life.

Hoshea was one king at least who missed a supreme opportunity. Could he but have been blessed with wiser judgment, the whole course of Jewish history, and of the world, would probably have been written differently. In some respects he was the best of the Northern kings, for while he did evil, it was "yet not as the kings of Israel that were before him." Here was a superb opportunity to test the possibility of the restoration of the throne of David. The good Hezekiah of Judah had begun a religious reformation which was being extended to Israel no less than throughout the Southern kingdom, with the result that many had assembled from both kingdoms at the new Passover feast. Returning to their homes, they began a wholesale destruction of idols, the groves and altars, and in the fear of God new life was being infused into their national policy.

Under the spell of a new patriotism, which had its inspiration in the new found religious zeal of so many of the people, Hoshea follows the lead of Hezekiah in refusing tribute to Assyria. Inspired by the earnest pleadings of the prophets, Hoshea apparently makes serious attempt to be a reformer and thus to save Israel. But at the crucial moment he forgets his obligation to God. After a second revolt against Assyria, instead of making common cause with the righteous Hezekiah and thus following the lead of the masses who, from religious motives, were fast forgetting their differences, and instead of leading the two nations to make common appeal to Jehovah for deliverance, Hoshea turns to Egypt for succor. And therein he missed his supreme opportunity. Palestine was the bone of contention between Egypt and Assyria, and Hoshea failed to see that Assyria needed a path to the Mediterranean worse than Egypt needed a path to the rich Tigris valleys, and would fight harder to secure it. Well may the sons of Abraham lament through all the ages, that at this crisis Israel did not have a king who could see that with friendship largely restored upon a religious basis between the two kingdoms, the great opportunity had come to establish the perpetuity of the house of David by appealing to Jehovah for deliverance.

The United States is face to face with a great crisis, the issue of which is likely to be decided this year, possibly within a few weeks. On the one hand is an insistent clamor that the country shall depart from its pacific policies of good will of more than a century, to ape the militaristic systems of other nations, regardless of the inevitable consequences which may reasonably be expected therefrom. On the other hand is a protest against this wild and needless alarm, and a persistent appeal that would save America to a program of peaceful and righteous endeavor, unmarred by the burdens, the temptations and the dangers of the military spirit and a war machine of threatening proportions.

By virtue of her history and her geographical location and by reason of her unparalleled opportunities, America is destined to be a missionary to the nations. She has the power to lead the world to righteousness if she will. By means of her commerce and through her ministrations of justice, mercy and good will she can infuse a new spirit into internationalism, that will transform world diplomacy into an agency of peace and humanitarian fellowship. Is America going to miss her transcendent opportunity and thereby hold back the march of our Christian civilization? That is the supreme issue of this new year, the consideration of which should call for the best thought of this age.

The Society of Friends is at the threshold of a great opportunity. It would hardly be correct to say that denominationally we are facing a crisis. It is merely a choice between the old methods of quietude and modest retirement, and the acceptance of a career that will enlarge the circle of our influence and of our activities. In a peculiar way, as has so frequently been set forth in these columns, there is a pressing call for the exemplification in daily life of the principles for which our fathers have stood, and to which we of today have pledged our allegiance. Shall we as Friends, through inertia, through obedience to tradition, through disunity or for any other cause, miss this opportunity that is before us? The choice lies within our own grasp.

Many of our young men and young women are facing peculiar and pressing opportunities. The problem of young Friends and the church is hardly a problem any longer. It is rather a question now of young Friends taking hold of the work of the church and thereby becoming incorporated into its life and organism. To miss this opportunity is to choose isolation from the blessings and rewards of Christian service and to insure weakness and ultimate decay to the church.

Many of our members are facing the opportunity of a more abundant life in the things of the Spirit. They can remain upon the lower levels of religious experience with constantly increasing tendencies to leanness of soul and barrenness of spiritual life, or by a more pronounced consecration they can climb to the clearer heights and the more invigorating atmosphere of complete obedience to the will of God. To fail of the best in life is to rob it of its real significance. To miss an opportunity is to turn back the currents of progress. Our call is to be workers together with God, with God as the chief element in the partnership; but as we are true to His purposes, we will go from strength to strength, and find our highest measure of usefulness in living supremely for His glory and the advancement of His cause in the earth.

First Impressions of Cuba

By LOUISE H. MENDENHALL

It was just a little before sundown of a steamy, hot day in September when the train came to a halt at Puerto Padre and we thankfully left the dirty, smoky, stuffy car and stepped out into the open air.

The railroad inspector, who speaks quite good English and is a friend of the Coxes and Miss Hadley, helped us off the train and called a coachman. The coach, a somewhat dilapidated, cut-under, one-seated rig with a high driver's seat in front, drew near and when we and our suitcases were stowed away we were hurried to our destination. The scenes which met our eyes as we looked about to get a first glimpse of our new home were very similar to those to which we had been trying to accustom ourselves for the past few days. The first street up which we were taken was rather narrow, with long, low buildings on either side, opening right out onto the sidewalk. A very pretty building of cement, cream colored and trimmed in blue, stood democratically next to a little old unpainted hut with palm-thatched roof. A high, tight board fence followed. The fence on the opposite side of the street was made of long poles, more or less straight and of varying sizes, driven into the ground and bound tightly together.

We went on past house after house and shop after shop, all standing one against the other so that they formed an unbroken front from one street to the next, until a sudden turn brought us out on the main street of the town. It was much wider and running down its center was a broad cement walk, bordered on either side with trees and grass which bore evidence of careful cultivation.

At the upper end of the street which slopes gradually down to the bay, our coachman halted and a most welcome sight met our eyes—welcome not only because it was home for us after months of moving about from one place to another, but also because to our American eyes it was one of the prettiest homes we had seen since leaving the States. As one approaches it from town, the first thing which catches the attention is the bell tower, beautifully designed but minus the bell as yet, I am sorry to say. The mission building, a large, low, cream-colored one, unlike most of the buildings in Cuba, sits back a little distance from the street and herein lies one of its chief beauties. The church stands on the corner nearest the town and beyond it, and facing on the same street, is the mission home. The school house, which faces on a cross street, joins the church at the rear and extends beyond it to meet the mission home, thus leaving a little lawn some twenty feet wide and the whole depth of the church in length between the church and the mission home. The lawn and the wide, vine-covered porch which extends across the front and along the side of the house toward the church and then along the school house until it reaches the church, give the place a homelikeness utterly lacking in the Cuban homes. The steel fence which extends along the front and school house sides of the compound adds to the privacy without giving the forbidding appearance of the high, close-board fences used by the Cubans.

As the coach stopped in front of the house, a young lady hurried out to meet us, and we knew at once that it was Miss Hadley, for she answered the description exactly. "Forceful" they had said, and force, energy and enthusiasm seemed to radiate from her whole person.

Our travel-stained garments changed for fresher ones, we were soon sitting down to dinner on the roomy back porch overlooking a court filled with roses and beautiful tropical shrubs. However, most of our attention was claimed by the tasty meal, as good and as American as any we could have had at home.

We were soon to begin our first real acquaintance with the Cubans, for it was Endeavor night on which we arrived. As we entered the Endeavor room that first night, we faced a most interesting as well as a most interested group, about thirty in number. After all, the audience upon which we were looking was not so different as might be imagined from many audiences which one sees at home. Most of them, to be sure, were brunettes with velvety black eyes but a few were really quite fair. There is, however, a larger percentage of negro mixture here than in most parts of our own country, though there are comparatively few full-blooded negroes. There is not the race distinction here that there is at home and the two races mingle freely in social circles and even intermarry to a large extent. The father of one of our most faithful girls is a native of Spain while her mother is a negro, the blackest of the black.

Another of our members is a young married woman whose husband is a full-blooded negro. She herself has quite a large percentage of negro blood in her veins, but she is a fine looking woman and dresses in very good taste also. One of the surprising things here is the importance that the Cubans place upon dress. Many of our members, of course, are poor, for here, as in practically every mission field, they have been the first to be reached. Even they, however, dress in much the same style as Americans. This is especially true of the young people, many of whom dress with almost more precision than our young people at home. They take their styles from the National Cloak Company's catalogue and the Pictorial Review and the more well-to-do young ladies keep up with the styles much better than do the missionaries. They consider it necessary to have a new dress for every social function and some of them even go to the extent of never wearing a dress on the street a second time. They also wear a great deal of jewelry and use a great deal of perfume.

They are a very cordial people, too, extremely polite and very sociable. They have certainly made us feel very much at home and have been very kind in trying to help us learn the language and in overlooking our mistakes.

We found the work here in splendid condition and showing well directed as well as unceasing efforts on the part of those who have had it in charge. The different services are quite well attended and the members are very faithful in taking part. The members and candidates, and in fact those who attend at all, are almost all young people, most of them under twenty-five years of age. I suppose the oldest, and one of the most striking characters as well, is a woman of some forty-five years. It seems to me I never saw a happier person in my life, a veritable ray of sunshine whom all the young people love dearly, and yet Miss Hadley says that when she came to them a year and a half ago she was very sad and discontented. Such is the transformation our beautiful message works.

There are three other women also, all mothers, who have been very earnest in their efforts to bring their families, friends and neighbors to Christ. The men are painfully lacking, there being but one man of mature years among our members and candidates and he is unable to attend regularly. The young people seem to us to be a very promising group. They are very faithful in taking part in the services and are eager to serve in other ways. When one remembers that the very first beginning of the work here was only twelve years ago and that there have been regular preaching services for only a little more than four years, the progress made seems little short of wonderful.

In spite of the progress made, the work still has its discouraging side. Sometimes those who have seemed to be the most promising are overwhelmed by the awful temptations which they must meet and by the criticism and persecution of their friends and families. It is very slow work trying to reach the people of mature years.

The opportunity for Friends here is very large. This part of the province of Oriente is given over almost entirely to us. There are many towns where the gospel of Christ has never been preached and they are dependent upon us to carry it to them. They are Christians, they say, but in many cases that means nothing more than that they have been baptized by a Catholic priest, and bears no relation whatever to their characters, bringing neither purity of heart nor peace of mind. Our largest opportunity is with the young people. Many of them are losing faith in the old religion and if we cannot win them to Christ will develop into atheists, agnostics, free-thinkers, and the like. Moreover, it is very much easier to mould the ideals and beliefs of a young person than those of an older one and very much easier to guard a young person from falling into the blackest of sin than it is to save a man who has already thus degraded himself. Our work needs to begin with the babies though, for here even the little boys openly smoke cigarettes and at a very early age have their minds polluted by the vilest of talk.

While there are a good many things which would help to make the work here at Puerto Padre more efficient, we feel that we have no right to ask for anything until some of the tremendous needs of the other stations have been met. Of the other stations we have visited only Holguin. This is the largest town in which we have any workers stationed and owing to its location is the natural center for the Friends' work in Cuba. For both of these reasons it should be the best equipped of any of our stations, but at present it is far behind Puerto Padre in that respect. The mission home there is not so attractive as the one here and is very crowded. I scarcely see how they are able to manage at all. A matter of more importance and requiring more immediate attention is their school.

Here in Puerto Padre we have a neat, commodious school building of our own, but at Holguin they are using a rented building which is far from satisfactory. The main room is a large, inconveniently arranged one, where the older children are seated, not at individual desks, but at large tables. This arrangement makes really good government almost impossible. They are not able to secure any improvements, however, as the owner wishes to sell the building and will not go to any expense upon it. Neither will he give them sufficient assurance that the school can have the building another year so that they can afford to do any improving themselves. This means not only that they are working under numberless difficulties at present, but also that there is danger of having to close their school if the building is sold. It is difficult to see how this could be other than an irretrievable loss to the work, since one of our strongest holds here is in our grade school work with the children. It enables us to reach Catholic children that we never could reach otherwise. Because of the excellent grade of work done in our schools, many Catholic parents will send their children to us even though they know that they are receiving Christian training.

One thing that Puerto Padre does need, in common with every other station in Cuba, is more workers. This has been impressed upon us especially because of the circumstances under which we came to the field. The work will always suffer until the church places the necessary means in the hands of our Board to properly man our fields. The story of the Puerto Padre station is a common one. The first year that Mr. Cox was on the field, he was at Banes, where there is English work among the Jamaicans. While there he had to do a great deal of missionary work in addition to the work of learning the language and the customs of the people. Consequently, when he came to Puerto Padre he was not only limited in his work by his lack of familiarity with the language but was also considerably worn down in health. Here he had to teach school, and no one realizes until he has tried it or seen it tried just what a strain school teaching in Cuba subjects one to, for the children are very nervous and high-strung and many of them have had but little discipline either at home or in the public schools. In addition to the school teaching, which in itself is a full-sized man's job, he had to do the work of a regular pastor at home, another man-sized task. It was also necessary for him to oversee the Sunday School work, including the training of teachers, the Christian Endeavor work, and the social life of the young people. The latter is a tremendous problem in itself, since becoming a Christian here means breaking with much of the old social life. By the time Mrs. Cox had come and learned the language and Miss Hadley had been sent here to help in the school he had already accomplished a great deal, but his health had begun to give way and at the end of five years on the field he went home very much broken in health. We are sincerely hoping and praying, however, that the year's rest and change of climate will bring him back to the field in good physical condition. Here the story must be repeated.

The church had no one prepared to take the Coxes' place, so in order to keep the work going at all we were sent here to do our language work and to help what little we can. That is but little, though, so Miss Hadley must struggle along with the burden of the whole work. Since it is impossible for one person to do the work of two people some of it must go undone. Moreover, Miss Hadley's health is being injured. She came to the field strong and with a wealth of reserve force, well trained and equipped in every way, a splendid student and better disciplinarian. Such valuable assets ought not to be wasted. In many cases such methods mean that a worker completely breaks down and must leave the field. Thus the years of preparation and experience on the field, the knowledge of conditions, the understanding of the people, etc., are thrown away. Years ago business men learned that it was poor economy to have workmen overworked and underpaid, but the church seems slow in waking up to this fact. Perhaps I have spoken too feelingly on this subject, but it is something that has been burned deep into my consciousness during the last two and a half months through seeing every day the work suffering that had been gotten into such good condition at such tremendous cost and by the tired, worn look which the overwork brings so frequently to Miss Hadley's face.

What we need above all things else, though, is not added equipment here or another worker there, but the prayerful and intelligent interest of the church at home. If every member of the Friends church were well informed concerning the mission work for which our denomination is responsible and would then pray with some of the earnestness with which our Master prayed alone in the mountains at night, that communion with the Father would bring to our church a new vision of the beauty of the message with which we have been entrusted, of the needs of those from whom we are withholding the message, and of the tremendous opportunity which lies before us at the present time. When we have seen that vision we will not give our spare small change but will pour out freely of the abundance with which a loving Father had blessed us. We need your prayers—not a desultory occasional impersonal "God bless the missionaries," but the intelligent prayer of those who have informed themselves of the needs and are then willing to wrestle with God until they arise from their knees consecrated to go out as instruments in God's hands for the answering of their own prayers. It is your work as much as ours. We only have different duties and the most important of all is prayer. If we only realized the power of prayer and knew how to ask for definite things, who can doubt that the world would be evangelized in this generation? Should we not then ask as did the disciples of old: "Lord, teach us to pray"?

How much those who love have need to trust in God.

Retires From Editorship

With the first of the year the retirement of Eliza C. A. Cox as editor of Friends Missionary Advocate is announced. For exactly twenty-five years she has had editorial charge of this periodical of the W. F. M. U., and in this position she has helped in a vital way to shape the missionary policy of our branch of the church.

As one of the consecrated, thinking women among Friends, her personality has been impressed upon the entire denomination, and her messages have brought life and inspiration to multitudes of our members. It is hoped that her retirement from editorial work will not mean that she is to become a silent partner in the activities of Friends.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Union has been most fortunate in securing Lenora N. Hobbs, of Bloomington, as Mrs. Cox's successor. She is consecrated to the work, cultured, with experience as a writer and will have the prayers and support of all interested in women's missionary work.

Homiletic Review

The author of "Twice Born Men," Harold Begbie, has given a correspondent of The Homiletic Review a notable interview which should be read by every preacher in the land. To give this article the right of way in the January number is certainly to begin the New Year with a bomb-like earnestness.

Has the interpretation of Ezekiel 38:39 as predictive of the present war, favored by many people, any foundation? This is the question which Professor Eduard Konig of Bonn, Germany, answers briefly and we think satisfactorily in this number of The Review.

Professor A. T. Robertson of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary has an article on "The Modern Preacher and the Book of Acts," the object of which is to show some of the ways by which the events and principles found in the Acts of the Apostles may be related to the life of today. From such an unquestioned source this most readable article is sure to be very profitable.

The versatile British scholar, Professor James Moffatt gives his first articles based on the passages of the International Sunday School Series in this number of The Review.

Published monthly by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 354-360 Fourth Avenue, New York. $3.00 per year.

Not Ashamed of the Gospel

Paul at Athens preached to a congregation whose chief occupation was to tell or to hear some new thing. He did not seek to outbid the sentimentalists who dispensed novelties, or the ingenious curiosity-mongers who guessed at the truth. He plainly preached the gospel of the risen Christ and the power of His resurrection. That power throbs in his words unto this hour. Paul would have done the same had he lived in this age of daily newspapers and electric communication.—Christian Advocate.

WITH THE CHILDREN.

Little Things

God made the little things so choice;
The little birds with happy voice,

The little flow'rs with sweetest smell,
The dewdrops sparkling in the dell;

The tiny spears of velvet grass,
The cheery sunbeams that we pass;

And so we ought the same to do
And make our little words so true.

Our little deeds should thoughtful prove.
Our little hearts be filled with love;

And then the Savior, ever near,
Will bless his little children dear.—Dew Drops.

Do It Well

A group of children were happily playing on the broad door stone, under protecting shade trees. They were going to play "mother."

"I'm the mother," cried the largest little girl. "There always has to be a mother, and I'm it."

Black-eyed Ned sat next. "I'm the father," he asserted, sturdily. "Nellie and Rob can be the children, but I'll be the father, and, of course, I'll see to things and make everybody do what I say."

A little blue-eyed tot of a girl saw a very good chance to being let out in this family game.

"What am I?" she asked, a little pitifully. Very little girls are so apt to be left out, anyway.

"There has to be servants," said the self-selected father and mother. "That's all that's left that we can see."

"Well," remarked the little girlie, very sweetly, "I'll be a real nice one, then. Somebody has to do something for the rest, and it's just as good as anything if you do it well."—Selected.

Proof Lacking

Jack, whose home was in the Far West, had never visited his paternal grandfather in New England until his eighth year. He manifested the greatest interest in the proposed journey. "Shall I see the house where you were born, pop?"

"Certainly, my son," answered his father (a state senator of considerable local repute, and the political boss of his home county), "grandfather's house is where I was born."

At the end of the journey, Jack and his parents alighted in front of a comfortable, roomy, rather pretentious old mansion of Colonial type. The place had been well kept up and presented an appearance of wealth and distinction.

But Jack regarded it from the gate with evident disappointment. He seemed downcast and humiliated.

"Is that where you were born, Pop?"

"Yes, my son. Don't you think that is a fine place to be born in?"

"Yes, Pop, but I thought you were a great man. I've been telling lots of folks you were, and now—why, that's no sort of a log cabin!"—G. T. H.

PROTECT THE QUAKER NAME

Whether the Society of Friends wishes it or not, this religious body will continue to be known popularly among other people by the term "Quaker," as has been done for the past two hundred and fifty years. In order to give evidence of the revolting extremes to which certain business interests have gone in usurping the use of the name "Quaker," we reproduce herewith a cut of an electric sign advertisement of "Old Quaker Pure Rye Whiskey," and a newspaper advertisement of "Quaker Beer."

Quaker Whiskey and Beer

The electric sign is one that shines out prominently every night at Columbus Circle, New York City, while the newspaper advertisement is one that appeared in the New York Telegram October 3, 1915.

The only apology which we have to offer readers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND for presenting facsimiles of these offensive advertisements in a religious paper, is that in the judgment of the Friends Legislative Board of the Five Years Meeting the time has come to let Friends generally and Congress in particular know the real situation against which protest is made.

Bills in Congress

Bills have been introduced in Congress by Senator John W. Kern of Indiana, and Hon. Thomas S. Butler of the Eighth District in Pennsylvania designed to correct this outrage upon a denominational name that has been borne through scorn and scoffing and whipping and imprisonment and in some instances through violent death. These bills bear the numbers S. 666 and S. 667; and H. R. 380 and H. R. 435. It will be noted that S. 666 and H. R. 380 are identical as is true also of S. 667 and H. R. 435.

Use of Name on Increase

It may be said that the term "Quaker" used as the name of articles of trade and commerce appears to be rapidly upon the increase. In a recent advertisement setting forth the peculiar qualities of "Quaker Tires" the term was used so frequently throughout the advertisement as to be most offensive to anyone who lays value upon the name by which the Society of Friends is commonly known. The entire list of articles of trade bearing the name "Quaker" is too long to warrant publication in these columns.

It has been said by those defining the use of the name that it is a testimonial to the honesty and uprightness of the members of the Society of Friends. The fact that Friends have a reputation for honesty, whether deserved or not, only serves to emphasize the robbery and usurpation of this valued and historic appellation. It is a matter of record that certain people who are not acquainted with Friends have the impression that the companies using the Quaker name are companies of Quakers using this name for purposes of private profit.

No Financial Loss Involved

Congress by legislation already enacted has given protection to the names of lodges and clubs by forbidding the registry of their names as trade marks. It will be claimed by some that interference with the use of the Quaker name will mean a financial loss to certain firms already in the market, but if the legislation above referred to passes, these same companies will have their goods, their formulae for making their goods, their buildings and all their machinery, and it will be small inconvenience to them to have simply to change the name of their articles, as compared with what the Society of Friends has had to suffer in the capitalization of an honored name for purposes of private gain to others, who have no interest whatever in the religious activities of the Quaker body.

It needs to be said that there is no practical difference between the act of a man who would come into the home of another and steal his money, and the act of another man or firm which without consent would undertake to capitalize for private gain some quality which the man might possess.

This is all the more serious, when the supposedly honest reputation of a religious denomination is utilized for purposes of profit in the markets of the world by others, who have no interest whatever in the objects of the organization.

The request that Congress take action to protect our Quaker body by the passage of the bills above referred to is a reasonable one that should call for favorable and speedy action by that body.

THIS ADVERTISEMENT WAS IN THE N. Y. TELEGRAM, OCTOBER 3, 1915.

COMING SOON
QUAKER TALKS ON BEER

WATCH FOR THEM.....

Quaker Beer

The world's best malt beverage and liquid food. The acme of perfection of the brewer's art.

Made in America
Made by Americans
American in name
And the Best on Earth.

ON DRAUGHT TO-MORROW

Ready in Bottles Nov. 1.

Brewed only by

The Franklin Brewery

(INDEPENDENT)

David M. Neuberger, Pres.

Flushing Ave., Skillman St. to Franklin Ave., Brooklyn

Phone 1826 Williamsburg

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

AN INTRODUCTION.

Louise H. Mendenhall, whose article entitled "First Impressions of Cuba" appears in another column of this issue of The American Friend, is one of our latest missionary recruits. She with her husband, Lloyd H. Mendenhall, and their six months' old son, Lewis Herschel, sailed for Cuba early in October. The Mendenhalls have for more than a year been under appointment to work in Mexico, but inasmuch as they are unable to locate there at present they are temporarily stationed at Puerto Padre in the absence of Henry D. and Alma Cox, who are on their furlough. The Mendenhalls are members of Iowa Yearly Meeting, and both are graduates of Penn College. They studied last year in the Kennedy School of Missions at Hartford.

AROUSING INTEREST AMONG YOUNG PEOPLE.

Any one, young or old, must become interested in missions if only he know enough about them. Information abounds. The problem is not how shall we obtain reading matter, but how secure readers.

Following a suggestion in the "Missionary Review of the World" (which, by the way, has a Department of Best Methods bristling with ideas, and well worth the entire price of the magazine), some time ago we tried The Missionary Ladder. Six books formed this ladder, each book a rung: "Ann of Ava," "The Black Bearded Barbarian," "Winning the Oregon Country," "Uganda's White Man of Work," "Servants of the King," and "Love Stories of Great Missionaries." Ladder climbers were solicited, and the librarian kept accurate record of each reader and every book read. The higher they climbed, the more wide grew their horizon and the deeper their interest in missions. In one meeting, we feel sure, several missionary activities among the boys and girls and the young people had their origin in the interest thus awakened.

The Contest Feature was introduced in another meeting and seemed to add much pleasure and zest to the ladder climbing. The young people formed two divisions, each working to secure the greater number of readers.

Each of these readers, in reporting, handed in a written statement of something in each book which had particularly impressed him. One young woman writes, "The burning question is, what would I have done in Ann Hazeltine's or Mary Moffatt's place?"

In Western Yearly Meeting this year, we are undertaking to try to have the above course introduced in all our meetings, adding some advanced work, along lines already approved by our American and Young Peoples Boards.

The Missionary Bulletin Board, too, is invaluable in arousing missionary interest. A durable and attractive one may be made with hardwood frame (perhaps the work of some manual training student), the body of burlap. Placed on wall in vestibule or at the rear of church in some conspicuous place, it is ready to have pinned to it each week items from church and secular papers, posters (and this will give employment to those who are gifted in designing), pictures of missionaries and mission scenes, quotations, announcements—something good and fresh each week. A live missionary committee can make it very attractive and helpful.

LYDIA M. HOATH.

TRAINING FOR SERVICE IN JAMAICA.

The Happy Grove School for Girls is composed of two departments. While both do industrial work and are housed in the same building, they are known as the Girls Department of the Happy Grove School and the Happy Grove Orphanage for Girls.

The Girls Department of the Happy Grove School comprises those girls who take school work in connection with the pupils of the Boys Department of the same school. The Orphanage Department is made up of the East Indian orphans committed to Happy Grove by the Government, who are not old enough or sufficiently advanced to take up work in the Industrial School.

It has always been difficult for one person to teach and look after so many children from babyhood up, in addition to the teaching and oversight of the older girls. Last February, Miss M. E. Allen was transferred from the Fellowship East Indian School to Happy Grove to take charge of the Orphanage Department. This proved to be a wise move and the children under her care have made commendable progress in school work sewing and general department. The latest addition to the Orphanage was a baby 15 months old, making the present enrollment eleven. A 3-months old baby will probably enter soon. These children are as bright, interesting and lovable as can be found anywhere.

There are ten girls in the Industrial Department, eight of whom take regular and two irregular work. In addition to their regular duties this year the girls helped much with the fitting up of the Boys' Dormitory by making and bleaching pillow-cases, making towels, curtains, sheets and bedticks. This work gave them valuable training. Besides the academic instruction given by W. G. Farr, Alsina M. Andrews and Montclare E. Hoffman, instruction is given in Hindi, shorthand and typewriting, two hours per week to a few pupils.

Each of the eight girls doing regular work has had two hours a week in cooking lessons under Mrs. Farr, besides lessons in native cooking by a native cook. They have had lessons in cutting out, without patterns, eight different garments, also in crocheting, drawn work and buttonhole making, besides the actual making of various garments and of dresses, including the making of their school uniforms. Besides the above, the washing, ironing, cooking and house-keeping for the family have kept each one busy.

All the girls in the school are Christians, three having been recently converted. They have taken an active part in the work of the church as Sunday School teachers, singing in the choir, taking part in special services and helping to train Sunday School scholars for parts on the various programs. They conduct their own Christian Endeavor meetings, holding their meetings at 6 A. M. They have an unusual way of raising money. By doing without their lunches for some time, they were able to buy an acetylene light for the Seaside Church which they attend, to make an offering on Self-Denial Day, and for the Red Cross Fund, about $20 in all.

Not only have the girls made progress in school and industrial lines, but there has been a decided improvement in ideals and purposes—a real development in character.

ALSINA M. ANDREWS.

PEACE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS IN AMERICA

NOTE—It is hoped that this page may present in brief form a record of activities typical of the work Friends are doing for peace. News items, short, pointed arguments, suggested plans, all will be welcome, and will be used subject to the limitations of space and the proper distribution and arrangement of the matter received. All communications intended for this page should be addressed to Allen D. Hole, President, 615 National Road, West, Richmond, Indiana.

THE WASHINGTON SITUATION IN REGARD TO PREPAREDNESS

By L. Hollingsworth Wood

The atmosphere of Washington while Congress is in session is always an interesting study in our capital city. There gather together a most extraordinary group of men both from this country and the other countries of the world. Congress itself represents almost every shade of American thought and life, and the Departmental officers and clerks all have their peculiar viewpoints toward the government of the nation and what it should do. To walk along the streets and look at the White House, the Navy and War Departments and the State Department and then to travel along Pennsylvania Avenue and look at the Capitol and the House and Senate Office Buildings; to stop at the hotels and see the Congressmen in their unofficial offices chatting over the dinner table, discussing measures for preparedness, for revenue and also the multitude of interests that converge at Washington, is to be an on-looker at an interesting picture of life in America.

The question of preparedness, the question of what the policy of the United States should be in regard to its military and naval services is the dominant topic of conversation; and the President's message, suggesting as it does the program which means such a radical departure from all our American traditions in regard to the Army and Navy, and which is so violent a plunge into the preparation for the use of physical force in determining questions of international and social relations, has urged this subject upon the special consideration of Congress.

The process of crystalizing support or opposition to the program among the men who will have to take the responsibility of deciding the question, is going on at this time. Many Congressmen who had expressed themselves as desirous of voting for some greater appropriations for the Army or Navy are hesitating when the question is presented for their consideration of who is to pay the bill coupled with clearer understanding of the facts as to our preparedness at the present time.

Opposition to the increased program as outlined by the President is headed in Congress by the majority leader, Claude Kitchin, who comes from North Carolina and has been a member of Congress for years. Only two or three days before the adjournment over the holidays Mr. Kitchin made a speech in support of the financial measures which the Ways and Means Committee was proposing, a continuance of the Special Emergency War Taxes, which was so brilliant and convincing and showed such mastery of his subject and such ability to present his facts in a telling, forceful way that his personal prestige and hold upon his position of floor leader was greatly strengthened. Many Congressmen felt that in Mr. Kitchin they had a leader who was worth following.

Consideration of the problem which confronts a Congressman in regard to any matter of national policy, such as this question of "preparedness" reveals reason for a great deal of hesitation to vote the increases which have been demanded so vociferously by the Army and Navy Leagues and the Defense Societies which cry out that we must prepare to repel invasion and protect our inheritance from encroachment.

A Congressman may be quite willing to spend the public money for guns, or battleships or submarines, but when he realizes that the expense of these guns, battleships and other engines of death, which our friends assure us are such excellent insurance, must be actually paid for by taxes which will touch his constituents, such as tax on gasoline engines, gasoline, kerosene, tea, coffee and tobacco, small incomes, etc., (and taxes on almost everything one can think of have been suggested) he realizes that his popularity with his constituents will wane and he begins to study the situation for himself.

To help him in this study there are but few organizations which can and will present the side which appeals to us Friends. Mr. Henry Ford is reported to have opened an office for publicity along these lines and a group with which the writer is associated, calling itself Emergency Anti-Militarism Committee, in which Miss Lillian D. Wald of the Nurses' Settlement in New York, Mr. Paul D. Kellogg, Editor of the Survey, Mr. Lochner and others are associated, have opened an office in the Munsey Building in Washington and engaged a Mr. Hallahan as publicity agent, who is sending out information to Congressmen and to the press as to what the actual facts show in regard to our preparedness now, what the world thinks of our administration's suggested program and what good alternatives to increase our Army and Navy have been suggested by thinking men and women.

On this question of preparedness the Peace Societies of our country seem to have split as upon a rock. They are divided into two groups although all longing for the same result. The groups are, first those who believe in increasing arms with the idea of compelling other nations to stay at peace with you because they are afraid not to, and in this group some very noted citizens have placed themselves; and second, the other group which says the people of the United States will not compel where they cannot persuade, and feeling that to provide the ingredients of conflagration is to invite the conflagration, feeling also that the world groaning under the burden of the armaments already undertaken looks to the United States as a great example of how to live as a nation without undertaking the hideous burdens which Europe has been bearing. It is easy to see that concerted action by societies thus rendered impotent by division on so fundamental a question is practically impossible, and the secretaries of these societies are in the embarrassing position of being as it were hand-strung by their trustees, their activities curbed, their influence shattered and their work as anything except research bureaus curtailed.

In this situation men of "good-will" ought to rouse themselves and bring to expression the deep convictions of the American people; and the readers of the AMERICAN FRIEND can help the few organizations which are actively pressing this campaign to prevent our country's slipping from its high place in the estimation of the world, by writing at once to their representative in Congress and to their

(Concluded on Page 29)

THE IOWA PAGE

CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelistic, etc.—H. R. Keates, 1314 Lyon Street, Des Moines, Iowa.
Missionary—H. D. Lane, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Educational—D. M. Edwards, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Bible School—Golda R. Carroll, Beacon, Iowa.

Christian Endeavor—Cora M. Mattison, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Peace—Alvin Hoskins, Richland, Iowa.

Temperance—Robert Lincoln, Grinnell, Iowa.

Items of information should be sent to the above promptly so that they may appear in the "Iowa page."

The National Missionary Campaign Conducted by the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

Unquestionably the biggest thing along missionary lines is the present campaign now being conducted by the Laymen's Missionary Movement. One hundred of the leading cities of this country have been selected as convention centers where these great conventions are being held. Iowa is especially fortunate in having two of her cities selected as centers—Davenport and Des Moines. The convention will be held in Davenport, Feb. 13-16 and at Des Moines, Feb. 20-23. Since Des Moines is more central for the larger portion of our Yearly Meeting this convention will be the one which most of our men will want to attend.

This Convention at Des Moines is part of a nation-wide campaign in which both the Home and Foreign Mission Boards of all of the Evangelical Churches are co-operating. Five teams of speakers will tour the country, conducting the meetings of these great Conventions.

The main objectives of this campaign are as follows:

1. To consider new world conditions and America's enlarged responsibility.
2. To study the missionary progress of recent years.
3. To project plans looking toward the accomplishment of our whole missionary duty.
4. To emphasize the adequacy of the gospel to meet modern social conditions.
5. To increase the spiritual power and efficiency of the local church.
6. To secure the general use of the best methods of missionary education and finance.
7. To inspire Laymen to take their part in the Extension of the Kingdom of Christ.

The topics to be discussed in the Conventions will be grouped about these seven main objectives. Every one of them is worthy of the deepest consideration on the part of all of our men.

It is earnestly hoped that the men of our Yearly Meeting will avail themselves of the rich opportunity which is to be provided this coming February in these Conventions. A similar Convention will be held in St. Paul and Minneapolis a month earlier—January 23-26. These will be the nearest points for some of our men.

But wherever you live—plan to attend one of these Conventions. It is time now that Monthly Meetings and Men's Bible Classes should appoint delegates to go as their special representatives. Christian Endeavor Societies will do well to see that some of their young men be sent as delegates. Iowa Yearly Meeting must be largely represented in these great gatherings of the Laymen's Missionary Campaign.

FRIENDS' JAMAICA MISSION.

Miss Lora Arms, of Oskaloosa, was sent out in October, to take charge of the East Indian school at Fellowship, near Port Antonio. November 26 she writes, "Although I did not begin my regular work for nearly a month, yet I was busy visiting and becoming acquainted with the many new things. I have been to nearly all the stations; the workers are busy and happy. I have been teaching two weeks here at Fellowship, and enjoy the work very much. The Indians are certainly a dear people. Miss Lizzie Allen was with me a week, helping me get started. The stove has arrived, and is in the kitchen, in use. We had to use the fire-place for a week, so I know how food flavored with smoke tastes. Thanks to all who helped in providing it. The boxes also arrived safely; I find that all the things in mine are just what I need. Please remember me kindly to the ladies of the Missionary Society whom I met."

Happy Grove Industrial School has an attendance of 24 this term, twelve boys and twelve girls. Wendell Farr writes of the boys, "With one or two exceptions they seem to be bright students. Their liveliness, mischief and fun remind us of boys at home. Nicknames were soon given; 'Pretty' is the name given to the boy whose cross-eyes and protruding under lip belie the name, while the boy with the most outspoken anti-German sentiment is dubbed 'Von Kluk.' They are very enthusiastic over cricket and sea bathing. The fixed program, regular habits and discipline are new to some and occasions have arisen when it was necessary to follow the injunction of different parents, 'be very strict,' 'beat him plenty,' 'you must flog him often.' They have been showing much interest, both in their school work and industrial work. Most of them chose carpentry and cabinet making. This has made it necessary to form two classes, and to have them working every day in the week, on account of the limited equipment in benches and tools."

There were unusually heavy rains through the autumn, for which the people are thankful, as it gives the banana fields, which were wrecked by the hurricane, a fresh start.

Lynnville, Iowa —

The receipts of the Bazaar and chicken pie supper, held by the Friends' ladies Saturday, amounted to $100.60 and with expenses of only between $2.00 and $3.00, which leaves them a fine sum to be used for the support of their missionary in Jamaica.

BIBLE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

The Sabbath School at Pleasant Plain used the "White Gifts for the King" service for Christmas. The decorations as well as the exercises were simple and in keeping with the devotional character of the service. Walnut Sabbath School united with the Pleasant Plain Sabbath School in the exercises. When the gifts were presented by the different classes the interest was intense. The primary class laid their gifts under the bright star and repeated a verse of the Message of the Angels. Class number two reported having sent several scrap books and other Christmas books to the Orphan's Home at Council Bluffs, Iowa. Class number three, the Plus Ultras, composed of six girls, with their teacher dressed and sent seven dolls to the same home. Class number four, a young ladies class, the Invincible, sent $11.00 to Jamaica through the C. E. Society. The Young Men's Bible Class reported a contribution of $14.00 partly for missions through the C. E. also. The three married folks' Bible Classes, numbers six, seven and eight, reported special contributions aggregating about $20.00. Comments of those present indicated approval of the change made this year in the character of the Christmas services. A very real blessing was received by all those participating in the service.

The Young Men's Bible Class at Pleasant Plain, as an expression of their appreciation of, and warm feeling toward, their teacher, C. C. Hawthorth, presented to him a new fur overcoat as a Christmas gift. Members of the Pleasant Plain and Walnut Sunday Schools presented their pastor and family with two rugs for Christmas, a large one and a small one. Our three young peoples classes have recently closed a contest on memorizing and repeating scripture texts. The contest lasted about ten weeks with good results. The two girls' classes made perfect records. The young men's class with an average attendance of about eighteen lost out entirely on two texts and two other texts were part of them read instead of being given from memory, making a record of about 97% for this class. The young men being defeated will entertain the two other classes at a social.

BIBLE SCHOOL NOTES.

At New Sharon four teacher training books were ordered and a class will be organized soon.

On Wednesday evening, December 15, a very good conference was held with the workers at Searsboro, in spite of the heavy snow which was falling.

Marshalltown Bible School reports that they are finding the graded lessons recently taken up in their primary department both interesting and satisfactory.

On Monday evening, December 13, a very successful conference was held with the workers at Lynnvile. Their School is well organized and is doing splendid work.

A conference was held with the teachers and officers of the Oak Grove School on Thursday evening, December 16. This is a rural school between Searsboro and Grinnell.

On Sabbath, December 12, the people at Sugar Creek had dinner together at the meeting house and a conference was held with their Field Secretary at two p. m.

Our Field Secretary, Ora W. Carroll, spent December 10-20 visiting the schools of Lynngrove Quarter, including the Schools of Grinnell and New Sharon of Oskaloosa Quarter.

The Christmas Pageant given by the Sunday School of the First Friends Church at Des Moines was a great success. It was appreciated by a large audience. At the close of the program the pastor and wife, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Newby, were presented with thirty dollars in gold by the Sunday School as a Christmas token of love and appreciation.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

JANUARY 23

Topic—The Character and Causes of War—Matt. 5:21-26, 38-42.

Jesus here put himself on a plane as high in authority as that of the law, when he said that ye have heard what the old time doctrines say about killing, but I give you a new basis. The former principle was an eye for an eye, but the Christian basis is that one shall not be angry with his brother. He shall not even provoke his neighbor's anger. Jesus does not qualify his principle with the words "without cause" as found in the old versions. Jesus believes so profoundly in the service of love that he says even the sacred religious ceremonial of sacrifice can be interrupted by an attempt to clarify misunderstandings and right wrongs. Exodus 22:23 and Lev. 24:20 show remains of the old Semitic blood feud. This custom had left its marks in the prejudices of the author of these passages and Israel had followed the principle even to the time of Christ. When Jesus came he abolished this old custom by saying "Resist not him that is evil; but whosoever smiteth thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." He says the only way to defeat evil is to do good. It is impossible to beat Satan at his own game. We must be inventors of a new method of attack. If Jesus meant what he said and we profess to be his followers how can we say that we must fight for peace? Isn't it a lack of faith? Has any nation ever tried a policy of aggressive good will? Why should not our country maintain its reputation for righteousness and fair dealing? Should we not trust our neighbors across the seas in spite of the fact that they are breaking treaties and murdering each other?

War can never bring a settlement to any issue. The agreement comes when people are willing to think coolly and rationally. Why cannot we persuade people to restrain their passions and decide the matter by reason? If our opponent will persist in not being reasonable should we not trust him more? If he insults us and robs us of some of our territory should we not offer him other possessions. If he strikes us should we not turn the other cheek? How does this principle work out on the playground, in business, among nations? Some militarists poke fun at this part of Christ's teachings calling all who adopt this attitude, "Other Cheekers." Should we not be proud to receive such ridicule?

There is little to be gained by war. The economic life of not only the belligerent nations is imperiled, but also that of all neutral nations. Work shops close when war begins. "Labor is diverted from its ordinary tasks and is used for non-productive ends. The works of public utility must wait while the public forces are carrying arms."

"War stops labor, swallows up wealth and tramples upon justice and liberty." But the economic losses of war are small as compared to the loss of inventive ability, literary and artistic genius and the virile manhood of a generation. Again this is insignificant as compared to the loss in morals. Love is smothered while hate, deceit and murder are fostered. True Christianity has to take a vacation when war begins.

Should not Christianity be given a chance before war is declared? In time of peace, prepare for peace. Agitate the cause of peace and the folly of war. Strike at the spur root of war by planting trust in the heart of the nation. The Germans and Austrians as well as the French and English, are good people and deserve our love and respect. If they mistreat us we should redouble our efforts to show them love. Greed, revenge, jealousy and murder cannot be tolerated by a nation founded on the Christ principle. These evils cannot be abolished by arms and armament, but by a forbearing, protesting, uplifting good will.

NOTICE.

Christian Endeavor Week extends from February 5 to February 13. Young Friends Day will occur on February 13. Special effort should be made for that day. Let this be Enrollment Day for all Young Friends. We need the names and addresses of every Young Friend in the United States. Ask us for enrollment cards. They will be forwarded free of charge. Let the Executive Committee of your Society take up this matter at once.

Christian faith is a grand cathedral, with divinely-pictured windows. Standing without, you see no glory, nor can possibly imagine any. Nothing is visible but the merest outline of dusky shapes. Standing within, all is clear and defined; every ray of light reveals an army of unspeakable splendors.—John Ruskin.

THE WASHINGTON SITUATION IN REGARD TO PREPAREDNESS.

(Concluded from page 27)

Senators demanding an investigation that we may know whither we are going before we embark on this course, which is so fraught with peril as Europe is showing us. A Congressman is influenced by what he hears from his constituents, and members of the Society of Friends should be in earnest that their Congressmen should hear the true voice representing the conscience of the American people.

CHURCH AT WORK

CHURCH AT WORK.

Dunreith, Indiana—On December 26 the Bible School at Dunreith gave the exercise entitled "White Gifts for the King," the Sabbath School and meeting being merged into one service. While this was being given the classes brought their gifts for Southland College. Quite a large box was filled and $5.87 was collected in cash, as well as some money for the Industrial School at Denmark, South Carolina. There was an excellent musical program. More than $40.00 has been raised in this meeting for foreign missions. There were decisions for service in the church and also one accession. The pastor, Alice Lawrence, closed the exercises with a short address. Her services as pastor are very much appreciated.

East Main Street, Richmond, Indiana—The East Main Street meeting celebrated the Christmastide very appropriately by giving two entertainments. The first was a Christmas cantata rendered by the choir on Sabbath evening, December 19; the other was a Christmas Pageant entitled "Bethlehem" on Sabbath evening, December 26. Both entertainments proved to be of great enjoyment and profit and were much appreciated as was shown by the large attendance.

Wichita, Kansas—Many of the churches of Wichita have taken up the anti-preparedness propaganda initiated by Friends. They are engaging in a vigorous campaign circulating petitions to Congress and writing personal letters to their Representatives and Senators. This is largely due to the work and influence of Dr. William L. Pearson of Friends University. At a recent meeting of the Ministerial Association he outlined the history of the peace movement and showed what should be the attitude of the Christian church in the light of New Testament teaching.

On December 3 the second annual banquet of the Men's Bible class of University church was held at the city Y. M. C. A. Representatives were present from fifteen of the other Men's Bible classes in the city, and the occasion was one of the most enjoyable the class has ever experienced. There are more than thirty organized Men's Bible classes in Wichita. A number of interesting addresses were given. Music was furnished by Thiers' orchestra.

Union Springs, N. Y.—On the last Sabbath of the Fall term at Oakwood Seminary the Bible School observed the "White Gifts Christmas," which emphasized the giving of self, service and substance to the Master. The exercises were helpful and inspiring. One of the most interesting features was a description of Christmas in Palestine given by Badeah Audi, a native of Ram Allah, who is at present a student here. The thought of consecration of the offering of self to Christ was continued in the meeting which followed. A deep spirit prevailed and all but five either emphasized or made new the gift of self to Christ.

On the evening of December 14 the members of the meeting gathered at the hospitable home of Isaac and Elizabeth Hazard for a pleasant social evening. During the evening Ida T. Parker, the pastor, was presented with an alcohol burner and a copy of G. A. Smith's Historical Geography of the Holy Land, which was a happy surprise to her. This is the fifth year of her pastorate and these tokens of fellowship and co-operation are much appreciated.

South Fork, N. C.—Our Yearly Meeting Superintendent, L. W. McFarland, and our co-worker, Rudd Newsom (our consecrated evangelist singer), assisted by home workers closed a very successful ten days' revival here on December 22. The Word was preached with power and conviction rested upon the unsaved. The members were strengthened and the surrounding churches have felt the influence of this meeting. Our young people seem more interested than ever before and a C. E. Society will probably be organized soon. There were sixty conversions and renewals and twenty-four gave their names for membership, mostly children, thirteen as associate members and eleven by request. An offering of 25.00 was given to Rudd Newsom, and a letter of love and sympathy was addressed to Mrs. McFarland by our Missionary Society, accompanied by an offering of $6.50.

Hadley, Indiana—The church at Hadley has been greatly strengthened and built up by special evangelistic services recently held here. These meetings, which began on Thanksgiving evening and continued three weeks, were directed by Millie M. Lawhead of Van Wert, Ohio, as evangelist and Lillian Parker as singer. The earnest messages and clear and definite exposition of Biblical truth were highly appreciated, while Miss Parker's service in song had an important place in the success of the meeting. More than thirty knelt at the altar and gave witness to definite experience with pardon or the baptism of the Holy Ghost. There were fifteen requests for membership, for all of which we give praise and glory to God. These sisters are now engaged in meetings at Millcreek.

Indianapolis, Indiana—In the absence of the pastor, W. O. Trueblood, the pulpit at First Friends church was occupied by Daisy Barr on the morning of January 2, and in the evening by Frank Boone, a student of Moody Bible Institute. Both services were of special interest. Beginning Monday, January 10, a week of cottage evening prayer meetings has been planned, a number being held each evening so that all members may put themselves in touch with them. Following this there will be a week of special services. Similar simultaneous meetings will be held by the majority of churches of the city, according to the plan outlined by the church federation.

New Burlington, Ohio—Clinton and Cassie Commons, the latter a minister of Webster, Indiana, recently held a two weeks' series of evangelistic meetings here. Their ministry was well received. The membership was actively strengthened and many openly confessed special blessing during the service. They left the community intensely interested in the salvation of the neighborhood. Seven young Friends now constitute a mission study class, using "The Church at Work." When the eight weeks devoted to this study are over the class plans to take up a definite line of service.

NEWS NOTE.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation appropriate holiday greetings from our friend, John Pennington, who is now pastor of Highland Avenue Friends Church, Columbus, Ohio.

We must remember that in man is God's great creative venture. Man is not a finished product yet by any means. The rest of creation presumably and apparently is.—Charles H. Brent.

Love is the life of faith; obedience, the life of love. Yea, rather, Christ himself is the life of the soul.—Pusey.

BIBLE SCHOOL

JANUARY 23.

Subject—The Spirit of Life.

Lesson—Romans 8:12—30.

Golden Text—As many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God. Rom. 8:14.

Our first inclination is to find Paul's meaning for the term FLESH. It is not difficult to find those who differ on this meaning. Some will say that he means the physical body and that it is inherently sinful, it has inherited the "Adamic nature" and so all flesh is by nature sinful. Others tell us that such an idea is wide of the truth. That Paul means that living simply to satisfy the cravings of the animal nature is sinning. The flesh itself is not sinful. Nor are the passions or natural appetites of the body sinful. Sin comes only through misuse. The hand may caress or crush. The tongue may bless or curse. The mind may think pure or foul thoughts. It is the use to which we put the instrument which determines its relation to sin. Or rather sin lies back in the controlling factor, the will. So the argument goes. It seems evident that each interpreter tries to make Paul teach his own conception of the facts in the case.

Without quibbling we may say that Paul's great desire is that we shall make all our members serve the great spiritual ends revealed in Jesus Christ. When mind, body, soul and spirit are thus consecrated to his service we need not worry over these any more than a strong man does to regulate his heart action. In perfect health all human organs function without care. So also will our various physical elements contribute their respective parts to the great spiritual ends when we have normal Christian Health.

But there are hindrances. There are weak members. That which we would do we do not. Here the Spirit of God comes to our assistance after the analogy of the physician or surgeon coming to our help when we find need of him. The situation would be more perfectly illustrated if we had a physician constantly with us to advise and direct. This service is not lukewarm assistance but intercession with groanings that cannot be uttered. He would assure the weakest child of the kingdom that divine aid was his.

This relation is an intimate one. By him we address God as our Father. Following out the logic of the idea, if He is our Father then we are His sons and daughters, heirs of His, therefore joint heirs with His son, Jesus Christ.

Paul now assures his converts, or the Christians at Rome that all things will be done for the best—all things work together for good to them that love the Lord. He assumes here of course, that God is absolute master of the world. Whatever comes then will in the end bring to them that which is for their good.

We now come to a passage that has been a veritable rock of division to the church. Calvin is generally understood to insist upon absolute predestination. Arminius for the freedom to choose. So their followers and others again make Paul say just what they themselves are quite willing to believe. We possibly may never know the exact shade of meaning he intended for the passage to convey. It raises a very difficult problem and one we are not able to answer because we do not know enough about God and His relations to the problem of evil to do so. We have the "Whosoever will may come" and that passage is quite sufficiently inclusive for all practical purposes. For the rest we can wait and trust, confident that in the great beyond we may know more about the mysteries of the great plans of the God whom we so willingly serve.

CORRESPONDENCE.

I was pleased to see in the last American Friend some notice taken of Aaron M. Bray's timely article of caution against following the ruts which had captured most of the Protestant churches. We have already followed them into many pretty deep ones, such as designating our meeting houses as churches, prefixing the title "Rev." to our ministers, giving to our pastors the job of marrying our young people instead of using the well recognized Friends' ceremony which legalizes the privilege of marrying themselves, of addressing each other in the plural, of taking off the hat to every lady we meet in the street, of following foolish fashions, in dress, and putting on mourning for the dead, even abandoning our own burying grounds for the public cemeteries, where we can display monuments to our glory.

Our founders were led out of most of these ruts in their day, even going to extremes in some things, for instance in this matter of grave stones. We have in Lynn on a main thoroughfare in the very heart of the city, a beautiful tract of ground adjoining our meeting house, an ancient Friends' burying ground, buried full, they say, without a stone or any kind of an inscription to mark the spot or tell who lies there. Had this formality been observed this apparently incongruous field would now tell its own story, and vie with the one so conspicuous on Tremont Street in Boston, rivaling the Public Garden in interest, instead of arousing the cupidity of our business men as a choice site for a business block and making it safer for this generation of Friends to bury in the Pine Grove Cemetery.

In conclusion, I would call our attention to the message communicated by John to the angel of the church of Ephesus, "Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love. Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent."

WILLIAM DAME.

East Lynn, Mass.

THE ALLEN JAY MEMORIAL.

Among a wide circle of Friends in this country, the fact is generally known that the West Richmond Friends Meeting at Richmond, Indiana, with a present membership of upwards of 260, is a monument in large degree to the far-seeing vision of Allen Jay. Seeing a rapidly growing section of the city with only a struggling church of another faith, he was quick to sense the great opportunity which a Friends meeting would have for purposes of community work and as an avenue for

Bumper Grain Crops Good Markets — High Prices

Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses

The winnings of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The list comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sweep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the excellence of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producer. In Western Canada you will find good markets, splendid schools, exceptional social conditions, perfect climate, and other great attractions. There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

Send for illustrated pamphlet and ask for reduced railway rates, information as to best locations, etc. Address

G. W. Aird, 215 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Canadian Government Agent.

the church training of the students in Earlham College.

Six years ago last July West Richmond Monthly Meeting was organized, and for six years it found a home in Lindley Hall of Earlham College. For several years the members have contemplated a permanent and separate church home which, since the death of Allen Jay, was to be known as the Allen Jay memorial.

Various sites have been considered, with the result that last year the meeting purchased the home of Mrs. Allen Jay (the old Timothy Harrison home-stead) as the location of its future and permanent home. Since July 1, 1915, all services have been held in the commodious dwelling house on the premises.

Plans have now been completed, however, for the erection of an Allen Jay Memorial building on the north-west corner of the lot, facing Main Street, running back along West Seventh Street, one of the best locations in the city.

About $14,000.00 has already been subscribed by the membership toward the plant which will cost approximately $30,000.00. Building will be begun in the early spring and the committee is now soliciting subscriptions from interested friends both within and outside the city. Friends throughout the country will find this a worthy object of their interest and benevolence. A. L. Jenkins is chairman of the Building Committee.

Our business is not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand.—Carlyle.

MARRIED

Ball-Hadley—At the home of the bride's parents at Denair, California, December 24, 1915, Clifford Ball to Mamie Hadley, Zimri Stubbs officiating.

Pickin-Harlan—At the home of the bride's parents, New Burlington, Ohio, September 26, 1915, John Crosby Pickin of Dayton, Ohio, to Flora Elizabeth Harlan, Jesse Hawkins officiating.

BORN

Swan—At Westfield, N. J., November 16, 1915, to Frederick A. and Helen Wood Swan, a daughter, Mary Elizabeth.

DIED

Corsbie.—John M. Corsbie, son of Thomas and Margaret H. Corsbie, was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, February 12, 1822, and died at the home of his daughter at Salem, Iowa, November 20, 1915, in his 94th year. His youth was spent in Indiana where at the age of nineteen he was converted and joined Friends at Westfield. He married Ruth Reece in 1842 and two years after her death in 1845 he married Matilda Frazer. In 1857 he moved with his family to Henry County, Iowa, and was present at the setting up of Iowa Yearly Meeting in 1863. He was interested in the welfare of the negro and the cause of education. For many years he was a member of the Board of Trustees of Whittier College at Salem. He held office almost continuously as overseer, elder or clerk. He is survived by the widow, two sons and three daughters. Funeral services were conducted by a former pastor, Bessie F. Collins.

Kennedy.—James G. Kennedy, son of John and Sallie Kennedy, was born near Raleigh, N. C., June 3, 1838, and died at the home of his daughter near Denair, California, December 21, 1915, aged 77 years, 6 months and 17 days. He was a birthright Friend and was converted in early childhood. He married Sarah Coat in 1862. Of eight children, four survive him, one being Alice Kennedy, a well known missionary in Jamaica. There are also seventeen grandchildren and seven great grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Zimri Stubbs, pastor at Denair.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

The school is unusually large this year, yet we have room for a few more. The Winter term opens First Month 4th. We shall be pleased to send our catalogue to any interested friends.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½% FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY

Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.
Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.
Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills
Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.
Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward
Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
I. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII, No. 3.

FIRST MONTH 20, 1916

New Series
Vol. IV, No. 3.

On Life's Current.

By J. G. WHITTIER

Yet, on life's current, he who drifts
Is one with him who rows or sails;
And he who wanders widest lifts
No more of beauty's jealous veils
Than he who from his doorway sees
The miracle of flowers and trees;
Feels the warm Orient in the noon-day air,
And from cloud minarets hears the sunset call to prayer.

Better to stem with heart and hand
The roaring tide of life than lie,
Unmindful of its flowery strand,
Of God's occasions drifting by!
Better with naked nerve to bear
The needles of this goading air,
Than, in the lap of sensual ease, forego
The god-like power to do, the god-like aim to know.

I have not seen, I may not see,
My hopes for man take form in fact,
But God will give the victory
In due time; in that faith I act.
And he who sees the future sure,
The baffling present may endure,
And bless, meanwhile the unseen hand that leads,
The heart's desires beyond the halting step of deeds.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid. For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Gethsemane

By N. B. RIPLEY

Somewhere it lies along the toilsome way,
Which surely my reluctant feet must press,
A dreary space, wind-swept and tenebrous,
Wherein my soul will wail out its distress.

And I shall sit me down amid the gloom,
The world without, for I shall be alone;
While to the somber void my stricken heart
Sends up the piercing accents of its groan.

It may chance that tomorrow I shall be Shut within this enclosure, while I cry,
As oft my peers have, wrestling with their woe,
"O, that this bitter cup might pass me by!"

But whensoever I reach it, mighty One,
Chiefest of those whose footsteps there have trod
Give me the grace in all the whelming hour
To say, "Thy will, not mine, be done, O God!"—Ex.

A Larger Paper

As announced week before last, THE AMERICAN FRIEND will become a 20-page paper beginning with the first issue in February. Pastors and others interested should give liberal announcement of this fact as an inducement to increase our subscription list.

American Friend Day

According to custom, the first Sabbath in March will be AMERICAN FRIEND day again this year. The day should be one of unusual interest and importance, both on account of the enlargement of the paper to 20 pages on February 3, and because of the increasing interest in this periodical of the Church.

Write today to your Congressman and Senators against the preparedness program.

Committee For Rational Preparedness

A committee of Americans has been formed to protest against the attempt to stampede this nation into a dangerous program of military and naval expansion. The following statement has been issued as to the purpose of the Committee:

"We believe that no danger of invasion threatens this country, and that there is no excuse for hasty, ill-considered action. We protest against the diversion of the public mind from those preparations for World Peace based on International agreement which it may be America's privilege to initiate at the close of this war. And we protest no less against the effort being made to divert public funds into the manufacture of engines of death which are sorely needed in constructive programs for national health and well being.

"We are against the so-called 'preparedness' program, because it is unnecessary, because it endangers our most precious institutions, and because, in the last and true analysis, no one can measure its cost.

Congressional Program

1. Our immediate purpose is to prevent unusual expenditure for armament during the present session of Congress.

2. Before increased appropriations are made we demand public investigation of our present huge war budget so that every dollar now spent for army and navy may bring 100 per cent of efficiency.

3. We stand for a Congressional investigation of the sources of the demand for large increases in army and navy appropriations.

4. We stand for taking private profit out of armament manufacture.

5. We hold that the expense of armament should be met by income and inheritance taxes and not by taxes which place the burden on the poor.

6. We hold, with the President, that the time has come to develop the Monroe Doctrine into a real Pan-American union. Therefore, we urge that action should be taken by Congress during this session to bring about a conference of representatives from the nations of the Western Hemisphere to consider forming a federation of American Republics.

7. We hold that the questions at issue between America and the Orient are serious and complex, and we therefore favor as a rational approach to their solution the appointment of an expert commission, representing America, Japan and China, to study these questions and make recommendations to the various countries involved, after considering all interests concerned, local, national and international.

"Believing that this program represents the thoughtful conclusions of a large number of patriotic Americans, we urge them to join us."

We are trying to raise a budget to support this work. Our treasurer is L. Hollingsworth Wood, 43 Cedar Street, New York City.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 3.

FIRST MONTH 20, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 3.

THE PREPAREDNESS PROGRAM

So far as the preparedness situation in Congress is concerned, there appears to be a slight rift in the clouds at the present time, sufficient to justify a small hope at least that after all the program of the militarists may possibly fail at this session. It is being argued by some Congressmen, including certain of the President's best friends that the United States should wait a year, or until the close of the present war, before determining what its policy shall be, that no one can tell just now what America should or should not do.

It is argued by those who advocate a waiting policy, that at the close of the war, the United States would occupy a far more advantageous position in trying to secure some mutual agreement with the other leading nations, looking to a permanent program of pacification, than if it should rush madly into an armament program of its own at the present time. The wisdom of this argument will hardly be questioned outside of the out-and-out militaristic party. Whether it succeeds or not will probably depend meanwhile upon the attitude of the people at large. If they have been sufficiently frightened by the appeals to fear on the part of the National Security League, the Army and Navy League and other like organizations, even the wise judgment of our national law-makers may not be able to stem the militaristic tide. If, on the other hand, Congress can be free to be governed by that sober second thought, which just now appears to be somewhat in the ascendancy, reason may yet take the place of frenzy, and we may be spared the burdens of an unnecessary continental army and an extravagant navy.

With this country increasing its armaments and thus expressing our suspicion of all the world, President Wilson would find small hope indeed at the close of the war, in any attempt to induce the nations to agree upon a program that would give promise of a decrease in military equipment and ultimate pacifism. By our own action we would have become part of the world system that relies upon armed force and our avowals of a desire for peace and a reduction of the burdens of armament would be discredited at the threshold of the argument.

On the other hand, if the United States will maintain the historic policies of friendship and good will which have made us neighbor to all the world, our President could enter upon conferences with the heads of all nations, seeking without handicap some basis of agreement and understanding that would insure a reduction of armaments, gradual or otherwise, and an ultimate practical brotherhood if not a federation of the whole civilized world. At any rate, even arguing from the standpoint of those who believe in the righteousness of wars for defense, and the necessity of preparation for it, the failure of such an effort under such favorable circumstances, would be time enough for this country to decide the wisdom or unwisdom of a preparedness program.

This whole argument for delay finds vast encouragement by reason of the wide diversity of opinion relating to a practical program of preparedness at the present time. Its advocates are hopelessly divided apparently upon the degree of preparedness needed, and any legislation is bound to be, not so much a compromise as a guess in the dark, a haphazard bit of law-making, that may or may not appeal to the judgment of the American people. Unless our alarmists can point speedily to some specific elements of danger that are positive and imminent, it is certainly time for conservatism to take the reins of government and preserve us as a nation from the rashness of ill-advised and inharmonious legislation.

In setting forth this argument for delay, which THE AMERICAN FRIEND adopts as its own plea, we do not abate one iota our belief that the whole preparedness program is uncalled for, and will do more to threaten the permanent peace of America than any other act we can perform as a nation, short of downright and persistent injustice toward some other people. For reasons already set forth in these columns from time to time, we believe that opposition to the preparedness program can be supported conclusively, separate and apart from the teachings of the Bible, but we also believe that the American nation must violate both the spirit and the letter of the Sermon on the Mount if it turns to armed force as the guarantee of its permanency and defence.

In this connection it may be said that one of the most interesting developments of the movement for preparedness is the attempt of certain religious journals to harmonize their belief in the teachings of Jesus with a program of preparedness for war. There lies before us the editorial of one of the best edited religious papers in this country that is a medley of contradictions from one end to the other. The floundering of the editor is pathetic, almost grotesque, as must ever be true whenever there is an attempt to reconcile materialistic and un-Christian philosophy with divine teaching. We have before us the editorial of another religious paper, representative of a great denomination, in which the editor waves aside the whole movement of "The Fellowship of Reconciliation" as being only "just the old Quaker policy of non-resistance," thus condemning, apparently without any investigation, a movement of extraordinary value to the church, in that it stresses the realistic exemplification of Christian teaching to all daily conduct.

While endorsing fully the plea for delay in the preparedness program, until the American people can have time to think over the question more thoroughly in the light of clearer judgment, and until the government can, without any handicaps of inconsistency, have an opportunity to sound the other nations upon a plan of disarmament and ultimate peace, we nevertheless contend that it is the province of the Christian Church, unitedly and without reservation, to advocate obedience to the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount, as being alike binding upon individuals and nations, and as constituting a practical and workable rule of conduct for all peoples.

The Church and the School.

By ROBERT LINCOLN KELLEY.
(From "Religious Education")

It is doubtful if there is a more complicated question now confronting the friends of the child, than the one raised by the title to this paper. There is involved not only the function of the Church, the function of the school, and the principle of the separation of Church and state, but the definition of education and the definition of religion as they are related to the nature of the child. These are among the theoretical considerations. Then there is that countless array of complications growing out of the divisions among the churches, the multiplication of educational aims, methods, agencies and institutions, the conflicting laws and judicial decisions, the apathy of the general public within the Church and without, and the conceits, prejudices, doubts and hopes of the few who are awake or are becoming awakened to the "American situation."

In the midst of all this diversity of operations one thing seems to be certain and that is that the American child is not being adequately instructed in religion. The Church leaders are wont to insist that the schools are not so instructing him, and the educational leaders are wont to reply with more or less politeness that the churches are doing little more. The serious fact is that both are telling the truth. The child is not coming into possession of his religious inheritance—in this field he is not getting his rights.

Furthermore it is becoming increasingly apparent that the Church is chiefly responsible for this lamentable situation. Primarily it is not chargeable to "organized infidelity or legislative prejudice." I speak as the representative of a church, and I am constrained to exhort my brethren first to pull out the beam from the eye of the Church and then they can see more clearly to pull out the mote from the eye of the school.

The Question of Responsibility

The Church is commissioned specifically to teach the living truth. If, for the purpose of emphasis, we may speak of religious education as a thing separate and apart from education, the ultimate responsibility for it rests on the Church. It is for this that the Church came into the world. This is not only the distinctive mission of the Church, but it is equally certain that it is not the distinctive mission of the state. Not until this fact is clearly perceived by the Church and it gets under the burden of the tremendous task of bringing religious instruction to all the children of every community, will the question of ultimate responsibility be fairly met. The religious forces of our country have not yet been inspired with the educational ideal. The protestant churches have been occupied with the stupendous task of evangelization. The supreme effort has been to bring men into the kingdom by the doorway of the definite experience of conversion. They have allowed sin to marshal vast armies and to build up by the power of habit all but invulnerable armaments. Against the elaborately constructed fortifications of the enemy they have centered their artillery. And they have battered down many a stronghold. They have been baptizing, confirming, reclaiming, sanctifying, saving; they have been snatching the firebrands from the burning, but they have not been educating. They have indeed done some catechizing but they have scarcely laid the foundations among the children for a broad and intelligent religious faith, much less established a process of purifying society at its fountain head. The church leaders have been evangelists, pastors, preachers—these have been most needed for the type of campaign the Church has been conducting—but they have not usually been teachers, certainly not educators. The educational arm of the Church has not been developed. Rather shall we not say, that the educational arm of the church has become impotent from disuse, for it must not be forgotten that in America the Church was the pioneer in education and the state to a large extent learned the science and art of teaching from the Church.

To be sure, the Church has certain educational agencies. These have developed to meet peculiar needs and they have become quite numerous. Among them undoubtedly the leading one is the Sunday school and in recent years in certain quarters it has made marvelous educational advance. But speaking in general terms these agencies, although educational in form, have not been and are not, in marked degree, educational in spirit. They have lacked and still lack educational equipment, method, purpose, atmosphere. Most of all they still lack trained educational leaders. The Sunday school, the Junior League, the Young People's Society, does not yet have educational prestige. The Gary plan, to be specific, has come as "a challenge to an unprepared Church." That the Church is endowed, however, with the capacity, within a few years, to answer a challenge of this kind is evidenced by the fact, vouched for by a prominent religious leader of North Dakota, that the pupils of that state do not now see much difference between the day school and the Sunday school.

The Church must bear a considerable part of the responsibility for the present widespread tendency toward the complete secularization of the public schools. Its abandonment of the educational field was a tacit admission that religious education was considered of secondary importance. At the time when enormous pressure from the outside was placed on curriculum makers to admit many new subjects of study, the pressure for religious instruction was not felt, because not exerted by religious leaders. The dominant school problem today in many states is the problem of vocationalizing the curriculum. Tremendous pressure is being brought to bear to completely polarize public educational theory with the vocational ideal, to introduce vocational equipment and processes and products. Shall a few educational men with a vision of other and, may we not say, higher educational ideals, stand alone and ultimately be swept off their feet because of lack of support, in this vital conflict, from the forces of organized religion? Shall these men who stand for morality and religion in public education, as well as mental discipline and mechanical dexterity, be forced to yield to the momentary judgment of the crowd that man does live by bread alone? Not only from lack of aggressiveness, however, has the Church aided in this process of secularization: the Church, more than any other single agency, has actually interfered with religious instruction and neutralized religious influence. I say the Church; I should say the churches. Sectarianism has done much to drive religion from the schools. The details of practical school administration have been interfered with and their purpose thwarted by petty jealousies and bickerings and objections on the part of the narrow devotees of denominationalism. The Church has failed adequately to teach religion to the children: the churches have frequently prevented its teaching in the schools. This is not to join in the cry, popular in some quarters, that the public schools are godless. Many public schools are not godless. Not all the religion has been driven from the schools. When this is done the schools will become immoral and educationally unsound. But there has not been a lively sense of proprietorship in the schools, on the part of millions of church communicants. The influence of the Church on public education has frequently been nil.

This same sectarianism has been chiefly responsible for the partial elimination of the Bible from the public schools. Why should there be legislation against the writings of David and not of Tennyson? Why should the authorities rule out the teachings of Jesus and admit the teachings of Socrates? These laws have been passed and these decisions have been handed down because the interpreters of David and Jesus have made of the Bible a sectarian book, because the readers of the Bible have read it for sectarian purposes. The mythologies and religions of the Greeks and the Romans may be placed freely in the hands of our children in the schools but not the religion of the Hebrews and the Christians—not in eight of our commonwealths! Twenty-five years ago the Emperor declared that the purpose of the German schools was to make Germans, not Greeks or Romans. Shall we conclude that in eight of our states the purpose of the schools is to make Greeks and Romans or some other brand of pagans, but not to make twentieth century citizens of the world, not to admit the children to their undoubted heirship to the best the long centuries have prepared for them? And all this because the Bible is a sectarian book, not so made by its enemies, much less by its authors, but so made by its misguided friends.

The Church may well reflect also upon the aggressive manner in which educational leaders have been setting the ideals of religious education and promoting practical methods of procedure. The classic quotation in the mouths of all American advocates of religious training is the dictum of the President of Columbia University that the child is entitled to his religious inheritance. To this may be added the recent declaration of the United States Commissioner of Education that, "The day will come when the Bible will be read in the public schools just as any other book. There is no reason why the Bible should not have its rightful place in our school curriculum." It was the Dean of the State University that originated the North Dakota plan of Bible study. In Indiana, members of the State Board of Education and a group of superintendents and principals conducted the campaign for Bible study and the committee which now has the supervision of the work represents sections of the State Teachers Association and is headed by a teacher of English in one of the great high schools of the state. The National Education Association has awarded a prize for an essay (See Religious Education Vol. 10, No. 1, page 87) on "The Essential Place of Religion in Education, with an outline of a plan for introducing religious teaching into the public schools." It is unnecessary to multiply examples of the readiness, even of the anxiety of the schools, to promote religious education wherever and however practicable.

But the Church must assume its rightful place of leadership in this great work. It must become conversant with the facts. It must set the ideals. It must recognize the need. It must point the way out. It must furnish the motive power. The Church should realize that the Bible has been the textbook of American civilization and that our children are growing up in ignorance of it. They must feel profoundly that without the Bible there is no vision, and without a vision the people will perish. They must lay plans to prevent a moral sag in the civilization of the future. The Church must save the children.

The Methods of Co-operation

This the Church is beginning to do. There is nothing more hopeful in this situation than the manner in which, within the last few months, the Church is coming into its own. It will not be forgotten that it was the ministers of Greeley, under the leadership of one of their own number, that conceived and put into successful operation the Greeley Plan. The work of the Sunday School Association of North Dakota was invaluable in the development of the North Dakota Plan. The Presbyterian General Assembly recently declared that "the Church is responsible for promoting religious instruction in our public schools," and instructed its Board of Education "to take steps to promote that end." The Council of Church Boards of Education has declared for state laws to safeguard the reading of the Bible in the public schools. Less than a month ago a special conference at Chicago called by the Educational and Secondary Committees of the International Sunday School Association appointed a Committee of Nine with instructions that they "invite all general religious and educational organizations in North America to co-operate with the committee in the creation of a Commission for the purpose of suggesting standardized courses of Bible study and religious instruction for credit in schools of primary and secondary education," and "that the International Sunday School Association be requested to take such steps as may be needed to make the work of the committee effective." In this conference the fact was brought out that in not fewer than twenty-one states and provinces some headway has been made in the movement for public school credit for Bible study. To be sure, in some instances this progress consists only in the manufacture of public sentiment, but this of itself is a great gain. One can scarcely imagine what the next few years will bring forth as the churches become aroused to the urgent need and the present opportunity. In magnificent manner the church armies are mobilizing in behalf of the child.

The cause would be greatly promoted by an earnest spirit of co-operation among the national and international agencies now existing for the promotion of religious education. Included under this head are the Religious Education Association, the Federation of Churches, the Council of Church Boards of Education, the International Sunday School Committee, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Church Workers in State Universities and the Association of American Colleges. Unfortunately there is no united effort among these organizations. Some are fostering specific plans and are more or less intolerant of other plans. The strength that comes from union is not yet theirs.

And this leads to the suggestion that no single plan will meet the needs of every community. The Church should support any and every practicable plan. Will the Church still hold on jealously to the traditional Sunday school as the one and only instrument of religious instruction when advised there are 10,000,000 children not in the Sunday school? The religious leaders of a given community should unite on the plan or plans best adapted to their own conditions. The field is an open one. There may be modifications of existing plans; there may be better plans devised than any now in operation. If need be the churches must abandon all their traditional methods, and consider the religious nurture of the children of greater moment than the promotion of a pet method of procedure.

It is certain, however, that the Church must set its own house in order. It must modernize its own educational agencies. The standard of educational efficiency of the Church must not be below that of the public school. If the Church does a fine quality of educational work in the Sunday school and elsewhere, the home and the school will be found co-operating. If the pastor is a real educational leader the fact will be recognized by the superintendent of schools and the school board. The Church must carefully look into its equipment, its methods, its use of time, the qualifications of its teachers, and it must subject the results accomplished to some approved form of measurement. Not only this but it must have a system of education. Much of the educational effort of the Church is unrelated. There is little or no co-ordination of agencies. There should be a consistent program that would include the work of the Sunday school, the Junior and Senior League, the junior and senior societies, the children's and young people's missionary societies, the Temperance Society, et cetera. The educational motto of the Church at present should be advancement and co-ordination.

All this calls for a good quality of educational statesmanship. This work will not direct itself: it must be directed. There are now in the United States and Canada 127 directors of religious education at work in local churches. They are educational experts. They are salaried officers. They are going about their work with a definite and serious purpose. They are using all available educational agencies. They are solving the problems of architecture, of methods, of correlation, of time expenditure, of curriculum, of teacher selection and training and are not ignoring the problem of the parent. They are training the children in Christian worship, in religious truth, in Christian service. In some cases they have the children under their supervision for two and one half hours on Sunday. They are conducting schools of religion. They are doing a great piece of educational pioneering in the churches. All these means are inherently valuable for the purpose in hand and they are means of co-operation with the schools for they create an appetite and an atmosphere for religious life and instruction.

There is no reason why some modification of the Gary plan or the Wenner plan may not be adapted to many local communities. The churches should be careful about asking for more time from the public schools than they can use profitably. The need for the socialization of our schools is generally recognized by intelligent educators, and with all conditions favorable many schools will be willing to release the pupils with the consent of the parents for short periods of instruction under the auspices of the churches. There is no present prospect of this being made a nation-wide plan, but it is subject to local use at once.

It is certain also that there will be wide use of other well-known plans which provide for possible credit for work done outside the school by students of secondary grade. Every student of this subject should become familiar with the North Dakota plan, the Colorado plan and their modifications in other states.

At Oak Park, Illinois, there is a community Training School of Religious Education, the aim of which is "To open the way so that all parents and teachers can follow a common program of moral training and religious instruction, by bringing together for study and expressional activity parents, teachers in public schools and church schools, and especially chosen young people who will fit themselves to be proficient teachers in the home and in the schools of church and state." This embraces twenty churches in Oak Park, River Forest and vicinity. The school sessions are held one evening in each week and the enrollment for the last season was over 600. Three years' work are outlined and arrangements are made for credits and graduation.

There are many who think it impossible to put religion into the schools, but who see the need of more religion in the teachers. Here the Church can have a profound influence. The religious forces of a community should assist in every legitimate way in the selection of school boards, trustees, superintendents and teachers, who, being religious personalities themselves, will do all in their power to create a religious atmosphere about and within the school. In many communities this is a function of the Church which appears to be completely atrophied.

The Church can and should do one other thing—perhaps in breadth of opportunity the most important thing to be named. It can lend its moral support to the promotion of the art of religion in the schools. To do this they must not overstep the constitutional guarantee of separation of Church and state. This fundamental law of the land must not be violated in letter or spirit. The ultimate function of the school, however, is the building of character, not the impartation of information. There is no constitutional or legal denial of "the need or value of religion as an element in character building." The science of religion is excluded from the schools on the ground that the state must assume an attitude of impartiality toward all forms of religion, but the art of religion, the fragrance of the devout teacher's life, is undoubtedly there. The state would not eliminate it if it could, and it could not if it would. It was said of President Harper that he taught Hebrew as a series of hair-breadth escapes. In the hands of thousands of our teachers arithmetic and grammar as well as history and literature are being taught as a religious exercise. May not the teacher approach and perform her daily task in a devotional, prayerful spirit? And will not the children in the presence of truth so presented become reverent and obedient? Can the teacher be prevented by law from developing ideals of truth, of righteousness and love? Does the constitution interdict ideals of gentleness, humility, justice, liberty, love and peace? And yet these things are what Jesus taught by precept and example, these things and others like them constitute dynamic religion. You may prevent the forms of religion from being taught in the schools; you can not devise a system of quarantine so effective that the essence of religion will not be caught in the schools.

Religion is an essential part of education. To separate religion from education is to strip education of its crown of glory. "Let the Church teach the state the value of this spiritual dynamic" that is the support of our life and civilization. Let the Church proceed to tear down the imaginary barriers between the so-called sacred and secular. The spirit of religion is not confined to the Church, much less to my church and cannot be confined there. The power of religion is in economics, and politics and society. Does the power of religion stop short before it gets to education? Are our public schools unique in this respect that they are religion-proof? Any one familiar with the spirit of education on this continent knows the answer to this question. Our highest racial aspiration is for the unity of truth. The school and the Church and the home must work together.

Earlham College, Ind.

"To obey is better than sacrifice."

A Call to Prayer

The Commission on Evangelism, appointed by the Federal Council of Churches, held three sessions on December 7 at Columbus, Ohio. The Commission emphasized the importance of evangelism as the paramount need of the church. It was thought that the way was clear for advanced steps to be taken, and that the time was ripe for a movement for a national campaign for evangelism and prayer for a world-wide revival. The Commission issued a call to prayer from which I take the following extracts:

"The Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, acting for the Federal Council, issues a solemn call for the churches of Christ to unite in prayer for a world-wide revival of true religion. The primal consideration that has inspired this call is the fact that our Lord Jesus Christ always stands ready with all the forces of omnipotence to aid His people, pleading and striving in His name and for His sake, for the salvation of that world for which He died, and which He lives to redeem. We have also the incentive contained in the Savior's prayer the night before His atoning death, 'Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that they all may be one, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.' Christian unity can find inspiring manifestation not only in the United States, but in all lands, in united prayer for the salvation of the world.

"Another incentive to prayer for world revival is found in the fact that the Christian Church began its career of spiritual advance with a revival of religion so great that the word Pentecost has been a marked note of encouragement to Christians through all the centuries. Pentecostal revivals have been God's gift to the United States repeatedly.

"Today our country needs more and greater revivals, revivals more thorough and far-reaching in their results in individual salvation than any of the past, and more complete and permanent, in the moral reformation both of individuals and the nation. The needs of the hour are definite; the church universal reawakened to duty; the Christian conscience rearoused, and a wide-spread revival of Christ's redemptive spirit in the hearts and lives of men. The great need is for a change of heart; for a return to the simple virtues of the pious life; for the honoring of God's Word because of its absolute truth and great spiritual power; for a return of the recognition of God at the table and fireside; for a renewal of the honoring of God by attending His house, and above all for prompt and constant obedience to the command implied in the words of Christ, 'I am come to seek and to save that which was lost.'

"This solemn call is also the recognition that the duty of regular daily prayer needs at times to be supplemented and intensified by extraordinary prayer. The need for concerted and extraordinary supplication was involved in the Savior's words to His disciples, 'Depart not from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father.' And that prayerful waiting brought Pentecost. Every great revival of religion has been preceded by waiting upon God. We plead, therefore, not only for special individual prayer for revival, but we plead for the whole church in prayer; for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior, who will have all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth. Let Christians of every denomination and church unite in prayer for a world-wide Pentecost, in His name and for the extension of His kingdom, who died upon His cross, 'the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but for the sins of the whole world.' Let us pray in the spirit and power of the world, 'For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' "

This call to prayer was issued some time ago, but the Commission took up the subject of a country-wide movement of evangelism, and considered it very earnestly. It was thought that the present year should be spent in preparation and planning, and that in two years the revival might be upon us. Other matters of importance were brought before the Commission through the reports of the Committees on Finance, on Literature, on Credentials and Standard of Principles, and on Field and Method. The atmosphere of the sessions was fine and the fellowship and spirit of unity and good will were excellent.

ESTHER COOK.

No Need For Being Too Hasty

There are many stories of the old-time negro parsons in the remote south. This was given currency by a speaker from Georgia:

The parson was denouncing theft to his congregation, when he said: "If there is any member of this congregation who is guilty of theft he had better repent at once and be saved."

On his way home he was stopped by old Rastus, who had listened to the sermon intently. Don' yo' think, pahson, that nex Sunday will do jes as well as tonight to repent?" asked Rastus.

"But, Rastus, why not repent tonight and be saved, man?"

"Well, pahson, it's dis way," explained Rastus. "I want jes one mo' chicken fo' tomorrow's dinner, an' I know wha I kin git dat chicken widout bein' caught tonight."

"Well," said the parson, hesitating, "I reckon I better take dinner with you tomorrow and we'll talk the matter over."—The Continent

The best work you do may owe something to your skill, but it owes more to your interest in the job.

If we knew our brother as God knows him, we should never dare to despise him any more.—G. H. Morrison.

Church Peace Union Against Preparedness

The Church Peace Union, through its twenty-nine trustees who are among the most representative men in the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish churches in this country, adopted the following resolutions at a meeting in New York City.

Whereas, the world is passing through an awful crisis, and men everywhere are sorely confused in their notions and bewildered in their judgments;

And Whereas, it is the duty of God-fearing men to increase in the world the stock of good will, and to devise means by which the recurrence of the present world tragedy may be rendered impossible;

And Whereas, the United States, because of its position and power and traditions, is under bonds to do what it can toward the reshaping of the opinion of nations, and the moulding of a new and nobler world policy;

Therefore, Be it Resolved, that we ask all the pastors and teachers and other religious leaders to bend their minds to the great task of creating and fostering a deeper spirit of racial sympathy and international good will, and of exalting in men's hearts the divine ideals of human brotherhood;

And Be it Resolved, that we appeal to the American people to withstand the present demand for increased armament for the United States. We are already spending each year the enormous sum of $250,000,000 on the army and navy and if neither of these is now efficient we would ask that Congress discover how the money of the people may be more effectively expended.

Upon the hearts of the American people we would enroll the duty of national preparedness in mind and spirit, that we may worthily meet the crucial situation by which we are now confronted. Military preparedness having proved to be inadequate as a safeguard to the world's peace, we call upon men everywhere to renounce the policy of armed peace and to seek and follow a better way.

Notice

In the Los Angeles Times dated Eleventh Month, 20, 1915, Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, is reported to have made the following declaration:

He favored putting into the trenches in Europe both the people who want to drag the United States into war, and those who would not fight for any reason.

A friend of mine informed me that he heard Champ Clark make a similar statement in a speech he recently delivered in San Jose, California.

Such language from such a source is calculated to promote a feeling in every community where it is uttered that becomes intolerant of religious and civil liberty. It indicates what may be expected before many years in this country as the military spirit gains advocacy or ascendancy.

Friends have often proven that they were willing to suffer or die for Christian principles. It is in no spirit of cowardice that they desire to protect the religious privileges upon which our country was founded. We have need to now stand by our colors. I hope that all Friends will immediately write to President Wilson, asking if the above represents the attitude of the administration in connection with "preparedness." He will at least see that we are profoundly concerned with these questions.

WM. C. ALLEN.

His Heart Rejoicing Still

Said an aged pastor: At one time I had in my parish a very wealthy man, who was also a godly man, giving liberally of his abundance to every worthy cause to which his attention was called and rejoicing continually in the Lord's goodness.

Through no fault of his own, reverses came to him. He lost his property and after paying every obligation obtained employment as a bookkeeper in the large mercantile establishment of which he had been the head. Still, he was as regular as ever at church and at the prayer-meeting spoke just as cheerfully and hopefully, and, aside from the fact that he was not able to give as largely as heretofore, there was no change whatever to be noticed in him.

"How is it that you keep up so remarkably?" I said to him one day. "We all feared that you would be melancholy and despondent, but you are even more sunshiny and brighter in your demeanor than you were before your reverses."

"And why not?" he replied, cheerfully, "when I was rich and could have everything that heart could desire, that money could buy, I enjoyed the Lord in all things. Now that I have simply what I earn from day to day, I enjoy all things in the Lord. I have the conscious assurance that I have more reason than ever before to rejoice, for the Lord has kept me and has allowed His glorious love to pour into my soul in prosperity in such abundance that there has been no place for pride to lurk, and through the changes to which I have been subjected there has been no desire to hide or censure, and now the same Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter, is still with me in adversity; so what have I to do but to praise and glorify His name from day to day?"—Annie A. Preston, in Christian Intelligencer.

Blameless, Not Faultless

Last year I received a letter from my wife in which there was another little letter written by the hand of my boy, then six years old. If I should show you that letter and ask, "Is that letter faultless?" you would answer, "Well, no." Is it blameless?" "Most assuredly. Love wrote it, love prompted it, love did the best thing possible, under the conditions of that time; but it is not faultless. By and by I may have a letter from that son, better written, better spelled, but none can ever be more blameless than the first letter that crossed the sea to me.

You can write a blameless epistle if you will, if not faultless; the epistle which love prompts, which love dictates. God help us to live blameless lives!

WITH THE CHILDREN

What Tommy Hears

Mischievous Tommy—
He hears every day,
A homily simple
Beginning this way:

"Now, Tommy, you must'nt,"
And, "Tommy, you must;"
And, "Tommy, stop running, You'll kick up the dust,"
And, "Do not go swimming
Or you will get wet,"
And, "Do not go sailing
Or you will upset,"
And, "Do not be wrestling, You'll fracture your bones,"
And, "Do not go climbing,
You'll fall on the stones,"
And, "Do not be whistling,
You're not a mere bird,"
And, "Good little children
Are seen and not heard."

Which Tommy, on hearing, Exclaims, "Deary Me!
What can a boy do?
And where can a boy be?"
—Scrap Book.

Killing the Dragon

A little boy, four years old, was much impressed by the story of "St. George and the Dragon," which his mother had been reading to him and his sister, and the next day he said to his father:

"Father, I want to be a saint."

"Very well, John," said his father, "you may be a saint if you choose, but you will find it very hard work."

"I don't mind," replied John. "I want to be a saint and fight a dragon. I am sure I could kill one!"

"So you shall, my boy."

"When can I be one?" persisted the child.

"You can begin today," said the father. "Where is the dragon?"

"I will tell you when he comes out."

So the boy ran off to play contentedly with his sister.

In the course of the day some presents came for the two children. John's was a book and his sister Catherine's a beautiful doll. Now, John was too young to care for a book, but he dearly loved dolls, and when he found that his sister had what he considered a much better present than his own, he threw himself on the floor in a passion of tears.

His father, who happened to be there, said quietly, "Now, John, the dragon is out."—Exchange.

They Were Partners

A sturdy little figure it was, trudging bravely by with a pail of water. So many times it had passed our gate that morning that it curiously prompted us to further acquaintance.

"You are a busy little girl today?"

"Yes'm."

The round face under the broad hat was turned toward us. It was freckled, flush and perspiring, but cheery withal.

"Yes'm; it takes a heap of water to do a washing."

"And do you bring it all from the brook down there?"

"Oh, we have it in the cistern mostly; only its been such a dry time lately."

"And is there nobody else to carry the water?"

"Nobody but mother, an' she is washin'."

"Well, you are a good little girl to help her."

It was not a well-considered compliment, and the little water-carrier did not consider it one at all, for there was a look of surprise in her gray eyes, and an almost indignant tone in her voice as she answered: "Why, of course, I help her; I always help her all the time; she hasn't anybody else. Mother'n me's partners."

Little girl, are you and mother partners? Do you help her all you can?—Kind Words.

Little Boys and Little Sheep

Joe came home with his clothes, and even his curly hair, all wringing wet. "Just knew the ice wasn't strong enough," he grumbled.

"Then why did you slide?" asked auntie.

"'Cause all the other boys did," said Joe; "so I had to, or they'd laugh."

His aunt gave him dry clothes, set him down by the fire, and made him drink hot ginger tea. Then she told him a story.

"When I was a little girl, Joe, my father had a great flock of sheep. They were queer things; where one went, all the rest followed. One day the big ram found a gap in the fence, and he thought it would be fun to see what was in the other field. So in he jumped, without looking to see where he was going, and down he tumbled to the bottom of an old, dry well where father used to throw stones and rubbish. The next sheep never stopped to see what had become of him, but just jumped right after, and the next, and the next, although father tried to drive them back, and Watch, the sheep dog, barked his loudest. But they just kept on jumping till the well was full. Then father had to pull them out as best he could, and the sheep at the bottom of the well were almost smothered to death."

"My! what silly fellows!" exclaimed Joe. Then he looked up at his aunt, and laughed.—London Sunday School Times.

Oughts

Children ought to pray; they ought to act kindly; they ought to be courteous; they ought to obey their parents; they ought to love Jesus.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

QUARTERLY MEETING CONFERENCE.

The Wilmington Yearly Meeting Missionary Committee at its last meeting appointed a committee to assist the Missionary Superintendent of each Quarterly Meeting in arranging a Quarterly Meeting Missionary Conference.

The first of these conferences was held at Wilmington in Center Quarterly Meeting, December 8th, with a good attendance. There were sessions at 10:30 a. m. and at 1:00 p. m. Of the fifteen congregations in the Quarterly Meeting, eleven were represented on the program. Subjects discussed were as follows:

"The Fine Art of Giving."

"Can We Give More Money for Missions?"

"Good Points of the Every-member Canvass."

"The Best Way to Present the Subject of Missions to Our Sunday School Children."

"Latest Report from our Cuban Field."

"How Can Our Young People and Children Help in Creating Missionary Interest?"

"Can a Church be a Growing Church and Not be a Missionary Church?"

"Latest Report from our African Field."

"How May One Person Who is Interested in Missions Succeed in creating an Interest in Missions in the Meeting?"

"The Individual Responsibility of the Worker for Missions in a Small Meeting."

One Meeting furnished special music. and another Meeting gave a dialogue, which had been prepared for the occasion. Those attending the conference brought lunch and Wilmington ladies served hot coffee, baked beans and buttered buns to add to the dinner.

A YOUNG MAN OF HOLQUIN.

Four years ago, Armando was a round-faced, chunky lad of about twelve years. His father is a butcher and at that time had a little grocery store as well. Armando is the second son and the house is full of smaller children. The older boy was store-keeper and Armando was general helper in the store, the home and the meat-market. He attended the Sunday School but was not very regular.

As time passed, the older brother became an active Christian and decided to fit himself for the ministry. The store was sold, the older brother went away to school and Armando entered the Mission School. He was bright and learned rapidly and in the meantime became a faithful member of the Sunday School and of the Christian Endeavor. At the same time, he found time to learn type-setting and he became a member of a boys' band that was organized in the town.

Last year, the city offered three scholarships in the Institute (a sort of High School) here. He and another boy of our school won two of them. This is his second year in that school and although the principal boasts that there is no religion taught in his school, these boys remain faithful to the church and have brought several of their schoolmates into the Sunday School and other services of the church. Armando, now a tall, manly fellow of sixteen, is secretary of the Sunday School and an active member of the Christian Endeavor.

Doubtless, the greatest factor in his conversion was the influence of his older brother whom he greatly admires, but the daily devotional exercises in the school had their influence, as well as the church services which he attended, until altogether the Gospel seed found a welcome spot in his heart where it was able to put forth the tender sprout of a Christian life.

CLARENCE G. McCLEAN.

CHILDREN FROM INDIA.

It was the 5th of August, 1914, that I landed in Jamaica ready to take up my appointed work as teacher of the Orange Hill East Indian School. The first month was spent in visiting the various mission homes, schools and services, when I gained a better knowledge of what "our mission" was really doing and some idea of the work of the schools and the government requirements for them.

On the last day of August, the school was given over into my care. It was indeed very different from the American schools with which I had been associated. Some very difficult problems were facing me but by the help and guidance of God Almighty I was willing to undertake the work to which he had called me.

The school is held in the back part of the Orange Hill Chapel which is one large room. The children sit on long benches, six or eight feet in length. Two or three of these are provided with desks of the same length, which are in use by the older boys. With the exception of three or four creole children, my school is composed of East Indians, most of whom are boys. They are very bright, intelligent and active children. The Indians belong to the Caucasian race and are much like their fairer brothers and sisters in every way save their dark brown skin and black eyes. When education and Christianity reach them, they differ very little from our own people.

In January, Mr. Mercier, the Inspector of Schools, visited the school and left the following note in the Log Book: "While some scholars attend very regularly, others are quite irregular in their attendance. It is to be hoped that the irregular ones will soon follow the good example of the others. Already there is a noticeable improvement in discipline."

Many of the parents seem anxious that their boys should be educated and often much against the desire of the boy the parent comes dragging him into the room, saying, "Mamma must beat him and make him come good."

Perhaps you will notice I have said nothing about the girls in my school. Ah! that is the sore spot. That is the problem. That is where our prayers and your prayers are most needed—for the girls and women of our Indian people. In my school, I have only one little Indian girl who has attended with any regularity during the year, and this one I take with me from Miss Stanley's home. Over and over again, we have tried to get the little girls, who do nothing but run wild over the hills from morning till night, but like little wild birds flitting here and there they come in and are out again before we know it. Often we visit the homes and try to persuade the parents to send their girls, but the usual answer is: "The girls don't need to learn to read and write. Their work is to cook, wash pots and pans, and care for babies." So the girls are left to grow up in ignorance and heathenism.

Aside from our day school at Orange Hill, we have a night school which is held every Tuesday evening. In this school there is an enrollment of fifteen young men who are very much interested in their work. Most of them have confessed Christ as their Savior and attend Sunday School and other services of the church. Here again we miss the girls and cannot help but feel concerned when we think of these boys marrying ignorant and heathen wives, who, instead of being a help to their husbands, will be a hindrance to their Christian lives if not the cause of a complete failure.

The Sunday School and Church services have increased in attendance during the year, yet we find but few girls and women who attend and still fewer who take an active part.

Although this is a dark picture to look back upon, yet we have seen glimpses of light ahead. For the past few weeks, three or four little girls have been coming to the day school more, regularly and showing more interest than at first, so we are hoping and praying they will continue and others will follow. God has been leading us and showing us many ways in which we can be helpful to the girls and it is our prayer and purpose to accomplish much along this line during the coming year.

JENNIE M. HOOVER.

THE IOWA PAGE

CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelistic, etc.—H. R. Keates, 1314 Lyon Street, Des Moines, Iowa.
Missionary—H. D. Lane, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
Educational—D. M. Edwards, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
Bible School—Golda R. Carroll, Beacon, Iowa.
Christian Endeavor—Cora M. Mattison, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
Peace—Alvin Hoskins, Richland, Iowa.
Temperance—Robert Lincoln, Grinnell, Iowa.
Items of information should be sent to the above promptly so that they may appear in the "Iowa page."

EVANGELISTIC DEPARTMENT.

Eli Reece of North Carolina Yearly Meeting has held special meetings at Linden and Earlham in Bear Creek Quarterly Meeting, from which good results are reported. He has now gone to Kansas Yearly Meeting for evangelistic work.

Isaac N. Rich of Marshalltown, has held a series of meetings at Bear Creek, from which accessions to membership are expected.

Elgie L. McCarger has closed a series of meetings at Camby with much blessing resulting.

Edwin Loft has been holding meetings at Hickory Grove. Reports have not yet been received. Weather conditions generally are seriously interfering with attendance at meetings and there is much sickness over the state.

Edgar H. Stranahan of Oskaloosa, is holding a week's meetings at Des Moines. There was a good attendance at the opening sessions, Sunday, January 9, and it is hoped that much good will be done.

Elgie L. McCarger expects to begin a series of meetings at Motor next week. His wife has been very sick for some time past, but it is hoped that she will steadily improve now.

Honey Creek Quarterly Meeting was held at New Providence, Iowa, December 31 to January 2. Stormy weather prevented many from the outlying meetings from attending, but local Friends were well represented. The ministry devolved upon H. R. Keates, Anna Smith, Clinton Morris and the pastor, F. C. Lebert. The presence of the Lord was manifest in a very gracious manner throughout the sessions. Scranton Quarterly Meeting was held at Scranton January 7, 8 and 9. Conditions of roads and stormy weather reduced the attendance to a minimum. H. R. Keates spoke at the meeting for ministry and oversight. He also spoke on Saturday and Sunday mornings. Carrie A. Butler preached on Saturday evening and Allen Jay on Sunday evening. Franklin Meredith was not feeling well, being confined to the house part of the time.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DEPARTMENT.

Des Moines—The Christian Endeavor Meeting on December 26 was in charge of three young men of the Society. The quartet furnished special music.

Sunday afternoon, January 2, a group of Endeavorers held a meeting at "The Des Moines General Hospital." The president of the Society had charge and the speaker was O. F. Comfort. The quartet furnished the special music. They sang "The Church in the Wildwood" and "Just Outside the Door." Those that were present seemed to be helped and uplifted for the coming year.

At our first meeting of the new year we had the pleasure of having Cora Mattison of the Christian Endeavor Union of Iowa Yearly Meeting with us. She brought before us what are our duties as a Society for this year.

During the three Sunday afternoons of February and the first Sunday in March the city Endeavor Union of Des Moines is going to hold Expert Endeavor Classes in three districts of Des Moines. The East Side District is to be held in the First Friends church and Walter Homan, a member of our Society, is to conduct the East Side Class.

The Endeavorers co-operated in the eight-day special meetings which commenced January 9. Edgar H. Stranahan, pastor of Oskaloosa meeting, had charge of these meetings.

Earlham—The Earlham C. E. Society has at present six "Expert Endeavorers" in its membership. The Look-out Committee was given from five to fifteen minutes of the prayer meeting hour in which to instruct the Society on "Expert Endeavor." The work proved very helpful to the membership. The new "Expert" chart is now being used. A business meeting and social is held on Monday evening once a month which adds much life to the Society.

Oskaloosa—Oskaloosa C. E. plans to begin the course on peace suggested by the Young People's Board. Prof. Clarence M. Case will conduct this class once a month at the time of the regular meeting.

FIELD NOTES.

New Providence, Ia.—Honey Creek Quarterly Meeting was held at New Providence, beginning with the meeting on ministry and oversight on December 31. Harry R. Keates was with us and gave a very searching message from the words found in Isa. 64:7. At the meeting for worship on Saturday Harry Keates also preached from Rom. 12:1. On Sunday morning Anna Smith and Clinton Morris had charge of the meeting. At all these gatherings the presence of the Lord was recognized and many hearts were blessed. On account of sickness and bad weather the attendance was not large. Our next Quarterly Meeting will be held at Hubbard in April.

LeGrande, Ia.—Le Grande Meeting is preparing and praying for a real revival, and has commenced holding cottage prayer meetings beside the regular mid-week meeting. Clarkson Hinshaw is expected to help our pastor in the work. Seven joined the church this week and our pastor is giving some stirring and spiritual sermons. Pray for us that the power of God will get hold of some of the older men in the town who are unsaved. Ora Carrel, our superintendent of Sabbath School, Endeavor and Mission work, met with us last week and gave some helpful advice.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

January 30.

Topic—"The Consequences of War."
Lev. 19:18. Gal. 5:13-16.

The compiler of priestly laws in the Book of Leviticus places in the heart of his work a group of chapters which stand by themselves in spiritual insight and moral instruction.

These chapters, Lev. 17-26, have been named the Holiness Code, because of their contents. Holiness is a duty laid upon Israel by Jehovah. Dry ceremonial instructions which characterize much of the remainder of the Book are glorified by the moral and religious teaching of this code.

Perhaps the moral teaching reaches its highest point in the 19th chapter where the welfare of poor and dependents is advocated, and proper treatment of neighbors is enjoined. While wickedness shall be rebuked, no one shall become angry with his neighbor. The very exalted principle of loving one's neighbor as himself is commanded.

This 18th verse of the 19th chapter of Leviticus stands like a nugget of pure gold in the colorless grey rocks of Priestly ceremony. Although much abused through misinterpretation and disobedience, this principle remained in the minds of many Jews until Jesus made it second to the command of Love to God.

Again in Galatians 5:13-16, Paul makes this the very foundation principle of society. He says, "The whole law is fulfilled in this one word, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

It is impossible to count the cost of war in its entirety. For war not only destroys property, houses and industrial wealth, but life, homes and social wealth. War inflicts injury upon the soul as well as upon the body of a nation. It increases burdens, and decreases the power to carry them.

When the war is over, the losses will be heart losses. The nations will be impoverished to be sure, but the heart suffers most.

In modern warfare there has been an attempt to decrease the destruction of property. The unnecessary destruction of buildings is avoided in warfare that is carried on under the latest international agreements. This effort, however, only emphasizes the destructive character of war. "Forty thousand millions of dollars is about what the nations have paid in mutual injustices and slaughters."

Every great nation is coming to be more and more dependent upon the control or the neutrality of international trade routes. The ocean highways have become as important to the nation as the arteries are to the body. These important trade routes, over which come many of the necessities of a nation's life, are usually among the first to be injured by war.

When a nation is at war, it is the men who are physically perfect, and especially the young men who have not yet become fathers, whose lives are exposed. The first to fall are the ones that the nation can least afford to lose.

The reproductive power of a nation is decreased numerically, devitalized physically, and degenerated morally by war.

It is well said that when God wants to make a man he begins with the great-grandparents. The economic losses resulting from war consist not only in wrecked buildings, business and commerce, but also in buildings not yet erected, commerce not yet developed, and the business not yet built up.

Paul judged things by their consequences. To conserve man's largest possibilities was the superb aim of all his toil. His direct attack upon sin was in the interest of a larger life. "Love restrains from war those who are free." If our lives are guided by the Spirit, then we will certainly not indulge the cravings of our lower natures. For the cravings of the Spirit and the cravings of the lower nature are antagonistic to each other, so that we cannot do everything to which we are inclined. Paul goes on to point out plainly what is the outcome of man's sinful nature. Gal. 5:13-26.

When soldiers enlist, they set aside months or even years of their lives to follow up the systematized work of destruction. Hence they are called upon to live for months in a low moral atmosphere with deception, trickery and brutality on every hand. Naturally the camp and navy yard become places of vice. Recovery from such spiritual debasement is most difficult.

If one man kills another, society demands a thorough investigation to ascertain the facts. When ten men kill a hundred, or when a thousand men kill three thousand, is it not murder still—only more of it? Does it originate in the lower or in the higher nature of men?

"If we live by the Spirit, by the Spirit let us also walk."

NOTICES.

February 13th is Young Friends Day. Plan for three special services on that day. This is at the close of Young Friends Week. Many societies are already planning to make this day a special Peace Day; especially is this true of those societies who are not following the Peace Topics.

Watch these columns for a special program for this Day.

We are glad to hear that the CONFERENCE NEWS is being appreciated. It will from this on contain several pages given over entirely to work which the Young Friends Board is pushing.

Send for sample copies, and the price of subscription, which is 25 cents, to the Editor, Dunreith, Ind.

The General Summer Conference will be greatly enlarged and improved. There are some new features planned for the daily program, and very soon we will announce some splendid surprises. Watch for them.

Send to the Office of the Young Friends Board for any Christian Endeavor Literature and supplies. Don't try to see what you can do without, but make out a list of the things you need and would like to have. We will be glad to help you with the list.

Following is a list of societies taking up the peace Study as outlined. If there are others not named here, please report to us:

Brooklyn, New York.
Dayton, Ohio.
Georgetown, Illinois.
Greensboro, Indiana.
Highland, Ohio.
Indianapolis, Indiana.
Newberg, Oregon.
Oskaloosa, Iowa.
Portland, Maine.
Sabina, Ohio.
Vassalboro, Maine.
Wilmington, Ohio.

CHURCH AT WORK

Whittier, California—To provide a church building adequate to the needs of the growing congregation of the Friends of this place has been a matter of serious concern to Whittier Monthly Meeting for two years past, and more especially as the Yearly Meeting, which holds its sessions here needs larger accommodations. The present auditorium, with a seating capacity of about 700, has long been crowded at the Sabbath services, and many who are inclined to attend have been kept away on account of the limited room. A committee of the monthly meeting, including M. S. Kepple, Dr. W. V. Coffin, D. H. White, C. W. Redman and Geo. Stubbs, recently matured a plan for a new and up-to-date church building, with a seating capacity of 1500, and have secured subscriptions in the form of interest-bearing notes amounting to thirty thousand dollars.

Fifty thousand dollars is the estimated cost of the building, and a further canvas will be made. The large subscription already secured in reliable form assures the success of the undertaking, but the speed with which it will be carried forward depends on the facility with which the remaining funds are secured. It is believed, however, that the building may be completed within the present year. The plan includes the removal of the present building to the rear of the grounds, and the remodeling of it to accommodate the various departments of the bible school, which maintains an attendance of nearly 600, and which feels a pressing and increasing need for larger quarters.

Arba, Indiana—A gospel team of four young men from Earlham College came here during the holidays, and held an eight days' meeting. The team was led by Elgar Pennington, assisted by Walter Wildman, Homer Bundy and Carroll Edwards. Much stress was put on character building and Christian citizenship. The meetings were an inspiration to our young people and the church was much strengthened. The Word was preached with power. These young men gave up their vacation for the Lord's work. The meetings have been continued, led by our young pastor, Percy Thomas, and other workers.

Traverse City, Mich.—For some months our church has been undergoing an almost complete remodeling. The work is now nearly completed and we feel that we are starting the church work for the new year better equipped to do service for the Master. Especially will the Sunday school be much benefited by the added room and conveniences. A number of memberships have been added to the church roll during the past two or three months and still others have expressed themselves as thinking seriously of making their church home with us.

Our Christian Endeavorers are still proving their efficiency. On Dec. 17-18 they entertained the District C. E. Rally, all sessions being held at the Friends church. A. Lavern Spafford, state field worker for Michigan, who conducted the rally, is a very enthusiastic Christian worker and an interesting speaker. He was ably assisted by Clarence Hamilton, state field worker for Ohio, and our pastor, Brother Folger.

We are now looking forward to a dedication service which is being arranged for, also to a series of revival meetings to be conducted by Nettie Springer of Indianapolis, Indiana, beginning near the first of February.

What we wish for ourselves we wish for all readers of the American Friend that the year 1916 may bring to all both spiritual and temporal blessings and prosperity.

Buffalo, Kansas—The Methodists are erecting a new church building here, so for two months they have held their services in the Friends church, satisfactory arrangements having been made as to division of time. Our resident minister, Sadie L. Nichols, after a rest of several months, made necessary by a physical breakdown, has again taken up such church work as her duties in caring for an invalid father will permit. This meeting has sustained a great loss in the death of our faithful brother, James F. Glardon. For some years there have been members of the meeting moving to Western states, until but few are left. We would gladly welcome any who desire homes in a thriving little town in the natural gas belt.

Emporia, Kansas—Cottonwood Quarterly Meeting was held at Emporia, Kansas, December 17-19. The weather and roads were fine for the time of year and the attendance was good. The meeting on ministry and oversight was held at two o'clock on Friday afternoon. Friday evening was devoted to peace. James A. Staple, of Topeka, a minister in this Quarterly Meeting, gave the address of the evening. He spoke earnestly of the evils of war in any case.

Mead A. Kelsey, of Richmond, Indiana, brought a heart-searching message to us on Saturday morning. We felt that the Master had led him to us at this time. After a lunch at the close of the morning session the business meeting convened at 1:30 p. m. There was more business than usual for the December meeting and the session was long, but it was transacted on the lines of unity.

M. F. Swafford, Yearly Meeting Superintendent, presented the need of more funds for evangelistic and church extension work. The meeting responded liberally, $83.53 being raised in a very short time, though we have a small Quarterly Meeting. On Saturday evening a foreign missionary meeting was held and Mabel Chandler Harris gave a stirring message. Sunday morning M. F. Swafford gave the message and it came fresh from the Lord to the hearts of the listeners and we trust found lodgment where it will strengthen for time and eternity.

The closing session Sunday evening was another grand meeting. The Quarterly Meeting was inspiring and the good done, time and eternity alone can tell. J. F. Swafford and wife were with us during the entire meeting and their presence and labors were a blessing to us. Mead A. Kelsey was with us Saturday both morning and afternoon.

Poplar Ridge, N. Y.—A very profitable peace meeting was conducted at Poplar Ridge on Sunday morning, December 19. Emily Howland gave the address. She is now eighty-seven years old, but her mind is active and alert and she maintains her interest in all the modern movements. An unusually large audience listened carefully to all she had to say. Emily Howland is greatly interested in temperance, woman's suffrage and education. The regard of the community for her is indicated by the large number who came to hear.

Elizabeth L. Hazard, of Union Springs, talked at the Friends church at Poplar Ridge on January 2. Mrs. Hazard has been recently recorded a minister. For six months she has been holding a Bible class and a church service about three miles out from Union Springs. The meetings have been very much valued by the people in the community. There have been some definite decisions for the Christian life. The meetings will not be continued through the cold weather.

On the night of January 2, Willard Otis, a freshman in the Agricultural School of Cornell University, and a member of Conservative Friends, talked to the young people about activities of young Friends. He told of his trip through Iowa and California and of their intense interest in Christian work. He also told about a Friends' meeting being held in Cornell University on Sunday evening. The attendance varies between fifteen and twenty-five. Professor Comfort of the French Department of the University is a regular attendee and a very great help to the meeting.

The Christian Endeavor has decided to substitute a course of teacher training for the regular C. E. topics. The course was begun last year, but owing to the rush of spring work was not completed.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—The Poughkeepsie Friends Brotherhood, a new organization among the men of Poughkeepsie Meeting, attended the evening service on January 2. The pastor, D. H. Lewis, preached upon Jesus as a strong masculine character, not an effeminate personality. This new organization numbers about forty men, who meet once a month in a friendly social gathering. They plan to be a factor in the active life of the meeting. A Bible class drawing its membership from the Brotherhood has been organized. The annual Bible School Christmas entertainment was given the Wednesday evening before Christmas. The plan of "White Gifts for the King" was partly incorporated into the program and the contributions given to the Salvation Army for distribution.

Chester and Dover, Ohio—Two progressive Bible Schools, Chester and Dover, have entered into an attendance contest. Both Schools are Friends, and are located in adjoining communities. For the past year, ending June 30, 1915, the former had an average attendance of seventy-eight to her opponent's seventy-four. Chester meeting has a membership of two hundred and seventy-two while Dover has but one hundred and ninety. Knowing these facts, the joint committee selected by both Schools decided that a handicap of fifteen should be imposed upon Chester. The contest began October 1, and is to run eight months. At present Chester is five ahead with an average attendance of 114.3, but Dover appears to be gaining on her. The contest seems to add to the friendly spirit which already existed between the Schools. Being in rural communities most of the people of the Bible School remain for meeting immediately afterward, which has increased the attendance at that service quite a bit. Ida Allen, formerly of Urbana, Ohio, Monthly Meeting, is serving Dover as pastor this year. Chester has two resident ministers, Jane M. Carey and John Hawkins. With the increased attendance the teachers and officers feel an added responsibility in bringing the new ones into a personal relationship with the Great Teacher, and as far as possible to have them identify themselves with the church.

NEWS NOTES.

Henry J. Cadbury, of Earlham College, attended West Richmond meeting last Sabbath and was the principal speaker at the morning service.

Ross A. Hadley, James Wood, Charlotte E. Vickers, William C. Taber and S. E. Nicholson attended the Foreign Missions Conference of North America at Garden City, Long Island, last week.

James Wood spoke on the American Bible Society at the Foreign Missions Conference of North America last week, and also made a report as chairman of a sub-committee on the question of incorporating the Conference.

The daily papers report that a peace meeting at a Friends meeting house in London was taken possession of on January 9 by the supporters of war, the meeting closing in confusion with the singing of national airs and shouts for conscription.

BALTIMORE QUARTER.

Baltimore Quarterly Meeting was held at Washington, D. C., on the 8th and 9th instant with a fair representative attendance. An interesting discussion was had in the meeting on Ministry and Oversight, by John C. Thomas, of Baltimore, the subject being public testimony as an aid to Christian growth and as a mode of service.

Elbert Russell, whose membership has recently been transferred to Baltimore, spoke at the Quarterly Meeting Saturday afternoon, on the spirit of true brotherhood, using the Good Samaritan as the type set forth by Christ.

An interesting conference on lines of social service was addressed by John R. Cary of Baltimore, and Sara H. Hoge of Lincoln, Va.

The messages on First morning were by Margaret T. Carey and L. Oscar Moon of Baltimore, and in the evening by Howard M. Hoge of Lincoln, Va. All were with freshness and power and at the business session a minute for service was granted for R. Ella Levering, a minister, for service in the state of Washington, where she is spending the winter, and on her return journey.

WASHINGTON NEWS NOTES.

At its meeting in First month, Washington Monthly meeting granted certificates transferring to West Richmond Monthly Meeting (Indiana) the memberships of S. Edgar Nicholson and family.

Prof. David Dennis of Earlham College, was acceptably present at Washington meeting on the 26th ultimo and gave an illustrated lecture in the church on the evening of the 29th.

On Peace Sunday the Washington Monthly Meeting's Peace Committee secured an address by Elbert Russell on "Instead of War." The meeting was held under the auspices of the Local Peace Society in one of the principal churches of the city, Representative Slayden of Texas presiding. There was a good attendance and the address was well received.

Washington Monthly Meeting recently memorialized President Wilson in regard to his appointment of members of the Excise Board of the District of Columbia. The administration of the law by the present Board has seemed to many to be so favorable to the saloons as to discredit the law under which it acts, and to indicate the greater need for a prohibitory law for the District, for which a determined effort is being planned.

Boosters for the Bible School

SUPPLY OUTFITS FOR FRIENDS CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS

The Bible School Board of the Five Years Meeting is organized to study and meet the needs of Friends Bible School work. Therefore we have a full line of exceptionally good school supplies. Tell us what you want for your school and we will promptly get it to you.

THE PENN QUARTERLIES

TEACHERS QUARTERLY, 56 pages, newly prepared. Single copy, 10 cents; in Clubs, 7½ cents per copy.

ADULT QUARTERLY, 40 pages; for all Adult Grades; all newly prepared. Single copy, 5 cents; Club rates, 4 cents.

INTERMEDIATE QUARTERLY, 48 pages. 5 cents per copy.

LESSON SHEETS. Same material as Adults. For Visitors and to replace lost Quarterlies. 2½ cents per copy.

CHILD'S LESSON LEAF, for Primary Classes. 5 cents per copy.

YOUTH'S FRIEND. An eight-page weekly for Young People. Single copy, 50 cents per year; club rates, 10 cents per quarter.

GRADED LESSONS. As prepared by the International Committee and adopted by the Five Years Meeting.

BOOST YOUR CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

Here's for a Greater Church, cards, 40 cents per 100.

Here's for a Greater Prayer Meeting, cards, 40 cents per 100.

Complete Monthly Meeting Record, as prepared by the Five Years Meeting, $2.00.

Booster Cards, 10 cents per dozen, 75 cents per 100.

Here's for a Greater Bible Class, cards, 40 cents per 100.

Birthday Cards, $1.00 per 100.

Cradle Roll Birthday Cards, $2.00 per 100.

Complete Home Department Outfit, $1.00.

Complete Cradle Roll Outfit, $1.00.

Friends Secretary Book for Sunday Schools, 50 cents.

Sunday School Collection Envelopes, 50 cents per dozen.

Sunday School Class Books; No. 1, for 14 names, 5 cents each; No. 2, for 20 names, 10 cents; No. 3, from 25 to 200 names, 15 cents each.

Address all orders to FRIENDS BIBLE SCHOOL BOARD, Fairmount, Ind.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON.

January 30.

Subject—The Lame Man Leaping.
Lesson—Acts 3.

Golden Text—Acts 3:6. Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but what I have, that give I thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth walk.

This entire chapter has its inspiration in the story of the healing of the man at the temple gate. There are not many stories of healing attributed to the disciples by authors of New Testament books, but there are scores of them in other literature. Nor are these "signs" limited to the twelve. For several centuries there were men to whom similar powers are attributed, if we are to accept the Christian literature of those periods. In fact when we come back to the New Testament after reading the stories about them and the church fathers in other documents we are struck with the lack of such incidents in the accepted accounts.

The Apostles did not have money to give to the unfortunate man, but to their credit they gave him something of far greater value—the ability to earn his own living. Viewing the incident from the standpoint of charity we have here a splendid illustration of the value of physical restoration over the giving of material things. It isn't that people are so much in need of gifts. What they need is the chance to do for themselves and the privilege of receiving that which is by right theirs. To this end modern reform is working. Good housing, honest wages, sanitary conditions, educational uplift and the score of chances that inspire an honest man with the feeling that he can take up his task with the assurance that he will get honest treatment and a fair return for his effort. Out-right giving there must be, but it is a means to an end only.

But that is not the whole story. The man certainly received a new spiritual vision. It is not sufficient for us to make a man's environment helpful. He must receive within that new life which Jesus Christ came to give. Until a man is reborn there is little hope for him. The downward pull must be countered by a superior upward pull and that is only to be found in the Christ.

Fully half the chapter is used to report Peter's sermon. In it he credits Jesus, whom they had crucified through their rulers, with the miracle of the day. He takes advantage of the opportunity to declare him to the Jews as the one of whom the prophets foretold. A careful study of these early messages will show that for the most part they undertook to show by Old Testament passages that Jesus was the Christ. Wonder working was not sufficient for others claimed such powers.

Repent therefore, that your sins may be blotted out. These messages are direct calls to the people to change their ideas about Christ and change their ways of living. This was a gospel of salvation for the people and the disciples were earnest in their delivery of the message. That was the purpose of the church and so ought it be today.

It is no small thing to be delivered from false views of death. God gives his children one perfect, all-comprehending gift—life. Jesus said: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."—Theodore T. Munger.

The American Friend, Richmond, Ind.

A weekly religious journal, published by Friends Publication Board, under the direction of the Five Years Meeting of Friends. Price $1.50 per year. Should be in every Friends' family in America.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

The school is unusually large this year, yet we have room for a few more. The Winter term opens First Month 4th. We shall be pleased to send our catalogue to any interested friends.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever Investors desire. Write for booklet and list. G

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.

IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY

Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books
1915-1916Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, Incidents of Leavening, Cho-cho-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ching China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
I. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 4.

FIRST MONTH 27, 1916

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 4.

Sunshine Farther On

The mountain's base is wrapped in gray,
And chill and cheerless is the way
As slow I tread the shadowed trail
That stretches upward still and pale.
But as I rise I see it glow
With what seemed mist and cloud below,
And soon I stand amid the dawn
Of warmth and sunshine—farther on.
O soul that beats the shadowed air
Above the base of summits fair,
Be brave and patient. Mists obscure
The lower way, but hold secure
The higher path. For thou must rise
On toiling wings to clearer skies;
And though the way seems dull and gray,
It lightens toward the summit day.
Thou too shalt stand amid the dawn
That flowers in sunshine—farther on.

—British Weekly.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.
For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

The Burden Bearer

By ELLA JANE JAY

I know the Lord will lead me on,
However dark or rough the way;
His Word my lamp, His love has shown
He will not suffer me to stray.

When weak and weary, worn and sad,
Life's burdens seem too great for me,
There come the words, low-voiced, but glad,
Spoke by the Man of Galilee:

"Give me thy burdens, all their parts,
Then, keeping step, we'll onward go,
Learn thou of me, help troubled hearts
And rest and peace thy soul shall know."

I hear the call; by love made bold,
I gave myself into His care,
His strength increases mine tenfold,
My soul has found a comrade rare.
Grover Hill, Ohio.

American Friend Day

According to the usual custom March 5 will be AMERICAN FRIEND Day. During the month of February a special offer will be made, available for use on that day, which we trust will be of interest to hundreds of persons who are not now subscribers to THE AMERICAN FRIEND. We sincerely trust that all our meetings will plan to observe this day appropriately, preferably at the morning service. It will be a good time to speak of the literature of the church, and press especially the claims of the denominational periodical, remembering that henceforth THE AMERICAN FRIEND is to be a twenty page paper.

Protect the Quaker Name

From this time on efforts will be made to press vigorously for favorable consideration of the bills pending in Congress designed to protect the Quaker name from commercial use. We ask all interested Friends to write their Congressman and U. S. Senators at once, urging favorable consideration. Now that Quaker Whisky, Quaker Beer and Quaker everything else almost are being manufactured and thrown upon the market, it is certainly time for the Society of Friends to speak out unitedly in favor of this proposed legislation. The bills are as follows: S. 666, S. 667, H.R. 380 and H. R. 435.

Men's Conference Proceedings

The books containing the addresses at the Men's Conference at Richmond, Indiana, in October have now been sent out to the subscribers. Remittance should be made to S. E. Nicholson, Richmond, Indiana, according to the following prices: Paper cover 75 cents; cloth $1.00 (to registered delegates 25 cents less.) We have several additional copies on hands and will be glad to receive orders for same. These addresses ought to have general circulation throughout the church.

Please Remember

Our readers should remember that with the next issue THE AMERICAN FRIEND will be enlarged to a twenty page paper. There will be larger opportunities to print the news of the church. We ask that really important matters be written up for the "Church At Work" columns. Mere routine matters will be unacceptable, but anything of importance that is out of the ordinary or that will be an inspiration to other meetings will be in order.

What Every Girl Can Do

Fifteen things which every girl can learn before she is fifteen are suggested by the "Girl's World." Not everyone can learn to play or sing or paint well enough to give pleasure to her friends, but the following "accomplishments" are within every girl's reach:

Never fuss or fret or fidget.
Never keep anybody waiting.
Shut the door, and shut it softly.
Have an hour for rising and rise.
Always know where your things are.
Learn to make bread, as well as cake.
Keep your own room in tasteful order.
Never come to breakfast without a collar.
Never go about with your shoes unbuttoned.
Never let a button stay off twenty-four hours.
Speak clearly enough for everybody to understand.
Be patient with the little ones, as you wish your mother to be with you.
Never let the day pass without doing something to make somebody comfortable.
The girl who has thoroughly learned all this might be called a "mistress of arts."—Selected.

Your possessions pass and are forgotten. Your deeds outlive your creeds. What you are, and what you help others to be, abides in the eternity of God.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 4.

FIRST MONTH 27, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 4.

The Measure of Christian Obligation

"I owe to every man, everywhere, everything that Jesus is to me" is the recent utterance of a bishop of one of our largest denominations. It is a statement of what Christianity is in essence. It is all inclusive of both personal and social religion. It magnifies the mission of discipleship, and makes every follower of Jesus debtor to all the world. Herein is set forth the fundamental authority for missions both at home and abroad, harmonizing with the command of our Lord to go into all the earth and preach the gospel to all men.

The measure of our obligation to men is the measure of our comprehension of what Jesus is to us. Christian service finds its tap root in Christian experience. The consciousness of an indwelling Christ is the incentive for that loving ministry which has characterized sainthood in all the ages; it is the source of that yearning solicitude which leads men to sacrifice the comforts of life and even life itself for the well-being of others. Christianity is irreconcilable with the cloister and the hermitage, except as places of prayerful meditation and preparation for that world cosmopolitanism that makes it the religion for all men.

It is an easy thing to speak of Christ in general terms as Savior or Redeemer, as the Forgiver of sins, as the Mediator, and the One who has made propitiation for our transgressions. It is less easy to define with accuracy and comprehension the full meaning of that pervasive, divine influence, bringing uplift and development and a larger outlook upon life as a whole, which Jesus is bringing to the consciousness of his faithful disciples. It is a fair criticism upon the church that all too many of its communicants regard their religious obligations lightly, content with the customary formulas of testimony and service and oblivious to the wealth of meaning there is for the whole of human life in the relationship of the living Jesus to his people. By virtue of the easy going attitude of multitudes of professing Christians toward the more fundamental things of Christ's spiritual kingdom, and by reason of the tendency to accept the un-Christian philosophies of the world in preference to the teachings of Jesus as the rules of conduct in daily life, the church has been all but forced to declare a moratorium upon its legitimate business of saving souls and transforming human life.

We must remember that the measure of what Jesus is to us is the measure of what we are to be to the world, and the church must be able to do something more than sing psalms and take religion in capsules, must have a deeper insight into the meaning of the life and mission of Jesus than the formal words of a written creed, if it is able to meet with effectiveness the crisis that is upon the world today. The apostasy for which the church will have to answer is not half so much its apostasy of creeds, as the apostasy of failing to meet its obligations to humanity, and for which it must give answer both at the bar of the world and at the bar of God.

At a time like this the church should be the torch of civilization, leading the nations away from paganism and the practices of the jungle into the practical experience of good-will and human brotherhood; it should be able as the greatest moral agency in the world to speak with commanding authority against the vices of the social, commercial and industrial order, bidding them depart in the name of righteousness and justice; it is obligated to offer to a suffering world the very best which Jesus has for the amelioration of the race. The church can never fulfill its mission, can never pay the debt imposed upon it by the great commission of our Lord, by becoming engulfed with the things of the world, by repudiating any part of the Sermon on the Mount on the grounds of impracticability or sentimentality, by failing to take the program of Jesus seriously. Jesus must be something of superior excellence to the church and its communicants,—He must be all that the depths of human suffering demand and all that the yearning after the noblest and the best and the most satisfying requires—before the church can begin to satisfy its obligations to those who need its light and its help.

The church must have in its ranks as the ruling elements of its life holy men and women—not simply those who believe in holiness, but those who practise it. It is not sufficient that the church believe in the divinity of our Lord; that divinity must be stamped indelibly upon the lives of the membership as the token both of their allegiance to God and their acquaintanceship with Him. Probably the church needs less theology and more practical, workable, satisfying religion. In some of the countries that are at war, certain denominations are keeping an accurate poll of their adherents who are at the front; it is vastly more important, both for the church and for the nation, that they know how many are living consistently the religion they profess, in order that these, by virtue of their deeper experiences can satisfy their obligations in terms of loving ministry for the help of others.

Upon the day of Pentecost, Jesus had a deeper and more satisfying meaning to Peter than ever before, an experience that immediately found expression in a service and ministry of surpassing power. When to George Fox there came the revelation of the redeeming power of Jesus Christ, life had a new meaning for him and upon both sides of the Atlantic men and women in multitudes found salvation, because he was able to transmit to them something of what Jesus had become to him. The church must have a message of real deliverance, based upon experimental knowledge, before it can lead others to the place of transforming power; it must acknowledge loyally and without reserve the dominion of Jesus Christ and the binding obligation of His precepts, before it can teach the nations to acknowledge the sovereignty of Jehovah; it must have the consciousness of the supreme value of Jesus to it and its members before it can convey to others the knowledge of what Jesus can be to them.

President Wilson's Tour

President Wilson is to tour the country in behalf of his preparedness program. This will be a disappointment to thousands of his friends and admirers. If he cannot convince Congress, is it not evidence that after all the administration program may be wrong? By appealing to the country upon the stump, the conviction is bound to grow that the whole preparedness question is more political than otherwise.

The American Friend

What is THE AMERICAN FRIEND? This question would puzzle not a few. "A patriotic journal," would be the guess of some. The better informed know that it is a paper published in the interest of the Friends, or Quakers. The loyal, interested Friend says "It is our paper," but what does that mean? What does THE AMERICAN FRIEND stand for? What is its purpose?

These seem like common-place questions enough, but it will be good for us to meditate upon them.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND is a means for the meeting and the going forth in expression of the Friends of America, "a means of grace" to use an old-fashioned term. Just as in the early days of Quakerism the preachers used to meet on First Day morning, and then go out, each to his appointed place, to bear their common message, so we meet once a week in THE AMERICAN FRIEND, and once a week go forth with our plea—only we travel ten thousand times as far, and that without danger or great exertion, and certainly without their measure of sacrifice and devotion.

Nothing can take its place. In no other way do so many Friends assemble. In no other way do they get their united message to so large an audience.

If we fully appreciated this fact, THE AMERICAN FRIEND would come to have a new meaning to us. It would remove it in our minds from the list of periodicals we might think of, and give to it an altogether unique place. It is our one great instrument for securing a united people. We have our Five Years Meeting, but THE AMERICAN FRIEND works at the job right along, days, nights and Sundays. We have had our Men's Conference, and are having our men's conferences, but THE AMERICAN FRIEND is the father and grandfather of these. They have excelled in this, that they have caused us to recognize more clearly that we are one people with one message. THE AMERICAN FRIEND presses that point every week in the year.

If we concede this claim, even in a limited measure, it follows that we ought enthusiastically to advance its interests. We ought to pray fervently for its effectiveness, talk much about it, frequently call attention to its work in our church bulletins or local church publications, quote from it in social groups and perhaps sometimes in our meetings for worship. Its mission ought to be on the hearts of those who can write, inspiring faithfulness. Perhaps these have not felt the burden as they should.

Its mission ought to attend those who do write, not to give undue restraint or timidity, but bring out the things that edify, and blue pencil that which will only disturb.

Its mission ought constantly to be upon the hearts of those who read, causing them to be slow to seize upon the fancied flaws, and to have a healthful fear of repression. If we succeed in discouraging all expression not just in accord with our own sentiments, we will spread an undue restraint and fearfulness and shut off the very contributions we need most, just as our fearfulness has sometimes produced a censorship in our meetings which has quenched the life. If we reach a place where hearers and readers have no need to sift, we will produce nothing worth sifting.

If we meet in THE AMERICAN FRIEND, if we go forth by means of it, then we ought in every way possible to give it the best chance to live, and work, and grow.

ELLISON R. PURDY.

Looking Unto Jesus

By ALLEN C. THOMAS.

The Epistles of the New Testament are full of exhortations to follow Christ, to be like Him, to look unto Jesus, to be changed into the same image, and others of like import. The question naturally arises, How is this to be done? In order to follow another as an example it is needful to know something about the one who has been taken as an example. So in the case of Jesus Christ there must be characteristics or deeds which we should at least strive to make our own. But on the very threshold we may feel that as Christ was more than human we can hardly hope to follow, even afar off. Is it not frequently the case that such a feeling does influence us, and usually towards discouragement? Does it not often happen that the would-be "imitator" of Christ ends by striving "to do the best he can" rather than to be a close follower of Him?

It may be that we look too exclusively at the divine side of Jesus Christ, and too little at the human side. It is not likely that man in this world can ever clearly understand the mystery of the combination of the human and Divine in our Lord. It is impossible for us, with our present knowledge, to draw the line between them, but we can say of Him that these characteristics are human, and those are Divine. It is with the former that we have to do at present.

If Christ were all Divine He could not be a perfect Saviour. He could not have been tempted in all points like as we are; and it is because "that He Himself hath suffered being tempted, that He is able to succor them that are tempted." So we have not only the right, but we are bound to see where He is like us, in order that we may grow to be like Him.

A recent writer has pointed out four elements or characteristics of Jesus Christ which belong to His humanity, and which we can, in some measure, make our own, and so grow to be like Him.

First, His Power of self-control, or His control over His body or human nature.

Second. His control over circumstances.

Third. His insight and sympathy.

Fourth. His perfect sense of sonship.

(1) In this examination miracles must be dismissed. In the life of Christ as recorded in the Gospels, it is evident that at no time did He use miraculous powers to control His human instincts or passions. He did not command stones to be made bread though He was famished with hunger; He might have called twelve legions of angels, but did not. More than this, He did nothing from presumption, nor did He ask His body to perform functions for which it was not fitted. Under all circumstances His body was the ready servant of His will. Paul said, "I keep my body under." So it can be done. Are we following Christ and Paul?

(2) Christ's control of circumstances. Here again, aside from the miraculous, we find Christ always superior to difficulties, to discouragements, to opposition. A noisy crowd did not keep Him from aiding the blind man, nor from noticing Zacchaeus in the tree. On the other hand, instances abound in the Gospels where He took advantage of circumstances and used them to help, or to teach, or to illustrate a lesson. Are we doing the same?

(3) Of the insight and sympathy of Christ we find many examples in no way necessarily connected with Divine power. Insight and sympathy cannot be separated, for the truest sympathy comes from insight. Jesus saw the inward sorrow or pain, and, seeing it, was moved with compassion. It is insight and sympathy that beget fellowship, and fellowship begets clearer insight and deeper sympathy.

(4) His perfect sense of sonship. "I and my Father are One," He said; "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." This sense of sonship enters into all the other characteristics, glorifies them, and raises them to the highest power. Unless we also have this sense of sonship, and realize in some degree that we are heirs of God and joint-heirs of Christ it will be impossible for us to gain even a foothold of the table-land of Christ.

How are these characteristics—this control of self, control of circumstances, insight and sympathy, and sense of sonship—to be gained? First, there must be some faith that it is possible. Second, we must use those powers which we have, even if they seem insignificant, in order that they may grow. We should control our body in those things which we can control, and we should daily strive to extend, little by little it may be, that control until our body becomes "the ready and obedient servant of the will." If this be done continually, it will become the habit of our lives.

So also as we steadily and consciously control circumstances, or refuse to be controlled by them, we shall, to an astonishing degree, grow to be able, if not to control circumstances and conditions, to rise above them and make them stepping stones to victory.

By never crushing our rising sympathies, and by cultivating our powers of insight, they too will grow and develop from very small proportions into a strong and active element in our lives.

Above all, let the light of the love of God illuminate our whole being; let us see Him in the face of Jesus Christ, and recognize God as our Father, take the position of sons in a father's house, conscious that the resources of a Father may be ours as with Faith in His love and power we are able and willing to avail ourselves of them. In this way we all may "attain unto the knowledge of the Son of God; unto a fullgrown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

Haverford, Pa.

The Association to Abolish War

By WILBUR K. THOMAS.

Because of the great plea for preparedness, the fact that there is no existing Peace Society where people of every description can unite on the basis that all war is wrong, and the great need for the pacifist to set forth the way by which peace can be maintained at home and established among nations, a group of people in Boston, Mass., organized the Association for the Abolition of War. In forming the Association, an effort was made to bring together only those who already recognized that all war is wrong. This was done because the object of the Association is not to build up a great organization but to set forth the true way of Peace. It was felt that much time would be lost and little accomplished if the first endeavor was to get a group together and then try to find a common viewpoint on the question of Peace. Those who believed that all war is wrong and who were "ready to accept the personal and national risks involved in the effort to achieve peace" were invited to unite in the organization. A group of people, now numbering almost one hundred, many of them prominent in the business and social-service life of the city, have already responded to the invitation.

The object of the Association is certainly implied in the statement of principles, as set forth at the end of this article. Anyone who thus looks upon war must of necessity oppose it under any and all circumstances. There is no compromise. Differences between nations must be settled some other way because war is "a relic of barbarism, and as odious and intolerable as pestilence and murder."

The work of the Association may be summarized by the statements on page four of the leaflets:

HOW OUR WORK MAY BE FURTHERED.

1. By getting together a group of people who believe in the principles herein stated.
2. By appointment of one or more committees such as Executive, Extension and Correspondence, Publication and Publicity, Membership, and Finance.
3. By the collection and use of such moneys as may be required to carry on the work of each association.
4. By letters and articles to the newspapers, magazines, congressmen, and public men.
5. By holding public meetings wherever and whenever way may open.
6. By suggesting a list of available speakers.
7. By corresponding and speaking with friends and acquaintances on the subject.

Another point to note in connection with the work of the Association is that there are no dues for membership. The work is supported by voluntary contributions. About $140 has already been contributed. If people are really in earnest in this matter the work will be supported. All contributions of money are thankfully received, whether small or large.

It is not meant that this Association should appear in opposition to any other Peace Society. There is no place for trouble among Peace workers. If others cannot go as far as the members of this Association, they still can do some work for peace.

All who work for peace are having a great influence at the present time.

Already a branch Association has been formed in New York and in Chicago. Others are in the process of formation. Requests for literature and suggestions for forming groups have been received from New York, New Jersey, Alabama, Illinois and Nebraska.

The Association desires to get in touch with those who agree that all war is wrong. The militarists are making great efforts to increase our army and navy. If they succeed, it means the entering wedge of a military power which will eventually destroy the nation. The people who believe in peace must be heard. The pacifist must show that he is as patriotic as his military brother; that true greatness whether for the individual or the nation lies not in physical strength or the development of a military system, but in doing good; that he is willing to lay down his life for his country; that only righteousness and goodwill make for a lasting peace.

If you desire more information in regard to this Association write to Wilbur K. Thomas, Secretary, 12 Hazelwood St., Roxbury, Boston, Mass.

The statement of principles is as follows:

THE ASSOCIATION TO ABOLISH WAR.

Believing that war to-day is wholly wrong, a relic of barbarism, and as odious and intolerable as pestilence and murder, we whose names are here enrolled unite in an organization to be known as

The Association to Abolish War.

We believe that war arises from fear, mistrust, race-hatred, commercial rivalry, covetousness and the desire to exploit weaker peoples. It provokes every kind of crime. It is the most cruel foe of women and children. It always uses the poor as its tools. It takes advantage of men's chivalry to destroy them. It wastes the means of human welfare and sets back all progress.

We believe that our nation has no good reason for making preparations to fight and kill; that some nation must some time have enough moral courage to lead the movement for the abolition of war; that this is the time and ours is the nation; that national defense consists not in machinery to kill but in patient friendly behavior toward other nations, in honorably keeping our treaties, in refraining from interference with the affairs of weaker neighbors for the sake of business interests, and in overcoming mistrust by a sane humanity; that there is no place in the civilized world for armies intended to destroy other armies; and that money spent by us in rehabilitating the suffering peoples of Europe would be a mightier defense than dreadnaughts and bayonets.

We believe in the necessity of a campaign of education to correct the current arguments in favor of war and preparedness which are in some measure misleading peaceful people.

We believe that the virtues of self-discipline, heroism, and self-sacrifice which accompany war would also be an integral part of a true peace founded upon national service and international co-operation. We stand ready to accept the personal and national risks involved in the effort to achieve such a peace.

We therefore oppose all efforts to increase the army and navy of this country.

We ask the co-operation of all who dare to hold this faith and who are ready to accept its implications.

IS THE STRANGER WELCOMED IN YOUR CHURCH?

By JENNIE CAMPBELL DOUGLASS.

A person born and reared in one church has no idea of the hardships of the timid or retiring individual who wanders into a strange place of worship in an unfamiliar city. The sophisticated woman, fashionably gowned, and almost unconsciously aware that she presents quite as promising an appearance as anyone in the audience, having no reason for self-consciousness, accepts the slightest opportunity offered by agreeable looking people near her of becoming acquainted. The missionary society and the ladies' aid, always in need of funds, meet and cultivate her. She is soon a contributing member, and very sure of a welcome from the officers whenever she attends the meetings.

But the Woman Whose Gloves Are Worn—

But how does it fare with the shrinking, poorly dressed woman? Is there in your church a well organized committee of keen-eyed, warm-hearted, democratic women, who know the members of the church well enough to spot a stranger? That little woman whose gloves are gray with age, and who will slip out of church unnoticed unless you catch her quickly, does not hasten because she wishes to stand aloof. She is lonely and appreciates beyond expression a warm hand grasp. Her heart palpitates with pleasure if a church member calls upon her. Her haste is due to sensitiveness. Knowing that she has no money, no prestige to bring, she feels she is not wanted—and perhaps she is right. Oh, the pity of it! Perchance that very woman has more influence with the Lord than the woman towards whom a dozen people are hastening—Mrs. Judge So-and-So, whose husband has recently won that remarkable case with its astounding fee.

Here is an incident from real life. Mary W. came to the city direct from her country home. She was not needed there—life was narrow and Mary wished to try her wings. "Go to church every Sunday, Mary, my child," were the patient mother's parting words, and Mary promised. The first Sunday she slipped into the church nearest her boarding house, and at noon she could not eat for the homesick lump in her throat. How different it was from the village church where every one knew her! No one had noticed her, though she had looked all about her, hoping for a friendly glance. She asked some girls in the department store in which she worked where they attended church, but they laughingly shrugged their shoulders, saying, "No church for me, thank you; Sunday's my day for a good time."

Because she had promised mother, she tried another church and then another, but the fourth Sunday she accepted an invitation to have a "good time" with the others, and no house of worship saw Mary again. In less than a year little Mary, once so pure and unsuspecting, sobbed her heart out to the understanding matron in the Crittenton Home. If the young people's society in one of those three churches had only had a stranger's committee to recognize in the girl a little sister ready to work with them, how different would have been her whole life!

The church is no place for exclusive cliques. Its Founder was also the Founder of democracy. He, reading the hearts of men and women, had more followers—of his own selection, too—among poor than among rich. Yet, when the hearts of those endowed with this world's goods were pure, he loved them. There was no preference for either rich or poor because of wealth or poverty. The worth of the individual decided his standing in the opinion of the Founder of the church. When his followers raise a social or money standard in an organization supposed to be patterned after his, they utterly fail of his ideal. Spiritual depression results, no matter what the outward appearance of the congregation.

There are churches that furnish striking examples of the Christly spirit, and the methods of one such may provide suggestions to others. Before the pulpit of a city church was ranged a line of men and women to be received into full membership. Some one remarked to a friend, "Right by Judge H.'s side stands a Chinese laundryman. I hope the judge will not feel himself slighted, for Dr. G.'s reception of the Chinaman may be a little the warmer." It was not. Both welcomes were as warm as possible—the greeting of one Christian man to another, with an appropriate message to each. Then to the congregation came the words, "And now, my people, I have given this welcome for you, but I trust you will lose no time in extending your own. On the calendar for the day you will find the names and addresses of all new members. Seek them out and take them to your hearts."

Was this the end? Not at all. There followed consultations between the church officers and the chairmen of stranger's committees of the various church organizations. If there were any of the new members who were not already connected with the Sunday school, its stranger's committee visited them. All eligible to the brotherhood were looked after by its committee. In the same way the woman's missionary society, the Farther Lights, the Christian Endeavor society, sought those suitable to its organization, without discrimination other than age and sex. When the newcomer attended Sunday school and was placed in a class, its committee called, for the classes, too, are organized. The committee of the missionary society, having visited each woman, knew her when, by appointment, she attended their meeting, and accompanied her to the luncheon served afterwards, so that she might escape that desperately lonely feeling which permeates one feasting uninitiated in the midst of sociability.

And what of those who have not united with the church, who simply wander in? That church has scores of such, for its hospitality is proverbial. These same stranger's committees of the various organizations are on the alert for such people. That is why there are over 1,000 members in the adult department of the Sunday school. The school is the greatest recruiting station of the church which numbers about 2,000 members. Yet that church began its work with a handful of people. Its spirit of heavenly democracy has led to its growth, for its name means spirituality, hospitality, love, to hosts of persons who have become identified with it for only a short time, but who have carried its record of achievements to other places.

Church Arranged for Greatest Helpfulness

Think what its Bible class of over 350 men, most of them young, means to the strange young man entering the city. There are many classes where Mary might have blossomed had she been guided hither. What must it mean to the home-tied mother to be able to take her children to a woman's meeting, partly religious, partly social, wholly friendly, knowing that they will be amused in another room by those who love and understand children, while she is perfectly free to enjoy the address on missions, and the later luncheon?

What has been done in this church may be accomplished wherever there are men and women who in their church life are actuated by the spirit of Christ. Such a church is full of humble folk, whose life it is. Yet there are people of wealth and position who find peace in its ministries, and seek the rest of soul which is breathed in its spiritual atmosphere. Every church, to achieve Christ's ideal for it, should have stranger's committees, made up of men and women who appreciate that it is attitude of mind, not style of clothes, plumpness of pocketbook, or social prestige that determines the value of the individual to the church.—The Continent.

How Shall We Lead the Children?

By WM. C. ALLEN.

The writer reads in the morning newspaper that Ernest Thompson Seton has resigned his position as Chief Scout, in America, claiming that the boys are being diverted from the original objects of the Boys' Scout organization toward militarism. Some of us who have long followed this matter can readily understand that conditions may be as he represents them, independently of any other consideration associated with his leaving the organization.

This incident recalls some recent experiences in connection with the attitude of children toward militarism, or talk of war.

A Christian friend of mine, in California, has a son who has lately entered high school, and who has been very anxious to join the cadet corps connected therewith. Every effort was made by the faculty to promote enlistment in the corps. When remonstrating with his son, at the dinner table, my friend said, "You would not want to learn how to kill anybody, would you?" The boy replied, "Yes, of course I would. I would like to kill a man. I would like to shoot him." His youthful enthusiasm in this direction had been pretty well wrought up to the sincere grief of his father.

A little girl known to the writer recently went onto one of the warships lying in the harbor of San Francisco, in connection with the Exposition, and to which invitations have freely been extended. As soon as she boarded the steel monster she spied a young midshipman and straightway marched up to him and said, "How many men did you kill?" The officer was quite abashed, and remarked that he did not know that he had killed anybody, whereupon she quickly responded, "It is your business to kill men, is it not?" This so disconcerted him that he could hardly reply.

Another friend, a Methodist minister, is the proud father of a remarkably lovable and capable boy. About two years ago this lad, then nearly 14 years of age, became very much interested in the international peace and war question through hearing an address by me. He called on me several times and, as he was soon expecting to graduate from the grammar school into the high school of the city in which he lived, and was valedictorian of his class, he decided to make war, and denunciation thereof, the subject of his address.

About two months after entering high school in the course of conversation I asked how the cadet corps connected with it was progressing. He said, "Pretty well. I have joined it." I expressed astonishment that such an ardent young peace advocate could have changed his opinions so suddenly. His reply was, "I think just as much as ever that war is a very bad thing, and I am opposed to it just as much as ever, but I want to go through the state university, and I get credits for the military drill, and without those credits there is danger of my not being able to secure all the advantages in connection with entering the university." In other words, his conscience had been quenched by the influences which were being impressed upon him in his high school.

I know some of the officers of the said institution, and not one of them would be prepared to believe that their young people were being subtly directed toward militarism.

A friend of mine in Australia, Dr. Strong, tells in his valuable magazine, The Commonwealth, about a child who was asked: "Did you enjoy yourself at the party?" "Oh, yes, I paid a penny and had a kick at the Kaiser," was the reply. Dr. Strong adds, "There is plenty of rancor and bitterness in the world without encouraging children to kick the Kaiser or anybody else. Now is the time to teach children the wickedness and madness of the passions that lead to war, and to instill into them a true spirit of international good-will so that coming generations may be spared the awful experiences of today."

Is it not true that there is a terrible danger of the Christian being lost in the patriot? How shall we lead our children?

San Jose, Calif.

THE IOWA PAGE

CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelistic, etc.—H. R. Keates, 1314 Lyon Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

Missionary—H. D. Lane, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Educational—D. M. Edwards, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Bible School—Golda R. Carroll, Beacon, Iowa.

Christian Endeavor—Cora M. Mattison, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Peace—Alvin Hoskins, Richland, Iowa.

Temperance—Robert Lincoln, Grinnell, Iowa.

Items of information should be sent to the above promptly so that they may appear in the "Iowa page."

EVANGELISTIC COMMITTEE PROGRAM.

The Evangelistic Committee of Iowa Yearly Meeting has sent out to the different meetings a somewhat comprehensive program for the spiritual help and uplift of the meetings. It is desired that at least two weeks in January shall be devoted to a simultaneous campaign for the deepening of spiritual life.

A prayer circle or personal workers' league is advised for every congregation. Attendance upon the prayer meeting as the "power house" of the church is urged as a matter of sacred duty and also of blessed privilege. A determined effort is to be made to make the Sabbath evening service evangelistic.

Pastors, officers and teachers are requested to make prayerful effort to secure an acceptance of Christ by every member of the Sabbath School. There shall be a neighborhood survey by every congregation at least once a year, "so as to learn the religious conditions prevailing, and seek to lead the unsaved to attend church with a view to winning them to Christ." Finally the slogan is raised of "A family altar in every home where scripture reading and prayer shall be observed daily."

"We recommend a vigorous campaign of aggressive spiritual activity by all of our membership throughout the year." The objective of the program is defined to be "the development of every meeting into an evangelistic and social force in its community, and a resultant mighty impact of our denominational life upon the people around us."

Other Objectives.

A thousand new members won to Christ and the church this year.

A larger force of workers to enter the fields now white unto the harvest.

An annual income of not less than five thousand dollars with which to push the work vigorously, and open new meetings.

Persistent personal evangelism backed up by private and public prayer.

C. E. DEPARTMENT.

An interesting letter from Indianola will be gladly read by all:

Perhaps the most important thing we have done this year was to organize a Junior C. E. One Sunday last June we held our first meeting and thirteen children signed the pledge cards. We now have a fine earnest Junior with about forty members. Perhaps others would like to know our junior song. Our pastor's wife arranged the words to the tune of "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart."

We often use Juniors in our Senior meetings. They sing for us, repeat the names of the books of the Bible, and not long ago we had a contest at one of the evening meetings. References were given out and both Seniors and Juniors looked for them. The Juniors were easily victors.

Sometimes we have a leaderless meeting, with the order of the service written on the blackboard. Sometimes we have general discussions in which all take part. We try to have special music nearly every time.

We have just ended a membership and attendance contest which resulted in the addition of several new members, and also in arousing much interest and enthusiasm. We went on a trip to Jerusalem. One side went in an aeroplane and the other in a Ford. When we were fairly started, a great deal of rivalry was displayed. The losers entertained the winners. The banquet was held in the Endeavor room of the church. The seats were removed and small round tables were used. After a program of stunts and music, the banquet was served and interesting toasts followed. Then we all joined hands around the room and closed with prayer for our C. E. during the coming year.

We have no regular gospel team, but there are about fifteen who are ready to go at any time.

As a whole our society is in better condition than it has been for some time.

JUNIOR C. E. SONG.

What a wonderful change in my life has been wrought,

Since I joined the Junior C. E.

I have love for my Bible which nothing else brought,

Since I joined the Junior C. E.

CHORUS.

Since I joined the Junior C. E.

Since I joined the Junior C. E.
There's a work I can do,
There's a work for you, too,
Come with me and join our C. E.

I want others to know more of God and His love,

Since I joined the Junior C. E.

For many there are, who of Him have not heard,

Come with me and join our C. E.

Haven't you enjoyed that letter?
We should like to have other societies write and tell us what you are doing.

BIBLE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

BANGOR BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Sunday School here reorganized the first of the year. Walter P. Whinery is now Superintendent. There are three classes partly organized, also three classes of beginners and primaries being taught the graded lessons. Little's Cross and Crown System has been used in the School the past year with gratifying results. There were twenty-one who did not miss a Sunday unless kept at home by sickness. The average attendance for the past year was ninety. Ora W. Carrell was with us on January 14 and held a most helpful conference with our Sunday School workers.

ARNOLD'S PARK BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Sunday School here is a fully graded School, comprising eight classes and all but the two adult classes using the graded lessons. One adult class is organized and registered, two teen age classes are organized and registered and two other classes are organized. Monthly Sunday School Conferences are held which act as a stimulus and incentive to more efficient work, and a register board of attendance and offerings helps to create interest in the condition and life of the School.

The greater need of the School is for better equipment. Lack of room in the church building makes it necessary for the young people's "Baraca Philathea" class to meet in a near by hall. This is a large and enthusiastic class. The Arnold's Park School reports that they now lack only three points of being a Standard School and that they are planning and expecting to reach these three points before Yearly Meeting of this year.

EARLHAM BIBLE SCHOOL.

The Earlham Friends Bible School reports reorganization with a full list of teachers and officers for the coming year, including Superintendent of Home Department, Cradle Roll, Missions and Temperance. The School observes missionary lessons the first Sunday in each month and a temperance lesson every three months. The Sunday School committee plans to make the School efficient and up to date in every possible way.

AT GRINNELL.

At Grinnell a teacher's training class of eleven members has been organized under the leadership of their pastor, Joseph Sopher. The class will meet on Monday evenings and the first half hour will be given to the study of next Sunday's lesson, while three-quarters of an hour will be given to the study of "Preparation for Teaching" by Oliver.

NEW SHARON.

A teacher's training class has been organized by the New Sharon Bible School workers. The class begins work with eight or nine members and will meet on Sabbath at 6:30 p. m. The school here reports that they are planning greater things for this year than ever before.

FIELD NOTES.

Arnold's Park—Charles T. Moore, pastor of the meeting at Indianola, began a series of meetings at this place on Sunday evening, January 16. As a fit preparation the meeting had secured signatures to pledges promising to make the effort to win one person to Jesus Christ before Easter 1916, and promising also to give at least two hours each month until Easter exclusively for this purpose. Prayer meetings were held in the community preparatory to the revival service. E. L. Gregory is the pastor.

Indianola—J. Arthur Wollam, pastor at Wichita, Kansas, closed a meeting of two and a half week's duration at Indianola recently. There were some conversions. The preaching was deep, earnest and heart searching, as well as sound and profitable to all.

A Christmas program was given by the Bible School of the North H street Mission of Oskaloosa on Friday evening, December 24.

The Bible School at Greenville has ordered graded supplies for their four grades. They have organized one class and may possibly organize three other classes. They have just remodeled their church building with special attention to the needs of the Sunday School.

A very representative number of the officers and teachers of the Centre Friends Bible School met for a conference on Saturday evening, December 18, at the very hospitable home of Irving Wilson. They expect to organize a cradle roll and teacher training class soon.

The Stanford Friends Bible School has recently closed a contest which proved a great stimulous to the attendance and punctuality. The young people's organized class did some splendid work in painting and refinishing the inside woodwork and walls of the Stanford meeting house.

On Friday evening, December 17, a very representative number of the teachers and officers of the Grinnell Friends Bible School met at the church for a conference with the Field Secretary. The matter of teacher training was especially discussed and nine books were ordered for the formation of a teachers' training class.

On Sabbath evening, December 26, the Oskaloosa Friends Bible School gave the Christmas program, "White Gifts for the King." For several years the Bible School has had a "Giving Christmas" and the plan has proved to be a real blessing to everyone. This year a Christmas contribution was to be sent to our work in Jamaica.

BIBLE SCHOOL

FEBRUARY 6.

Subject—The Boldness of Peter and John.

Lesson—Acts 4:1—31.

Golden Text—Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit ye like men, be strong. I Corinthians 16:13.

The incident of this lesson is the sequel of the one for a week ago. Peter had not completed his sermon to the gathered multitudes before the officers came upon them and placed John and him under arrest. We view these incidents so wholly from the Christian standpoint that it is hard for us to do justice to the Jewish officials. They occupied a very difficult position. The Romans always kept a strong force of soldiery within the temple precincts ready to crush any disturbance. The Jews during this half century had been very troublesome and the demand upon the Jewish officers was that they keep the peace or take the consequences, so that between the mob and the Romans they found their task a delicate one.

Here was an unusual gathering and their officers were quick to ascertain the facts. They must be careful lest they rouse the people and then the Romans. They also had to guard against the possibility of the Christians exciting the fanatical elements which would also bring the Romans. Hence their caution, and to us very often inconsistent action. Of course the judgment of history is against the officials in their attitude towards Jesus but again we must remember that he was not the only one who, about that time, had proclaimed himself the Jewish Messiah. They were wrong but Christians have been entirely too harsh with the Jews in these matters. We have forgotten the prayer from the cross, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do."

The success attending the first Christian preaching was undoubtedly large. They had a message for the people. The requirements of the teachers of the period emphasizing ceremonial purity made salvation to the laboring man impossible. Here was a teaching and an experience that gave relief, hope and consolation and the common people heard it gladly. The ground had been prepared and the seed sown by Jesus and the disciples were reaping the harvest. They were also reaping the opposition which a new religion usually experiences when it meets one well established.

The phrase "in the name of Jesus" has often puzzled those who have paused to think about its use. The magic of the period made great use of the "name" of an individual. A magician if he possessed the true name of an individual was thought to have sufficient power over him to do him harm. Hence people often had two names, the fatal one being kept a secret. A tradition in the early church says that Judas obtained power over Jesus by crawling under a part of the temple and thus up to where his name was hidden and having thus stolen the fatal name was able to betray him. Another use was to exercise an individual or demon in the name of ——— (different names being used). This came to mean "in the power of" and so in Christian usage was softened down to this meaning. In later ages, however, it again became entangled in the magic sense and many are the stories reporting wonderful happenings resulting from simply pronouncing the name Jesus.

The faithfulness of the disciples during this early period ought to inspire Christians today to fulfill their commission. We may admire the sacrificing labor of past generations and while doing so, let present opportunities go by forever.

VITAL STATISTICS CONCERNING EARLHAM COLLEGE.

Founded in 1847; number of students 400; alumni 1205; living alumni 1104; members of faculty 33; students per faculty member 12 plus; doctors' degrees among faculty 11; number of buildings 8; acres of college grounds 120; productive endowment $550,000.00; charges for student per year $270.00; available library volumes 65,000; undergraduate organizations 17; periodicals published 2; athletic fields 3, for hockey, tennis, football, baseball, field sports; laboratories 8, health department with modern equipment including two hospitals, college physician, college nurses and required medical examinations; oldest living graduate Dr. Erastus Test, Purdue University.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

WITH THE GENERAL SECRETARY IN THE WEST INDIES.

Charles E. Tebbetts and family landed at Santiago, Cuba, on January 4th. After visiting each of our mission stations in Oriente Province, they left Cuba on the 18th and were to have reached Port Antonio the following day. They have planned to spend the time until January 31st, visiting our missions in Jamaica and to sail from Kingston in time to reach Panama early in February. The following letter was written especially for this page by Edith M. Tebbetts and shows something of the experiences which their party has been having.

IN CUBA.

This is a land of fascinating interest. It is hard to realize that two weeks ago we should have suffered with cold in New York and now find a land of summer.

After one day spent in a hot, disagreeable port town, we took a train ride for a couple of hours to visit an excellent Baptist mission college at El Cristo. At this station, many men and boys were carrying strings of fruit to tempt travelers. How would you like a string laced through a dozen oranges or tangerines for ten cents or a bunch of two dozen bananas for the same sum? It is the proper thing to carry some strings of fruit for quenching thirst or for a light lunch while traveling.

The atmosphere here in the evening has the refreshing quality of our northern spring evenings. It is fragrant with new life. We were most hospitably entertained in the homes of the Baptist missionaries. We have four of our Quaker mission boys studying at El Cristo because we have no college sufficiently advanced for them. They will probably all become ministers; two already have charges.

Cuban scenery is not beautiful, but it is picturesque. The few hills are steep enough to turn somersaults. Royal palms grow everywhere. They look beautiful with their smooth white trunks reaching high into the sky and their tops of feathery green. Their fruit is a sort of nut that is splendid for fattening hogs. This fruit grows in clusters about the size of a big bunch of bananas, and ripens all through the year. A field of royal palms makes a good pasture. Cuban grass is not very good feed. The fences around these pastures are made of a sort of growing cactus plant which is overgrown with weeds and poisonous vines. An animal would have a painful passage through this hedge.

As we crossed Cuba, we saw several fields of sugar cane and others of bananas. Other fields are being plowed by oxen for the spring crops. New potatoes are just being dug. The missionaries have treated us to all sorts of strange fruits and vegetables. And I will have to confess we are not game for all of them, though some are delicious.

—EDITH M. TEBBETTS.

FRIENDS' AFRICA INDUSTRIAL MISSION.

Reports from our workers in Africa have been very few during the past few months. We suspect that some of the Africa mails have gone astray. The following paragraph is taken from the last quarterly report received from Emory J. Rees who is in charge of the evangelistic and educational work at the Maragoli Station, as well as being engaged in the work of translation and supervising the mission press:

In most ways the work at Maragoli has gone satisfactorily. The Christian young people have been earnest in bearing the message to others. The way is open in Maragoli for work of evangelistic character beyond our facilities. We are thankful for the abundant opportunities. We have continued all services at the station and interest is good. The early morning Sabbath meeting is still one for prayer and for instruction preparatory to the day's work—especially for the outpreaching. The entire district is well covered with outpreaching places by the young people. Twenty to twenty-five miles by bicycle and four to six services make the usual day of rest rather strenuous, so that it becomes needful to take a day of rest during the week in the interest of health. Notwithstanding some difficulties, the school work is going on well.

A MISSIONARY SURGEON.

Rather more than the usual number of minor cases of disease have been treated lately. Malaria and pneumonia have been quite prevalent and a few deaths have resulted from the latter disease. Besides the usual number of minor operations, one of unusual interest was performed—the removal of an iron arrow-head from the posterior region of the thigh. This had been imbedded in the victim some twenty years ago during a tribal fight. The patient is progressing very well.

—E. BLACKBURN,

Kaimosi, British East Africa.

EDGAR T. HOLE AND FAMILY RE- TURN FROM MISSION FIELD.

On December 27th, Edgar T. and Adelaide W. Hole with their two children, Leona and Morlan, arrived in San Francisco aboard the S. S. Tenyo Maru from Shanghai via Kobe and Yokohama, Japan. The Holes are returning from their second period of service in Africa. It has not yet been definitely decided as to how their furlough period shall be spent. After remaining for a few days with Edgar Hole's brother in Pasadena, they visited another brother, Harry R. Hole, who is pastor of the Friends' meeting at Carthage, Indiana. After a brief stay with a third brother in Cleveland, Ohio, they will proceed to New York to spend some time with Mrs. Hole's mother. On their return journey from Africa, the Holes' traveled more than half way around the world. Leaving their station, Lirhandu, in British East Africa, in August, they sailed from Mombasa to Bombay and spent some time visiting Friends' and other missions in India. Sailing from Calcutta, they came down around the Malay Peninsula and stopped for a time in China, visiting a number of mission stations. We are hoping in the near future to have articles for this page from both Edgar and Adelaide Hole.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR THE MISSIONARY MEETING.

I knew one auxiliary which held a regular meeting at the time and place of the Sabbath evening service. A notice of the meeting, also the program, was given in the church announcements, and everyone was urged to attend; many personal invitations were also given. As a result, they had a good audience. The members responded at roll call with an interesting missionary item. The lesson on Home Missions was given by men and women not members of the auxiliary in brief papers and speeches. An interesting reading, 'How the Old Church Came to Its Own,' was given by a young lady. Missionary songs were well rendered by a quartet of young people. Good interest was manifested by the good attention of the audience.

Another society held a regular meeting as a mid-winter picnic. It was held in a suitable home centrally located. The ladies' husbands and families were special guests. They brought baskets of lunch and had supper together, and thus had a very pleasant picnic in the midst of winter snow and ice. For the program, both Home and Foreign lessons were given in brief; a short address was given by a returned missionary; excellent music was rendered by the children. The program closed at nine o'clock. New members were obtained during the social hour.

JANE D. H. MOORE.

CHURCH AT WORK

Amboy, Indiana—Wabash Quarterly Meeting was held at Amboy December 3-5. Charles E. Hiatt of Marion, was present and brought a very helpful message on Saturday morning. William C. Kinsey of Chicago, was present during all the sessions and conducted the song services. On Sunday evening he gave a stereopticon address on the work of the Chicago Boys' Club, of which he is secretary. The address was very interesting and instructive. At the close an offering was taken for the work in which he is engaged, amounting to $22.50. Near Christmas the women of the church made and sent a hundred and forty-six garments to the Club.

Our Christmas program this year was different from any we have had before. It was a time of giving rather than of receiving and was a splendid success. Again several dollars were given to the Boys' Club of Chicago besides the apples which were sent. In addition to helping several worthy poor families in our town, $52.00 in cash was given to the Home Mission Committee for use as emergencies arise.

Ellettsport, Indiana—The Friends church has lately been remodeled by the addition of a basement for Sunday school use, together with a heating plant, the entire cost amounting to near $1500.00. The building was re-dedicated on January 16. Truman C. Kenworthy was present and preached an able sermon, his theme being the Setting Up of the Kingdom of God. Ira C. Johnson offered the dedicatory prayer. Master Ellsworth Robinson, the boy singer of Unionport, Indiana, was present and sang two beautiful solos. We were also favored with the services of the male quartet of the Friends church at Lynn. George Addington, Quarterly Meeting Superintendent, was present and made the closing prayer. A deficiency of $375.00 was all subscribed on the day of dedication. The Lord has been greatly blessing us the past two years. Both the Sabbath School and meeting have been increasing in interest and numbers, the Bible School averaging nearly a hundred for the past year.

Muncie, Indiana—The C. E. Society of the Friends Memorial Church has been doing practical work, going out to the jail and county infirmary and carrying the good news to the inmates by their prayers and singing. By their calls they have also cheered the sick and shut-ins. They have given $14.57 for home missions and have also given help to two families.

Pleasant View, Indiana—A series of revival meetings was held at Pleasant View Friends Church near Bluffton from January 1 to 16, by Mildred B. Allen of Centerville, assisted by the pastor, M. Marie Cassell. Thirty persons professed conversion and the meeting received such an awakening as it has not had for years. The church is greatly revived and a number of converts will join Friends. Peter Frantz, an aged Friend, who has been an active member of this meeting for many years, is in very poor health.

Ramona, Oklahoma—Emma Garretson, of Denair, California, came to us in December and held a two weeks' meeting, which resulted in several conversions. We feel that her presence was a spiritual uplift to the church and to all who came in contact with her. The church here is doing well. The Bible School has an enrollment of two hundred and nine and the smallest average attendance any quarter last year was a hundred and eight.

Indianapolis, Indiana—A series of cottage prayer meetings was held here in connection with the work of the First Friends Church, January 10-14, according to the program outlined by the pastor, W. O. Trueblood, previous to his recent severe illness. The congregation was divided into nine sections, and in each section five prayer meetings were held in as many different homes. The general themes were as follows: "That our spiritual life may be deepened"; "That a new loyalty for the church may seize us"; "For our children and young people"; "For the officers, teachers and students of our schools and colleges"; "For the community at large that we may be used to extend God's Kingdom." These gatherings were themselves of great spiritual blessings, when a few were gathered together in His name. Hearts were searched and vows were renewed.

Evangelistic services were conducted last week at the church. On Monday evening E. C. Renn, pastor of the First Lutheran church in Indianapolis, brought the message. On Tuesday evening A. B. Storms, formerly pastor of Central Avenue M. E. church, was the speaker, while on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings Enos Harvey, Superintendent of Western Yearly Meeting, was present. Morton C. Pearson filled the pulpit on January 9 and 16.

New Martinsburg, Ohio—Ida M. Allen assisted by Lucy A. Compton, has just closed a series of revival meetings at the Friends church here. A number of persons received definite blessing and the church was greatly revived and strengthened. We believe that good seed has been sown which will yield abundant harvest. Ida M. Allen presented the gospel in a very attractive manner and her messages were filled with the power of the Holy Ghost.

FRIENDSVILLE ACADEMY.

Friendsville Academy opened its new term January 3, with an increased enrollment of twenty new students, making a total enrollment for the year of one hundred and fifty. This is larger than it has been for some time. The public school of Friendsville has been connected with the Academy this year and under the supervision of the Principal of the Academy.

The new Farnum Hall which replaced the one destroyed by fire in November 1913, has been a great satisfaction to both community and students. With gifts from friends and with money given by the state for that purpose, one hundred and twenty-five new books have just been purchased for the library. The William Forster Home for Girls now has fourteen girls living in it. It is under the care of Miss Bertha Smith. Wilmington Yearly Meeting has stood loyally by the school and the Tennessee Friends are enthusiastic and appreciative over their school. Miss Mabel Beck is Principal and Herman G. Tener, Academy Assistant.

PEACE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS IN AMERICA

NOTE—It is hoped that this page may present in brief form a record of activities typical of the work Friends are doing for peace. News items, short, pointed arguments, suggested plans, all will be welcome, and will be used subject to the limitations of space and the proper distribution and arrangement of the matter received. All communications intended for this page should be addressed to Allen D. Hole, President, 615 National Road, West, Richmond, Indiana.

A LEAGUE TO ENFORCE PEACE.

Because this subject contains the word "force" is no reason for suspecting either the purpose or the soundness of the argument put forth to establish the contention of the founders of what has come to be known as a League of Nations to Enforce International Peace. If there is any place for force anywhere in the government of human affairs, we should rather rejoice than complain, if any of our fellow citizens can bring forth a scheme that will by force materially lessen the occurrence of wars. By the adoption of a scheme of force, if it will work, we secure an element of certainty which will in itself tend to quiet passion and to substitute deliberation in place of headlong and brainless precipitation. Force in the sense used in the platform and rules laid down by the convention which met in Independence Hall in Philadelphia last June is no more out of place than the same is out of place in the well known and familiar expression police force.

In our subject it is applied in a much wider and more important department of control of human passion and the consequent lessening of human suffering; and for this reason its use should not deter us from considering the merits of the scheme with all the intellectual penetration we may possess, but rather be a spur to give the matter our most careful thought and study. There is no place here for taking snap judgment nor for concluding that we already know all that other people know and considerable besides. If police force is necessary to keep the peace of a city, you cannot on any ground of logic show that force may not be useful and necessary to maintain the peace of the world.

The establishment and maintenance of peace among nations is a task of such transcendent importance and desirability, that we are not disposed to wonder why the best minds and the purest and most Godly men and women of the world have given their time and thought to the conditions brought upon mankind by the horrible practice of war.

We no longer need to stir up sentiment against war. We all, without exception, hate war. We hate it so much that we should like to drive it out of the world by force if this could be done. The time has come for putting our sentiments into organization in the way of rules of dealing with questions that arise which lead to war, rules that are simple and are believed to be effective on the ground of delaying the rushing into war while passion is at white heat, taking time for consideration and consultation and counting the cost.

Those who cry, "Peace! Peace!" and think it may then be looked for, do not comprehend the situation, nor understand the conditions existing in the world, nor the greed of men, nor the tyranny of kings and emperors and rulers, nor the insolence and inveterate oppression of men whose sole ambition is money and power.

The American Branch of The League to Enforce Peace was organized in Independence Hall in Philadelphia on the 17th of last June. Ex-President William Howard Taft was elected president; and the chairman of the Committee on Resolutions was President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University.

At the public banquet held on the evening of the 16th in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Mayor Blankenburg presided and the speakers were Judge Gray, Hon. Oscar S. Straus, Hamilton Holt, President Lowell, and William Howard Taft. The National Provisional Committee was composed of one hundred and twenty distinguished men representing all parts of the United States.

At the meeting in Independence Hall the following platform was adopted:

"First: All justiciable questions arising between the signatory powers, not settled by negotiation, shall, subject to the limitations of treaties, be submitted to a judicial tribunal for hearing and judgment, both upon the merits and upon any issue as to its jurisdiction of the question.

"Second: All other questions arising between the signatories and not settled by negotiation, shall be submitted to a Council of Conciliation for hearing, consideration and recommendation.

"Third: The signatory powers shall jointly use forthwith both their economic and military forces against any one of their number that goes to war, or commits acts of hostility, against another of the signatories before any question arising shall be submitted as provided in the foregoing.

"Fourth: Conferences between the signatory powers shall be held from time to time to formulate and codify rules of international law, which, unless some signatory shall signify its dissent within a stated period, shall thereafter govern in the decisions of the Judicial Tribunal mentioned in Article One."

The platform is worthy of the careful consideration of our people in every part of our country, and it should not be cast aside as military in its nature and therefore contrary to the spirit of the gospel as laid down in the New Testament; for it is neither. If there are people who disbelieve in the association of multitudes of people into governments known as nations, such people may have no interest in this platform made by men who are patriotic, intelligent, and who in their sympathies take in the whole world.

But such people as see nothing but war in this movement are simply mistaken and are not to be trusted in a matter of such wide reaching application and of such momentous significance as lie at the root of all human government. We are to consider also the unequal conceptions of human brotherhood and therefore of human obligations, existing in the different nations of the earth. For this reason also we are bound to adapt our methods to existing conditions, and to exhibit patience as well as a wise diplomacy, and make our advance toward the peace of the world as rapid as possible to be sure; but make it on the basis of present world conditions and not on the basis of conditions that are desired.

In this platform four salient points are presented:

1. Questions between nations that are justiciable.
2. Questions between nations that are not justiciable.
3. Duties imposed upon the signatory powers.
4. Conferences of the signatory powers.

Justiciable questions are those that can be settled on the basis of international law and equity as now existing:

and these questions, any one can see, should be settled by negotiation if possible, if not possible then they should be referred to an international arbitral court of justice. As examples of justiciable questions the following may be mentioned: The Alabama Claims, the Bering Sea Seal Fisheries, and the Alaska Boundary.

The second kind of difficulties, those not justiciable, as for example the foreign immigration question, if not adjusted by negotiation, shall be referred to a Council of Conciliation for hearing, consideration and recommendation. Such reference, anyone will see, will assure considerable time before determination—a year or more; and will therefore prevent a conflict in very many cases.

The third resolution will meet with disfavor at first thought; but if carefully thought through, it will appear necessary to render the scheme effective and of certain benefit. The meaning is simply this: If one of the signatory powers should go to war with another without complying with the rules as laid down, then in that case the other members of the League of nations will combine against the one offending signatory power by any and every means to prevent the offending power from further warfare. Some may say here is a possible ground for a great war, if a very powerful nation should be the offender; for this powerful nation would be engaged against all the other signatory powers. Such might be so; but is not likely to occur for obvious reasons.

The fourth resolution opens up the way for international conferences, the making and codifying of international law—in a word for a perpetuation of The Hague Conferences.

—L. L. HOBBS.

YOUNG FRIENDS BOARD

"YOUNG FRIENDS' DAY."

As announced some time ago we hope February 13, will be observed as Young Friends' Day. This is to be done in connection with the Decision Day of Christian Endeavor Week.

At this time Endeavorers should have charge of the music of the evening service and help in seating people or welcoming them at the door.

Before the meeting, let the Prayer Meeting Committee, together with the President of the Society and other officers of the meeting, hold a special prayer service for the evening meeting. This need not last over ten minutes. The regular C. E. meeting may be dismissed a little early for this meeting. If possible have the pastor meet with you. At any rate let him know that you are especially remembering the service that evening. The pastor should make an especial effort on this evening to bring people to a definite decision for Christ. Look-out committee members and other personal workers should be ready to speak to anyone who needs a word of explanation or encouragement to take this stand.

We call this Young Friends' Day because at this time an especial challenge is made to all Young People of a community by the Young Friends of that community to take upon themselves the responsibility and joy of living a Christian Life.

Later in the year a Young Friends' Enrollment Campaign will be launched during which time a Young Friends' Day will be observed.

YOUNG FRIENDS' WEEK.

The following is copied from the last issue of the Winona Conference News. We seriously hope that many Endeavor Societies will observe this week:

"Many young people's organizations have been greatly benefited by making a special campaign in their department during one week in the year. Oftentimes pastors or leaders of Meeting like to emphasize one department of the church work at a time. This is made possible by such a movement as Christian Endeavor Week.

"Because we think Friends Christian Endeavor Societies can advance their organizations more effectively by approaching their work from a friendly standpoint, we ask that Christian Endeavor Week be observed in such way as the following:

"First Day: Christian Endeavor and Young Friends' Day. The week should be opened by celebrating the anniversary of Christian Endeavor. Every young friend should be informed on the origin and work of so important a young people's movement. A review of Christian Endeavor may be supplemented by a history of the Movement among Friends. Pamphlets on a Friends Christian Endeavor can be had by writing to the Young Friends' office.

"A morning sermon on Christian Endeavor and the Young Friends Movement with a union service in the evening should launch the idea of the week and awaken a spirit of enthusiasm for the succeeding meetings.

"Second Day: Enlistment Day. This meeting should bring a closer spirit of fellowship among the members and introduce new members to the social life of the Society. It is an evening of recreation and hearty enjoyment. The Young Friends Board has on sale a book which is filled with games for occasions of this kind. It is Christian F. Reiser's "Social Plans for Young People," price, seventy-five cents.

"Third Day: Local Union Day. This is Peace Union Day.

"Christian Endeavor Peace Union cards can be procured for this day. A special peace meeting could be held on this evening. A debate, public program or an address could be given. The question is alive enough to claim wide attention.

"Fourth Day: Church Day. Especial efforts should be made to persuade all Young Friends to attend Fourth Day Meeting. In case it is held on Fifth Day the program can be shifted accordingly. If Monthly Meeting is being held, papers on Friends history and ideals could be read after the business meeting.

"Fifth Day: Entertainment Day. An attractive entertainment on Missions can be given on this day. Many missionary sermons can be preached by a well rendered program. These programs can be procured at the Young Friends Office or from Ross Hadley, Richmond, Ind.

"Sixth Day: Extension Day. At this time a special canvass for new members and new societies should be made. A pilgrimage to some nearby weak meeting could be made to good advantage. Try especially to start a study group in peace, using the Messenger of Peace Pamphlet as suggested by the Young Friends Board.

"Seventh Day: Junior and Intermediate Day. At this time special attention should be given to the children and early adolescents. Attractive programs should be previously arranged, practiced and rendered by the children on the afternoon or evening of this day.

"First Day: Decision Day. This is possibly the most important day of all. A special sermon on the Challenge of the Christian Life, an address on the call of the Word, or the supreme need of additional "Servants for the King" could be given. A purpose meeting in the evening, when everyone will more definitely consecrate his life to Christ, should be the supreme meeting of the week.

RETURNING TO JAPAN.

We have the following note from Joseph Cosand under date of January 3, 1916, written from Pasadena, California: "After a furlough of a few months in the United States, most of which time has been spent in Pasadena, my aunt, Miss Ellen Moore, and I are now returning to Japan for another term of service under the United Brethren Foreign Mission Board. We shall always be interested in the success of The American Friend."

A SUGGESTION.

A suggestion has come to the office of The American Friend that within the next thirty days the theme of preparedness be taken as the subject of a sermon to be preached in every Friends' meeting in America, showing what it means to the American people in all its phases, to be followed by a suggestion that the members of the congregation write their Congressman and Senators protesting against the preparedness program.

CANADIAN FRIENDS CONFERENCE

A Conference for men and women of Canada Yearly Meeting was held at Friends' meeting house in Toronto, Canada, last Saturday and Sunday, January 22, 23. A comprehensive program had been arranged as follows:

"The Place of the Country Church in the Community" by S. Groh, President United Farmers of Ontario; "A Country Meeting at Work" by W. Carlton Wood; "God, the Dynamic of Service" Charles M. Woodman of Portland, Maine.

"Report of Men's Conference at Richmond" by Wilbert Cody, Joseph P. Rogers and William Harris; "The Every Member Canvass" by Herbert K. Caskey, Secretary Laymen's Missionary Movement; "Service, the Pathway to God" by Charles M. Woodman; "The Message of Quakerism" by Charles M. Woodman.

In addition, a special meeting for women was held on Saturday evening and at the same hour a special meeting for men addressed by G. A. Warburton on "Temperance." On Sabbath, a conference for young Friends was held at 3:30, led by Charles M. Woodman with Lulu Cleland presiding. It was expected also that Charles M. Woodman would attend the Sabbath morning meeting for worship. Ample opportunity was given for general discussion of the various topics.

What we do today is more important than what we intend to do tomorrow.

NEWS NOTES.

Richard Newby, pastor at Des Moines, began a series of meetings at Oskaloosa on January 9.

Alfred C. Moon, son of Parker Moon, is superintendent of the public school at Maysville, Mo.

Fannie Elliott, pastor at Rockford, Ohio, has been housed up with a case of grippe for the past two weeks, but is recovering.

Thomas E. Jones, Secretary of the Young Friends Board, gave several addresses last week at various places in and about Philadelphia.

Milo S. Hinckle, pastor of the East Main Street meeting, Richmond, Indiana, has had a recent serious attack of grippe, but is now much better.

William J. Sayers, pastor of the meeting at Muncie, Indiana, is holding revival services at East Main Street meeting, Richmond, Indiana.

Willard O. Trueblood, pastor of the meeting at Indianapolis, Indiana, has been quite ill with an attack of pneumonia, but is now reported convalescing.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation holiday greetings with quotations from Whittier and St. Paul, sent by Harry R. Keates of Des Moines, Ia.

D. W. Lawrence presented the subject of Peace at the meeting at League City, Texas, on the evening of January 9. The audience listened very attentively.

Professor Harlow Lindley of Earlham College, has given a series of three addresses on the last three Sabbath evenings at the West Richmond meeting, Indiana, on the history of the Society of Friends.

On February 8, 1916, Anson and Melissa Cox of Greenleaf, Idaho, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Their many friends and relatives are asked to send remembrances, at least a postcard, on that date.

The Board of Education of the Five Years' meeting met in Chicago last week in connection with the annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges, of which President R. L. Kelly of Earlham College is Chairman.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation holiday greetings from Edwin McGrew, pastor at Whittier, California, which are in the form of an original poem which was addressed to the congregation at Whittier and others.

The American Friend extends warmest congratulations to the editor and management of "The Congregationalist and Christian World," of Boston, which with its first edition of the year celebrated its one hundredth anniversary. It is one of the best religious journals which comes to this office and its anniversary edition was a model issue.

The National Institute of Social Science has just issued a bulletin of two hundred and fifty pages, containing among other things a somewhat extended account of the activities of President R. L. Kelly of Earlham College in connection with the Association of American Colleges, the Council of Church Boards of Education, the Indiana Bible Study Plan and the Religious Education Association.

The Wheat Yield Tells the Story
of Western Canada's Rapid Progress

The heavy crops in Western Canada have caused new records to be made in the handling of grains by railroads. For while the movement of these heavy shipments has been wonderfully rapid, the resources of the different roads, despite enlarged equipments and increased facilities, have been strained as never before, and previous records have thus been broken in all directions. The largest Canadian wheat shipments through New York ever known are reported for the period up to October 15th, upwards of four and a quarter million bushels being exported in less than six weeks, and this was but the overflow of shipments to Montreal, through which point shipments were much larger than to New York.

Yields as high as 60 bushels of wheat per acre are reported from all parts of the country; while yields of 45 bushels per acre are common.

Thousands of American farmers have taken part in this wonderful production. Land prices are still low and free homestead lands are easily secured in good localities, convenient to churches, schools, markets, railways, etc.

There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

Write for illustrated pamphlet, reduced railroad rates and other information to
G. W. Aird, 512 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.
Canadian Government Agent.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

FEBRUARY 6.

Topic—"Fidelity and Force," Matt. 25; 31-46. (Consecration meeting).

In this chapter the evangelist gives a series of parables on the general subject of judgment. Being a Jew who was writing to the Jews, he chose illustrations most familiar to them.

In the first he teaches the lesson of preparedness and punctuality by the story of the ten virgins; in the second, he urges the necessity of religious industry, by the story of the talents; and in the third, he shows most vividly that conduct and not profession, is the true basis for Christ's approval, by the great Judgment.

It is not making a loud profession in meeting that counts, but a deep sincere living. There are some people who are at their best when before the public. There are others who can make the best showing in the quiet common places of life. The first group always runs the risk of being called insincere and selfish while the latter may be pitied because they are so little appreciated.

True character is built by giving attention to many phases of life. The primal postulate for character building is a willing subjection of one's whole personality to Jesus Christ. Jesus claims for himself not only authority to lay down rules of conduct, but to judge the motive back of deeds. Little more than good habits will be formed by daily setting before oneself a certain number of good tasks. One may become a Pythagorean in self examination. With stoical attitude he may bravely endure temptation, or he may perform certain commendable feats for a reward and still not attain unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

The joy that usually comes from the consciousness of having done a piece of work well is multiplied greatly when one knows that such work is worth while. Can anything be more desirable than following the Son of Man? What joy comes from working with Him to give food to the hungry, to bring health to the sick, to clean up unhygienic homes, to teach boys and girls to play, to feed ones mind on the best literature, to touch men's souls with the invincible power of love.

Jesus reveals to the world a social service, glorified by a passionate love. One serves Jesus Christ not because it is a nice thing to do, but because He calls one, and his call is a challenge to manhood and womanhood.

Jesus Christ is waiting to be reincarnated in the lives of professing Christians. Let our prayer be: "Oh Lord, may we reveal thee and thee alone."

The man that has begun to live more seriously within, begins to live more simply without.—Phillips Brooks.

DIED

Jenkins—Frances C. Jenkins, daughter of Luke and Rhoda Wilds, was born at New Castle, Indiana, April 13,

1826, and died at the home of her daughter, Stella F. Jenkins, Kansas City, Mo., December 14, 1915. She was recorded a minister in the Friends church by Wabash Monthly Meeting, Indiana, April 10, 1855. Funeral services were held in Friends meeting house at Kansas City conducted by the pastor, Arthur Jones, and on December 17 at Wabash, Indiana, conducted by the pastor, A. J. Furstenberger. She was laid to rest in Friends cemetery at Wabash beside her husband, Benjamin F. Jenkins, who died twenty-six years ago. An appreciation of her life will appear later in The American Friend, written by her daughter, Stella F. Jenkins. (Note—This notice would have appeared earlier, but a similar one was apparently lost between the editorial office and the office of the printer at Urbana, Ohio.)

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5 1/2%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
 Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
 Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY

Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books
 The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ching China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.
 Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
 T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
 J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
 I. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
 DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
 SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
 J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
 WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
 JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
 J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
 Asa S. Wing
 Marriott C. Morris
 Robert M. Janney
 Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
 Frederic H. Strawbridge
 John Thompson Emien
 Morris R. Bockius
 Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
 George Wood
 Charles H. Harding
 J. Whitall Nicholson
 Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII, No. 5.

SECOND MONTH 3, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV, No. 5.

"Blind Leaders"

FROM "THE VENTURER," JANUARY, 1916.

It was said of the saints that they should judge the world. But the tables have been turned, and to-day, the saints are in the dock and the world sits in judgment. The verdict is not in doubt. The saints have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Even the most passionate supporter of the European War says bluntly that it happened because of the failure of the Church to get its business done in the world. From this judgment there is no appeal or ground of appeal. No doubt there are extenuating circumstances which might fairly be pleaded, but they are not sufficient to procure an acquittal. They may induce a measure of lenity in some of the judges; but they cannot alter the substance of the verdict. By this time of day the Church should have made war unthinkable. There are some of the judges whose verdict may be written off right away as impertinent and vicious. They are people who are glad to have any kind of stick to beat the Church with; any old cudgel will do, be it stout enough. With them we need not concern ourselves. They are always with us. But the Christian Church will do itself an unspeakable hurt if it fail to face frankly and honestly the judgment of sober and balanced minds at the present time. Instinctively and surely the conviction has established itself in a multitude of minds that the Church has not tilled its field as it should have done, else the world had not been engulfed in this terrible and irreparable catastrophe. * * * The way of the world is judgment and retribution; the way of God is judgment and mercy, and this is the way which the Church is in the world to proclaim and to translate into living actuality. It is the way revealed once for all in the Cross. To endorse the way of war is to go back upon the way of Calvary. The two methods are mutually exclusive.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

A FEW "DO NOTS."

Do not send news matter or contributed articles to the office at Urbana, Ohio. The editorial office is at Richmond, Indiana.

Do not send money for the printed proceedings of the Men's Conference or for Charles M. Woodman's book to the Urbana office. Send all such moneys to the office at Richmond, Indiana.

Do not forget to send the exact name of the person receiving the paper, when money is sent on subscription, to the office at Urbana, Ohio.

Do not forget to send the name of the old postoffice as well as the name of the new one, to the office at Urbana, Ohio, when asking for a change of address.

Do not send copy for advertisements to the office at Urbana. The office at Richmond, Indiana, is the advertising office.

Only correspondence about subscriptions should be sent to the Urbana office. All other correspondence should be sent to the office at Richmond, Indiana.

How blessed it is to be old!

And to sit near the sunset gate

Ready to enter the portals,

But willing with patience to wait;

Knowing that safely garnered

Are all the sheaves of the years,

That ahead are the glad reunions

And behind, all the struggles and tears.

—Anna W. Allen.

A Bit of Shop Talk

The manager wants a few words with the readers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND, especially pastors and all others who are charged with the responsibility of caring for local meetings of Friends.

The first Sabbath in March has been set aside for past three years as "American Friend Day." This day falls on March 5 this year. Probably there are some Friends who do not see the importance of setting aside a particular day for the consideration of this periodical of the church.

Few Friends question the propriety of having a special day for Foreign Missions, or Church Extension, or for the Young People, or for Education, or for Bible Schools, etc. Probably no other department of the church, however, has so much to do with the shaping of denominational plans and policies as the publication department, and no other agency is in position to do so much toward arousing the interest of the membership at large in all the work of the church as is THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

The literature of the church, and especially its publications, have to do directly with the building up of the Kingdom of God, and from our standpoint there should be no hesitancy in making this the special object of consideration and prayer at a Sabbath morning meeting for worship.

Since the first of January just three letters have been received at THE AMERICAN FRIEND office, calling in question the policy of THE AMERICAN FRIEND, and these have come from opposite extremes of theology. Within that period probably not fewer than a hundred letters have been received, expressing appreciation of THE AMERICAN FRIEND, many of them appearing almost extravagant in their statements.

Because of a lack of patronage, however, THE AMERICAN FRIEND has not been able to do for the church all that it might reasonably be expected to do. Now that henceforth we are to have twenty pages each week, the editorial management will naturally have larger opportunity to minister more directly to all the varied interests of the church. This fact will only serve to emphasize the responsibility upon all Friends' families to patronize this paper, for, to the extent that THE AMERICAN FRIEND is able to minister to the needs of the church will every family be losing out, where the weekly messages of the paper are not received and read.

A Special Offer

In connection with the observance of "American Friend Day" on March 5, announcement should be made that all new subscribers can receive the paper for the balance of the year for $1.00 as a trial subscription. Upon every new subscription taken at this price we will allow a commission of fifteen cents to persons who will canvass the community and secure these subscriptions. This canvass should follow immediately "American Friend Day." As a result of this activity we have set a goal to be reached by the addition of a sufficient number of subscriptions to put our mailing list at the 7,000 mark. This is the time of all times for a concerted effort to be made in every Friends' meeting in America to reach this goal. With twenty pages of reading matter being sent out each week, there is a basis of a successful appeal for subscriptions which has not existed before.

THE MANAGER.

Gifts of the Heart

Gifts from the hand are silver and gold, but the heart gives that which neither silver nor gold can buy. To be full of goodness, full of cheerfulness, full of sympathy, full of hope, causes one to carry with him blessings of which he is himself as unconscious as a lamp is in its own shining. Such a one moves on human life as stars move on dark seas to bewildered mariners; as the sun wheels, bringing all the seasons with him from the south.—Beecher.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII, No. 5.

SECOND MONTH 3, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV, No. 5.

Meeting the World Crisis

Thoughtful men and women everywhere are agreed that the world is in a crisis of vastly more than ordinary significance. Not alone because of the great war, which in its consequences will touch every continent and practically every people, but by virtue of the transformations going on in the hitherto heathen world through the leadership of missions and of commerce, mankind as a whole is being brought face to face with new and changing conditions and is experiencing the vitalizing influence of a new spirit in world relationships and diplomacy.

The close interdependence of the nations is emphasizing as nothing has done before the far reaching character of the irrepressible conflict that is being waged within the human family. The inevitable struggle between good and evil, between flesh and spirit, that since the days of creation has characterized individual personality and which has found exemplification in both neighborhood and national life, is now suddenly revealed as a universal conflict of the race. The philosophy of Bernhardt that "war is godlike," the appeal to violence which racial ambition and national aggrandizement are making in almost every land, the claims of materialism as a standard of measurement for all humanitarian problems, are all a challenge to the best in Christianity as embodied in the teachings of its Founder.

Henceforth the religion of Jesus is guaranteed the whole world as the field of its operations. In the broad arena of international relationships the Christian faith is to be tested. Not only must it meet the challenge of the war spirit, but through the spirit of love, typified by the enduring sacrifices of the missionaries of the Cross, it must answer the deepest questionings of the human heart and win the nations to a practical acceptance of the doctrine of human brotherhood. Henceforth Christianity must be regarded as a world power; it must speak a universal language; it must advocate the impelling claims of humanity everywhere against every spirit of wickedness and oppression that threatens the advancement of our common civilization.

In the face of such conditions the church can no longer afford to be provincial, nor must it dare to be self-centered or heedless of the world's great need. It must have an answer to the questions that will be on the lips of the men as they return from the trenches, just as it must answer the pleadings of those who are reaching out imploring hands from the darkness of paganism, groping for leadership into the light. No less must it prove to be potential as a constructive force when civilization begins again to rebuild from the ashes of the great conflagration. The blind have been indeed leading the blind in the affairs of the world, but it is now the province of the Christian church to rescue them from the ditch into which they have all fallen. The world cannot be reconstructed except according to the principles of righteousness. The moral law based upon the teachings enunciated by Jesus must become the controlling spirit of international law.

For what end was Jesus crucified? Was it that a chance individual now and then might find plentiful redemption, and shall the church be satisfied with such a fruition resulting from the tragedy on Calvary? Did Jesus die upon the cross that nationalism might thrive as the acme of man's loyalty and his deepest interest? In no other light does the Cross have its fullest significance except that its sacrifice was all inclusive for the redemption of the whole world from the taint of sin and from its proneness to live according to the flesh.

The crisis that is upon the world is the direct consequence of sin, of unrighteousness, of being debtor to the flesh, and it is because the world is full of such consequences, that Jesus came. His coming was just as potential for the distractions of this twentieth century as it was for the bondage of that first century. The world-wide conflict that is on between truth and error, between righteousness and unrighteousness, between un-Christian philosophies and the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount will find its completion in the revelation of Jesus Christ as the Savior, not alone of individuals and of nations, but of the world. Obliterate the stories of Bethlehem and Calvary and Olivet from the world and the Bernhardis will become its dictators.

Let the church open wide its tabernacles for revivalistic endeavor, and let it keep its altars bright for the pledging of sinners to sainthood, but let it be striking no less for purer politics, better government, cleaner life, purer society, more honest business, juster industry, more neighborly living, more brotherly dealings and for a more righteous internationalism. As President Wilson recently said, "The church must bring men to God—must lead in the task of building God's kingdom in the earth."

The world's crisis is the church's opportunity; and no less is it the church's obligation. For unless Christianity can rescue and deliver humanity in a crisis like this, it is a crisis without hope.

Conference in Faith and Order

By JAMES WOOD.

In the year 1910 a proposition was made at the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States to ascertain what steps, if any, could be taken to bring about a closer union among the various denominations of Christians throughout the world, and a commission was appointed to promote the desired object. That commission has prosecuted its work with great earnestness so that an interest was awakened in many of the denominations to endeavor to ascertain what may be possible in the broadest view of the whole situation.

The Commission of the Episcopal Church sent an invitation to all the Protestant denominations in the United States and Canada to send delegates to a conference to be held at Garden City, near New York, on January 4, 5, 6 and 7, to consider how a world conference on Faith and Order may be convened and how its work may be undertaken. This conference was duly held, with representatives of thirty-eight denominations in attendance. The Executive Committee of the Five Years Meeting appointed five delegates to represent the Society of Friends, and of these Rufus M. Jones, David M. Edwards and James Wood attended. The conference was unique in its purpose and remarkable in its spirit. The keynote of the gathering was "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

It must be admitted that during the five years this movement has been in the hands of the Episcopal Church there has been a feeling, sometimes quite freely expressed, that church union would be easily accomplished in the view of the Episcopalians, if all would come into the "Historic Church" and forsake the differences that for two or more centuries have divided them.

If any delegates brought any such suspicion to the conference it soon left their minds, for the conviction was established that the Episcopal Church is absolutely sincere in its proposals. The spokesman for that denomination was Bishop Boyd Vincent, of Cincinnati, who stated, with convincing earnestness, "this movement is undertaken under the leadership of the Divine Spirit and the Episcopal Church will follow that leadership wherever it may go and to whatever consequences may ensue."

The practical conclusions of the conference were the following:—

The delegates of each denomination shall appoint a member of a council, with the larger denominations appointing one additional member for each half-million membership. The delegation in the council of each denomination shall prepare a statement of the articles of faith which it holds in common with the rest of Christendom and also a statement of what it holds to be its special trust and the ground upon which it stands apart from other denominations.

The council shall then appoint a Board of Advisers to examine all these statements, with a view of formulating a statement upon which all agree and also a statement of their differences. Investigation shall then be made to ascertain how far these differences may be harmonized.

When all this work is done the council is authorized to call a world conference to take such action as then may be found to be practicable.

Friends are well aware that there are greater difficulties in the way of our denomination finally joining in the proposed union than exist with any other branch of the church. Practically all others practice the so-called ordinances of water baptism and the outward communion and nearly all have some form of ordination of its clergy. The question of "orders" will be found one of the most difficult to adjust between all these. So important is the outward communion considered by them that they all speak of their denomination as their "communion."

If Friends proceed further in this movement it will be incumbent upon us to state with the utmost clearness that we lay especial emphasis upon baptism; that there is "One Lord, one Faith, one Baptism" and that without this baptism there cannot be spiritual life and union with God; that we lay great stress upon communion as the means of growth in grace and that it is a spiritual partaking of Jesus Christ by faith; that we believe that our Lord established no outward ordinances to be observed in His church and that He abolished the dispensation of ordinances, nailing them forever to His cross. We must state with equal clearness that the head of the church chooses and qualifies whom He will to be His ministers and that His commission and qualification constitute the only effective ordination. It remains to be seen what place can be found for Friends in the proposed union. Friends will perform a great service if they can obtain a platform broad enough to include them without any compromise of our special principles.

There are some considerations that make it especially easy for Friends to proceed in this matter. We have always believed in the unity of true believers, that there is but one church and that is the church universal, that no branch of this church has a right to claim the name of the whole and, therefore, we have called ourselves a Society in this universal church.

As regards baptism and the supper, others may dispute as to how and by whom they may be administered, while we say to them we believe in baptism and the supper and we leave their administration to the Lord Jesus Christ Himself.

The movement will furnish a most interesting and important study in church organization for the coming years.

Mt. Kisco, N. Y.

All

By W. IRVING KELSEY.

They tell us that in some of the European universities all the students have entered the service of the colors, in others, three-fourths, in others, the majority. Factories have been closed for a lack of operatives. Mothers have surrendered their sons; wives their husbands, and sweethearts their lovers. The nations have poured out their treasure like water and still there is no slackening in the expenditure of incomprehensible sums. A magnificent example of consecration of life and money from the patriot's standpoint!

Two thousand years ago the prophet of the wilderness cried: "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Then the King came and the kingdom was inaugurated with a few followers. He taught these men to pray "thy kingdom come," and sent them out to invite men to enter the kingdom, to live as sons of the Heavenly Father and as brothers to each other. The history of the movement has been a checkered one, but just when it seemed that the time was ripe for an unprecedented forward movement this great war broke out among Christian nations, and seems to have dealt a staggering blow to any such project.

But should not this whole-hearted consecration of the young men of the warring nations be a challenge to the youth of our land to a like consecration to the King of Kings? Is not this lavish expenditure of wealth what he expects for the advancement of His Kingdom? Is there not a suggestion that this is just what He expects in the parables of the treasure hid in a field and of the pearl of great price? These men, Jesus said, sold all they had in order to get the field or the pearl. Is it possible that we, His followers, do not even yet fully appreciate the value of the kingdom of heaven? To the men of His day the Master was uncompromising in His demands. To the rich young ruler He said: "Go sell all that thou hast." "Except a man hate father and mother, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple." To the would-be follower who asked permission to go first and bury his father, the reply of the Master seems almost harsh, but he insisted throughout that the interests of the Kingdom must have first place in a man's life.

These teachings have frequently been used in urging men to accept Christ as their personal Savior, but do they not have a broader application? It was to those who were already His disciples that Jesus said: "Seek first the kingdom of heaven." This was to be the great enterprise of His followers. Too often in despair at the scanty results have they slackened their efforts and turned their thoughts in longing towards a great cataclysmic return of the Master with the feeling that this was the only hope of a lost world. Others are beginning to feel that the bringing into the kingdom of God of the whole world is a task which he actually expects His church to accomplish, and that the work must be done in the same way that He began it two thousand years ago by really living the life of Sonship to God and brotherhood to man, and that in order to do this one must be ready, if needs be, to sacrifice property and even life itself.

In this gospel of the kingdom the world's social, political, economic and religious problems find their solution. As slavery has already been banished from the civilized world, so war, and intemperance, and lust, and economic strife are also to go. Is not this program for the church the biggest and most worth while thing in all the world? It is in the face of this stupendous undertaking; it is with the example of the magnificent consecration of men and money in the old world that the challenge comes to His followers of this generation to give life and wealth and all for the bringing in of His kingdom in the world.

Oskaloosa, Ia.

Laymen's Missionary Secretary

Fred B. Fisher, who accepted the call to become Associate General Secretary of the Interdenominational Laymen's Missionary Movement, assumed his duties on January 1st. For the past three years Mr. Fisher has been the General Secretary of the Methodist Laymen's Missionary Movement, and it was his enthusiastic leadership which brought to pass the national conventions of Methodist men in Indianapolis, Boston and Columbus. A large number of smaller conventions and institutes have been organized and conducted by him. In his new field Mr. Fisher will give special attention to the conference and convention phase of the work. Mr. Fisher has a strong, virile personality, with a burning missionary passion and his messages appeal to the big, earnest type of laymen.

"He loved you and me personally. He died for you and me personally. If there were but one sinner in all the world, and I were that sinner, still Jesus Christ would have loved me and died for me."—Henry Van Dyke.

We would willingly have others perfect, and yet we amend not our own faults.—T. A. Kempis.

Hast thou a friend, visit him often, for thorns and brushwood obstruct the road which no one treads.

Foreign Missions Conference at Garden City

By ROSS A. HADLEY.

The town of Garden City on Long Island lies about twenty-five miles from New York. The trains on the Long Island railway are operated by electricity and a very comfortable ride of forty-five minutes serves to convey one from the great Pennsylvania station in New York to the suburban station at Garden City. In the room at the east end of the ground floor of the Garden City Hotel, nearly two hundred representatives of the foreign missionary boards and societies in the United States and Canada met on the afternoon of January 11th for the opening session of the "Foreign Missions Conference." All of the delegates and visitors to the conference were quartered in the hotel. Sessions continued through morning, afternoon and evening for three full days with a total attendance of 233, of whom 122 were regular delegates and the remainder corresponding members and visitors.

One has best to remember that the mission boards of North America received last year from churches and individuals at home $18,793,990.98, in addition to $4,541,982.36 from native contributions, or a total of $23,335,973.34, and that these organizations are supporting no less than 10,497 foreign missionaries beside more than four times this number of native workers and that they are operating 300 mission hospitals, 600 colleges and training schools, and 23,000 Sunday Schools, to realize what great resources for the advancement of the Kingdom of God were represented in this small conference at Garden City, and to appreciate something of its importance. Some of the sessions were so very interesting that I want to tell you briefly about them. But first, let me add a few more words about the Conference in general.

The recent session was the twenty-third—the first occurred in 1893. In the words of the constitution of the Foreign Missions Conference, the object of the Conference is "the consideration of questions relating to the administration of Foreign Missions" and "the investigation and consideration of matters of practical interest to the participating Boards and Societies." "It is the agent of all the Societies, individually and collectively, for securing information and for promoting the measures that shall conserve the best interests of all." Or, in other words, "the object of the Conference is to foster and promote a true science of missions." The General Secretary of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions has attended the Conference for a number of years and taken an active part in its deliberations. He was unable, however, to be present this year. The Board was represented by the Assistant Secretary and by S. Edgar Nicholson, the editor of THE AMERICAN FRIEND. William C. Taber, of Brooklyn, the chairman of the Africa Field Committee of the Board, was to have attended as a regular delegate, but on account of illness was unable. Charlotte E. Vickers, the president of the Women's Foreign Missionary Union of Friends in America, was in attendance as were also representatives of the Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of Philadelphia.

The topic for Thursday morning was the "Claims of the Unoccupied Areas" of the non-Christian world. A large outline map of the world was hanging over the platform. The speaker, Dr. Charles E. Watson, the Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the United Presbyterian Church, explained that the parts of the map colored red indicated unoccupied fields. In these sections, Christ is not known and no missionaries or other Christians are there to make Him known. We saw huge red areas over Central and Western China, as well as Siam, and tracts of Russian territory in Asia; over large parts of Persia and Arabia; across most of North Africa and parts of Central and South Africa. Even parts of Japan were red and red was the prevailing color of most of the vast island world of the Pacific. We learned, regarding our own hemisphere, that there is no missionary in the northern half of Peru and only 8 ordained missionaries in all of Peru. In Panama there is only one evangelistic missionary speaking Spanish and no Christian worker at all among the millions of Indians in Bolivia. No mission board has any work in Ecuador. In Mexico, there are 3,000,000 unevangelized Indians. In a stirring address, Dr. J. Campbell White declared that upon the Christians of North America rests the responsibility of undertaking at once to send enough missionaries to preach the Gospel to these millions who are at present entirely unreached. He was followed by Dr. Robert E. Speer and Dr. John R. Mott and others. Every delegate, I am sure, felt the force of the appeal for new and greater achievements in the name of Christ, and that, in the words of Dr. Mott, "we say too much in our Board meetings about what we have done and not enough about what we have not done."

Much of the time of the Conference this year was occupied with committee reports. Among the most interesting was the report of the standing committee on the Religious Needs of Anglo-American Communities Abroad. In each of five cities—three in the far East and two in Latin America—where there are good sized communities of English-speaking foreign residents, this committee has made possible the existence of a strong Union Church with an able pastor. Funds for this very important work have been raised partly in this country. Friends traveling abroad have not infrequently attended services in one of these Union Churches in Peking, Kobe, or Yokohama, or in Rio de Janeiro or Mexico City, and have seen the tremendous need among the foreign residents in these cities and the good work being done among them, which is made possible by this committee with Dr. Robert E. Speer as its chairman.

Five years ago, the Foreign Missions Conference organized the "Board of Missionary Preparation." Members of the Board are appointed by the Conference and the Board is responsible to the Conference and reports annually to it. The object of this Board is to find out what preparation is most needed to fit candidates for effective service as foreign missionaries and to encourage the provision for such preparation. During the past year, the Board of Missionary Preparation has enlisted some of the ablest missionary authorities in the United States and Canada in a study of the kind of preparation needed by those who expect to work among followers of any one of five of the great non-Christian religions. For instance, one strong committee is studying the question as to what preparation is needed to enable a missionary to present the Gospel most effectively to Confucianists. Other committees are making similar studies with reference to Buddhists, to Mohammedans, to Hindus, and to Animists. In the course of the report of the Board of Missionary Preparation at Garden City, a brief statement was made by the chairman of each of these sub-committees and some results of their study were given. A full report will be published a few months later. As a result of this work, it will hereafter be possible for missionaries, both before and after going to the field, to secure such a knowledge of the religion prevailing in the country to which they are going and such skill in presenting the Gospel to followers of this religion as will make their work far more effective.

Perhaps the most interesting session of the entire Conference at Garden City was the one when the subject "Missions and the War" was under discussion. Missionaries from the countries now at war have in many cases been obliged to abandon their work, especially in Africa and India. Mission work within the Turkish Empire has had to be largely suspended and most of the missionaries have been occupied chiefly with the relief of the terrible suffering which they are forced to witness all around them. Various speakers cited instances showing the effect of the war upon mission work and showing how missionaries of different societies and nationalities have helped one another and have worked together during these trying times. Dr. John R. Mott told of the extensive work which the Young Men's Christian Association is doing in the military prison camps of the various belligerent countries of Europe where Christian workers are having abundant opportunities for direct evangelistic work and for manifesting the Christian spirit of brotherly service—which is itself one of the most effective ways of preaching Christ to men in deepest need.

At one of the evening sessions, Dr. Wallace But-trick, director of the China Medical Board of the Rockefeller Foundation, spoke of the investigation which his Board has recently made of the medical needs of China. He gave assurance that the China Medical Board is prepared to co-operate heartily with medical missions in China and spoke of the plan which the Board has for establishing at least two first class medical colleges in China for training of Chinese physicians. Every missionary Board, indeed every Christian, must rejoice to know that such great resources are to be thus intelligently used for meeting China's physical needs in the spirit and in the name of Christ.

One session of the Conference was occupied with a review of the plans for the great Congress on Christian Work in Latin America to be held in Panama from the 10th to 20th of February. For over a year, eight strong commissions have been studying eight important phases of the problems confronting the forces of the church of Jesus Christ among the Spanish-speaking peoples of this hemisphere. The reports of these commissions are now completed and in print. Copies are being sent to each delegate to the Conference. In this way, the discussion of the reports during the sessions of the Congress will be more thorough and of far greater value than if the reports were only given verbally or were available for the first time on the floor of the Congress. Sober students of church history and of missions are declaring that this gathering at Panama will have the greatest significance for the future development of Christianity over all the countries of Latin America. We as Friends have cause for deep gratitude over the fact that the problems of the countries where so much of our work lies are now receiving the united study of the greatest Christian statesmen of the present generation.

We left Garden City with greater courage and larger faith, because of the evidence which this Conference gave of the fact that the forces of all Christian churches are working together, on the foreign field and at home, with so great a degree of understanding and active co-operation and that, at a time when the clash of arms is heard the world around, there are so many ties of brotherhood still unbroken, even between members of the warring nations, while the influences which work for peace and good-will are, at least in many lands, more numerous, more active and more powerful than ever.

National Missionary Campaign

A total of 34,325 delegates has been enrolled in twenty-two conventions of the National Missionary Campaign of the Laymen's Missionary Movement between October 12 and December 12. This is approximately 9,000 more registrations than were enrolled in the same cities in a similar campaign six years ago.

Be such a man, live such a life, that if all lives were like yours earth would be a paradise.

The Heritage of Friends

(Extracts from a series of addresses given by William J. Sayers, at Muncie Monthly Meeting, Muncie, Indiana.)

When George Fox came on the scene of action there had been a long period of barrenness. Just now there was a period of religious ferment. Many were seeking truth, some few were finding. Fox sought and found, after having some amusing and serious experiences with religious teachers of the day, whose religion was a closed tradition which had the authority of a creed. They did not deem it even necessary to prove that creed. One was to just swallow it, hook, bait and sinker. All who did not accept this creed were unchurched. Unfortunately there are some few who still feel this way; but their tribe is rapidly decreasing.

Fox showed his courage by going contrary to the customs and he dared to think for himself. It was considered unorthodox to think for yourself in those days of priest-craft. So Fox blazed a path that millions have trod and millions more will follow.

This going against all traditions naturally brought on persecutions. These in turn seemed to bring a great increase to the people called Truth Seekers. Most of these persecutions were undeserved and unusually severe. In fairness to the opposition, we are compelled to say, history being our authority, that some of them were deserved, where persecutions were courted. But I speak of the faithful and true who were cast into prison, not for what they had done, but just for the reason "that they were Quakers." If they could not get any other reason, they would ask a Quaker to take the oath. Of course he wouldn't, therefore, he was sent to prison, and to describe a prison of those days is to beggar any language or description of insanitation.

Quakers won many friends because they were fighting the greatest of all fights, soul and religious liberty, first in England and then in this country. A Friend would never leave a jail by compromising his convictions. However, Friends gained rapidly under hardships and waned under the soft time, demonstrating that power is usually purchased at the cost of sacrifice.

Of course, our manner of worship was not understood by many then, and I fear is misunderstood by many today. They could not understand the WHY of silence, nor why we had no clergy as a class. It was foreign to their thought and teaching, what we meant by the royal priesthood of believers. Spirit baptism and the close communion that we believed in was grossly misunderstood. They did not seem to see that we were trying to make a distinction between Churchanity and Christianity. Then, too, our attitude toward war brought consternation to those who advocated it. Sounds rather modern, too, doesn't it? Then, too, there was our testimony against using the body as a display of excessively fine raiment and costly jewels. Our use of the plain language brought ridicule and abuse.

Enough of this phase, else I will be misunderstood, for I desire to devote my time more fully to the fight for soul and religious liberty, especially in this country. The Pilgrims and Puritans came to this continent for religious liberty. But one of the first laws made in Massachusetts was that no man could vote unless he belonged to a particular church. In Connecticut, if a man sheltered a Quaker over night he was fined five pounds, a lot of money then. And if he saw a Quaker roaming at large anywhere and did not go at once six miles, if need be, to notify the magistrate, he was put to death.

Hither came Protestants, persecuted by Mary; Catholics persecuted by Elizabeth; Presbyterians by Charles; Episcopalians by Parliament, and the Quakers persecuted by them all. Allies in one thing at least. Yet, when the Friends had a chance to turn the tables on these in Pennsylvania and New Jersey they gave all full religious liberty.

Our fathers were put in the stocks in public places, publicly whipped, branded on the cheeks, tongues bored with hot irons, and then, if they still had the brazen assurance, after these gentle and humane measures of reform (prompted by the Prince of Peace?) to remain stubborn and still insisted on preaching that God is love, they were cast into prison, there to remain at the pleasure of the court or to be cruelly put to death.

Quaker women (always proverbial for their modesty) were searched for witch marks, as the court called them, and if these were found (what they were none knoweth to this day) these women were put to death. Quaker children were torn from the arms of their frantic parents and sold as slaves to the Spanish planters in the Barbadoes.

Archbishop Hughes and then afterwards Cardinal Gibbons said that "Roman Catholicism stood for religious liberty first in this country." The truth would have been stated better if it had been said that she stood for a sort of "religious toleration" in Maryland, which is a decidedly different thing from religious liberty. No Puritan or son of a Puritan, either in the flesh or theology, has any right to say one word against the church of Rome because she persecuted for religion. He who throws stones at her must at least have clean hands. John Robinson defended religious persecution, saying that it was the magistrates' duty to punish heretics.

Again, the Friends were the first to put away from themselves human slavery. Thus they freed themselves. Then, with a voice that could not be stifled, they advocated absolute religious liberty.

Who, more than the Friends, could advocate absolute religious liberty? Had they not been imprisoned, beaten, hanged for it? Soul liberty was their slogan. Before this you read of "liberties," "chartered rights" and "toleration," which is baneful, or, at least, a bad compromise; but never before of "soul liberty;" this to come, not as a concession, but as a right belonging to every man. These early Friends could say by experience that religion was an affair of the heart between a man's soul and God.

"It came slowly and in fervent birth-pains but yet it came,
Not as we hoped, but what are we?
Above our broken dreams and plans
God lays with wiser hand than man's
The corner stone of Liberty."—Whittier.

Cornwallis and Cornplanter were gone, but the hierarchy and the Presbytery remained, and so we still had among us the skilled hands and willing hearts necessary for the most horrible form of tyranny (I mean religious tyranny).

Other forms of tyranny arouse patriotism and we destroy them or they destroy themselves, but religious tyranny destroys the nature of the soul itself, makes it a false and lying soul; in fact, kills it, and though killing it, unhappily leaves it still a soul. Other tyrannies say "thou shalt not speak," or "thou shalt not act," but religious tyranny draws its cold, selfish fingers across the brow and says, "thou shalt not THINK." When a man does not think religiously, he is dead.

We now have our "Bill of Rights." The first amendment to the constitution was, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press." There it was at last—I have often hoped that some of the quiet heroes and heroines knew when religious liberty became the supreme law of the land. This is the thing that makes us "the land of the free and the home of the brave." Religious liberty will produce political liberty. Those who believe that all men are equal before one another will soon believe they are before God. Or reverse it and it holds true, for this rule works both ways, we think.

Human soul liberty! How grandly it moves onward! They fought and suffered for this! They won it for us. At a great cost they left us a goodly and Godly heritage. Are we, or are we not, going to honor the faith of our fathers? Can we afford to go back just now when the eyes of the world are focussed upon us, wondering what we are going to do concerning our peace principles? Never did we have such an opportunity to advance religious liberty and the cause of the Prince of Peace.

Must those who are coming to us to be fed with the sincere things of the kingdom be satisfied with the dead, dry ashes of formalism? Pray unto the Father, in the name of His Son Jesus, that we may have the inward light that will cause us to be right within, so that we will act right without.

If we are faithless (and may God forbid), some future Childe Harold, with high genius, will trace the cause and progress of our everlasting overthrow. Then how low will the mighty have fallen! Hence let our constant fervent prayer be:—

"Spirit of freedom on,
Oh, pause not in thy flight
Till every clime is won;
To worship in thy light,
Still onward be thy cry
Thy banner on the blast

And as thou rusheth by Evil shall shrink aghast.
On! till thy name is known
Throughout the people's earth.
On! till thou reignest alone
Man's heritage by birth.
On! till every vale,
And where the mountains rise,
The inner light of liberty
Shall kindle every skies."

Great cost it was to our parents. Did they die in vain? Suffer in vain? We are their heirs. We are trustees of the days to come. They have given us all this. What will we do with it? Will we add thereto? What will we give in return?

LETTER FROM GUATEMALA

About five years ago the missionary said to herself, as a man staggered into her presence through the broad door of the mission, "It is useless to talk to that man about the Gospel." He sat down, and in the afternoon and evening the Gospel's light streamed in in sufficient measure to rescue the poor penitent from satan's dominion. In six weeks he returned with this testimony: "No soy como era" (I am not as I was). Upon this testimony and the work of the new soul winner has grown our splendid work among the Indians in this section. Upon this foundation was the work laid and many Indians, both men and women, now say, in tribute to the power of the Gospel, "We are not as we were."

In their palm leaf tabernacle we have now held our third annual meeting. The chosen site is a most picturesque one, in a rolling pasture among the hills near the springs that there abound. Here the assembly room is ample, with its backless benches and simple pulpit, the dirt floor covered with pine needles, which make a most wholesome carpet. Here are buildings (?) made of palm and fodder, which serve for dining hall and kitchen and cottages for the visitors and missionaries. At night the tabernacle is gracefully hung with hammocks and here the sound of song and guitar is heard till a late hour. The meals are simple—one dish of soup, with some meat or vegetable within, and corn cakes; coffee or water are served also. We understood one of the Indians in large part would donate a calf for the occasion, but we feel the maternal ancestor of the coveted calf had been led to the slaughter instead. We were sorry to find both meat and vegetables undercooked, but to all there was a Central American savor that is found in no other land.

A sight not to be forgotten was the long row of Indian women, in their two-piece costume, bending over their stone mills, grinding out corn for bread—like the wash of the beach, back and forth, in regular motion. We shall consider it one of life's sweet privileges to have met the Indian women, with their soft voices and gentle ways—to have noticed their silent service and simple surrender to the law of the Gospel. God bless them all! The two chiefs of this occasion were Estaben and Fernando. They provided, took general control, ate at the last table with their wives, went with the younger braves for wood, which they brought on their backs, manifesting splendid generalship from the first gracious welcome to the last grateful goodbye. In the midst of one of these busiest days we saw these two men, chairmen of the business committee, on their faces in a palm cottage in earnest petition as intercessors, asking God for certain things that yet they desired. May their tribe increase!

An early morning prayer meeting was well attended. The preaching, morning, afternoon and night, was in the power of the Spirit. Meetings often closed with all in prayer, praying aloud, with no thought of confusion. God was greatly honored therein. Twenty-four sought Jesus. Sweetest victory prevailed and the power of the Most High filled the place. The backslider came home with rejoicing and the marvelous and unexpected conversions were the joy of angels as well as men. The common verdict was "answered prayer."

Some Facts About the Guatemalan Indian

Sixty per cent of the population of the republic is Indian. These are divided into nineteen tribes, with various dialects to a tribe. They have no written language and the large majority of them do not understand Spanish. They are a peaceful, honest, docile and a cleanly people, not warlike, but agricultural, not nomadic, but semi-civilized. They are of brown color, black hair and eyes, low foreheads, without prominent cheek bones. They have kind, pleasant and often handsome faces. They are below medium height, squarely built, small hands and feet. They are a social race, traveling in companies, fond of laughing and talking among themselves, but silent and stolid in the presence of a white man. They successfully guard themselves against surprise, admiration or wonder. Both men and women are burden bearing. Some men carry two hundred pounds. Everything is carried on the backs of this oppressed people, the maximum price being thirty cents a day.

Many children are born to them, but die. They are a race of small families.

The Indian is dying of drink. For liquor they give potatoes and corn to the Ladinos or the Spanish-speaking population. Apart from the Ladinos they are found at their best. They are a chaste people, with few vices. Very, very few can read Spanish. They are easy prey to the covetous priest, who says, take the Ladinos but give me the Indian. The costume of the women is gay. She wears about six yards of coarse cotton cloth for her skirt, wrapped around her. Her white waist has a large, bright, embroidered collar and her chain of coins and beads is heavy around her neck. Her bonnet and shawl are the same wide, coarse piece of gingham (?) and she is well dressed, without pin or button about her. I may correct myself, however, here and say that sometimes her bonnet exceeds in size and profusion the rarest dream of any fashion devotee in the homeland. The frame work of her bonnet is a basket and this is covered, not with dead birds, nor half birds, nor wings, nor tail feathers, but the real thing, alive, with no imitation. The elite milliner in Paris could not arrange the bill of the pigeon to rest on the rim of the hat (?) as this woman of the wilds has done, nor tie the feet of a turkey together to form so graceful a drape on the opposite side.

Among these primitive people each town has its own industry. This one makes woolen goods, blankets and such, that town weaves cotton goods. The men of another town are the cargo carriers; here they work at pottery, there they burn charcoal. In the remaining towns they hew out lumber or garden or raise wheat. Religiously they are lost tribes, a sad commentary of burning shame upon an ecclesiastical hierarchy that for centuries has purposely kept them in ignorance of rightful inheritance, fleecing them in body, soul and spirit.

One of their customs is to kiss the hand of their supposed superiors, and the writer, though having her hand kissed a number of times, never became accustomed to it. She looks upon them in their long train of wretchedness and sin and blackness of darkness with a feeling of uncontrollable pity and compassion, knowing that somewhere is a people more fortunate, enlightened, blessed, happy, civilized, who are these poor creatures' debtors.

"True freedom is to share
All the chains our brothers wear,
And with heart and hand to be Earnest to make others free."

R. ESTIER SMITH.

Chiquimula, Guatemala.

Safeguarding the Indian

It is quite evident that government officials charged with the care of the Indians have a proper appreciation of the sacred duty which has devolved upon them. The following statement is taken from an address by Cato Sells, Commissioner on Indian Affairs, and the subject matter has been covered in an address to superintendents and other employees of the United States Indian service. He says:

"It is our chief duty to protect the Indian's health and to save him from premature death. Before we educate him, before we conserve his property, we should save his life. If he is to be perpetuated we must care for the children. We must stop the tendency of the Indian to diminish in number and restore a condition that will insure his increase. Every Indian hospital bed, not necessarily occupied by those suffering from disease or injury should be available for the mother in childbirth. It is of importance that we begin by re-establishing the health and constitution of Indian children. Education and protection of property are highly important, but everything is secondary to the basic condition which makes for the perpetuation of the race."

THE HIGHER LIFE

A Prayer

By LEVI GREGORY.

Lord, To know Thy will I'm asking,
In my self I'm not complete,
So before Thee now I'm bowing,
Humbly at Thy blessed feet.

Give me, Lord, a brighter vision
Of Thy sweet and lovely face,
That I may with more precision,
Occupy and fill my place.

Help me, Master, in my serving,
Both to know and do Thy will,
Till I hear Thy sweet voice whisper,
" 'Tis enough, child, Peace, Be still."

Oakland, Calif.

Pray More

The great lack of our life is that we do not pray more. And there is no failure so disastrous or criminal as this. It is very difficult to account for it. If, in all times of discouragement and vicissitudes we could have access to one of the wisest and noblest of our fellow creatures, or to some venerated departed saint, or to the guardian angel deputed to attend our steps, how strong and brave we should become! Whatever our needs, we would at once seek His august presence and obtain His counsel and assistance.

How extraordinary is our behavior, then, with respect to prayer, and that we make so little of our opportunities of access into the presence of our Father, in whom wisdom, power and love blend perfectly, and who is always willing to hear us—nay, is perpetually urging us to come. "This is the confidence that we have in Him, that, if we ask according to His will, He heareth us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desire of Him."—Vanguard.

Holiness

"Be ye holy, for I am holy, saith tthe Lord." If we have Christ in us, we have holiness, for he is holy. To be holy is to be clean. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin," and makes us holy. And why should it be an incredible thing to abide in him, or to be holy and remain holy?

The great mystery is that it is His holiness that makes us holy, and not our own. "Why look ye so earnestly on us," says Peter, "as though by our own power and holiness we had made this man to walk." He chastens us that we might be "partakers of His holiness." O ye saints of His, give thanks at the remembrance of His holiness. "Wherefore holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling." "Lift up holy hands without wrath or doubting." "Be ye holy in all manner of conversation." "And he that is holy, let him be holy still."—Ex.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE

There's Another Side

"There's another side," said the minister's wife, softly.

"How do you know?" asked the visitor who had told the discreditable little tale, strictly in confidence, as she had herself learned it in the bosom of the Wednesday afternoon sewing circle. The minister's wife had not been present, and it was only fair that she should be put right about this family of newcomers in the parish. Some things had come to the ears of the sewing circle that were not—well—not exactly right.

"There's another side," repeated the minister's wife, not so softly this time. In fact, there was a noticeable little ring of indignation in her tone, which died out in a sort of wondering pity as she noticed the challenging look of her caller. "You're glad there is another side, aren't you? Why, of course you are! And, you see, I know all about it!"

"You weren't at the meeting!" said the other, stiffly. "If you had been, you—"

"No, I was there—at the house! And I saw—I saw—Oh, Mrs. Babbitt! If you could have seen what I saw!"

"I saw, too—with my own eyes! That daughter of theirs in an opium—"

"She isn't their daughter—not any relation; not even a friend or a friend's daughter; just a poor girl who had been sick so long and so terribly that the doctors themselves had made her a victim of the opium habit. And they have given up their home—their very lives—to it. They don't say a word about it. I just found it out—with the help of the doctor."

The visitor rose suddenly—almost unceremoniously. For a moment the hostess looked troubled and aghast. Had she spoken too sharply, discourteously, even? Her mind fled back over the interview as she faltered:

"You are not going yet. You—Oh, you aren't offended at anything I've said?"

"Yes, I'm going. Offended—I? I'm going round to see all our ladies, every single one of them!"

"And tell them—"

The minister's wife held her breath for the answer. One may be very bold, but it sometimes means a great deal to offend "the ladies."

"And tell them," said the caller, gathering her wraps about her, "that beautiful 'other side'!"

"Oh!" breathed the minister's wife, gratefully, "And tell them, won't you, that there always is another side—always—always! And it is our Christian business to try and find it."—Zion's Herald.

"Trouble"

"Now, Johnny," said the teacher, "if you had six pennies and Charlie had four, and you took his and put them to yours, what would that make?"

"Trouble."—London Evening Standard.

WITH THE CHILDREN.

The Magic Word

CHARLES IRVIN JUNKIN.

There's the dearest little fairy
That comes to visit me,
Although she's rather taller
Than a fairy ought to be.

Besides, she's really chubby,
And she has no "fairy feet,"
And I never saw her flying,
Though she's mighty nice and sweet.

But I'm sure she is a fairy,
And not a humming-bird,
Because it's only fairies
That have the Magic Word!

And she can do such wonders,
Although she has no wings,
She simply has to say IT,
And get a lot of things!

Ice-cream sometimes, and candy,
A ride around the town.
A brand-new Sunday bonnet,
Or a very dainty gown.

The sweetest kiss from Mother.
And her Daddy's tightest squeeze—
I tell you it's like fairies
When Betty whispers "Please!"
—Little Folks Monthly.

Keeps For the Children.

These "keep" texts are all in the Bible. Find them and learn them, and so make them yours.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

"Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile."

"Keep thee far from a false matter."

"He that keepeth his mouth, keepeth his life."

"Take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently."

"Little children, keep yourselves from idols."

"My son, keep thy father's commandments."

"My son, * * * keep sound wisdom and discretion."—Epworth Herald.

Cancel the Unkind Words

Some of the older boys and girls have doubtless studied cancellation in school. But there is another kind of cancellation that can be used by boys and girls of all ages. For example, two boys were speaking of another boy:

"He is so slow in games," said one.

"Yes," replied the other, "but he always plays fair."

"He is so stupid in school," said the first boy.

"But he always studied hard," answered the second.

Thus, you see, every unkind word spoken by the first boy was canceled by a kind word from the second. Suppose that the next time we hear an unkind word we try to cancel it by putting a kind one in its place.—Apples of Gold.

Whose Dog Was It?

A man was once treating a dog very cruelly. Mr. Robert Louis Stevenson, who has become famous as a great writer, interfered and rebuked the man for his cruelty.

"You have no right to interfere," said the man angrily, "it is not your dog."

"No," answered Mr. Stevenson. "But it is God's dog, and I am here to protect it."

Let us all remember that every living creature belongs to our heavenly Father, and let us be careful never to abuse cats or dogs or birds or any other of His creatures."—Exchange.

How a Boy Won

One of the most noted men in this country is Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and the story of his rise to fame and fortune will interest every boy.

This story is told by an engineer for whom Mr. Schwab, as a boy, carried the chain. Everybody knows how Mr. Schwab began life as a grocer's clerk at Braddock. Next he carried a chain at Homestead, and later was a draughtsman in the Carnegie works. While holding that place young Schwab came under the notice of Captain William R. Jones, who was general manager of the Carnegie plant, and whose name was synonymous with everything good and manly. Captain Jones was killed at Homestead by accident some twenty years ago.

The story is that Captain Jones at that time needed the services of an expert draughtsman. He applied to the head of the draughting department for a man, asking for the best man in the place.

"I have no best man," said the chief, "they are all good."

Captain Jones went away. The next day an order was issued that to complete a certain piece of work, all of the draughtsmen should work two hours overtime each day for several weeks without pay. All the draughtsmen grumbled except one man. Captain Jones came along the next day and said to the chief of the draughting department: "How do the men like that order?"

"They don't like it, and all are grumbling except one man," was the reply.

"Who is that man?" asked Captain Jones.

"Schwab."

"Give me Schwab," said Captain Jones. From that day the young draughtsman's success began.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

A Small Boy's Problem.

I wonder how I'd like it,

And I wonder who I'd be,

Supposing I was somebody else

And somebody else was me!

I wonder, I just wonder,

What boy I'd like to be—

Supposing I didn't like him

When I found that he was me!

—St. Nicholas.

JUNIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By LILLIAN E. HAYES.

The training of the boys and girls along lines of Christian teaching has always been a matter of concern to the church. Jewish children were educated in the church. Josephus says. "If you ask a Jew, concerning any matter concerning the law he can more easily explain it than tell his own name; since we learn it from the first beginning of intelligence, it is, as it were, graven on our souls."

Child life in the Bible represents a constant growth. "Samuel grew and the Lord was with him." Of John the baptist, we read—"He grew and waxed strong in spirit." The same was said of the Lord Jesus.

The training of boys and girls should be in Christian homes. But only about one-fourth of homes are Christian. What is being done for the other three-fourths? They must be trained for Christ elsewhere, if they are trained at all. The Sunday School naturally presents itself as one of the chief and most important modern methods of Christian training.

The incalculable value of the Sunday School can not be over-estimated, even if some schools do teach sacred history and geography more often than give a personal application of personal religion. Heated discussions on the particular kind of fish that swallowed Jonah or the kind of tree Zaccheus climbed, often take the time and the teacher forgets to reason about temperance, righteousness, formation of good habits and personal application of truths. Decision Day, is being observed in many of our schools, which gives the scholars an opportunity often overlooked in the past to make consecrations, to know more about the Christian life. The Pastor's Class is another most invaluable means of training the young people in the distinctive things of the Christian life and in the duties of the church.

Children can be taught to pray by praying, to work by working, to speak for Christ by expressing in their simple natural way what the heart has found by loving Him. In no other organization that I know of, are children thus trained, better than in the Junior Christian Endeavor.

There is the time for devotion, for expression and for working through Committees, and the responsibility of living a Christian life is felt to no small degree. There are many other organizations whereby the boys and girls are trained in right living, but none so touches the vital, inner life of the child, and creates a desire for personal religious exercise as does the Junior Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting.

But, someone says there are too many organizations. Did not the Master say, "Feed my Lambs?" Then why withhold from His little ones that which He wants them to have? We should not expect a natural, healthy child to sit still for one hour and a half on an uncomfortable seat and be interested in something he does not understand,—but we do. He wants a meeting of his own, and should have it; where his own spiritual life will get the training and exercise it needs.

We often hear the question, "How shall we get our young people interested." There is one answer: Interest the children. I know of one pastor who has a Monthly Meeting established with the children; in this way they are trained to do efficient work in the church; not only that, but they become interested in church polity.

As I watched the fishermen pull in the great fish nets, and saw so many little fishes get away through the large meshes of the net, I thought, how unlike Satan's nets are these. He catches the youngest and weakest, and would have none escape. The responsibility is ours whether we believe it or not. Perhaps there never was a call so great for earnest Christian men and women. Let us train the boys and girls of today to be able to meet that call tomorrow.

Dunreith, Ind.

IN THE INDIAN FIELD.

The reports of the Indian work for December show an unusual amount of colds and grippe. Some of the stations have enjoyed revival seasons and all closed the year with thankful hearts and with a feeling of courage to go forward during the new year. Clark and Elma T. Brown, who are superintendents of the whole field with headquarters at Shawnee, visited the Kickapoo agency during the month.

The Seneca mission reports that the Sabbath School has been pretty well attended during the month. The Wyandotte agency reports that the Bible School is moving along very nicely, having had a nice Christmas program on the evening of December 23.

The Otoe mission reports no camp on the second Sabbath and on the fourth Sabbath it was too cold to make the long drive to their camp. The Sabbath School reports an increase both in interest and numbers. The Kickapoo agency reports decided progress in religious work among the Indians. On Christmas day over a hundred Indians took dinner at the mission, the Indians taking great delight in dressing the Christmas tree. Interest is very good in the Bible School.

A revival meeting closed at Big Jim's Band on December 6 with two conversions and with the membership greatly helped spiritually. The Indians are getting along fine. Interest continues good in the Bible School. Two hundred people attended the Christmas exercises at the Osage mission. Two of the chiefs talked to the company. Hannah M. Hubbard preached at the Shawnee mission on December 12. The school children gave a Christmas entertainment on the Thursday evening before Christmas.

Fifty-three meetings for worship have been held at all the stations during the month, which have been generally well attended.

CANDIDATE FOR SUPREME JUDGE.

Judge Lawson M. Harvey, a well known Friend in Indiana and a prominent member of the First Friends Church, Indianapolis, is a candidate for the nomination of judge of the Supreme Court of Indiana, subject to the decision of the Republican State Convention this year. Judge Harvey has served two terms as Judge of the Superior Court of Marion County and made a most excellent record. Friends generally throughout the state will be interested in his candidacy, assured if nominated and elected that he will be a credit to the Supreme Bench, and that he will bring to the duties of the office the same conscientious consideration which has marked his career hitherto.

LOWELL INSTITUTE LECTURES.

Rufus M. Jones has been invited to give one of the Lowell Institute Lectures in Boston this winter. The subject given for his lecture is "The Influence of Friends on the Religious Life of New England." It is one of a course of lectures presenting the part the different denominations have taken in the religious development of New England. The lecture by Rufus M. Jones will be given in King's Chapel in Boston at 2:30 o'clock on February 7th.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED IN a private home in Washington. Convenient to car line and Union Station. Laura N. Wilson, 46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA
Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

CUBA MISSION SCHOOLS

We have been much interested in visiting our mission schools. Most of the language was Spanish, so we could only watch proceedings.

But one day we happened to visit a class of second grade boys and girls trying to learn English. After our struggles with Spanish, it was a reward to hear with what difficulty they managed English. The word "six" was in the lesson and that always came out "sis," no matter how hard they tried. I certainly sympathized with them, for even when I thought I was talking Spanish they didn't seem to realize it.

There seems to be a good deal of artistic ability in Cuba. The walls of the school rooms are decorated with drawings and paintings that compare favorably with such efforts in American schools. Besides regular lessons in school, sewing lessons are given to the girls and basketry to the boys. They are a good thing to hold interest late in the day, for restlessness is a trait of children here.

We heard the children sing their national song in the chapel exercises, and the enthusiasm was ear-splitting. Their voices are good and the music very pretty. The school children are very nicely dressed and are unusually bright and attractive. Their surplus energy is their greatest fault.

The visit of people with a strange language was very entertaining to them. When father gave a chapel talk, which was interpreted into Spanish, their attention was acute. Some of them knew enough English to understand the talk in both languages, and they were very proud of that. No wonder!

Our mission schools are doing much good work and are the hope of the future, because their graduates are such good workers among their own people.

EDITH M. TEBBETTS.

JAMAICAN CHRISTIANS AND THE HURRICANE.

Last August a terrible storm swept across the Island of Jamaica. Entire villages were destroyed and the crops were utterly wiped out. In the midst of the confusion and terror which reigned on the night of the storm, some of the members of the mission church at Orange Bay gave striking evidence of the power of their faith in God. Alma H. Swift describes the conduct of two young men when the hurricane came upon them.

"One young man had tried so hard to make his home attractive and by thrift had gotten fowls and goats and a garden, also nice clothing, and lost everything except the little he had on the night of the storm. He opened the church door, lit the lamps, and people struggling in the waves saw the lights and made their way to the church. The young man got the organ up on a safe place, the children upon benches, and then, to quiet the throng, began to sing, finally getting that frightened multitude quiet. Even though they stood, a part of the time, in three feet of water, the service was kept up all night.

"Another young man who had heard of the approaching storm and had his family pack up their belongings and be in readiness for the hurricane, told me that Jesus was very real that night and that he just talked to him most of the night about the church. He said, 'Father, you know what a hard time we have had to get money to fix up the church and get it painted so it's a suitable place to worship Thee. I do not see, Lord, how we can build another. If it is for Thy glory, please leave it to us. If you want to take our houses, we can live in shacks, but we can't worship Thee in such poor buildings, so, Father, leave it for us.' In telling it, he said, 'I knew I would find it all right.'"

THE MISSION PRESS IN AFRICA

Last year, the printing press, which had been set up in the mission house at Margoli, occupied by Emory J. Rees and family and by Roxie Reeve, was moved to a new building. The following paragraph from one of Emory Rees' reports shows something of the good which is being done through this department.

"In its larger quarters the press is more conveniently situated, while we are more conveniently situated. The usual portions of Scripture for the weekly Bible lessons have been printed. These are available without charge to anyone caring for them, but they will probably be discontinued as soon as we complete the book of Matthew, unless the mission wishes the plan continued. A first Book of Numbers has been completed, consisting of 32 pages and cover. To Miss Reeve belongs the credit for the preparation of the matter as well as the typesetting. We have been obliged for the third time to begin the training of a printer boy. This time sickness has prevented the boy from continuing. A small amount of printing has been done for missionaries. This does not pay the press because of the small quantities printed, but we are glad to do it for any missionary wishing it. Over 350,000 pages have been printed since we started in 1914, more than half of which have been sold to the natives.

"The number of people in our district who can read is still very small, but the percentage of illiteracy is decreasing year by year. The only available schools are those started by the missionaries. The great difficulty confronting the school work is the small number of teachers available. At all of the stations, the school work is gradually being enlarged. The growth at Kaimosi, as described by Mrs. Blackburn, is typical of each of the other three stations. 'One year ago we had six schools in Kaimosi district, with an average attendance of 377 pupils; we now have schools for both girls and boys at 13 different points, with an average attendance of 1004 pupils and a present total enrollment of 1273. Our schools cover our district fairly well, though perhaps there are two or three points where schools could be placed to advantage when the people shall desire them.'"

AT JARUCO, CUBA.

Two young men from Jaruco, Cuba, gave most of their time for nearly three months last autumn to the holding of meetings and to tract distribution in the districts of Jaruco and Santa Cruz del Norte. Ellen W. Pain, referring to their work, writes: "These young men left their business in Jaruco and went out together, giving public meetings almost every evening in some home and great numbers gathered to hear them give their simple testimony of salvation, and as one sang so well almost everybody in hearing came. I could hardly believe their reports until I attended one of their meetings about nine miles from Santa Cruz del Norte in a 'bodega' porch. There were about eighty people present, men, women and children, with best of attention and order."

It is only necessary to grow old to become more charitable and even indulgent. I see no fault committed by others that I have not committed myself.—Goethe.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

PROGRAM FOR YOUNG FRIENDS' DAY.

1. Hymn—Some aggressive Christian hymn.
2. Scripture—2 Cor. 11: 21-31.
3. Prayer—Young People's Society members.
4. Special music—Young People.
5. Paper—"Why Does the Society of Friends Believe in Peace?"
6. Discussion of the following questions:
 - (1) Is non-resistance weak or heroic?
 - (2) If war were declared, would I volunteer?
 - (3) Should the United States increase her army and navy?
 - (4) Is it right to enforce peace by the use of arms?
7. Hymn.—Congregation.
8. Pastor's Talk—"A consecrated life the basis of non-resistance and all other Christian attitudes." How many will resolve to give up their lives absolutely to follow Jesus Christ?
9. Quiet Waiting.
10. Benediction.

The success of any Endeavor Society or other Young Friends' Organization depends upon the level of spiritual life maintained. Let this never lag, whatever else may happen to the meeting. Patience, Prayer and Persistence are the keys to the most tightly locked doors into the spiritual life of a community.

YOUNG FRIENDS' WEEK

This has no doubt been a time of great uplift to many Christian Endeavor and other Young People's Societies. This enthusiasm must not be lost. No Mount of Transfiguration is attained but there follows a valley of service. Upon the heights with Jesus, down in the valley with men.

What has this week meant to you? Were you the means of leading some one to Christ? Did you actually invite some associate member to sign the active members' pledge? Did you canvass your community and find how much more efficient your society can become? Do you any more clearly believe in Friends' testimonials for Peace than ever before? How many other people have you brought to this same position?

Are you any more satisfied with your membership among Friends? Have you seriously asked the question, have I any obligations towards making my monthly meeting any more attractive and efficient? What have I actually contributed towards making a Sunday morning meeting for worship the very tabernacle of God?

These are searching questions, but they are vital to the Societies' life. Let every young Friend face these tasks and perform them to the advancement of the church and the glory of God.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR FEBRUARY 13.

Topic—The Moral Equivalent of War. 2 Cor. 11: 21—34.

In this fourth division of Paul's epistles to the Corinthians, (2 Cor. 10—13) the writer contests for the supremacy of his teaching concerning Jesus Christ. He warns the Corinthian Church against following false Christs or false doctrines. He assures them of his authority to preach and the impeccable character of his teachings. He defends the simplicity of the gospel message and points out how any other must be unworthy of serious consideration. He also assures them that if they put authority upon the basis of nationality, zeal, courage, or any other characteristic, he can match any opponent.

Throughout the whole discussion Paul's underlying theme is that he loves and sacrifices for them because he wants them to accept the true Christ. His contest is of the Spirit, for the general uplift of mankind.

Is not this just the argument used by militaristic sympathizers who favor war preparation? Isn't a contest a good thing? One of our most natural instincts is that of excellence. The youth strives to lead his gang and does so often by the use of force. He thus becomes the chief or leader of his crowd. Does this instinct hold true in a larger aggregation of individuals in the nation?

If a nation can so strengthen herself as to be feared by all other nations, will she not be the most respected? Why does it not follow that because a nation is strong she will not be the most popular or most beloved? Upon what does respect rely? Are not those great underlying principles of brotherhood and love its basis? Even today after Germany has established her rule in Belgium she finds her position insecure as long as it is maintained by force. Probably Belgium is being better governed today than ever before but the country is not prospering and will not prosper, Germany realizes, until the "tillers of the soil and bearers of wood" heartily throw themselves into the general advancement of the country.

The North did not conquer the South with the fall of Appomattox; her real conquest then began. She had to win the respect, loyalty and love of her Southern Brothers by laying down arms forever, taking away force, establishing schools, building up a commercial system equally advantageous to the South and North.

When rivalry grew up between States as to which could maintain the best school system, build the most roads, develop the natural resources of their territory and produce the greatest yield in crops, then the States began to advance.

Is that not the center of Paul's whole teaching regarding contests? Rivalry, conquest and aggression are excellent characteristics as long as they are directed towards the general up building of God's kingdom. It does not build up God's kingdom to tear down a part of it. Any war must violate God's plan of world advancement. God creates life. War destroys it. God may bring great blessing out of a tragedy, but it was God that brought the blessing, not the tragedy. Do not try to overcome evil with evil, but overcome evil with good.

The effort of the coming generation should be to make peace so heroic, so noble and challenging that our best blood will be spent for constructive world projects. This can be done if we but say by God's help IT SHALL BE DONE.

AN IMPORTANT NOTICE.

With only rare exceptions the subscribers to the printed proceedings of the Richmond Men's Conference are readers of The American Friend. Please do not expect the Conference Committee to send bills for the price of the book. Not enough books have been sold as yet to pay for all the printing, and the Committee should not be expected to spend postage money in order to send notices.

Please accept this statement as a bill for the book. The price to registered delegates is, paper cover, 50 cents; cloth cover, 75 cents. To all others the price is 25 cents more. Send remittance to S. E. Nicholson, Richmond, Indiana. There are some unsold books on hand which we would be glad to dispose of to others. It is a book which ought to be in every Friends' home and in the library of every Friends' Bible School, and their sale will help to pay the printer's bill.

God requires so much faith, nay, he accepts, nay, he excuses no such faith as believes without reason; believes, it knows not how nor why. As faith without fruit, without works, is no faith, so faith without a root without reason, is no faith but an opinion.—Donne.

WANTED the names of any wanting land or town property near a Friends' church in central or southwest Kansas. I have some property to trade. J. S. Bond, Stafford, Kansas.

CHURCH AT WORK

Los Angeles, California—The First Friends' Church of Los Angeles seems to be taking on new life in all departments of work and service. The building has recently been repainted, which adds much to its appearance. The Bible School is growing in interest and attendance. About a hundred children have been gathered in from unchristian homes in the neighborhood, which brings a very hopeful outlook for the church. Many of these children are already active little Christians. Lenna Lescault is superintendent of the school. A splendid Christmas program was given to a crowded house, made up of the parents of the children. Fifteen adult members were received recently into membership with us, adding much to the working force of the church. Others are expected to come in later on.

Two members of our local Christian Endeavor Society are members of the Executive Committee of the Los Angeles City Union, and are kept busy visiting other local societies. Our local C. E. members are very active along different lines of church work. They have charge of the services at the City Rescue Mission on certain nights of the month. The pastor, Charles Lescault, usually goes with them and gives the message. Scores are saved and blessed at every service. Certain nights they also have charge at the chapel of the county hospital. On December 29, thirteen members of the local C. E. Society, together with the pastor, had charge of the service at the Sailors' Mission at San Pedro. It was a time of special blessing. Some of our members are also active in mission work at the city jail, conducting services every Sabbath morning. We feel that our meeting is touching a great many lives for good in this great city.

If any one knowing of Friends living in Los Angeles will send their names and addresses to the pastor, Charles Lecault, 1008 West Fourth street, Los Angeles, California, he will be glad to hunt them up and try to get them interested in the work of the local church.

Pasadena, California—Edgar T. Hole and family visited with relatives and friends in Pasadena en route from San Francisco to the East. Edgar Hole addressed the men's League of the Friends' Church on the evening of the 7th inst., giving an interesting description of physical conditions in Africa. On the evening of the 9th he occupied the time of the usual evening meeting with an inspiring account of the Christian attainments of certain men and young men in the Friends' missions in Japan, China, India, and Africa. It was most fitting that Mary Wood, of Luh Hoh, China, and Delia Fistler, of Nowgong, India, should be in the audience. Ellen Moore, for a time engaged in Friends' mission work in Japan, had left Pasadena but two days before to return to Japan in company with her nephew, Joseph Cosand. Ellen Moore's membership has recently been transferred to Pasadena Monthly Meeting, thus bringing our whole membership in closer touch with Christian work in the Orient.

Marion, Indiana—The most successful revival had for several years at the South Marion Friends church closed on Sabbath evening, January 23. The meetings were conducted by the pastor, DeWitt L. Foster, assisted by Frank Pratt, singer, and Ward Avery, pianist. Mr. Pratt is a student at Taylor University at Upland and Mr. Avery is a student in the Marion Normal Institute. The Word of God was proclaimed in plain, unmistakable terms and at almost every evening meeting persons were converted and reclaimed, the number reaching 25 one evening. There have been several requests for membership. DeWitt L. Foster is serving his fourth year as pastor of this meeting. His patient, untiring work in our midst and his faithfulness in preaching the gospel are bearing much fruit.

Haviland, Kansas—A series of meetings of a little over a week's duration has recently been held at Haviland, conducted by the pastor, L. Clarkson Hinshaw. The various sessions were well attended. The gospel message was spiritual, definite and practical and was appreciated by the entire membership. Thirty-five persons gave testimony that they had been definitely blessed. To the great Shepherd be all the praise.

Wichita, Kansas—The ladies of the University Friends' Church had a very pleasant and exceptionally well planned surprise for Mrs. Jane R. Wollam, on her birthday, January 10, 1915, at the parsonage, 1912 Mentor street. The Wollam family had been invited to take dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gervas A. Carey, and when they returned home, about three o'clock, they found over seventy of the ladies waiting in the house, having adorned the table with a set of beautiful white china dishes as a present from the ladies of the church to Mrs. Wollam. There were also some pieces of rare old English ware. After the first greetings lunch was served to all. It was a complete surprise and indeed a delightful occasion.

Paonia, Colorado—The churches of Paonia observed the week of prayer by union services here in the Friends' church. These were followed by a series of meetings conducted by the pastor, P. D. Guyer, which resulted in quite a number being definitely blessed. Several requests have been filed for membership. The good work is going on. There is a wonderful opportunity for Christian work in this section of the country, vast areas being without any religious services as well as mining towns of five hundred inhabitants. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he may send forth reapers into his harvest."

Plainview, Nebraska—A revival meeting, conducted by Albert J. Lamm of Fremont, Nebraska, and Edwin O. Martin of Havelock, Nebraska, closed here January 23, after a duration of three weeks. Splendid attendance and interest were marked features throughout. Thirty-two people were at the altar for definite blessing, twenty-seven being converted and five sanctified. The church was fortunate in securing these evangelists. Mr. Lamm as a speaker is both entertaining and convincing. He is quick to sense the atmosphere of his congregation and appeals strongly to the needs of men. Mr. Martin is an excellent chorus leader and trombone soloist. His musical ability as well as his fine personal work amongst the young people and boys added greatly to the success of the meetings.

The church was in a good spiritual condition when the revival began. Cottage prayer meetings had been held previously. A system of house to house visitation had been carried out together with advertising and other preparatory plans, thus when the time came everyone entered heartily into the campaign for the salvation of souls. We are indeed grateful to our Heavenly Father for His manifold blessings in these meetings. To Him be all the praise for the work accomplished.

New Bedford, Mass.—Sandwich Quarterly Meeting was held at New Bedford, January 12 and 13. The meeting on Ministry and Oversight was held on the 12th, at which time Alfred T. Ware, of Worcester, gave many helpful suggestions. Others took part in the meeting and it was rather difficult to close in time for the next one which has been appointed for the afternoon. This service was especially for the purpose of hearing an explanation of the work of the committees of our Yearly Meeting, whose names are on the pledge card. All these committees, with the addition of the Efficiency Committee, had been requested to send either representatives or explanatory papers. Each one was allowed ten minutes and a commendable amount of condensed information was given which made a very interesting meeting.

After a social tea the Quarterly Meeting Bible School Conference was held and one Friend from Worcester gave an account of work done in other places which might help us here. The regular Quarterly Meeting was held the next morning. In spite of adverse weather, the attendance was good. It began with a solemn session of prayer, and then a stirring sermon from Alfred T. Ware aroused much serious thought as to what could be done to advance the Lord's cause among us. The business meeting was satisfactory and "Friends met in peace and parted in peace."

Urbana, Ohio.—Goshen Quarterly Meeting was held at Urbana, January 21-23. The sessions were all profitable. John Pennington, Superintendent of Ohio Yearly Meeting, preached an able sermon on Saturday morning on doctrine, both old and new. He also spoke on Friday night. Both sermons were full of the Spirit. The sessions for business met on Saturday afternoon. Many delegates from the various Monthly Meetings were present. A large tent was formally presented to Goshen Quarterly Meeting free of debt. John Pennington made the presentation speech and dedicatory prayer. The tent is to be used throughout Goshen Quarter in evangelistic services for the salvation of souls. Everett Scotten, of Columbus, Ohio, brought the message on Foreign Missions on Saturday evening. On Sabbath the love feast was followed by a sermon by Howard Watkins of Byhalia. Evangeline Reams, of the Rescue Home at Columbus, had charge of the evening service. The presence of the Lord was evident at each service.

Winston-Salem, N. C.—Friends of Winston-Salem meeting were much pleased with a recent visit of Thomas Newlin, President of Guilford College. His message on Sabbath morning was a most helpful one and was listened to by the younger as well as the older part of the audience. He also gave an inspiring address in the evening to the young people. Both the president and his wife, who accompanied him, have gained a warm place in the hearts of the Friends at Winston-Salem. On Monday morning, by special invitation, he addressed the ministerial union of the city on "The Pastor's Attitude Toward Civil Administration." It was a masterful presentation of the subject and by a unanimous vote of the pastors it was ordered published in the city newspapers.

Georgetown, Ill.—A Christmas pageant was given by Georgetown Friends Bible School on Christmas Eve. The story of the Christ Child, beginning with the prophecies and leading up to his birth and the song of the angels, and the visits of the shepherds and wise men, was presented. The choir rendered Christmas anthems and the children sang Christmas carols at intervals during the program. At the close of the program each class in the Bible School brought gifts of clothing, provisions and money to be distributed to the sick and needy in the community on Christmas morning or sent to the foreign mission field.

Albert J. Brown, of Wilmington, O., spent ten days, from January 7th to 16th, with our meeting. Although the weather was bad and many were sick, thus making some of the meetings small, the value of his services cannot be estimated. The teaching he gave was plain and given in a manner that all could understand. He caused us to feel that we have a responsible part in carrying out the plans and purposes of our denominational leaders and the leaders of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. It is believed that a number were drawn nearer the Kingdom and that the relationship of many with their Heavenly Father will be closer because of his services among us.

Mill Creek, Ind.—Mill Creek meeting in Western Yearly Meeting, where Mary A. Cox is serving as pastor, has recently been favored with a very good series of special meetings. It has seldom been our privilege to hear as clear a teacher of Christian doctrine as Millie M. Lawhead, who was the evangelist, accompanied by Lillian Parker of Ohio, as singer. The inclement weather prevented any large attendance and yet a goodly number were definitely blessed. There are four requests for membership and there are three associates who, through conversion, become active members.

Noblesville, Indiana.—Noblesville meeting has just closed a three weeks' series of evangelistic services, conducted by the pastor, Gertrude M. Reinier. Her ministry was searching, prayerful and very convincing, but partly owing to the disagreeable weather and much sickness among our members the attendance and interest were not what we desired. We have felt, however, that the earnest truths presented will find their place in the hearts of the people. We were favored through a number of the meetings with the assistance of our Yearly Meeting Superintendent, Enos Harvey, who has proved to be a great blessing to Noblesville meeting. The meetings were brought to an early close by the illness of the pastor, who has been unable for service since that time, being confined to her room with a severe attack of grip. Flora M. Holliday brought the message on January 23, speaking on "The Calls of the Master."

Walnut Chapel, Ind.—Joel Blue, who recently came to Friends from the Methodist church, is assisting in meetings at Walnut Creek in Danville Quarterly Meeting, Indiana, where he is serving as pastor this year. David Commons, pastor of Hinkle Creek and Providence meetings, is associated in this effort.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

The following expressions of appreciation of The American Friend are taken at random from recent letters coming to our office:

"I have taken the paper from the first of its existence, and the Christian Worker before it, and I read much of the Friends Review in my father's house as a youth, and I consider the last issue (January 6) the best of them all. Hoping it may continue to spread its benign influence, etc."

"It is one of the best papers that is. The messages which it brings are so helpful and free from fault finding. As a member of the Friends Church I feel that I cannot afford to be without it."

"I am fearful that I have seemed careless or ungrateful in not writing more often my sincere appreciation of the great privilege I have of reading The American Friend weekly. The editorials minister to the needs of the members of our church, and there are so many good things I cannot mention all, but would speak of last week's issue, "The Parting of the Ways," by Francis C. Anscombe, as being inspired.

Nicholson & Bro., Richmond, Ind.

Friends' Marriage Certificates:

On Parchment, postpaid$3.00

On Bond Paper, postpaid$1.10

Books at publishers' prices, postpaid.
Remit by P. O. order.

NEWS NOTES.

R. S. Burnette has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Friends meeting at Glendale, Kansas.

The membership of the general meeting of Friends in Australia is 664, being an increase of 19.

Elizabeth Bond has been engaged by the meeting at Huntington Park, California, to do systematic family visiting in the community.

Announcement is made that Vancouver Monthly Meeting, Canada, will be held henceforth on the first Thursday evening of each month.

Martilia Cox, pastor of Hadley meeting, Indiana, is now engaged in special meetings at Poplar Run in Winchester Quarter, Indiana Yearly Meeting.

Lyman G. Cosand, pastor of the meeting at Georgetown, Illinois, is preaching also at the Elwood meeting in the country on Sabbath afternoons.

Charles S. White, pastor of the meeting at Pasadena, California, delivered an appropriate peace sermon on Hague Day.

Beginning on January 2, Sylvester Newlin, pastor at High Point, N. C., conducted an eight day series of meetings at New Garden.

A series of short talks on Quaker history was recently given during the general exercises of the Bible School at High Point, N. C.

Edgar H. Stranahan, pastor of the meeting at Oskaloosa, Iowa, was the speaker at the Y. M. C. A. meeting in Wichita, Kansas, on the afternoon of January 23.

Asenath Nixon, who is over ninety years of age and well known to Friends generally, is seriously ill at the home of her daughter, Emily Ellis, at Kokomo, Indiana.

Sarah J. King, of Noblesville, Indiana who is serving as pastor at Valley Mills Indiana has been confined to her home for two weeks with a severe attack of grippe but is recovering.

George W. Nasmyth, director of the World Peace Foundation, gave an address at Haverford, Pa., on January 11 on the subject, "America's Leadership in the New World Politics."

John S. Hoyland of Hoshangabad, India, announces an important religious pilgrimage of four of their church workers, winding up with a big meeting at the Y. M. C. A. at Bombay.

Robert W. Douglas of Versailles, Ohio, has gone to California, and will spend the remainder of the winter there. He will visit his brother, John Henry Douglas, at Whittier, and his grandson, Gifford Douglas, at Berkeley.

Edgar H. Stranahan, pastor of the meeting at Oskaloosa, has moved with his family into the new parsonage adjoining the meeting house on the south. The house and lot cost $5,500.00.

Lindley A. Wells of Portland, Oregon, expects to engage in evangelistic services at Boulder, Colorado, February 10. Afterward he will conduct special meetings at Denver and Colorado Springs.

The Westonian for January has an interesting and valuable symposium on the question, "Should boys and girls be in school together." The affirmative is supported by a long list of experts.

Joseph H. Stanley, of Columbus, Kansas, met with a serious and painful accident on January 15. While climbing a ladder, one of the rounds gave way, causing a fall which fractured his hip bone.

Clifford Pearson of Monroe, Indiana, is in evangelistic work this winter and was expected to begin services at New Holland, Indiana, on January 30. He will be glad to take subscriptions also for The American Friend.

During the tourist season a Friends meeting is being held each Sabbath morning at 10:30 o'clock in the home of Dr. Calvin D. and Elizabeth Abbott Christ, 420 S. Orange Avenue, Orlando, Florida. All are welcome.

Septimus Martin, of England, sojourning in Pasadena, California, has twice recently given Pasadena Friends an account of the labors of English Friends in the work of the relief necessitated by the war.

John S. Kimber of Newport R. I., attended San Diego Quarterly Meeting California, on January 14 and 15 and held a series of meetings there. He also attended Pasadena Quarterly Meeting on January 21 and 22.

Melissa S. Fellow of Wichita, Kansas, is very busy as director of the West Wichita Bible Class of the Y. W. C. A., teacher of the expert C. E. class and Superintendent of the Home Bible Class for the sick and aged.

Arthur and Eliza J. Dann of England, are spending some time in religious work in Ireland, especially among the Friends schools. They have been accompanied part of the time by Arthur Pim of Lisburn.

Henry T. Hodgkin gave an address at Holloway, England, on January 2 on "The War and the Spread of Christianity," in which he showed that the best thinkers of today recognize that Christianity rises above all national divisions.

A well executed calendar, with a picture of the church building and announcements of the Sabbath service, has been issued by Friends Memorial church, Muncie, Indiana. William J. Sayers is pastor.

A. F. Swift and wife, of Millbrook meeting, New York, are recent comers to Pasadena, California, and have taken a house for several months. They identified themselves at once with the Bible school and church.

Martha Carr, an evangelist of Fowler, Kansas, and her brother, R. Carr, were recent visitors at the meeting in Pasadena, California. Mary Hubbard, widow of the late Jeremiah Hubbard, is also a visitor with relatives at the same place.

A copy of "The Harvester," published at Chiquimula, Guatemala, contains much interesting news about mission work in Central America, reference being made to such well known workers as R. Esther Smith, Irvin Cammack, Matilda L. Haworth and others.

Muncie, Indiana, is in a campaign to raise $200,000 for the erection of a new Y. W. C. A. building. Theodore Wilson, daughter of Folger P. Wilson, at Richmond, Indiana, and a Friend, is Secretary. The Ladies' Aid Society of the Muncie meeting has pledged $500.00 to the enterprise.

A house in Mt. Holly, N. J., which has been identified as one built by John Woolman in 1771, has been purchased at a cost of $1800 for preservation as a memorial in his honor, members of the Society of Friends and others contributing the amount.

The Canadian Friend, beginning with the January issue, announces its publication office at Newmarket, Ontario, instead of Toronto. All correspondence, however, should be addressed to the editor, Clarence E. Pickett, 113 Maitland Street, Toronto.

Reports in the London Friend indicate large activity in public service on the part of Henry T. Hodgkin, who visited this country last autumn. He recently addressed the Liverpool branch of the Fellowship of Reconciliation upon his experiences in this country.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation New Year's greetings from our friend, Parker Moon, of Carthage, Mo. He also desires to send New Year's greetings to all his friends who are readers of The American Friend. For fifty-four years he has been preaching the gospel and is still able to meet his appointments and also to teach his Bible Class.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation New Year's greetings from Elwood C. Perisho, President of the South Dakota State College at Brookings, South Dakota. He writes that fifty per cent more freshmen are in attendance this year than ever before.

S. J. Walthall and family of Oskaloosa have spent several weeks in Pasadena, California, with relatives.

Loftus Fox and wife, together with their daughter, Mildred F. Everett, and children from near New Sharon, Iowa, have located in Pasadena, California, for the winter.

At the recent Yearly Meeting of Friends in Madagascar, held in the capital city, a sub-committee was appointed to send an epistle to the country meetings giving an account of the Yearly Meeting. Reports were given of missionary work being done at a number of centers on the Island.

John S. Kimber of Newport, R. I., expected to begin revival services at Los Nietos Mission, California, on January 23. The Men's Gospel Team of Whittier was expected to assist.

Amos Kenworthy of Whittier, California, has recovered from his late illness and is able to attend Sabbath morning services.

The Christian Endeavorers of the Meeting at Wilmington, Ohio, held a Peace conference on the evening of January 16, with the following program: "Interdependence of the Nations" by Frank Elliott; "America's Great Opportunity" by Luther Warren; "The Situation Facing Young Quakers" by Howard McKay. There was a large attendance.

A conference of the men of Wilmington Yearly Meeting for Miami Quarterly Meeting is announced for Waynesville, Ohio, January 28. The presiding officers of the three sessions will be W. Rufus Kersey, Homer G. Biddlecum and David E. Dunham. An elaborate program has been arranged, addresses being given by Homer Biddlecum, William Harlan, Robert L. Kelly of Earlham College, A. J. Brown, J. Edwin Jay, E. R. Purdy and a number of others.

Give me the comforts of God and I can well bear the taunts of men.—C. H. Spurgeon.

FOR SALE at a bargain: six 10-acre tracts of land and two large tracts. Some of these have bearing orange and fig groves; all located in a splendid Friends' community, near Friends church and academy, also near public school. Good hard roads. Located in the orange and fig district of Texas. For particulars address P. M. Hoke, Calfax, Illinois.

THE IOWA PAGE

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Please let me call the attention of the various C. E. Societies to the correspondence which is being sent out by our Missionary Superintendent, R. P. Bogue, Casey, Iowa. Do not lay it aside, but look it over carefully. The pamphlet, "National Missionary Campaign," explains the great campaign which is now being carried on by the Laymen's Missionary Movement. "First of All" calls for united prayer for the success of this campaign. As you will see by these pamphlets the campaign hits two places in Iowa: Davenport, February 16-18 and 20, and Des Moines, February 20 to 23. I would urge that each Society be represented at one of these places by at least one young man. The other pamphlet is a "Program of Study and Service for 1915 and 1916." The book especially recommended for this year is "Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands," by Arthur J. Brown; cloth, 60 cents; paper, 40 cents. It can be bought from Ross A. Hadley, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Indiana. Let us all work, pray for and study the cause of missions.

CLYDE COFFIN,
President C. E. Union.

C. E. DEPARTMENT.

Lynnville has elected new officers recently. Tacy Ratcliff is now president. This society has been studying the Discipline. They report that the course has been helpful. They will next take up mission study.

The C. E. Society which was organized at Center in October has grown from fifteen to twenty six members and the interest is increasing.

AT OSKALOOSA.

The Christian Endeavorers gave an excellent supper and program Sunday evening. The program, beginning at 5:30, consisted of four interesting talks on the subject of Missions. Henry Bogue acted as chairman and gave in a few words, a clear idea of just why we came.

Alfred Standing gave the first talk on "The War and Missions." After introducing a little humor he began: "I'm a little ashamed of myself tonight and, to tell the truth, a little ashamed of the rest of us. If we were members of a business firm and had each a thousand dollars invested over in Europe, would we wait until over a year after the war had begun to appoint a delegate to see about it? We claim to be Christians and to put first things first, but do we?" In this way he went on to describe the conditions in mission fields, abandoned because the missionaries were called home to fight or had been forced to give up their work because there was no money to support them.

"Where Our Money Goes and What It Does," was discussed by Grace Michener. She explained that she had been told to be definite like Peter was on the day of Pentecost and not indefinite like the modern preacher who proclaimed: "You must repent, as it were; be converted in a measure, or you'll go to hell, so to speak." She then took up our missionary budget and told just what every cent was used for.

Luanna Stewart followed with the subject, "Possibilities." She showed in the beginning the poet's error when he wrote:

"The East is east and the West is west,

And never the twain shall meet."

If any doubts about Missionary Possibilities, they were soon removed.

Miss Mattison closed the program with "The Responsibility of This Society." With a fitting introduction, the needs of the various fields were brought out and an appeal made for our help. An instance was given of two missionaries who were forced to live for three months on so scanty fare that their health was permanently impaired. We had failed to send the money. The field in Jamaica absolutely depends on Iowa Yearly Meeting.

Slips were then passed out and pledges made to the amount of $70.00, almost the total amount of the society's pledge. A splendid two course luncheon was served by the Social Committee and all adjourned for the preaching service.

—Oskaloosa Herald.

FIELD NOTES

Des Moines—Edgar H. Stranahan, pastor of the Friends' Church at Oskaloosa, held an eight day series of evangelistic meetings in First Friends Church of Des Moines, beginning on January 9. On account of bad weather and sickness the meetings were not well attended. The services were of special interest and highly appreciated by those who did attend.

I feel, I grieve, but by the grace of God I fret at nothing.—John Wesley.

BIBLE SCHOOL

FEBRUARY 13.

Subject—Humbled and Exalted.

Lesson, Philippians 2:1—15.

Golden Text—For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he were rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might become rich. II Corinthians 8:9.

Paul seems to have had a special affection for the Christians at Philippi. They were his first European converts. His relations with them seem always to have been pleasant, which could not be said of the Corinthian church. They had been mindful of his needs and had sent him assistance for which he thanks them in this letter. Indeed it seems that the letter was prompted by that gift of theirs.

The Apostle uses the opportunity to further impress his conceptions of the Christian life and doctrines upon them. The first four clauses of the text before us refer to sources of inspiration well calculated to hearten their service. Christ is referred to as a store house of exhortation—store house of cheering counsel—a source of consoling love, a companion in fellowship through the spirit and the dispenser of tender mercies and compassions; splendid conceptions well worth their imitating. With these ideals before them, he hopes to cause them to forget petty desires which lead only to strife and factions. Knowing their love for him he further appeals to them that they come to his side in the great and noble effort to make real these higher conceptions of life.

Verses three and four contain some lofty conceptions, ideals which few of even the best have attained. How many of us are heartily willing to consider others better than ourselves. O yes, when it comes to a hard task, a delicate service in the church or school, we are quite ready for some one else to do it. Except in cases of honor and promotion we are free with our excuses, very conscious of our own weaknesses and inabilities. It is so easy to confuse this exhortation with the other (looking to the things of others). Some of us are very careful—in our exacting, we carefully weigh out the valuation and are painfully careful not to give a fraction of an ounce too much. Was Jesus careful not to suffer too much? Is he careful not to love too much? Father, forgive us, as we have forgiven, love us as we have loved. But God so loved, and how thankful we are.

In explaining himself Paul now turns to his conception of Jesus' relation to the Father. Prior to his coming to earth he was with God, ranking on an equality with him. So great was his love for men, as John words it, that he in some mysterious manner divested himself of this high estate and became a man—a bondservant—not only that he might live as a man with, we must presume, all the limitations of a man, but even to experience a suffering which ended in the death as of a human being. Such was Jesus' attitude and such his accomplishment. It was now God's place to act, and from the humble place which the Son had chosen, the Father raised him to a place of such great glory that no name was above his. Paul evidently forgot for the moment his line of argument and like the prophets of old began to rhapsodize. In subsequent verses he returns to the exhortation and urges his friends, the Philippians, to imitate the life of Jesus and strive with fear and trembling to work out their salvation.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½% FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capital. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.
Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingstone, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 6.

SECOND MONTH 10, 1916

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 6.

The Golden Year

By ALFRED TENNYSON

And slow and sure comes up the golden year,
When wealth no more shall rest in mounded heaps,
But smit with freerer light shall slowly melt
In many streams to fatten lower lands,
And light shall spread, and man be liker man
Thro' all the seasons of the golden year.

Ah! when shall all men's good
Be each man's rule, and universal Peace
Lie like a shaft of light across the land,
And like a lane of beams athwart the sea,
Thro' all the circle of the golden year?

Old writers pushed the happy seasons back—
The more fools they—We forward; dreamers both;

But well I know
That unto him who works, and feels he works,
This same grand year is ever at the doors.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD
URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.
For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

How Large Is a Rose?

I said to a gardener old one day,

"How large is a rose; how large is a rose?"

He measured an inch and a half each way

And kindly smiled as a gardener may:

"Measured by inches I should say

That that's the size of a rose."

I said to a bride one night in June,

"How large is a rose; how large is a rose?"

"By the memory sweet of an old love tune,

And the vows that were pledged by the light of the moon,

Measured by these all passed too soon.

"Ah, that's the size of a rose."

But still my question perseveres,

"Oh sorrowing one, how large is a rose?"

And withered and dead as her hopes and fears

She showed me the roses of other years,

The blighted blossoms bathed in tears.

"Ah, that's the size of a rose."

I said at last, "Oh heart my own,

How large is the Rose, Sweet Sharon's Rose?"

"Measured from Calvary's suffering moan

Where mortal's weep o'er their sins, and groan,

Up to Immanuel's conquering throne,

Lo! that's the size of the Rose."

—James Albert Burchitt.

American Friend Day

If any reader of THE AMERICAN FRIEND did not read the article, "A Bit of Shop Talk," on page two of THE AMERICAN FRIEND last week, we ask that he hunt the paper up and read it without further delay. It explains the purpose of "American Friend Day," to be observed, we hope, in all meetings belonging to the Five Years Meeting.

While the hard times have brought some discontinuances, which we regret, many new names are being added, which shows what persistent efforts will do. It is the time of all times to press this periodical upon the attention of all our membership. We trust that March 5 will be universally observed as "American Friend Day" this year.

"Our Missions"

The first magazine issued in connection with the Foreign Missions of London Yearly Meeting was the "Children's Missionary Paper," 8 pp., illustrated, for one penny monthly, commencing in January, 1876. It was edited by Caroline W. Pumphrey, and published by Henry Stanley Newman, from Leominster, with the approval of the Friends' Foreign Mission Association, which did not, however, take any financial responsibility for the paper. The following year the name was changed to the "Friend of Missions," as it was not wished that its readers should be confined to children. In 1879, the size was increased to 12 pp., and in 1887 again enlarged, when 4 pp. on Home Mission work were incorporated with it.

From 1892 to 1894 the paper was in abeyance; but in the latter year a monthly magazine was again started, known as "Our Missions." It was edited jointly by Jane E. Newman and C. W. Pumphrey, the F. F. M. A. taking full financial responsibility. It consisted of 16 pp., and in 1896 an 8 pp. supplement, dealing with the work of the Missionary Helpers' Union, was added bi-monthly.

In 1906 a new series of the magazine was commenced, Mary Hodgkin, of Darlington, sister of the present Secretary of the Association, Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin, undertaking the editorship. Enlarged in size and also in the number of pages (38 or 40 per issue), "Our Missions" was published quarterly, in January, April, July and October. In 1909 the editorial duties were assumed by Raymond Whitwell, M. A., one of the Assistant Secretaries of the Association, in whose hands they still continue.

At the beginning of 1916 a return will be made to the monthly issue of the magazine, which is to appear on the first of each month. The size will be reduced to sixteen pp. per issue, at the price of one penny per copy, but in all other respects the present form and character of the paper will be maintained. The change has been decided upon to keep readers more closely in touch with the important interests of the work and the rapid developments which have taken place, particularly in recent years, and also to give publicity to the plans and arrangements in connection with the fiftieth anniversary of the commencement of Friends' Foreign Missions.

During the coming year an effort will be made to keep the readers of the magazine in touch with the momentous crisis in the Nearer East, which will profoundly affect the future of the work in Syria, one of the Mission Fields of the Association, and with happenings in India, so closely bound to the British Empire by recent events, and in China, stirred by the present Monarchical movement and the attempted revival of Confucianism as the national cult.

Full particulars in regard to subscription rates, etc., will be gladly supplied on application to the Secretary, F. F. M. A., 15 Devonshire Street, Bishopsgate, London, E. C.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 6.

SECOND MONTH 10, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 6.

The President and Preparedness

President Wilson's tour of the country in behalf of his program of moderate preparedness is the most spectacular event of his administration thus far. To what extent his publicity appeal is justified, or to what extent it is a subject of just criticism, can only be revealed with accuracy in the light of subsequent history. The public will applaud his utterances, both because they are the words of the president, and because they constitute an appeal to patriotism, whether real or fancied, which is always popular. When men have a chance to think over these messages entirely disassociated from the personality of the chief executive, there are many who will have difficulty in determining just what part of the messages represents a real need and what part is purely political. It is unfortunate for the country that the preparedness issue should have become acute during a presidential year. To that extent we agree most heartily with the statements of the president.

Mr. Wilson would have the country believe that he is not a radical, and he is probably correct. It would be easier for the country to believe that his tour has nothing of political importance attached to it, if he were either a positive radical or a positive conservative. The man who is looking for votes generally takes the middle of the road. We say this in no offensive sense, for the president is too high minded to be charged with sinister motives. The newspapers quite generally however recognize the political value of the tour, and the president's friends are quite as much concerned over its political effect as over the probable outcome of the preparedness program. All we are anxious about is that the public shall not attach more importance to these messages in their bearing upon preparedness than the circumstances warrant, for we are frank to say that the messages of any man interested in the outcome of a political campaign are necessarily to be discounted to some extent. It is unfortunate for the president and for his program that this is true.

The president's appeals would have been far stronger, had he been able to cite some real danger; or if he could have assured the country that as chief executive he possessed knowledge which charged him with the responsibility of urging military preparation, the people would have been more readily convinced of the urgency of the situation. The most he has been able to say is that the spirit of war is abroad in the world and no one knows what a day may bring forth. Probably the president would endorse the following paragraph of a recent religious exchange which lies before us:

"Doubtless there must be preparedness to some reasonable degree. We are not living in any millennium as yet, as current events demonstrate. We must not allow ourselves in any contingency to be overwhelmed by any possible aggression. We cannot live all our days in fear, because we are sensible of weakness. Our defenses must be adequate—such as are required of a great, self-respecting nation like the United States."

This sums up fairly well the logic of the president's appeal and of all the middle-of-the-road preparedness advocates. But is it a sound appeal? Because we are not yet living in the millennium, and because therefore business men will operate dishonestly and politicians will resort to graft and the small tradesman is crushed out by the combinations of capital, shall their competitors strike back and as a weapon of defense resort to the same corrupt and dishonest practices? Isn't the man who uses fraudulent practices even for the sake of defense, just as culpable as his more aggressive competitor who took the initiative? It is not argued that a man shall submit meekly to the oppressions of others. The dishonest merchant and the grafter are haled before the courts, to which they must answer according to the evidence, under forfeiture of money or liberty if found guilty. Were the United States expending its time and money now in laying the foundations for an international court and an international council of conciliation for the adjustment of all international differences, it would be doing more for preparedness, both for the United States and all the world, than will be accomplished by all the military bills now pending at Washington. Herein, we believe, lies the duty of pacifism at this hour. It is not a question of non-resistance alone. It is a question of the right kind of preparedness as a substitute for the use of wrong defensive methods, as against wrong belligerent methods. Certainly the danger that the president imagines is not so immediate, that there is not time for the United States to try out to the farthest limit a constructive effort to secure the establishment of a world court of justice and a world tribunal of conciliation for the government of the nations. Let this be our policy of internationalism, before we as a neutral republic begin to talk of guns and forts and a military policy, which at the outset, is bound to incite the suspicion if not the ultimate hatred of the world.

English Conscription Bill

(The following editorial is taken from the London Friend of January 7. Inasmuch as the bill referred to, providing for military compulsion, has passed both Houses of Parliament and will probably receive the endorsement of the King, the consideration of the measure from the standpoint of Friends is of more than ordinary interest.—Editor.)

"Why is it that we dread this loss of liberty? Not because liberty is in itself essentially good; but because it is the only soil in which the best things will grow. It can be no light matter to risk what has been won for us by our forefathers at so great a cost.

"We are fighting against Prussianism; and conscription is the germ from which Prussianism has sprung. We may, therefore, surely ask:—

"What boots it at one gate to make defense While at another we let in the foe?"

"Last, but by no means least, we feel strongly that wider issues are at stake. We believe that in our free institutions we have committed to us a trust for the future guidance of other nations, and that for England to stoop to conscription means a retardation of much of the higher progress of the world."—Archdeacon Gresford Jones, of Sheffield, and Oliver C. Wilson, Ex-Lord Mayor of Sheffield.

"We regret profoundly that it has been deemed necessary to introduce statutory military compulsion for the single men who did not attest under the recent recruiting scheme. The terms of the Bill are not yet available, but we understand that compulsion is to be applied to all single men of certain prescribed age, that the machinery set up recently for the organization of recruiting is to be used, and that the provisions of the Bill are to be operative only for the period of the present war. In other words, if these anticipations prove correct, there is to be introduced a temporary form of compulsory military service for a relatively small group of men. This we deeply regret both on general and particular grounds, but most of all on general grounds. As all the world knows, the Society of Friends hold the view that war is un-Christian, and that in no case should the individual be compelled by law to bear arms. Such statutory compulsion seems to us to fetter freedom and enslave conscience. On particular grounds, too, we regret that it should be considered expedient further to increase our continental army, at great cost and at the risk of under-manning industry. It is obvious that we are not in possession of many material facts and conditions regarding the issue, and it may well be that before these words are printed assurances will be given in Parliament which will mitigate, or at least relieve the situation. But if not, the position of the Society of Friends is clear.

"Not for the sake of any sectarian advantage, but alone in the interests of Freedom of Conscience we can do no other than enter our most definite and solemn protest against so grave an interference with that Freedom, convinced that this new crisis presents to every member a clear and unescapable call to bear witness faithfully and humbly to the Testimony which is ours.

"The Quaker position in regard to conscription, as we have repeatedly said in these columns, is neither one of expediency or utility. It is based on what may be called the moral rights of man. We claim first, that no man should be called upon compulsorily to fight, if the dictates of his conscience clearly, definitely and steadfastly convince him that it is morally wrong for him to do so. Secondly, we claim that to require every fit man to be a soldier is to hand over the individual freedom of the mass of the people to the military authority, making the nation as such essentially military in power and dependent upon military force. In other words, it would be to introduce in England the beginnings of the very vice—absence of individual freedom and a military domination—against which the nation professes to be at war. Militarism cannot abolish militarism. It may or it may not be right on any particular occasion for a nation to go to war; but it cannot in the long run make for human freedom and progress if a nation's army consists of men fighting against their will, that is, a compulsory army rather than a voluntary one. This country occupies the place she does in the world because, with all her faults, she has proved herself to be the true home of personal liberty, of free institutions, and of unimprisoned spiritual ideals. We again submit for the consideration of our fellow countrymen that we cannot afford to sacrifice these things, and we further submit that we cannot afford as a nation to fight for them with any instrument which of itself destroys them. Let this nation organize itself as best it may to meet the extraordinary difficulties with which it is surrounded. But in so doing let it beware lest it sacrifice the very things for which it is striving with so much devotion and at such a high cost of blood and treasure. Amid the rise and fall of nations the human family cannot afford to allow this great Freedom to perish from the earth.

"Let us, however, remember that our testimony is no mere negative protest directed against the judgment of our fellow-countrymen. They will not in their best moments desire us to be untrue to our convictions—liberty is still a real thing in England—but they may fairly ask of us that if we do not render military service we will at least render some helpful national service. This we have gladly endeavored to do and let us continue with patience and zeal. Our peace testimony must be positive and constructive. First, we stand for good understanding between nations as between men. Conciliation and reconciliation is our message. - Secondly, we stand for the succor and help of our fellow men in their distresses and perils. May it never be said of us that in this dark day of extreme national need we stood aside, occupied with sectarian differences and domestic disputes, or idle and helpless, content to utter an ancient and traditional shibboleth, unwilling to help our country in her need. Unquestionably each of us has a debt to the State, the rendering to Caesar the things that are Caesar's. Not one man or woman in our small body ought to fail in its full payment. The Society of Friends ought to be at this hour the last place in this realm for mere talkers, for drones or for "shirkers." Four or five hundred of our young men are hard at work in connection with the Friends' Ambulance Unit and the War Victims' Relief Committee, work established at the beginning of the war and carried on hitherto. Several hundred more of our members are engaged in our various centers in "war work" of one sort or another. There is work for all and service for all. This is our ancient and modern testimony—to serve our fellow men in love, to bear one another's burdens, and to follow the Light Within and the God o'erhead."

What Think Ye of Christ?

By LUKE WOODWARD

"What think ye of Christ is the test
To try both yourself and your scheme,
You cannot be right in the rest
Unless you think rightly of Him."

Various answers were reported by the disciples when the Lord asked: "Who do men say that I am?" The answers indicated that He was regarded as an exceptional personage—a reappearance of one of their revered prophets and all showed an admiration of Him. They were nevertheless short of the truth. The true answer was given when He addressed His disciples with the question: "But who say ye that I am?" Simon Peter, spokesman for all, answered: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." By what means was this conviction sealed upon their hearts? The Lord Jesus gives us the key in His reply: "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar Jona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven."

Such mistaken estimates of the character of Jesus of Nazareth have not been limited to the time when He sojourned on earth. The same is true of modern times. Unitarians, some social reformers, the advocates of that modern counterfeit, the so-called New Theology, the believers in "Christian Science," almost vie with each other in extolling the Man of Galilee. Even infidels like Rosseau have been loud in His praise. Admiration of Him as the only example of perfected human character is not out of place. None admires Him more than the genuine believer, who at the same time adores Him as his divine Lord. While admiration may co-exist with saving faith, it should by no means be regarded as a substitute for it, since it is sometimes found where no such faith exists.

Infidelity never assumes a more dangerous form than when it is eloquent in praise of the life of Christ, but is silent as to His Deity, and as to His death on the cross as being the procuring cause and only ground of salvation for the lost human race. Such is what is commonly denominated "The moral influence theory." This view represents Christ's death only as an heroic martyrdom like that of the missionary who suffers death at the hands of those in whose behalf he labors. The late Horace Bushnell, a New England minister and writer of considerable note, did more, perhaps, than any other individual to popularize this half truth. About fifty years ago he published a book of over five hundred pages entitled "The Vicarious Sacrifice," in which, while he speaks in the highest terms of the character of Jesus, he attributes no saving merit to His death on the cross. In his estimation it was simply "the bad fortune such a work prosecuted with such devotion must encounter on its way." "He is not here to die, but dies because He is here." Contrast this with what Christ says concerning Himself: "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." And the Apostle said: "He was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death."

In my book, "The Morning Star," published in 1875, while Bushnell's work was fresh before the public, I made some quotations from it to show the unscriptural character of his teaching, and to point out to my readers its subtle and dangerous nature. Here is a quotation from my book, page 135:

"With a title calculated to preclude suspicion and to inspire confidence, and interspersed with many sublime and beautiful sentiments, and written in an elegant and popular style, his book, like sweetened poison, does not alarm the unwary reader until it has infused itself into his soul. Error is never so dangerous as when clad in the guise of truth, and perhaps a more artful transformation of Satan has never been presented to the world than is to be found in some of our modern literature, in which genius, learning, tasteful style are employed to garnish over the most dangerous sentiments—sentiments so cautiously stated, and so connected with vital truth as sometimes to be taken for the truth itself."

It is a satisfaction to know that before Bushnell died, his mind underwent a change in regard to the Atonement. I recently met with the following from the pen of Dr. Munhall, extensively known as a successful evangelist: "More than thirty years ago in Denver, Colorado, I met an aged Congregational minister who was a pastor in Hartford, Connecticut, during Horace Bushnell's pastorate in the same city. He told me this: 'I spent an hour with Bushnell the day before he died. He then said to me: Doctor, I greatly fear some things I have said and written about the Atonement may prove to be very misleading, and will do irreparable harm. He was lying on his back with his hands over his breast. He lay in silence for a few moments, his face indicating great anxiety. Directly opening his eyes he said: O Lord Jesus, thou knowest I hope for mercy alone through thy shed blood.'

Truly as the poet Young says, "A death bed is a detector of the heart."

Fountain City, Indiana.

The Roots of War and Peace

(The following extracts are taken from the Oskaloosa (Iowa) daily Herald, concerning recent addresses by Dr. Clarence M. Case, given at Friends' meeting in Oskaloosa.)

On the evening of January 9, Dr. Clarence M. Case spoke on "The Roots of War." He said:

"From a negative standpoint, war is not murder, for murder is a one-sided affair. It is not merely a survival, for men fight for present causes. It is not merely hatred, for often those in the trenches hate least, as is seen from the scenes of Christmas a year ago, when they joined in the Christmas carols and exchanged tobacco and newspapers. Often those who hate most are farthest from the trenches.

From the positive view-point, war grows out of (1) a lack of world organization. There is no organized public opinion, and no tribunal to which appeal can be made. (2) According to the laws of group psychology, the action of a heterogeneous group is bound to be on a lower level than the ideal of the highest in the group. (3) The pressure of national population is a third cause, not that there is not enough room in the world for the population, but some nations are crowded and the people are not willing to move. They prefer to live under their own flag. (4) There is in each individual an instinct of pugnacity.

As secondary causes, he mentioned (1) predatory national economy, (2) militaristic interests, involving the military profession of a group of men, (3) the fallacies of the philosophy of war set forth by the Germans, (4) institutionalized religion, (5) the jingo press.

On the evening of January 16, Dr. Case discussed "The Foundations of Peace." There are three attitudes of thought. (1) Violent resistance, that is, blow for blow. This attitude gives armament. On the other hand there is (2) non-resistance, the idea that a nation should be a martyr nation. This is impracticable in the present stage of civilization. As a middle course, there is (3) passive or moral resistance. The person who holds this idea, realizes that force has no permanent place, and that public opinion is to be made the strong restraining factor.

As the principal remedy, world organization is advocated. This is no new idea. William Penn, in 1694, in his "Plan for the Peace of Europe" proposed the very plan that is engrossing the attention of the leaders in the movement for peace today.

"All the peace we have we got through passive resistance stiffened up by justice." The same thing should be carried a step farther and applied to nations. Now is the time to strike a hard blow for world organization. We need a positive policy, and this meets the demands.

To aid in this policy, we need a more social democracy, the real rule of the people in government and industry. We need further, international conciliation. In our national policies nations should cease trying to thwart each other. There should be a spirit of neighborliness. Introduce common sense and Christian treatment into our diplomacy.

Joseph M. Dixon On Preparedness

Former U. S. Senator Joseph Moore Dixon of Montana—who in his early life was a member of Cane Creek monthly meeting) has this to say in the "Missoulian," of which he is editor.

"Here in America, separated from the European madhouse by 3,000 miles of ocean, we are about to launch upon an extra expenditure of one billion dollars to get ourselves into a proper state of 'preparedness' against those bankrupt and blood-drained nations of Europe that are already at the point of complete exhaustion.

"The daily newspaper diet of blood and thunder from the reeking battlefields of Europe is causing us to see red. Who among the nations of the world will propose, when they have staggered to their feet again, to come over here and assault 100,000,000 Americans in the very high tide of national virility and possessing a continent richer in all the munitions of war than the whole of Europe combined? Will poor, worn-out, half-savage Mexico dare encroach upon our national sovereignty? Will the little brown men on the island 10,000 miles across the Pacific, with a bankrupt treasury, attempt to invade our shores? Before we stampede into a billion-dollar propaganda for preparedness, let us sit down and collect our thoughts and take stock of our surroundings. It may be possible that we are seeing things that may not be actual realities."—Friends' Messenger.

Dead!

H. C. FELLOW.

Dead to the night winds' roar,
Dead on Galician moor,
Dead on the Trojan shore,
Dead midst Carpathian crags,
Dead on the fields of Loraine.
Gone down are the millions of slain,
Lie buried in tatters and rags,
Left to rot for the sake of their flags,
Mown down with shrapnel and shell
In the wreck of a castle of hell.
Blown to atoms on mountain and lea
Lie buried in trenches and sea,
Fit fragments for worms of the dust,
Gone to death for the Moloch of Lust.

Wichita, Kansas.

Two Weeks With Our Missions in Cuba

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS

After a delightful voyage of five days, we landed at Santiago, Cuba, January 4th. That night we spent as guests of the principal of Cristo School, the high grade school of the Baptists in Eastern Cuba. They have separate schools for boys and girls across the street from each other. Two of our young men are now taking a theological course there. One finishes the course this year.

On the 5th we went on to Holguin, and immediately took train for Gibara. There Sylvester Jones met us and we were guests with them till Friday. Miss Mary Pickett is with them, in charge of the school. They are just now preparing for special meetings, and on Wednesday evening a half dozen young men gathered with them for an hour of special prayer. They are doing this every evening at their own suggestion. Each one took part in a very earnest manner. On Thursday evening was their monthly meeting. About eighty gathered, fifty of whom were men or boys. All but three or four were young. I doubt if any monthly meeting of Friends in America is proportionately better attended or held in a more decorous manner. All, from the youngest up, were most attentive during the rather long session. After the monthly meeting, quite a number gathered in a side room for prayer. These prayer sessions were impressive for the deep earnestness of those taking part, both men and women. It was all in Spanish, but we could feel the spirit of it.

On Friday I went with Sylvester Jones to inspect the out stations. There are three large sugar mills in our territory: Banes at the east, Chappara near Puerto Padre in the west, and Santa Lucia about midway between Gibara and Banes. These are among the largest sugar mills in the world—Chappara, I understand, being the largest in the world, with a capacity of a million pounds of sugar per day. Our trip took us first across Gibara Bay to the east, and then by coach for three miles, and sugar railway a few miles more to Santa Lucia. We had a consultation with the manager about the conditions and prospects of the work there. We have a small room for a chapel and Sunday School and fortnightly services are held there. We then took the railway westward to Velasco, where we spent the night with the delightful family of Jose Reyes, our native worker there. His family, of wife, mother and four children, was pleasant to be with, though their language was foreign to me. On our way from Gibara to Velasco, we passed through seven places where outstation work is being done. At three of them we have small chapels. At five of these places the work is cared for by Alberto Lopez, a young native worker, and at two by Jose Reyes, our oldest native worker. A very interesting work they have taken up this year is called the religious school. The children of the public schools in these stations are taken to a room provided by some friend of our work for an hour's Bible study after school hours on some week day. The people seem to appreciate it and the children take hold of it very readily. They seem to look forward to it eagerly. The work is mostly under the care of our native workers and they seem very efficient.

On Saturday, my wife and daughter came on and joined us and we went out to Puerto Padre, where we arrived rather late in the evening, but found a warm welcome and a good dinner awaiting us. Miss Lena Hadley is the very efficient head of our school there. Lloyd H. Mendenhall and wife are with her in the mission home. They are serving as companions for Lena Hadley and acquiring the language preparatory to taking up regular work next year. Henry Cox and his wife, our regular missionaries here, are taking their furlough this year and are at Hartford preparing themselves for greater efficiency. The work here shows their good service during the years they have been here. There is a fine group of members, mostly young. Their conduct of the Sunday School was excellent, a young man serving as superintendent as efficiently as any in our home meetings.

On Monday, Sylvester Jones and I had a conference with the manager of the sugar mill at Delicias, about three miles from Puerto Padre. Chappara, Delicias and San Manuel constitute the three main centers of the Chappara Sugar Company. They have 220 miles of railway in their estate, and a line joining the extremities of their various branches would enclose three hundred square miles, though all this does not belong to the estate. At Chappara, there are 5000 people, at Delicias, 2000, and at San Manuel, 1000, mostly in the employ of the company. This does not include a large number of workers out in the cane fields. They use 25 locomotives and 2000 cars to bring cane to the mills. Henry Cox held services every two weeks and supervised a Sunday School at Delicias. On account of his absence this year, this work is not kept up, as we have no Spanish preacher convenient for it. No other religious work is done by anybody for this large section. A Y. M. C. A. work here would seem to be most desirable. The manager told me that they had a lot reserved for a Y. M. C. A. building and another lot for a chapel when they can be occupied. He also said that one of the directors of their company in New York had offered $25,000 for Y. M. C. A. work there, provided a like amount were raised on the field, but he said it was impossible to meet the condition. The manager is an Englishman and very friendly to our work. A Y. M. C. A. work there, together with such help as our missionaries could give, would make a fine combination.

While on our way to Puerto Padre, the train stopped a few minutes at San Manuel, and on the platform Sylvester Jones and I had a talk with a few Jamaican colored people and they expressed a great desire for meetings to be held for them. They are nearly all church members in the various denominations (English) or Jamaica. We arranged for a service there next Sunday, and if it seems to meet a need it may be kept up. It is only three miles from Puerto Padre and can be sustained from that station. This work is in English and there are many good workers among them to help.

A Glimpse of Friends in Canada.

By MARGARET JENKINS.

How many Friends in the United States realize that there are sister communities over the line in Canada?

Can you imagine yourselves seated around a table in the parlor in Pickering College while young Friends meet in Conference to discuss the ways in which they can best help the Society and the world during the coming year? Earnest talks were given on such subjects as Bible Schools, Social Work and the Place of the Young Friend in Meetings for Worship.

The next day, September 9, 1915, Friends gathered for the Yearly Meeting which is also held at Pickering College near Newmarket and about an hour in the train from Toronto. No queries were considered as in Philadelphia, but reports were received from day schools and Bible Schools and from the home and foreign missionary fields.

Every morning a devotional meeting was held before the regular session, which was conducted by two Friends and hymns were sung. It was interesting to find the wife of a New England pastor, who had taken a prominent part in these meetings, saying she hoped the time would come when she could go to Philadelphia and unite with Friends in their worship based on silent communion.

After the reading of a minute from the Whittier Fellowship Committee, Friends arranged for visits to different communities. A little Ford took me to Pickering about fifteen miles from Newmarket, where there are meetings of both conservative and progressive Friends, familiarly known as "Old Friends" and "Fast Friends."

The sad results of the break in the Orthodox body which took place about 1871, became apparent. There was a handful of Friends in both meetings and but one young woman to whom they could look for the future of the Society. As I was going to visit one of the conservative body with Adelia Cronk, a sweet faced progressive Friend, a man passed us in a buggy, who seemed to be typical of many in the community. He and his family had joined the Presbyterian church because they could not stand the dissensions among Friends, but he was still longing for the church of his childhood, and said he would return if the two branches could be brought together.

The town of Norwich is another place where both bodies of Friends are represented and there is a large meeting of the conservative branch, with a goodly number of young people and children. The latter wear little gathered crown bonnets and attend a small school taught by one of their number. They have a nice, comparatively new meeting house, which they have just furnished with electric lighting and on Friday evenings they come together to listen to papers or articles of general interest. Old and young were interested in our Young Friends Movement from our first gatherings in the Whittier land to the development in both America and England of the meetings with people of other denominations held on the basis of silence.

Only a few Friends remember the time of the separation. An elderly man told of the sufferings which his grandfather endured and which he could not recall without emotion. It was necessary to appeal to the law to divide the meeting houses and as a result all were given to the progressives. This decision influenced London Yearly Meeting to recognize the progressive body as Friends, while the conservatives feel that their meetings are more nearly in accord with meetings held in Great Britain. It was surprising to find that they were looking to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting for help to unite the two bodies. One Friend said Philadelphia Yearly Meeting was now taking the place in the Society of Friends in Canada which the United States held among the warring nations of the world. The fact that there had been no Wilbur-Gurney separation within its limits gave it a neutral position which would enable it to use its good offices toward the reconciliation of the two bodies.

Very different were the problems to be met in the small outlying meetings. At Ephingham meetings are held in a union church opposite the country store and the leading part is taken by a young German Canadian, who is, however, a concerned Friend. He is assisted by an earnest American who held the position of pastor in several communities in Canada. He became dissatisfied with the compulsory sermon several times a week and is now tilling the soil for a livelihood while giving as much time as possible to the upbuilding of the meeting.

For these country meetings where there is no Quaker background, they feel it necessary to have a prearranged service, in which hymn singing forms a part. As opportunity presented to talk with resident pastors, it was encouraging to find that most of them were anxious to introduce a period of silence into the meetings and to try to train the congregation to depend less upon the pastor for vocal ministry. At the home of Clarence E. Pickett, pastor of Toronto meeting, I met Elizabeth Stover, who is traveling secretary for Hicksite Friends. She arranged visits to the coming Half Year Meeting and to other outlying meetings.

The Half Year Meeting convened at a fine old meeting house on a country road a few miles from Newmarket. On Sunday morning probably fifty Friends were present, the old Friend, Isaac Wilson, sitting at the head of the meeting. On the following morning, after the reading of reports from the subordinate meetings, a letter of greeting was read from the Orthodox Quarterly Meeting which had met the previous week at Pickering. Deep appreciation of this letter was expressed by several Friends and it was stated that never before had a communication of like character been received from the Orthodox branch. Some wondered whether they had taken their part toward Friendly intercourse and a committee was appointed to write a suitable reply.

A very interesting farming community of Hick-site Friends is located near Coldstream, Ontario, the nearest station on the railway being seven miles distant. Young and old form literary societies and are wide awake to the questions of the day.

On the evening of my arrival a large group met in the sitting and dining rooms of Oscar Zavity's home to listen to an account of the Young Friends Movement. One or two Quaker Study Circles were formed which will take George Fox's Journal as their text book. Satisfactory meetings were also held in the meeting house, where a friendly discussion of our principles resulted in a drawing together in closer fellowship and love.

A brother of my host at Coldstream is one of the professors in the large agricultural college at Guelph and on the return trip to Toronto, Elizabeth Stover arranged for a meeting of the students who hold a membership with Friends. It was encouraging to see the interest of these young men and to hear their expressions of loyalty to the society. One young man had attended the Baptist church for years, but he was glad to have the opportunity to return to Friendly influences and ready to help to start a study circle following Emmotts' Story of Quakerism.

In looking back upon this visit to Canadian Friends it seems as if the message of the angel to the ancient church at Philadelphia is applicable to the body of Friends worshipping in the place of that name. "Behold I set before thee an open door"—the door of opportunity for friendship and sympathy, and of help in bringing these Friends to understand each other by means of the wider circle of our fellowship and love.

The Whittier Fellowship

A meeting of the Whittier Fellowship Committee was held at Coulter Street Meeting House, Germantown, Pennsylvania, on the twenty-seventh of Twelfth Month, 1915.

A letter from Catharine Jones, who is teaching in Tokyo, Japan, was read. She wrote particularly of the appreciation of our silent worship by the Japanese and of their looking to America for inspiration in all good movements. The report of Carroll and Anna Brown of their visit to Conservative Friends in Ohio, Indiana and Iowa was read and it was felt that their service had been of benefit to interested young Friends in those localities. The Committee felt encouraged to give further attention in this direction where Friends are reaching toward a wider vision.

Margaret Jenkins gave an account of the visit she had paid among Friends in Canada in gospel love. Her minute from our Committee was received and read in the Meetings of both branches and she brought one in return. In both meetings and homes she found a warm welcome and a cordial response to her message.

Horace M. Lippincott reported the conference at Conanicut in Rhode Island last summer, where the loveliness of nature and delightful fellowship produced a deepening of spiritual convictions as the pilgrims met daily in the old Meeting House where George Fox once preached. In this group were the four Fullers from England who, like George Nasmyth and many others, wish to join Friends "in the root and not in the branch." Where can they find a spiritual home?

An earnest discussion of this condition led us naturally into the subject of peace and Hollingsworth Wood, who is spending much of his time in Washington, described the situation and prospect there regarding the question of "Preparedness." Carolena Wood emphasized our lack of a collective impression at so critical a time for our ancient testimony. It was planned to ask a group of Friends to go to the national capital and remain during these confused days in an endeavor to lift the idealism of our country's representatives from the darkness of material things and to try and influence them to calmness. It was hoped that Monthly Meetings would be willing to bear the expense of such concerned Friends. The subject was referred to the Winona Peace Conference Committee.

A concern was expressed that the Committee encourage young Friends who are at College toward a greater acquaintance and fellowship. Plans were made to secure their names for this purpose. Eleanor D. Wood gave an account of the Inter-Collegiate Socialist Conference at Hampton Falls last summer which felt drawn to attend Amesbury Meeting and found much sympathy for Friends' method of worship.

A letter from Margaret Thorp of Australia expressed her appreciation of fellowship with American Friends. The Executive Committee was instructed to prepare a message of love to the Friends in England, New Zealand, Australia, Japan and India who have shared our fellowship. The Executive Committee was directed to again issue a list of Friendly activities for the coming summer as a guide to wider fellowship.

It was felt that the future work of the Committee should be inspirational rather than actual service as a Committee and that the Executive Committee should plan for fellowship Conferences toward this end and for the service as the way opened. George Walton felt that we must continue for our own sakes and to meet the need of the present day. Indeed love for each other was deemed a sufficient excuse for the Committee's continued existence. The following officers and executive committee were chosen for our fifth year:—

Carolena M. Wood, in the chair; Horace M. Lippincott, Secretary; Susan J. Dewees, Treasurer, Haverford, Pa.; Hannah C. Hull, Thomas Jones, Hilda P. Holme, Eleanor D. Wood, Henry J. Cadbury, George A. Walton.

We feel that all who have realized the increase in spiritual power which has grown out of this unique association of all shades of thought among Friends will feel an interest in this report and in the concern for a Spiritually United Society which it presents. The Committee plans to hold an early conference in Germantown on the "State of the Society," to enlist the service of Friends in visiting Meetings of all branches of Friends in various sections of the United States and in having a group in Washington as a spiritual balance at a critical time. If thee is interested in any of these plans will thee please let me know promptly "as an earnest of thy concern for the Quaker faith?" We shall be glad to have any suggestions which may occur to thee and a contribution of One Dollar toward our service.

H. M. LIPPINCOTT.
Secretary.

East Lane, Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania.

National Constitutional Prohibition Amendment

The Joint Resolution for submitting the Prohibition Amendment was introduced in the Senate by Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas (S. J. Res. 55) and Senator Jacob E. Gallinger of New Hampshire (S. J. Res. 64), and in the House by Representative E. Y. Webb of North Carolina (H. J. Res. 84) and Representative Addison T. Smith of Idaho (H. J. Res. 85). This introduction in each body by a member of each of the two dominant political parties frees the measure from all appearance of partisanship.

Senator Sheppard valiantly championed the Resolution in the last Congress, and in this Congress the cause is tremendously strengthened by the additional championship of Senator Gallinger, the leader not only of the Republican party in the Senate, but for many years the staunch leader of temperance measures and who has a splendid record of achievements along that line. We are fortunate also in the House in having the Resolution championed by Representative Webb, who is Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, to which it was referred, and is the popular author of the so-called Webb-Kenyon Interstate Liquor Shipment Bill, and also Representative Smith, who has always actively championed every temperance measure before Congress.

The Prohibition Amendment, as introduced in this Congress, is practically the same as voted upon in the House in December, 1914, at which time it received a majority of eight votes—thirteen, including pairs. In each branch of Congress the Resolution has been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and, as is customary, the Committee has referred it to the appropriate Sub-Committee for consideration. In the Senate the Sub-Committee in charge of the amendment consists of the following: Senators Chilton of West Virginia, Fletcher of Florida, Shields of Tennessee, Borah of Idaho and Cummins of Iowa; while in the House the Sub-Committee consists of Representatives Carlin of Virginia, Taggart of Kansas, Gard of Ohio, Whaley of South Carolina, Volstead of Minnesota, Nelson of Wisconsin and Morgan of Oklahoma. The gentleman named first on each Sub-Committee is, of course, the Chairman.

With the prestige and momentum of a majority vote in the last Congress, the prospects for securing the requisite two-thirds in the present Congress seem good, but this will come to pass only if the people throughout the states make known to their Members in Senate and House their urgent demand that they be given a chance to express themselves on this vital question, and request that Congress immediately submit this prohibition amendment to let the people say whether or not the beverage liquor traffic shall be prohibited in the United States and its possessions.

EDWIN C. DINWIDDIE,
Legislative Superintendent.

The Blessing of Fogysm

A speaker at the recent Yearly Meeting of Friends at Richmond, Indiana, made the following reference to that Church:

The old fogysm of Quakerism and the old traditions that merely are traditions are rapidly passing away from the Society of Friends. Our Church has lived the life of Rip Van Winkle long enough, and as we look at some of the other Churches we can say that we have been asleep for twenty years. Now is the time for awakening. The true spirit that dominated George Fox and our forefathers will always stand for Quakerism, but if we rightly interpret the Word of God it means progress.

It is possible our Quaker brethren may be a little in arrears so far as some of the evidences of progress are to be considered; but we are inclined to count their "fogysm" a spiritual asset. There is danger of progressivism, this getting out of the rut, inducing deflections of a questionable character. It is good to be conscious of a religious folk who believe in and practice old fashionism. In fact, if our Quaker friends did nothing else than adhere to some of these ancient customs involving simplicity, brotherhood, and an intense love and advocacy of peace, they will have filled a large place in God's program.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

No one can cherish an ideal, and devote himself to its realization from year to year, and strive and struggle and make sacrifices for its attainment, without undergoing a certain gracious transformation, of which the highest powers must be aware and men can hardly miss.—John White Chadwick.

THE HIGHER LIFE

Psalm XXIII.

The God of love my Shepherd is;
I shall not want, for I am his.
In pastures new with verdure blest,
He maketh me to lie at rest.

By living waters, clear and still,
To lead me is his gracious will.
My fainting soul restoreth he;
In righteous paths he leadeth me.

Yea; tho' through death's dark vale I go,
No fear of evil will I know;
For thou art with me, and thy rod
And staff they comfort me, my God.

A table dost thou spread for me
In presence of mine enemy:
With oil annointest thou my head;
My cup its overflow doth shed.

Yea, all my days shall goodness great
And mercy e'er be my estate:
And ever I will dwell above
Within Jehovah's home of love.

—F. G. Brill, in Living Church.

Loving Service

A spirit of loving service should fill the heart of every Christian. Those to whom we give kindness and love will return the same with fidelity and service rendered in like spirit. We are usually paid in returns of our own gifts. Love invites its own response; service inspires service; and the memory of a kindness done may prove to us a welcome shelter and defense in time of need. It may be thou dost not love thy neighbor; it may be thou thinkest only how to get from him, how to gain by him. How lonely, then, must thou be! How shut up in thy poverty-stricken room, with the bare walls of thy selfishness and the hard couch of thy unsatisfaction!—George Macdonald.

The Upper Room

If your captious spirit makes you disagreeable and your fault-finding habit makes you an unwelcome guest in the social circle or in the home, you need not blame any one else for your opportunity. Look within and you will find the trouble. The world hands back to you just about what you hand out to it. If you snarl and complain, you will not be long in making up your mind that you are living in a snarling and a fault-finding world. In other words, you make the world in which you live. By your own fruits men learn to know and estimate you. But what about the man who ignores all moral law and yields his life to evil? Why, he sows to the wind and the fruits of his life are found in the whirlwind. He demonstrates his own proper character. As he lives men estimate him. He blights everything he touches. By his fruits you know him.—Texas Christian Advocate.

Love Which Passeth Knowledge

In the prayer which Paul offered for his Ephesian friends he asks that they may be enabled "to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge." This rare petition suggests a truth of present importance. There are things in religion which can be felt, but not explained. Experience goes where knowledge cannot travel. There are feelings which deny analysis. Our logic limps and halts when we undertake to explain and classify some of the deeper things of the religious life. There are things which it is quite impossible to know in the sense of understanding them. They are too high for us.

Some have been disposed to think overmuch, possibly, of these deeper experiences. They have been called "the mystics." Perhaps the average of us does not think enough about them. It has been the tendency to emphasize the logical and intellectual somewhat at the expense of the mystical and emotional. The latter deserves emphasis as well as the former. It is well to remember that the most precious things of the Christian life are the things that go beyond analysis. Paul had a remarkable experience in which he heard unspeakable words—things beyond the power of our limited human speech to express. To him it was to be in the third heaven for a time. There are privileges like that awaiting believers.

Things we cannot know with the intellect can be known by the heart. Things which cannot be explained may nevertheless be profoundly felt and may bring rich and joyful experiences with them. The knowledge of experience reaches heights to which the reason cannot climb.

Do we not speak soberly when we say that our present and pressing need is to know the love of Christ in this experimental way? The love of Christ passeth knowledge. It is something that defies our analysis. Our logic is powerless to explain it. Cold reason falls limp when it tries to explore the glowing mysteries of the immeasurable love of Jesus Christ to men. The breadth and length and height and depth are beyond all mind. It surpasses knowledge.

But this thing which we cannot explain fully can be known in an enriching experience. Nothing means so much to a Christian life as actually to feel the warmth and glow of the love of Jesus. That is the supreme privilege of the children of God. That is the joy which lies in the heart of real Consecration. Nothing exceeds it. Nothing excels it.

We suggest that each Christian may well make the crowning petition of this old prayer his own personal petition, as the activities of the year's work are begun. There will be a large success in all of those activities if they are inspired by a personal experience of the love of Christ. There will be great achievements when all in the Church come to know Christ's love with this experimental knowledge.—United Presbyterian.

FRANCES C. JENKINS.

An Appreciation.

By Her Daughter—Stella Frances Jenkins.

To go to sleep at night in health and strength with the words, "Good-night" upon the lips, having spent the day in the usual activities, with mental faculties bright and vigorous despite the nearly 90 years, with spiritual life at flood-tide, to awaken in the morning hours to know only a few moments of physical distress, then to pass quietly and painlessly to the spiritual home is a benediction to a long and useful life—is indeed a blessed privilege.

Such a privilege was that of my mother, Frances C. Jenkins, who entered her spiritual home Tuesday morning, December 14, 1915.

The daughter of Luke and Rhoda Wiles, she was born near New Castle, Indiana, April 13, 1826. She was married November 23, 1843, to Benjamin F. Jenkins. In 1847 they removed to Wabash, Indiana. They were among the early settlers of the county and were charter members of Wabash Monthly Meeting of Friends.

Young though they both were, they were earnest, active, valued members of the meeting. My father being considered a man of "sound judgment," was often used on important committees, while my mother, giving evidence of "a gift in the ministry," was recorded a minister in 1855 in her 29th year. A little later, being greatly interested in temperance, she led the early crusades in Wabash and a number of neighboring towns with the result that many saloons were permanently closed. In 1866 they removed to Onarga, Illinois, where with a few Friends they established a Friends meeting. Here their joint activity kept saloons out of the town, though one was often threatened. In 1874 they removed to Georgetown, Illinois, where they soon assisted in establishing a Friends meeting, of which my mother was pastor for a number of years.

In 1881 and 1882 they spent a number of months in Kansas City, Missouri, where again they assisted in organizing a Friends meeting. In 1888 my mother went to England under the auspices of Western Yearly Meeting of Friends, to visit the meetings of Friends and to engage in evangelistic and temperance work as "way might open." The "way did open" and she remained there fifteen months in active, acceptable work.

After my father's death in 1889 my mother came to Kansas City, serving the meeting here as pastor for a time. She spent the greater part of 1891 and 1892 in Tennessee and North Carolina, visiting Friends meetings and schools. Returning to Kansas City in 1893 she assisted in the work of the church here and in Kansas, visiting families and meetings and holding evangelistic meetings as strength and health permitted. At this time she was the first president of The Federation of Women's Clubs in Kansas City and she was also president of the first Equal Suffrage Association of this city.

She was the mother of nine children, all of whom lived to reach maturity; five of whom survive her. They are: Mrs. A. F. Ebbinghouse of Wabash, Indiana; Mrs. Emma L. Teague of Long Beach, Cal.; L. A. Jenkins of Chicago, Mrs. J. D. Newby, Mrs. C. C. Pickett and the writer, of Kansas City, Missouri.

During the last ten years of her life failing strength prevented her engaging in regular active service, though she attended Kansas, Western and Indiana Yearly Meetings during this period, and there were not often many Sabbaths in succession when she could not attend meeting. Although not able for much active service herself, she was keenly alive to the needs of the world and the obligation of the church to meet those needs. To the last she rejoiced in each forward move of those able for the work. Her presence at meetings was always felt as a power for good.

These are the outward incidents of my mother's life. The heart and mind and soul experiences for which they stand are as important and far deeper; too deep, perhaps, for even a daughter to fully understand. Who can indeed penetrate the alembic of a soul and adequately portray it? Still there are some things that I want to set down, simply, for I earnestly believe that the world today has need of some of her outstanding traits of mind and heart-soul.

First of all, I know that the years of her long life of service were marked by a devotion to the Gospel of Christ, by loyalty to the Bible as she understood it, by a commanding dependence on God and the Holy Spirit not experienced by everyone.

Married very young, at not quite eighteen, her "book education" was naturally limited in those pioneering days. But she was ever a student. As far back as she could remember she loved to read and later to study the Bible. In her early girlhood she distinctly felt the call to the ministry. As she entered the ministry, even in that early day—1855—she felt keenly the lack of scholarly training, but she gathered about her a number of choice books written by spiritually minded, scholarly men; these she studied, then with her own Bible she was deeply taught of the Spirit.

Whatever success she may have had, she always felt was due to His guidance and power. Her "gift" in the ministry had two well-defined characteristics; the searching, penetrating, kindly power of the true evangelist; the up-building in Christian character of the true teacher. Hundreds were converted and built up under her ministry. A number of well known Friends' ministers trace their conversions to her ministry.

Her power in prayer was marked. As one said at her funeral service, "Her prayers were often wonders of divine power." On Sabbath before her death on Tuesday she closed the Kansas City meeting with a prayer that will be a lifelong benediction on the lives of all those present.

Her power of vision was so great it was often painful—painful if the vision was not realized. Her ministry began with a vision—the vision of a church quiet and inactive bound by forms, aroused to a comprehension of its privileges and responsibilities. Her life ended with a vision—the vision of the church making known to this distressed war-torn world the profound human and divine possibilities of Peace on earth, good will among men.

She went from us with this great vision on her heart and in her mind to greet Him. Appropriate services were held for her here and at Wabash, Indiana, where she was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the Friends cemetery.

Kansas City, Missouri.

NEWS NOTES.

Amy B. Hawkins, pastor at Calvary, Kansas, was able again to fill the pulpit on last Sabbath, having been absent the three previous Sabbaths on account of having a severe attack of grippe.

Isaac L. Kinsey will hold a series of meetings at Sullivant Avenue, Columbus, Ohio, beginning February 3.

Clarence Cosand will assist the pastor, John Pennington, in meetings at Highland Avenue, Columbus, Ohio, beginning February 6.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

AN ARTICLE BY CHARLES E. TEBBETTS.

On another page of this issue of The American Friend, our General Secretary writes of work at our mission stations in Cuba, as he has seen it during his recent visit. Other articles will appear soon dealing similarly with Jamaica and describing the trip to Panama and the great Congress which meets there from February 10th to 20th.

FRIENDS DELEGATES START FOR PANAMA.

On February 2nd, D. Solomon Tice of C. Victoria and Genaro Ruiz, pastor of the Meeting at Matamoros, Mexico, sailed from New Orleans on S. S. Cartago enroute for Colon. Sylvester Jones of Gibara and Clarence G. McClean of Holguin, Cuba, started from Santiago to Colon, going by way of Port Antonio and Kingston, Jamaica. These four Friends, together with Charles Tebbetts, will represent the Society of Friends at the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America meeting at Panama on February 10th to 20th.

LIRHANDA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Edgar T. Hole, who with his family returned recently to this country for their furlough, has written of the work at the Lirhanda Station of our mission, the Friends Africa Industrial Mission, in British East Africa. The paragraph refers to developments which took place recently before he left Africa.

"One new point has been added to the regular Sunday morning outpost preaching places supplied by our Christian workers. One young man who had taken two wives before becoming a Christian, has put away his second wife, and, with several other young people, desires to join the church. The temporary school house at Lirhanda Station has been rebuilt on a site which is more suitable in view of the permanent chapel which is under construction. The attendance in all of our schools has been about normal. One headman who has no school in his district has asked us to supply a teacher. We have arranged to do so as soon as he provides the necessary building. By the addition of more than one thousand young plants, our coffee patch has been enlarged to twelve hundred trees. We are beginning to pick some coffee from the few trees which were planted less than three years ago."

URBANO, BORN IN SLAVERY AND BORN TO FREEDOM.

It is remarkable how interesting some apparently uninteresting people become when we learn to know them well. If it is true that by scratching skin deep we find the savage, it is a much pleasanter truth that if we go deep enough we will find under the most un-promising exterior the heart of a hero.

When Urbano began coming to the meetings he was one of a large number who in those early days came through curiosity or because of the novelty. The difference between him and the others was that he kept coming while many others came and went. There was nothing spectacular in his conversion, it seemed rather to be the finding of that which corresponded to the deep currents of his own life.

More than seventy years before he found Christ, his soul's liberator, Urbano was born in slavery. His experience was not only "up from slavery," but up through slavery, for by his own efforts and industry he earned enough to buy his freedom. Notwithstanding his unassuming demeanor and the weight of years, his whole character disclosed a consciousness of having done a man's job.

His service for the church was always very simple but very punctual and gladly rendered. It was his work to take the offering in the meetings. In those days it was a hard task, for the people were not accustomed to such things and men came to jeer and taunt, but he did his work with dignity and he always had a smile instead of a frown for those who mocked. His testimonies were simple, his prayers were the unadorned expression of his desires. Perhaps more frequent than any other his prayer was, "Lord, help me to testify for thee." His faithfulness was his greatest testimony.

Then came his last sickness, a time of great suffering for him. One day he sent for me to come to his bedside. I knew the end could not be far off. He greeted me with a faint smile. He thanked me for coming, but explained that he had not sent for me because he had any uneasiness about his soul's welfare. He was trusting in the Savior and was at peace, but he wanted me to come and be with him that he might thank me again for leading him to Jesus Christ who was more precious than all the world to him. A solemn joy came to me as I stood in that peaceful death room. What joy can be greater than that of having introduced a man to Jesus Christ, even though it be in his closing years on earth! Soon he was at rest, and his earthly body, for which he had toiled weary years to redeem, was consigned to the dust, but his soul, redeemed by Jesus Christ, passed into that larger beyond of God's own presence.

Sylvester Jones.

NO TIME FOR WRITING.

In reply to a request for an article for this page sent recently to R. Solomon Tice at C. Victoria, Mexico, he has written explaining why he is unable to send anything at present. Mr. Tice is in charge of the Mission farm where the boys attending Juarez Institute will, when the Institute re-opens, secure the vocational training so urgently needed by young men who are to make up the working force of the church in the better days to come. A part of his letter follows:

"I certainly am glad that the department of foreign missions has been started in The American Friend. Am only sorry that my time is so limited that I can't supply much material from this Mission for publication. You may be able to understand the situation if I tell you a little about present conditions. I have just finished setting out 500 lime and lemon trees that I had ordered last year. I should have preferred to leave them another year, but as I ordered them I felt under moral obligations to receive them. Our cows are almost starving for want of pasture. I have just sowed some 8 or 10 acres of oats for this purpose, but they are not up enough to pasture, so have to hunt fodder where I can find it to tide over the critical time, but meantime our cows are going dry and, although we have the work of milking and feeding and delivering the milk, the income is practically nothing. Our fences have fallen into such a bad state that just when we are busy with some very urgent work we have to stop to repair fences, gates, etc. Then we receive word that the house in town has been broken into and the doors need to be repaired. At the same time, I am hunting teachers to open school but so far had almost despaired of success. Last evening I succeeded in getting one more. I still lack one. School is to open Monday. This is Friday and nothing has been done in the way of getting six rooms ready. Today and tomorrow, I have this work to do, besides moving our household goods into other quarters so as to make room for a family which is to occupy Juarez Institute so there will be some one in charge of the property. In the midst of all this comes a funeral that I had to preach. Next Wednesday, I leave for Panama."

IMPORTANT.

All articles intended for publication in The American Friend, including news matter, should be sent to the office at Richmond, Indiana. We want more news about Friends and their work, real news while it is fresh, anything of unusual importance and value that will be an inspiration to other Friends and other meetings.

CHURCH AT WORK

Richmond, Indiana—The two week's series of Evangelistic meetings which have been held by Wm. J. Sayers of Muncie, Indiana at East Main street, Friends Meeting, Richmond, Indiana, closed Sabbath evening January 30th. In spite of inclement weather and much sickness the meetings were well attended and much interest was manifested. His ministry was strong and forceful, presenting the simple Gospel truth, honoring the Scripture as the word of God, and calling men to a high standard of Christian living. His three-fold appeal to the unsaved, to backsliders and to the Christian to re-emphasize his allegiance to Christ brought a good response, many persons signing the cards and thus taking a definite stand in the meetings. Good music was furnished by a chorus choir and special musical numbers were given by local talent. We were greatly favored in having over both Sabbaths the Boy Soprano, Elsworth Robertson, from near Farmland, Indiana. His sweet singing was much appreciated.

West Milton, Ohio—After being out of our church for several weeks, on account of some repairs that were being made, we have again gotten settled down to work. All the different lines of work manifest live and good interest. There is a steady growth in all departments. Our C. E. has taken up the study of peace suggested by the Young Friends Board, and is doing good work. The members have greatly strengthened the evening meeting by staying for the gospel service and by taking part as way may open for it. We have been favored by the presence of several Friends, and especially our Superintendent, Truman C. Kenworthy, whose stirring messages were of unusual power. The married women's Bible School class and the Young ladies class had a very enjoyable and profitable class meeting during this month. The C. E. also held a social at the parsonage on the evening of January 27.

Calvary, Kansas—We were glad to greet a good attendance both morning and evening on Sabbath, January 23 at Calvary. There has been so much grippe and scarlet fever in the neighborhood since just before the holidays that the attendance has been small.

Stafford, Kansas—Carl D. Byrd, pastor at Hopewell, Kansas, has just closed a three weeks' meeting here, in which there were over fifty definitely blessed. There are nine applicants for membership. Brother Byrd declared the whole truth and the word was preached in power and in the demonstration of the Spirit. He spoke very plain and delivered the messages so that all could understand. There was good order and interest though the weather was not very favorable.

Our Quarterly Meeting will be held here at Stafford, February 10-12.

Providence, R. I.—The young people of the Providence Friends' Meeting assembled for an exceedingly pleasant social hour, at the home of Charles and Hope Roundy, on Wednesday evening, January 26. This meeting is significant because of the fact that plans were made to begin a series of Sunday evening meetings, which will be devoted to the study of Quakerism as suggested by the plan published by the Young Friends' Board. As time goes on, vital subjects of interest to those attending will be taken up, and it is hoped that the effort will mean new inspiration and new interest. Resulting from the active work of Philip Gifford and Wilbur Young, the Providence Young Friends are receiving new stimulus and new enthusiasm. In addition to the Sunday evening meetings it is arranged for monthly social gatherings to be held at the homes of the young people.

South Glens Falls, New York—It is with a Spirit of thankfulness to God that the following report is given of conditions at the South Glens Falls Friends Church.

Following the special meetings conducted by Edgar A. Wollam, of the Cleveland Bible Institute, cottage prayer meetings were begun, and the interest in them continues. These meetings are in charge of the people themselves, the pastor taking no conspicuous part.

At one of the recent ones, there were 29 in attendance, and there has been one conversion of a man who was a hard drinker.

In addition to this phase of the extra work that is being done, an organization of the men of the Church and congregation has been perfected with a membership of 22 and more favorable prospects. The name of the organization is, "The Men's League of the Friends Church." The object is to foster the Social Life of its members and promote the interest of the Men's Bible Class of which there are now 15 members.

There is a large field for this class to work in, there being 60 men who are either members of the Church, or some member of the family is either a member or attends the Church and Sabbath School.

We solicit the prayers of all Christians everywhere that in some way we may be able to reach these men.

Woodland, N. C.—Contenteneva Quarterly Meeting of Friends was held at Woodland, beginning with the meeting on Ministry and Oversight January 21. There were no visiting ministers present, but those of our own Quarterly brought messages of gospel truth which were strengthening to us. The meeting was well attended and the business transacted in much harmony. On Seventh day many more came and the fore part of the meeting was occupied with gospel service. A. C. Barrett, pastor of Goldsboro meeting, led the opening exercises, and Thomas Chapel, pastor of Bethesda Monthly Meeting, preached an interesting sermon from the text "Give ye them to eat," laying much stress on how the boy's lunch was used to feed the multitudes, and how the little that we possess can be used of the Lord for the accomplishment of much good, if only consecrated to the Lord. The business was transacted in love. A request for a new monthly meeting to be set up at Oakland was granted and a committee appointed to attend the opening. An offering was taken to help defray the expenses of one of our members, who is taking treatment at a sanatorium for tuberculosis. It is hoped a cure can be effected. Thomas Chapel spoke to an attentive audience on First day morning on Christian living, showing the necessity of church members proving to the world that they believe what they profess. Others took part. The Word was well received, and we adjourned feeling that it had been a good day for Woodland.

Columbus, Ohio—Alum Creek Quarterly Meeting held at Highland avenue, Columbus, January 29-31, was a time of special favor. Logan Hunt who is holding meetings at Alum Creek was present on Seventh day with credentials from Winchester Quarterly Meeting. On sabbath Samuel Mosher, Quarterly Meeting Superintendent, preached two very helpful sermons. An inspiring C. E. meeting was held Sabbath afternoon. Catharine Stalker gave an intensely interesting missionary address.

New London, Indiana—Lindley A. Wells, Evangelistic Superintendent of Oregon Yearly Meeting, began a series of meetings at New London December 30th, continuing eighteen days. His teaching was clear and convincing, and strictly on bible lines. The meetings were characterized by deep spiritual power, but free at all times from excitement. There were a score or more who were definitely blessed in forgiveness of sins, renewing of covenant, and the filling of the Holy Spirit. Those who were led forward into the light came from a settled conviction of their need. The church and community have been greatly benefited by the spiritual uplift for which we have a deep feeling of gratitude. Since the close of the meetings a Bible Class has been organized for the young people, under the leadership of the pastor, J. I. Phillips. The class consists of thirty-four members and will make a study of the Book of St. John.

WANTED.

An interested Friend with a knowledge of stenography and typewriting is wanted immediately to take charge of peace headquarters at Washington. Write L. Hollingsworth Wood, 1811 I. Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Lo, all things are thine angels, Lord,
That bring my God to me;
Oh, for the ear to hear their word!
Oh, for the eye to see!

SUCCESSFUL MEN'S CONFERENCE

The men of Miami Quarterly Meeting held an inspiring conference at Waynesville, Ohio, upon the twenty-eighth of First Month. It was well attended, considering the heavy roads and the bad weather conditions.

The general topic for the morning was, "The Quaker Message: How may it be applied today?" The remarks of Homer Biddlecum, of Xenia, and of E. R. Purdy, of Wilmington, were very helpful and inspiring. The thoughts brought out in the discussion caused each to feel that he had a high ideal to follow in allying himself with Quakerism.

In the afternoon the topic: "Neighborhood Needs as Interpreted by Friends," was discussed by President J. Edwin Jay, of Wilmington College, followed by general discussion. Existing needs were spoken of, and methods suggested for the betterment of the several communities represented.

A banquet was held at the church in the evening. E. R. Purdy spoke on the question: "Does Preparedness Promote Peace?" and gave a practical and inspiring talk upon the subject so often in our thoughts. "Any peace program," he concluded, "will fail, unless rooted in the teachings of Christ." The discussion was continued by pastors from a number of our sister denominations.

Resolutions were adopted "that we, who attended, carry to our several home meetings the inspiration here received," and that we "do more and better work for the Master in the future than we have done in the past."

THE IOWA PAGE

PENN COLLEGE.

President Edwards has returned from a trip through the East, where he attended, as a delegate appointed by the Executive Committee of The Five Years Meeting, a conference called "The World's Conference On Faith and Order." This convention was attended by delegates from almost all the Christian denominations. The object is to bring about a better understanding among religious sects by setting forth more clearly the points in which they differ—as well as those in which they are alike. It is the common thought of all that the differences among religious sects are not as diverting as is supposed and that similarities are more pronounced than is the usual opinion. While the convention did not grapple with the great questions at issue in a way that was expected, yet the details for further conference were carried out so that the movement bids fair to accomplish what it has set out to do, although the time which may be required to do this may be longer than was generally expected.

President Edwards visited a number of points in the East, returning to Chicago in time to attend the Second Annual Meeting of the Association of American Colleges, of which Robert L. Kelly is President. Both President Kelly and President Sharpless of Haverford, gave addresses at the convention. President Kelly has, both in the organization and development of this Association, occupied a conspicuous place and has rendered excellent service. Perhaps the most important occasion of the Association was the institution of a great nationwide educational campaign, to be engaged in by all the leading denominations and to be carried on for three years and to lead up to a financial campaign.

The purpose of this project is to challenge the mind of the nation to the importance of Christian education as carried forward in the denominational colleges. It is a well recognized fact that a denominational and independent college has not been given a place in our educational economy which the amount and character of the service rendered would warrant. People in general do not know what Christian education, as it is done by these institutions has meant in the shaping of our civilization. It is the determination that nothing shall be left undone which can be done to give to the Christian college its place both in the minds and convictions of the people and in our educational system. The Executive Committee of the Educational Board of The Five Years Meeting held a session on the 20th inst, at which some very important matters were considered. It is the intention that our Board will co-operate in this interdenominational campaign as much as it is possible for us to do.

FIELD NOTES.

The Des Moines Friends, through the work of the Missionary Committee of the Monthly Meeting, are arranging to furnish lodging and breakfast free, to all the active pastors of Iowa Yearly Meeting, who attend the Laymen's Missionary Convention at Des Moines Iowa, February 20-22.

PEACE DEPARTMENT

NOTE—It is hoped that this page may present in brief form a record of activities typical of the work Friends are doing for peace. News items, short, pointed arguments, suggested plans, all will be welcome, and will be used subject to the limitations of space and the proper distribution and arrangement of the matter received. All communications intended for this page should be addressed to Allen D. Hole, President, 615 National Road, West, Richmond, Indiana.

WORK BEING DONE FOR PEACE.

At Minneapolis, Minn.

In spite of the efforts of some public leaders and of the press in general to make it appear that public sentiment is strongly in favor of the military program, there is a decided undercurrent of opposition that bids fair to save us from the dangers of such a course.

Among our farmers, working men, business and professional men, everywhere are those whose coolness and sound sense are not to be shaken by any panic of fear and distrust that the militarists may be able to create. At a recent meeting in Minneapolis of the Saturday Lunch Club, made up of representative business and professional men, the military propaganda received a severe jolt. A plea for preparedness was first made by a man of prominence in the affairs of the city and state. His remarks were respectfully but rather coldly received, while two speeches supporting the opposition made by a local editor and by Samuel Haworth, our Friends' minister and President of the Minneapolis Peace Society, were greeted most heartily.

Samuel Haworth's argument was based on the two propositions that "preparedness" is "part of an international policy that fails to accomplish the ends for which it is proposed," and "hinders the positive forces that work together for the achievement of these ends."

One professional man remarked afterwards that he had gone to the meeting fully expecting to find the "preparedness" issue supported by a large majority, but was convinced that fully eighty per cent of those present were against it.

No opportunity to further the cause of peace should be missed. America needs the Friends' message as never before, and there is abundant reason to believe that she will respond to it, too, if we can live up to the great obligation that this crisis has placed upon us.

In accordance with the recommendation made at the Winona Peace Conference, the Minneapolis Meeting instructed Howard Stout to write to Minnesota senators and representatives. The result was most gratifying as he received replies from two senators and eight representatives.

At Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Oskaloosa Meeting, Iowa Yearly Meeting, has been giving some attention to the study of the Peace and War question. Two Sunday evening meetings were given to the discussion of "The Roots of War" and "The Foundations of Peace," by Professor Clarence M. Case, of Penn College. The Christian Endeavor Society has begun the study of the studies in International Peace published by the Peace Association of Friends in America. Professor Case also gave addresses at the Chapel at Penn College on four occasions, treating the various phases of resistance, viz., Non-Resistance, Violent Resistance, and Passive Resistance, with the respective national policies which grow out of them.

In Kansas Yearly Meeting.

The Peace Committee of Kansas Yearly Meeting has organized for thorough work in the cause of peace and the efforts of their appeals are being shown in different parts of the Yearly Meeting. Demands are coming from many points for addresses on the phases of the question which are just now before the public and these calls are being responded to by different speakers in the Yearly Meeting. The Chairman of the Committee, Professor William L. Pearson, has spoken on a number of different occasions both among Friends and others. He has also supplied to the Wichita Daily Beacon two articles recently giving an interpretation of peace from the Christian standpoint.

In California.

Robert C. Root as Chairman of the Peace Committee of California Yearly Meeting, and as Pacific Coast director of the American Peace Society, is busy both among Friends and others making addresses, contributing articles to various papers, publishing and distributing material on the phases of the question prominently before the public just now and carrying on an extensive correspondence on various phases of the question. One leaflet which has just been published under his direction which is of especial value at this time, is a re-print, by permission, of Congressman Claude Kitchin's statement in regard to the nation's preparedness. The same subject received treatment at Robert Root's hands in a letter printed recently in the San Francisco Chronicle in which he calls attention to the impossibility of successful attacks being made upon the United States, based upon the testimony given by officers of the army and navy. By the Peace Committee of Indiana

Yearly Meeting.

The Peace Committee of Indiana Yearly Meeting is sending out to each of the local meetings desiring it, a pamphlet entitled "Military Training in Our Schools." This pamphlet summarizes the most important considerations opposed to the adoption of such a system. The Committee is also assisting the peace study classes organized by the young people by donating copies of the book issued under the auspices of the Commission on Christian Education of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and the Church Peace Union, giving a series of selected quotations from different writers on different phases of the peace question. Ten study groups have been supplied in this way with the book and others will be furnished upon application.

By the Chairman of the Peace Committee of Iowa Yearly Meeting.

Alvin Hoskins, Chairman of the Peace Committee of Iowa Yearly Meeting, has prepared an illustrated lecture on peace entitled, "The European War and International Peace." This lecture is illustrated by about one hundred stereopticon slides, some of which have been made from photographic reproductions of scenes of the European war. He is giving as much time to the work of lecturing as can well be spared from his duties as pastor and is evidently accomplishing much for the cause of peace.

Summary.

From correspondence which reaches the office of the President of the Peace Association of Friends in America it appears that it is the general opinion that if all who are convinced that the present agitation for preparedness is unwise, are faithful in giving expressions to their views, both to their fellow citizens and to their representatives in Congress, our nation can be saved from committing itself to a policy of greatly increased military preparedness at this time.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED.

The following contributions have been received by the Young Friends Board from August, 1915, to January 30, 1916:

Indiana	$155.00
Western	149.00
New York	81.25
Baltimore	69.00
Wilmington	56.25
New England	32.75
Canada	20.75
Iowa	20.75
North Carolina	19.40
California	10.25
Nebraska	10.25
Philadelphia	4.50
Kansas25
Oregon25
Ohio25

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR FEBRUARY 20.

In today's lesson three texts have been quoted on the theme "Prevention of War" which have been at the foundation of Friends' policy in past generations.

In the first place, the Gospel of Matthew indicates the way to settle disputes, in the early church it assumes that all men are brethren. No elaborate system of Popes, Bishops, Priests, college of the index or Board for excommunication existed. Christians were to bring their differences to each other and there talk them over in the light of reason. With clear unbiased thought they were to examine the facts and find an agreement. If, however, this would not suffice, two or three other Christians who possessed a clear understanding of the differences should be brought in. If this failed then the matter was to be laid before the whole church where the consensus of unbiased judgment could be sought. In the extreme case of this failing to bring a reconciliation the accused was to be considered as a stranger. He might be considered selfish taxgatherer too, but he was not to be fought. He was simply to be treated as an unfriendly person, one who was not willing to fit into God's human brotherhood.

As soon as he returned he was to be forgiven. This must happen even to the seventy and seventh time.

This has been Friends' way of dealing with disputes between two people in the Meeting, and very few law suits have resulted. It is to be greatly regretted that Friends have not always followed their principles in this matter.

Again, Paul shows the spirit of the above passage, when he is so deeply grieved because some Corinthian Christians brought suit against their fellow religionist. He says that if there are judgments to be passed let them come from fellow Christians and not from those who have never tasted of the joy of the Christian life. Paul argues from his conception of the triumphant Kingdom of God to individual behavior. He says if the saints judge themselves in this kingdom so all who bear the name of Christian should obey a Christian tribunal. With feigned surprise the apostle asks if the Corinthians have no one who is wise enough for the service? He asks, is that the reason they go before unbelieving judges? He intimates that all misunderstandings should be kept out of the law courts and solved by the Christian principle of reason and love.

Here, again Friends who have followed this method have been greatly prospered. In the last case our topic points to Isaiah's plan for settling disputes. He says that Jehovah is to be exalted until all nations shall recognize him as supreme. Then all peoples will worship him with common devotion. The tribal idea of God leading armies into battle will be abolished. All nations will be as brothers with each man dwelling peacefully under his vine and fig tree. The sword will be traded for plowshares and constructive implements will become honored.

These Christian principles and prophetic visions of past generations are priceless spiritual treasures today. They are being given practical popular consideration which means that at last people are conscious that there is meat for thought in them. The history of arbitration is relatively unimportant until the later part of the seventeenth century. At that time the Mennonites and Quakers openly opposed war. Individuals such as Henry IV of France, Emeri Cruce, William Penn, J. J. Rousseau, Benjamin Franklin and Immanuel Kant, have stood for this principle since that time.

In recent years the remarkable work of The Hague Conferences has greatly increased the number of treaties. Many crises between nations have been averted. Although treaties have been broken in this war, is that any argument for abolishing all treaty regulations? A multitude of causes entered in to cause this conflagration. It is probable that treaty regulations had little to do with it. International courts for conciliation and arbitration should be formed now that no future war may arise. Courts however, cannot prevent war unless people are educated to abhor all such conflicts. A new sense of honor must be taught. Americans are proud of their country and flag, not for the battles she has fought, but for her great pieces of constructive work, her inventions and her cargoes of food stuffs. She should not be honored for shipping war supplies to the Allies but for sending Christmas ships and relief vessels to suffering Belgium and Poland.

It is high time that Christians learn the lesson of trusting our neighbors and loving our enemies instead of dreaming of invading foes. Every virile, red blooded young Friend should rise to meet the challenge of military preparedness with an aggressive stand for Peace. We will give our lives for our country but we propose to do so on the highest principles of humanity, instead of losing our lives in attempting to take that of another. The time is here for a positive stand. How many will take it?

Write to your Representative in Congress. Telegraph him when the Preparedness bill comes up. "If we are defeated we will die fighting." Let every Young Friend stand by his principles in these dark days.

PROTECTING QUAKER NAME.

Hearings were had before the House Patent Committee at Washington on the morning of February 2, upon H. R. 380, designed to prevent the registry as a trade mark of a denominational name, or the name by which a denomination is commonly called.

On the following day a hearing was had before a sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee upon H. R. 435, a bill to forbid shipments in inter-state commerce of any article bearing the name of a denomination or the name by which a denomination is commonly known.

These hearings were under the joint charge of Friends' Board on Legislation and Temperance and Friends of the Hicksite branch. Speakers were S. E. Nicholson, Benjamin H. Doane, Henry M. Haviland, L. Hollingsworth Wood and Dr. O. E. Janney of the Friends; E. C. Dinwiddie, Lutheran, and Dr. Vincent and W. B. Wheeler, Congregationalists. Miles White, Jr., Lindley D. Clark and wife, Mrs. Frank Wilson and others interested were present.

Counsel for the Quaker Oats Co. and a Quaker Lace Co. appeared in opposition. For the most part questions by the committeemen appeared friendly, but no action has yet been taken.

STELLA ACADEMY.

Stella Academy is starting nicely since the holidays. Every Sabbath night some of the students are being definitely blessed. In the absence of the pastor, Fred Harris filled the pulpit on Sabbath morning and evening, January 9. Alvin Coppock preached on the morning of January 16 and the Young Men's Gospel Band had charge of the night service. Three persons were renewed in the Christian life. On January 23, Professor John Howard preached in the morning and the young ladies had charge of the night meeting. One person was renewed in the Christian life.

WITH THE CHILDREN

MARY ALICE'S VALENTINE.

By ALTHEA BROWN.

Mary Alice had gone up town to buy some thread for Big Sister Susan, and she came upon a group of children looking at the wonderful display of valentines in Hartwell's window. Several of them were Mary Alice's schoolmates and she joined the group. "Hello, Mary Alice," cried Mabel, "do look at that lovely valentine—the one with hearts all around the edge. I'm going to give it to Teacher."

"What kind of a valentine are you going to give Teacher?" inquired Tommy Allen of Mary Alice, as she pressed closer to the window. "I got mine last night. It's in a big box and cost a whole dollar."

Mary Alice slipped away without answering Tommy's question. Everybody would give Teacher a valentine, and she had no money to buy one. Mary Alice's family had to be very careful even with their pennies since her mother had been sick so long. "I love Teacher just as much as they do," thought Mary Alice, "and I've just got to give her a valentine some way."

When Mary Alice reached home Sister Susan noticed her sober little face. "What the matter, sweetheart," she asked. So Mary Alice told her all about it. Sister Susan thought a little bit, and then she smiled brightly.

"You shall give your teacher a valentine, dear. Do you remember that lovely box Aunt Madge sent you candy in on your last birthday? I'll make a lot of tiny candy hearts in my little heart-shaped pans—enough to fill the box. It won't take much sugar. How's that, honey?"

"Oh, goody, goody," and Mary Alice clapped her hands. "You always do think of the nicest things, Susan."

On Valentine Day, Mary Alice hurried home from school to find her big sister just ready to put the candy hearts in the box. There were molasses candy hearts—golden and waxy; chocolate hearts—rich and brown with nuts in them; tiny white peppermint hearts, and fat little pink hearts.

Mary Alice slipped over to the teacher's house just before dark. The teacher was sitting before the fire looking at the long row of valentines from her little pupils. In the middle stood Tommy Allen's expensive gift.

It was one of the most beautiful valentines the teacher had ever seen, and she loved Tommy because he wanted to give it to her, but she did wish he would not be so noisy and disturbing in school. As she glanced out the window she saw Mary Alice stealing up to the porch. She ran to the door. "You can't run away. I saw you," and she drew the little girl into the house.

Mary Alice shyly offered the box. The teacher opened it at once and saw all those delicious candy hearts inside. "Oh, Mary Alice," she cried, "this is the loveliest valentine I ever saw. How did you think of such a beautiful thing?" And Mary Alice was so happy that she sang all the way home.

Wilmington, Ohio.

THE RAM ALLAH RELIEF FUND

Hartford, Conn.,

January 25, 1916.

Dear Friends:

It gives me great pleasure to announce that we have received $1,218.00 for the Ram Allah Relief Fund. Friends and others from Maine to California have liberally contributed in this our hour of need and we wish to thank you most heartily. The State Department at Washington is forwarding the money for us so there is no doubt of its safe arrival.

Today we received a letter from our old mission servant, dated at Ram Allah November 14, which, although censored, brought us some cheering news. The property was evidently intact. He reports, however, about some jam we left that "the miceies torn the paper and went in them." They were of course Turkish mice and we couldn't expect anything better of them.

A man who has recently arrived from Jerusalem reports that the railroad between Jaffa and Ramleh has been torn up and the rails and ties used to extend the railroad from ancient Samaria through the plains of Sharon and Philistia to Beersheba. One of the magazines reports the line completed from Aleppo to Bagdad. If this is true, one can now go by rail from Beersheba to Bagdad.

Imagine Abraham and Sarah returning by rail from the former place to visit relatives in their old home at Ur. Things do change even in the immovable east.

A. EDWARD KELSEY.

NEWS NOTES.

A. M. Gibson and wife, of Ingersoll, Oklahoma, held a three weeks' meeting at Seiling, Oklahoma, commenc-

A Distinctive Reason

What is the chief reason for the superiority of Royal Baking Powder?

There are several good reasons, but there is one which distinguishes Royal from other baking powders.

This reason, which every woman should know, is that Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, which comes from grapes. This means a healthful fruit origin. It means natural food as distinguished from mineral substitutes used in other baking powders.

There is no alum nor phosphate in Royal Baking Powder.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO
New York

ing on January 2. There were good results.

Prof. Henry J. Cadbury preached at South 8th Street Friends meeting, Richmond, Indiana, on the morning of January 30, and at West Richmond meeting in the evening.

Francis Anscombe, a senior in Earlham College and pastor of South Eighth Street meeting, Richmond, preached for West Richmond Friends on the morning of January 30.

The C. E. Society at Woodland, N. C., is receiving new members at almost every monthly business meeting.

The Friends Messenger reports a revival at South Fork, N. C., with sixty conversions and renewals and twenty-four requests for membership.

The Evangelistic and Church Extension department of North Carolina Yearly Meeting is calling for annual instead of semi-annual reports from the Quarterly Meetings. Reports are to be sent in July 1.

EARLHAM COLLEGE NEWS.

With the opening of the second semester Henry J. Cadbury, who has been at the head of the Biblical Department throughout the first semester, has gone back to his work at Haverford College. Thomas E. Jones will take the bulk of his work, while Francis C. Anscombe, who is a senior in Earlham and pastor of the South Eighth street Friends meeting, has been engaged to teach a course on the Hebrew prophets, this course to run throughout the present semester. Ross A. Hadley will continue his work as heretofore.

EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Martha Thornton was the guest of honor at a gathering in the Friends meeting house in Pennville, Indiana, on December 14, the occasion being her eightieth birthday anniversary. Years ago she and her husband went to Portland, Indiana, and held a series of meetings on the fair ground, which was really the foundation of the first Friends meeting in Jay County. Later they branched out and were the means of organizing every meeting in Portland Quarterly Meeting, one of the latest being that at Pennville, where there is now a congregation of about a hundred members.

On the 14th, Friends began early to gather at the church, bringing well filled baskets. At eleven o'clock an informal meeting was held lasting until noon, George Bird, a former pastor and now pastor at Portland, pre-

Three Hundred Million Bushel Crop in 1915

Farmers pay for their land with one year's crop and prosperity was never so great.

Regarding Western Canada as a grain producer, a prominent business man says: "Canada's position today is sounder than ever. There is more wheat, more oats, more grain for feed, 20% more cattle than last year and more hogs. The war market in Europe needs our surplus. As for the wheat crop, it is marvelous and a monument of strength for business confidence to build upon, exceeding the most optimistic predictions."

Wheat averaged in 1915 over 25 bushels per acre
Oats averaged in 1915 over 45 bushels per acre
Barley averaged in 1915 over 40 bushels per acre

Prices are high, markets convenient, excellent land low in price either improved or otherwise, ranging from $12 to $30 per acre. Free homestead lands are plentiful and not far from railway lines and convenient to good schools and churches. The climate is healthful. There is no war tax on land, nor is there any conscription. For complete information as to best locations for settlement, reduced railroad rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, address siding. Following a song and reading of the seventeenth chapter of John, George Jackson led in prayer. Others followed with short talks. Nettie Springer, of Indianapolis gave the principal address. Many spoke of the blessing which Martha Thornton has been to them in their Christian life.

G. W. AIRD, 215 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Indiana.

Canadian Government Agent.

Dinner was served at twelve o'clock in the basement of the meeting house where three tables were spread for the assembled company. Another service followed in the afternoon at two o'clock with interesting talks by several persons, to which Aunt Martha responded in a few well chosen words.

MARRIED

Deering-Ludwig—At the home of the bride's parents at Cedar Point, Kansas, December 29, 1915, Arthur Deering to Margaret G. Ludwig, C. C. Haines officiating.

Mendenhall-Odle—At the home of the bride's parents at Cedar Point, Kansas, December 28, Sylvester Mendenhall to Estella E. Odle, C. C. Haines officiating.

Tidwell-Lewis—At the home of the bride's parents at Saffordville, Kansas, December 25, 1915, Clarence Tidwell of Driftwood, Oklahoma, to Lucy Lewis, C. C. Haines officiating.

DIED

Bean—J. L. Bean, son of Joel and Louisa Bean, was born near Farmington, Maine, March 12, 1853, and died at his home near LeGrand, Iowa, January 2, 1916, aged 62 years, 9 months and 21 days. He was a birthright Friend and at the age of sixteen he began to preach, being recorded a minister in his early manhood. He was a successful evangelist and the author of a religious work. In 1873 he married Abbie S. Jacobs, who together with two sons survives him.

Hoover—Mary Jay Hoover, daughter of Elijah and Ann Jay, was born in Miami county, Ohio, June 10, 1836, and died at her home in West Branch, Iowa, December 16, 1915. She married John Y. Hoover in 1855. She was a birthright Friend and after her marriage was recorded a minister, traveling with her husband in evangelistic work. For eight years she has been unable to leave her home, but has been a source of strength and encouragement to all who knew her.

FOR SALE at a bargain: six 10-acre tracts of land and two large tracts. Some of these have bearing orange and fig groves; all located in a splendid Friends' community, near Friends church and academy, also near public school. Good hard roads. Located in the orange and fig district of Texas. For particulars address P. M. Hoke, Colfax, Illinois.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED in a private home in Washington. Convenient to car line and Union Station. Laura N. Wilson, 46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

Christian Endeavor Supplies

BOOKS

Bible Chains.....	$0.35
Child's Quiet Hour.....	.35
Christian Endeavor Manual.....	1.00
Clean and Strong.....	1.00
Enjoyable Entertainments.....	1.00
Fifty Missionary Programmes.....	.35
F. E. Clark Year Book.....	.50
Good Times With The Juniors.....	.50
Junior Endeavor.....	1.00
Manual of Physical Training.....	1.00
Prayers for the Quiet Hour.....	1.00
Why We Believe the Bible.....	1.00
Adventures in Tibet.....	1.50
Bible in Lesson and Story.....	1.25
Citizens in Training.....	.35
Continent of Opportunity.....	1.50
Daily Message for Christian Endeavorers.....	1.00
And many others.

HYMN BOOKS

(Purchaser pays shipping charges)

Service Songs (in quantities).....	$0.20
Jubilant Praise (in quantities)....	.20
The Praise Book (in quantities)....	.25
The Endeavor Hymnal (in quantities).....	.25
And others.

PINS AND NOVELTIES

Various Endeavor Pins, ranging in price: Solid gold, from 60c to $1.50; and in silver from 15c to 75c.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

Present Day Message of Quakerism.....	$1.00
Men's Conference Proceedings, paper, 75c.; cloth.....	1.00
Monthly Meeting Chronicle.....	.15

Send orders for the above to

THE AMERICAN FRIEND
RICHMOND, INDIANA

BIBLE SCHOOL

FEBRUARY 20.

Subject—The Christian Brotherhood of Jerusalem. (Temperance Lesson).

Lesson—Acts 4:32—5:16.

Golden Text—Love one another from the heart fervently. I Peter 1:22.

The new sect was wonderfully united. They were together daily almost as one great family. We cannot say with certainty how diverse the classes were which now composed the group, but there is evidence that in the main they were, from what we call the lower classes. There were, however, those who had property. So we look for other than social reasons for this unusual expression of solidarity. It is the general testimony that Christian groups lived in a hitherto unknown atmosphere of brotherly love—even beyond that of the fellowship of the Greek Mystery sects. The coming of the Spirit and the new sense of belonging to Christ had banished all former barriers. In fact it almost carried the early Christians to the other extreme. Having come into the group a new sense of superiority—a holier than thou attitude tended to make them appear to stand aloof from their former companions in an unchristlike sense. The fact that they had plenty of means (for the time) assisted in the living of an easy and unnatural life, a kind of life which soon meant poverty and suffering.

What caused them to begin this system of having all things in common? Perhaps the best explanation is to be found in the idea current a little later, and we presume now, that Christ was to return in a short time as the great Messianic Judge. In view of this hope what was the use to bother with worldly goods, they had plenty for the intervening period so they sold what they had and lived a happy glorious life for the time being. The Christians at Thessalonica obtained a similar idea from Paul and with some difficulty he straightened matters out with them. This attempt at community effort has been tried over and over again and has so far always failed. There is an idea underlying it that is splendid and one which we hope we are approaching but any method that relieves all or a part of any community from physical labor is unnatural. What we hope will eventually obtain is that all will have sufficient to enable them to live in comfort, having sufficient leisure to enjoy the good things which the physical world gives. The Christian spirit of doing unto others, etc., will bring it to pass, but it can be accomplished in no other way.

All movements promising something desirable are trailed by the imitators. Ananias and his wife were of this type. They evidently coveted Barnabas' reputation of having sold all and given all for the benefit of the group and at the same time having something on the side for their own private enjoyment. The story records a hasty reward. Few people are so soon discovered in their meanness, few are so terribly punished, some get no visible punishment in this life at all, but punishment comes; of that we may be sure.

Before casting stones at this unfortunate and misguided couple perhaps we had better see if we are in any way posing before the public, claiming to have given up something for Christ and the Church, when as a matter of fact our deceitfulness is just as evident to us and the Spirit as theirs was.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue. Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books
The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.
Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Changing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.
Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.
Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.
Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills
Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.
Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward
Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 7.

SECOND MONTH 17, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 7.

The Choicest Fruits of Christianity

WE all believe that one of the choicest fruits of Christianity will be the growth of a bond of brotherhood and sisterhood so close among all nations, races and peoples, that we shall become truly kindred each to the other, and that great word Humanity, like a rolling wave of the ocean of God's love, shall wash out from the sands of time the words caste, creed, sex and even that good word patriotism, because we shall feel that the whole world is our country and all men are our kin. Every utterance of appreciation, affection and friendship; every token of mutual co-operation; every stroke of honest hard work undertaken side by side; every sincere prayer, helps forward this beautiful day that we call the coming of the Kingdom of Christ.

—Frances E. Willard.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.
For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

To the Bride

By ESTELLE SIMMS HEWSON

Dear Friend of mine! On this thy Bridal day,
The morn that ushers in thy future way,
I breathe a prayer for thee.

Sweet as thou art, to me, I do not ask
That pain shall ne'er be thine, or heavy task
For sorrow shows to us the wealth of joy.
But this I pray: "That in the coming years,
Thy, love, thy hope, thy faith, may still thy fears
And bear thee, safe, triumphant through them all.
May clouds roll back and leave a brighter sun,
And winters melt, for thee, to glorious spring."

Oh, Friend of mine, this is my wish for thee,
With heart as full of love as heart can be
I raise this prayer for thee.
Chicago, Ill.

American Friend Day

We trust that no Friends meeting in the Five Years Meeting will overlook the fact that March 5 is "American Friend Day." For reasons set forth on this page two weeks ago in "A Bit of Shop Talk," we feel that every Friends meeting ought to be counted upon in the observance of this day.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND is bound to be of increasing value to the Society of Friends in America, but its service is limited to the extent that any considerable number of Friends are not receiving the paper.

Investigation leads us to the belief that the larger meetings are patronizing THE AMERICAN FRIEND in greater proportion than the smaller meetings. There are a good many smaller meetings where not a single person is receiving the paper or only one or two at most. We want to urge that smaller meetings give special attention to the observance of "American Friend Day."

Friends should keep in mind that on "American Friend Day" announcements can be made of the paper to new subscribers for $1.00 the remainder of the present year.

Protecting the Quaker Name

We trust that Friends generally are writing their Senators and Congressmen at Washington asking them to support the bills designed to protect the Quaker name against commercial use. These bills are S. 666 and H. R. 380; S. 667 and H. R. 435.

The religious character of the Quaker name ought to be preserved, but at the present time an almost innumerable number of corporations are doing their best to give it a commercial significance. When natives in the foreign field learn that our Friends who are missionaries are sometimes called by the term Quaker, they ought not to be led to believe that their religious work has anything to do with Quaker Oats, or Quaker Ranges, or Quaker Lace, or Quaker Tires, or Quaker Vegetables, or Quaker Cigarettes, or Quaker Whiskey, or Quaker Beer.

Quakers Defending Their Name.

We sympathize with our Quaker friends in the embarrassments cast about them by the wicked abuse of their time-honored name by godless enterprises. For some time past they have been endeavoring to enjoin the maker of a well-known cereal from using their name for advertising purposes, but seemingly without avail; and now comes the heart-breaking discovery that a firm of distillers have named their poisonous output "Old Quaker Pure Rye Whisky" and have installed an electric sign to that effect in Columbus Circle, New York City. Another firm of brewers is devoting large space to advertising "Quaker beer." The Friends (or Quakers as they have been known for 250 years) have caused to be introduced in Congress two bills designed to correct the outrage.

In one sense it is a compliment to our Quaker brethren that men who have a product for sale stamp it with the name Quaker. Quakers have long had the reputation for honesty in religion, both as a profession and as a life. To thus commercialize a religious term for the sake of gold is extremely reprehensible; and to apply it to such products as above mentioned is despicable. We ourselves can imagine how our Quaker brethren feel if we should see the words "Methodist high-ball" set to electric lights and blazing before the thousands upon the highway. But no one would risk such a venture, for Methodism is strong and immediately politicians would vie with each other to claim the credit of champion. Though Quakers are few in number, the honored name should be protected from the unscrupulous, and we herewith join with them in entering protest at such unsanctified proceeding.
—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Prohibition at Washington

Write your Senators and Congressman at Washington without delay in behalf of prohibition for the District of Columbia and the national prohibition resolution, urging speedy and favorable action upon both these beneficent measures.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 7.

SECOND MONTH 17, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 7.

Use of Force in Settling Difficulties

We are giving space this week to an article, the one on "Friends and the Use of Force," with which many Friends will not agree, however much they may recognize the ability of the author. It harmonizes with the article by L. L. Hobbs on the "League to Enforce Peace," found on the Peace Page of THE AMERICAN FRIEND of January 27, against which some prominent Friends have already protested.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND justifies the use of these articles, on the ground that their publication will not only provoke serious consideration upon the part of the membership as a whole, but will afford ample opportunity for the elaboration of the historical Friends' position upon the questions involved, and at the same time invite closer scrutiny of the teachings of Jesus, in so far as they affect the fundamental policies and the practical conduct of human society. It seems regrettable that in a crisis like the present, Friends, who have earned a world-wide reputation for peace by a consistent and pronounced testimony against war, should be found striking any discordant note. We have no doubt that the great body of Friends in America, as well as in England, are ready to stand by the historic tenets of the Society of Friends in regard to war. Apparently, however, some divergence of views has arisen over the policies of a comparatively new organization, "The League to Enforce Peace," which combines a modified military program as the climax of certain practical efforts to promote peace.

Without reservation we believe the compulsory features of this otherwise excellent program are not only unnecessary, but belie the very purposes of the organization. It is not our purpose herein to speak specifically of this organization, except to say that when the nations shall have organized an international court and established an international Council of Conciliation, agreeing in connection therewith to foster the policy of frequent international conferences in a spirit of good will, the limit of fraternal co-operation among the nations has been reached, the very spirit of which is endangered by the addition of the contemplated military program.

It is argued that any system of world federation, which includes an international court and international agreements of any sort which may partake of the nature of international enactments of law, must have as its ultimate authority an international police, charged with the responsibility of enforcing its agreements and the decisions of its courts even to the point of making war upon the transgressor. Attention has been called to the existence of a standing army to enforce the decrees of the United States Congress and our Federal Courts, in justification of an international army, which under certain circumstances would be authorized to proceed against some recalcitrant member or members of the federation of nations. It will not be argued seriously, however, that the unity and perpetuity of the United States depends largely upon our standing army.

The union of states and their integrity as a federal body must depend upon something far more substantial than armed force. Otherwise our days as a nation are already numbered. It is the spirit of brotherhood and good will and the consciousness of national identity and mutual interest more than all else that assures our federal perpetuity and gives authority to our laws and their interpretation by our judiciary. It is easy just here to lay unwarranted stress upon the value of force as even an important element in the maintenance of national policies and national identity.

We are in danger of confusing terms in the demand for an international police. Probably civilization will never get away from the need of a community police as a means of maintaining social order against the disturbances of the lawless and the criminal. Whether or not the need of using force to quell internal disturbances may be extended to a national standing army is probably open to question, but it is not a factor primarily in this discussion. There are learned lawyers who argue with great wisdom that the Federal government under our Constitution does not have police power, which they say was specifically reserved to the States, but even that is apart from this argument, except as it may tend to answer the claim that the existence of a national army justifies the need of an international police force as the final authority in enforcing the decrees of a world federation.

But however much we may accept the need of a police force as the remedy for internal disorders, it is a far cry to the maintenance of an international army, or police, as the regulator of policies among the nations. The exercise of police force is directed against the unruly elements of society, whose lawlessness tends to overthrow the established order of government as a means of conserving the safety and welfare of the whole people. War between nations almost universally concerns differences in policies. To use the police to club a murderer or highwayman into subjection or even to quell a riot by forceful methods is quite a different thing from using the standing army of the country to enforce a certain policy of finance or a particular doctrine of public morals. In the one case the safety of the many depends upon the subjection of the unruly. In the other, unless the minority submits as a matter of loyalty to the rule of democracy, the use of force to enforce policies about which honest men differ will not tend to governmental stability.

To what extent any nation or any combination of nations is obligated to determine the policies, either internal or external, of any other nation, beyond the limits of mutual agreements, as interpreted in case of differences by an international judiciary, may be a matter of dispute in some minds, but it seems clear that any attempt to enforce by war or through an international army any provisions of an international agreement against the will of any party to the agreement, not only endangers the agreement if the dissenting party should be victorious, but in any case destroys the spirit of brotherhood and good will which is the essential element in a world federation.

Whether or not the United States might ever be justified in using its army purely as a police force to assist the Mexican government in securing and maintaining order against its lawless bands, is itself open to grave question, but there appears to be no justification whatever for the United States to use its armies in determining what the policy of Mexico as a nation shall be. Nor would the situation be changed in any vital respect, were it a question of the attitude of Mexico toward some policy of international agreement previously entered into. Just why should we consent to the use of an international army to compel Germany or England or the United States at the point of the bayonet to abide by the terms of a mutual agreement as interpreted by the courts of last resort, if as a matter of national policy their interests lie in another direction? If international agreements cannot be maintained within the spirit of fellowship and good will and through recognized judicial processes, does it help civilization and the cause of human brotherhood to resort to bloodshed, possibly upon a gigantic scale, in order to compel a particular nation or combination of nations to yield against their will to the dictum of others? Granting in certain instances that the interests of human justice may be conserved, is it not probable that just as often the recognized right of the use of force may become an occasion of oppression to a weaker or less popular people? We must draw a sharp distinction, a distinction that exists in the nature of things, between the use of force to subdue the unruly and the criminal in cases of internal and community disorder, and the use of force upon a scale that means war between nations as an attempt to determine the policy of some nation against its will.

If it be said that the use of an international police is to be directed against a lawless and unruly nation, we reply that no civilized nation today is willing to face the condemnation of the public opinion of the world, by assuming responsibility for an offensive war. When the nations are obligated to preserve the peace upon the basis of international law, according to international agreements as interpreted by an international judicatory, the danger of national lawlessness is so far removed as to make the existence of an international police a positive and dangerous incumbrance.

We cannot agree at all with the argument that contrasts the use of private and public force. If a merchant may not defend himself by using dishonest methods in business against a dishonest competitor, a nation is barred from dishonest treatment of a competing nation that may be practising dishonest methods as a part of its national policies. In the one instance the courts are the only recognized arbiters; if in the other the courts fail, then is there no justifiable recourse. It is certainly misleading to say that "public force is left uncondemned by Jesus," when apparently after having looked into the whole question of the use of force, and probably after having felt the temptation to call to His rescue twelve legions of angels, He turned his back upon the whole program, and chose not only as the more righteous way, but as the more expedient way as well, the policy of non-resistance, both as to personal conduct and as applied to the establishment of His kingdom as the controlling element in the social order of the world.

After all, Friends must be concerned to govern their testimony by the teachings of the New Testament. We will have no foothold for our faith if we allow any doctrine of supposed or doubtful expediency to shape our belief. For ourselves we have the conviction that both the law of expediency and the spirit and teachings of Jesus condemn utterly any practice that resorts to war as a satisfactory method of settling international difficulties.

Militarists' Perverted Patriotism

(The following article appeared in the New York Evening Post of January 27, being sent by a staff correspondent from Washington.)

"If people think that the preachments of the paid emissaries of poltroonery and pacifism have been without effect in this country within the last few years, they are very much mistaken." These words the Assistant Secretary of War, Henry Breckinridge, spoke to the delegates of the National Security League last week, and then urged them to go home and root out "poltroonery and pacifism" in their districts.

Now, Mr. Breckinridge is a very young man, and it would not do to take anything that he says too seriously. Youthful lapses of good taste in debate or discussion usually cure themselves. But this outburst against millions of Americans is so symptomatic of a marked arrogance and an endeavor to injure by false charges those who oppose the preparedness programme, as to merit some consideration. It has long been the custom of certain so-called patriotic societies to arrogate to themselves all the patriotism in America, and to denounce as unpatriotic anybody who disagrees with them. In this preparedness matter, our young Hotspurs and the Boy Scouts of militarism are going a step further. They are so absurd to believe that they can advance their cause by charging cowardice against those who dare to disagree with their divine wisdom, and their conclusions as to what is the right policy for Americans to pursue. It recalls the days, long gone and never to return, when the Protectionists played the same game by charging the taking of British gold and a lack of patriotic desire to help American labor against all those who dared to think that fiscal and economic questions could be settled on some other basis than the waving of the flag.

Perverted Patriotism.

This attribution of a cowardly motive to Americans who are conscientiously opposed to Prussianizing America, recalls the efforts in England to drive men into the army by publicly stigmatizing them by the open award of white feathers. It is possible that in a few cases—a very few—the rebuke was merited, but to stigmatize as cowards men whose motives for not being in uniform could not even be guessed by the self-constituted and self-righteous judge—usually of the opposite sex—was surely to show oneself a person of low standards of conduct, of pretty dull sensibilities, and a quite perverted patriotism. In one case I know of, a woman bestowed a white feather upon a young Englishman sitting at a table in a restaurant, amid the applause of the cheap-spirited onlookers. A few minutes later, the Englishman got a friend sitting with him to bring him his crutches upon which he demonstrated to the satisfaction of the abashed onlookers that a man who had but just lost a leg in battle could do pretty well with his wooden aids, four in height, who gladly wore a white feather in each buttonhole of his coat. He had not been wounded and had not been to the front; he is conscientiously opposed to war, and no power, temporal or spiritual, can make him shed human blood. The white-feather business affected him not at all; his conscience is clear.

Take the Quakers of England. They will not fight; they are true to their real Christian faith. But they have gone to the front as ambulance drivers, as nurses, and have done heroic service in the North Sea in the most dangerous work of mine-sweeping, risking their lives freely and willingly, without pay or reward. Some of the most famous pacifists of history have shown boundless physical courage and any amount of virility.

Not Stampeded Into Militarism.

But leaving the pacifists aside, there are today millions of Americans who would go to war if it came, who simply do not believe that this is the time to arm, and do not want to have German methods introduced into this country. How absurd it is, then, for a man to get up and say that because these millions refuse to be stampeded into militarism they are proof positive that there is such a decay in the moral fibre of America as to make one ashamed of being an American. Yet I actually heard a prominent speaker assert this the other day. Because all of his countrymen are not agreeing with him on a matter of national policy, therefore the country is decadent and without virility, and the speaker wants to change his nationality—to that of a Turk or a Servian, let us hope, for there has certainly been fighting enough there of late years to establish the virility of a people, if bloodshed is the only test.

What could be more absurd than to assume that, because a man has an honorable discharge from the militia or served four weeks at the Plattsburgh camp, he is therefore a brave man, and virile and patriotic? If there is anything that the war abroad has proved, it is that long periods of peace do not make peoples decadent. France had not fought for forty years, and the Germans as long. Thousands of Englishmen are dying cheerfully who never dreamed of wearing uniforms and despised the whole miserable business of killing other people. Peace has weakened the fibre of no people. Yet five years ago a British Breckinridge would doubtless have denounced some of his fellow-citizens because they were not serving in yeomanry regiments. How ashamed Rudyard Kipling must be today of his poem denouncing his countrymen as flannelled fools! But however he feels, surely the carrying of a rifle in a Continental army is about as ridiculous a test of virility or patriotism as could be devised.

Indeed, the whole attempt to decry pacifists and those who do not agree with the powers in the White House in the matter of preparedness is about as clear a demonstration of the moral weakness of the defense case as anything that could be cited. When your case begins to go against you, abuse the other fellow, is an old shyster-lawyer's rule. Now the preparedness advocates are apparently gaining at present, yet they are both abusing their opponents and deliberately attributing false motives, with an amazing bitterness of spirit, to their own fellow countrymen who dare to differ with them. Curiously enough, some of the chief reactionary forces are to be found on their side. The great masters of privilege and the heads of our largest corporations are all lined up on the side of the defense leagues. The anti-preparedness forces do not envy them their supporters. They certainly have no desire to imitate their attacks or the spirit of their attacks upon those who disagree with them.

But ought a member of the Wilson administration to be leading in these base slurs just when the President is going out to convert his own party associates in the West to his own new point of view?

O. G. V.

Friends and the Use of Force

By CLARENCE M. CASE

(NOTE.—The following article was sent to the Peace Association of Friends in America for Publication in The American Friend.)

The general drift of discussion among Friends seems to indicate that the crisis calls for a clearer formulation of our position than we are now prepared to make. It is the purpose of this article to discuss the three terms, non-resistance, force, and war, in order to throw some light on the three questions, viz: Are the Friends a non-resistant people? Do they condemn all use of physical force in human affairs? May nations make use of armed forces without thereby waging war?

In order to show more clearly the need for a discussion of such matters, let us notice two articles which recently appeared simultaneously in THE AMERICAN FRIEND. The one set forth the claims of "The Association to Abolish War;" the other discussed the merits of "The League to Enforce Peace." It would be very interesting to know how many readers of the two articles regarded them as mutually exclusive; or at least so incompatible that those who hold to the one position must abandon or even oppose the other. It would not be a strange thing if many should so conclude, for the former declares all war intolerable and advocates complete national disarmament, while the latter justifies the use of the combined military forces of the nations as an international police to enforce peace. This would hardly be possible if the nations concerned in maintaining peace should, by total disarmament, deprive themselves of the means of enforcing their peaceable desires and decisions. Thus it appears that the proposed program of the Association to Abolish War would, in actual practice, render unfeasible the project of the League to Enforce Peace. But, aside from the matter of actual practice, there remains the question of theory, viz: Does the theory of the Association, that all war is wholly wrong and intolerable, mean to its advocates that the armed coercion of a recalcitrant nation by the members of the League would also be wholly wrong and intolerable? In other words, would the members of the Association hold that the military operations of the League, undertaken to enforce peace, would be a case of war?

The present writer believes that such an enterprise would not be a case of war, and would hold, on the contrary, that a league to enforce peace is actually an association to abolish war. This would seem to be true simply because a league to enforce peace would be an international police force and the use of physical force by the police is never a case of war. Those who fight to prevent war are not themselves waging war. Norman Angell put it in words that cannot be surpassed when he said: "The police are not attempting to settle things by force; they are preventing things from being settled in that way."* In the same way, those who seek to enforce peace are the very ones who do not believe in settling things by force. The only people who believe in settling things by force are those who advocate the unregulated use of armed force by individuals or separate nations. Advocates of sheer non-resistance do not believe in letting things be settled by force, but their policy would result in practice in that kind of a situation, human nature being what it is at this stage.

It then comes down to a question of the meaning of several familiar words, viz., non-resistance, force, and war. As to the first named, the present writer long shared the common conviction that Quakers are non-resistants, but more careful study has led him to believe that they are not a non-resistant people and never have been on the whole. This is demonstrated unmistakably by the fact that they have always been loyal adherents of the State, and very active participants in politics and government. Now no pure non-resistant can have any part or lot in human governments, because they are all based upon the appeal to physical force. This appeal to force is the essence of what we call "sovereignty," and without it no State, i. e., political society, ever existed. Therefore, all non-resistants, from the Anabaptists, Dunkers and Mennonites of the 17th century down to the Doukhobors and Tolstoyans of the 20th century, have been anarchists in theory or practice, or in both. By the word "anarchists" in this connection we do not have, of course, the slightest reference to terrorism, but simply use the term in its scientific sense, as designating those who deny the validity and moral justification of human governments. If further proof of this proposition were needed, we have only to call attention to the fact that Adin Ballou, author of "Christian Non-Resistance," a very remarkable exposition of that principle published in 1846, finds himself forced by the very logic of his argument to take a thoroughly anarchistic position, although he tries, in vain, to escape it.

*"The Great Illusion," page 264.

The Quakers, on the other hand, have always taken a strong part in public affairs, and in so doing they have sanctioned the police power, and hence the use of physical force and coercion by the State. Consequently they have never been non-resistants or anarchists (i. e., non-participants in government). The Rhode Island Quakers, while governors of that colony in the seventeenth century, did not refuse to acquiesce in the use of physical force by the government of which they were the official heads. Furthermore, it was William Penn himself who advocated the first league to enforce peace, in 1693; and he distinctly proposed that the members of the league should "enforce" the decisions of their common tribunal, and charge the offending nation with the costs. Penn believed in "coercives" when "lenitives" were insufficient, as he himself declared on another occasion.

Space will not permit us to ask what kind of "resistants" Friends really are, but one thing is certain—they are not non-resistants.

The Mennonites who founded Germantown knew this, for when they sickened of their task of enforcing order, being themselves non-resistants, they resigned the government of their town to the Quakers, who, being not non-resistants, took up the symbols of office, including, in principle at least, the policeman's club, and kept the peace.

They did not propose to leave things to be settled by force; therefore, they did not refuse to exercise public force. This is the grand paradox that crops out at every turn of this paradoxical subject, for "Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness." Samson's riddle is the riddle of war and peace, for all the law, order, and peace that have been achieved among civilized men have been won by the public use of force against private violence. Thus the sweetness of peace comes forth out of the coercive force of the State acting as the guardian of order.

A series of contrasts between private and public force will make it clear why Friends, the leading champions of peace and opponents of war, have not been non-resistants;— Private force is revengeful; public force is remedial. Private force is personal; public force is impersonal. Private force is vindictive; public force is salutary. Private force is disruptive; public force is constructive. Private force always grows with exercise; public force tends to make itself less and less necessary. Private force is the agent of war; public force is the servant of peace. Private force is immoral; public force is moral. Private force is condemned throughout the New Testament; public force is left uncondemned by Jesus and is explicitly sanctioned by the Apostle Paul.

This brings us to the third term which was to be defined, viz:—war. War is simply a case of private force in so far as a nation is a private, though collective person. This kind of a being is what the militarist philosophers, such as Bernhardt, would have us believe the State to be. In so far as it is true we have here simply the reign of private violence on a magnified scale, and it partakes of the above named evils inherent in private violence. While it is true that we speak of armies and navies as the "public forces," the expression is misleading. They are true public forces only when used to maintain peace and order within the nation, but they represent private force when they are used to disturb the peace and order of the community of nations and to express the unspeakable doctrine that "might makes right" among nations even is not among individual men. This is war. Its roots are manifold and deep and therefore its cure will not be simple. But since organized force (police) has proved the one sovereign remedy for ruffianism within the national community, may we not find in world organization and international police the one sure cure for national bullyism and disorderliness?

The big question of the present hour is: Will Friends formulate their present policy under the untenable idea that they are non-resistants, that they have not sanctioned the use of physical force in human affairs, and that therefore they cannot endorse the great world-wide movement for world-organization because it involves the use of physical coercion?

It will be universally admitted that no Christian may resist a personal wrong by personal vengeance. Yet all who are not anarchists, either consciously or unwittingly, will subscribe to the use of the police force to keep order and redress wrongs throughout the community. Thus we see that while something resembling non-resistance is the Christian rule for private life, organized resistance is the rule for community welfare. Which principle should be extended to international affairs?

Oskaloosa, Iowa, January 30, 1916.

The Blessing of Song

By JOHN W. DORLAND

There is a blessing in song, in the song that is sung under the inspiration of the Spirit. We have many examples of singers who brought the message of Christ's redeeming love through the medium of song. Perhaps one of the best known of these was Sankey, who sang his way around the world and into the hearts and lives of people, and was the means of bringing countless storm-tossed souls into a haven of rest and peace. Moody and Sankey were wonderfully used of God, the first as a preacher, the second as one of the sweet singers in Israel.

When the big revival wave swept through the middle west, singing began to have a place in Friends' meetings and was the cause of many heart-breaks and dissensions. Nearly all Friends' churches now have singing as a regular part of the services, and in some places to such an extent that the period of silent waiting before God is entirely done away with. What is the function of song, and what is its place in our meetings for worship? Is it to be a part of a set program, something to fill in the time with, or is it to be a devout act of worship, a communion of soul with God?

With our congregational singing, our choirs and soloists, our organs and pianos, it is to be feared that we may lose sight of the end in view, and delight in the sweet harmony of sounds alone, and entirely discount the spiritual values to be obtained. "I will bless the Lord at all times, His praise shall continually be in my mouth," said the Psalmist. "Sing unto the Lord a new song," but do we sing unto the Lord, and is it a new song? I am afraid too often it is for self gratification and for self only.

It is an act of sacrilege for any church, Friends or otherwise, to have a soloist who is not a Christian, to have singers in the choir who are not Christians, because soloist, choir and choir leader come before the congregation as interpreters of sacred song, and how can they teach if they know not the way of life and salvation themselves? We must realize the words we sing, the solemnity of the vows we make, the sacred name we take upon our lips.

"Take my life and let it be Consecrated Lord to thee.
Take my moments and my days
Let them flow in ceaseless praise."

How can any one sing this old familiar hymn without making it a real prayer of consecration? Yet in the routine of congregational singing it might be very lightly passed over, the true thought and significance entirely missed.

"Peace, perfect peace in this dark world of sin,
The blood of Jesus whispers peace within,
Peace, perfect peace by thronging duties pressed
To do the will of Jesus, this is rest."

It seems hard to imagine anyone singing this hymn of Bishop Bickersteths, of which the above is the first stanza, without entering into the thought so beautifully expressed, without close self-examination that we may know for ourselves of this same peace. Every hymn, rightly sung, brings its message of help and comfort, but there is a danger in congregational singing that it become merely mechanical, just a part of a routine, that we sing for the music, or not in the Spirit.

Sacred song has been a power in the evangelizing of the world. How some old familiar hymn, sung perhaps at a street corner or in a mission, has brought before the wanderer a vision of the days gone by, and how finally mother's prayers and tears which had followed him always, now guided his faltering steps to an altar of forgiveness and peace. To those who have been entrusted with the interpretation of sacred song, upon such falls a great responsibility. The preacher has his field, but let us never belittle the opportunities that come to the gospel singer.

When the Friends church broke over the line and introduced singing into its meetings there must have been felt at that time a deep need for this kind of thing, not emotionalism, not for the sake of harmony, but an act of devotion and praise. When singing in the church or music of any kind becomes a source of entertainment, then it were better to do away with it, a far better grade can be obtained in the theatre or concert hall.

This is a plea for an honest examination of the subject of singing in Friends churches. I am afraid it is a matter that is not given much thought. That it can be a blessing when rightly used there can be no doubt, but it is also certain to be a menace when abused.

Pasadena, California.

Baby Year

1916 is Baby Year. The facts about American babies, the needs of American babies, and America's responsibility to her babies will this year be known as never before, because the first week in March will be Baby Week throughout the country.

More than 400 communities, representing every State in the Union, are already laying their plans for Baby Week, according to the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, in order that during those seven days the needs of the babies may be so presented that all the parents in those communities will learn a little better how to care for their babies, and all the citizens will realize that they have a special obligation to safeguard the conditions surrounding babies. And it is confidently believed by those who are interested in this nation-wide Baby Week that the remainder of the year will be marked by a strengthening of all community activities for saving babies' lives and giving them a better chance to grow to a healthy maturity.

The Baby Week idea originated in Chicago not quite two years ago. Then New York had a Baby Week, and Pittsburgh, and other cities. Such practical benefit has in each case resulted that the General Federation of Women's Clubs has undertaken to promote this nation-wide observance. State health officials and national organizations interested in public health and child welfare have taken up the plan and in various ways are giving it not only their sanction but their active co-operation. The extension divisions of the State universities have promised special assistance in interesting and helping Baby Week in rural communities.

The Federal Children's Bureau believes that Baby Week will give more parents a chance to learn the accepted principles of infant care, and will awaken every American to his responsibility for the deaths of the three hundred thousand babies who, according to the Census estimates, die every year before they are twelve months old. Therefore the Children's Bureau has prepared a special bulletin of practical suggestions for Baby Week campaigns, adapted to the varying needs of communities of different types. Copies of this bulletin may be had free of charge from the Children's Bureau at Washington. —U. S. Department of Labor, Children's Bureau, Washington.

Two Weeks With Missions in Cuba

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS

(Continued)

On the 14th we went to Holguin and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Zenas L. Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence McClean. Here also are Miss Emma Reeder and Miss Carrie Haviland, teachers in the school. The school here is the largest of the Mission, and the one that is undertaking secondary school work. They have entirely outgrown the capacity of the rooms built for school purposes and are renting commodious quarters across the Plaza. The building they are using is for sale, and the school is at any time liable to be thrown out, without any other available rooms in sight. It is likely it would be an excellent investment for the Mission to purchase the building if it can be had at reasonable rates. There is no other location so favorable for our work.

On Thursday evening we attended the mid-week meeting. There was a goodly company present, and very attentive. There are more older members here. In all the stations the people are very appreciative, and very cordial in their greetings, shaking hands warmly, and expressing their pleasure in words that you do not understand but with smiling faces that are easily understood. Holguin is a growing city and is the most important in our territory, having a position that corresponds to a county seat with us. It is inland, while all our other stations are on bays with fairly good harbors for smaller vessels.

On Friday, the 15th, we went to Banes. This station has no direct communication with the others, as Spanish countries do not build roads. By the railroad it is 65 miles to Dumois, and then you travel about 18 miles more over the Fruit Company's railroad. This railroad is not chartered to do passenger business, but they run a train through each way daily without charging any fare. The manager was very kind to us, sending his own gasoline motor for us both coming and leaving. Our train was over two hours late and it was after midnight when we arrived at Banes, and received a warm welcome at the Mission home, where Raymond Holding and his good wife are in charge; and our daughter Edith at the Teachers' Home, a few steps away. Here are Miss Sarah A. Lindley with her two Mexican girls who had spent a year at Earlham College two years ago, and who are doing excellent work with Miss Lindley in the school there. Miss Iva Pickering is also with them, learning the Spanish language preparatory to regular work next year. The school is having a prosperous year.

All our stations are pushing out in out-station work. I have already alluded to this feature at Gibara and Puerto Padre. Holguin also has a neat chapel at Auras and a goodly company of members. They have also two Sunday Schools in the outskirts of Holguin, besides the main school at the Mission. Banes also has two such schools. They are held in a cheaply built structure, either owned by the Mission or rented for the purpose. We attended one of these on Sunday morning. There were about sixty present in the small room, mostly children. The superintendent was a motherly woman who seemed to have good executive authority. She and her husband live in the building, and she conducts a small day school there on her own account.

Sunday afternoon is a busy time at the Mission, as a double work is carried on: a Sunday School for the Cubans at two o'clock and a service in the evening. At three o'clock there is a Sunday School for Jamaicans, followed by a regular service at four. The work for Cubans is in Spanish and that for the Jamaicans in English.

These Jamaicans are coming over in considerable numbers to get work on the sugar estates. There is a shortage of laborers there, while in Jamaica there are hard times this year on account of the storm a few months ago that destroyed the bananas. In Jamaica a laborer receives only about thirty-seven cents a day, while in Cuba they can make a dollar and a half to two dollars a day. The Jamaicans are colored people (as are most of the inhabitants of Jamaica). A considerable number of them are church members and many of them are quite capable workers. Their Sunday School was well attended and entirely managed by themselves. At the service following the church was full, every seat being taken and many standing—probably two hundred or more. Their singing was good but rather slow, and lacking in the enthusiasm of the American negro. They seemed more like a white congregation in that regard. They were a good congregation to speak to. They take an offering at every service, which goes to support the native worker who assists Mr. Holding, and this makes it possible for him to give them some pastoral care. It makes his Sundays very full, with the four services in the afternoon and oftentimes marriages to be taken care of between services. The church membership of the Jamaicans is divided between the Baptists, Wesleyans, Anglicans, Friends and perhaps a few others. So far, however, they all work together. They are organized as an Endeavor Society and harmonize well in that way. The question of their church membership has not been taken up very largely yet. It is very desirable that they should keep together, and it is our policy to try to secure that.

This Jamaican section of our work is increasing. The sugar estates in our field attract them. I have already alluded to the group of them near Puerto Padre. There are other groups in the Santa Lucia sugar district, and all are open to our supervision at present. There are probably from six hundred to a thousand in the Banes district. They may be a valuable contribution to the Protestant forces of the island. The work among them has to be kept separate from that of the Cubans, even though many of the Cubans are negroes as black as any. But the language forms a barrier between them and they do not seem to care to affiliate with each other.

The Banes Sugar Company is the United Fruit Company which now owns most of the steamships plying between the United States and the West Indies. It was founded by Captain Baker, who was largely instrumental in starting the Friends' work in Cuba. He was familiar with our work in Jamaica, and gave liberally to the work in both islands. The Company built the Mission school house for us a few years ago, and contributed fifty dollars a month towards its support. The new town of Banes is largely due to them, and it is the most progressive and like our American towns. The head officers are English and American and they are very kindly disposed toward our work. They do not, however, contribute in any large way to the religious work. They are purely there for the money in the business. There is practically no Sabbath recognized. The only difference from other days is that it is a day for sports and pleasure seeking. None of them attend our services. Some of them are church members, but seem to have left their religious interests behind when they came to the island. The wife of the manager was on our ship going down, and we had the pleasure of forming an acquaintance and of meeting her husband on the train from Santiago. He is a Jamaican (white), a member of the Anglican Church, and she was raised a Scotch Presbyterian. They were most hospitable and kind to us in every possible way. He thinks that one church is sufficient and as Friends are there does not encourage his own church to come in, even though they have solicited the opportunity.

This whole territory, with its immense sugar interests is all Friends' field and we are responsible for its care. The Roman Catholic Church is doing little in any way. Some of their churches are abandoned and many places are entirely neglected by them. They are doing practically nothing for the religious and moral welfare of the people. The ecclesiastical authorities come around occasionally and baptize the children, and confirm some, and perform marriages, but only for a fee. So far as I could learn, no effort is made to care for the religious training of the children. The only other Protestant work in our territory is a Methodist chapel at Holguin with a native pastor. There is a great opportunity for us. We have a fine force of workers, who have the respect of their communities. The only important need of the work is an increasing heart interest on the part of the supporting meetings in America. No single Yearly Meeting has ever had the responsibility for it. The undertaking of this work fifteen years ago, when Protestants were first admitted after the Cuban war, was what led to the more perfect organization of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions. This work is worthy of our best efforts, and the results already attained in a fine body of young Friends, with at least five young native workers coming on in the ministry, is God's seal upon our past efforts, and challenge to the best we can give them.

After Six Weeks In Jamaica

By LORA P. ARMS

After four weeks' hurried preparation, I sailed October 7th for Jamaica. As the steamer pulled out of New York harbor, I felt that I knew better than ever before the joy of leaving all to follow Jesus. While there was sadness because of goodbyes said and thoughts of a long separation from loved ones, yet great peace filled my heart in realizing that God had opened the way and given me the privilege of being an ambassador for Christ.

After six days on the sea, we landed at Kingston, October 14th. As we neared the harbor, one of the first real Jamaican scenes that greeted my eyes was the "coin-divers" swimming rapidly out from the shore to meet the boat. It was an interesting, curious sight to me to see the boys dive after the coins thrown to them by the passengers on the boats, sometimes turning a complete somersault in the water and almost invariably coming up with the coin in their mouths.

As I rode through the streets of Kingston that first day, I truly felt that I had reached a new world. New scenes greeted me on every side. The faces, dress, customs, everything was new and strange. It did not take long to learn that things do not move so quickly in Jamaica as they do in New York City. I soon learned, too, that the Jamaicans who rushed up in the custom house begging to be allowed to carry my baggage to the railroad station were not all George Washingtons, as the custom house office slyly told us. One of the first things that impressed me was the poverty of the people. Most of the country people, and many who live in the towns, live in the meanest little huts imaginable, with almost no furniture. Jamaica is just now going through a very hard, discouraging time. The hurricane of last August destroyed the banana crop and much of the cocoanut crop. These being their principal products, times are very hard. The war has also caused prices to rise; besides many of the best of the men are going to the front. The natives here are a patriotic people, very loyal to their mother country—England.

Jamaica is a very beautiful country. Some of its drives along the seaside could not, it seems to me, be surpassed in beauty. Beautiful ferns grow abundantly along the mountainsides; graceful cocoanut trees are seen all along the seashore. Waterfalls and pretty streams foam and dash over the rocks and mountains. With all of its loveliness, Jamaica is by no means a Paradise.

"In vain with lavish kindness
The gifts of God are strewn;
The heathen in his blindness
Bows down to wood and stone."

Sin and degradation abound on every side. The immorality of the island is appalling. Stealing, drinking and smoking are very common evils among the women as well as the men. How much they need preachers and teachers to show how Jesus' blood can break the chains of sin, and to train them to live lives of virtue and righteousness!

Although I have been here only a short time, I have had the pleasure of visiting several of our mission stations. As I have come in contact with the workers and their work, I have been greatly impressed with their faithful, self-sacrificing lives. Some of the workers have spent as many as from 15 to 20 years in hard work among the people here. And truly their work has not been in vain. I have felt that a wonderful work is being accomplished in the schools, in the training of the children and young people to live useful, Christian lives. Surely these can never go out into the world and forget the lessons they are there learning. In the churches are many earnest, native Christians. Some of these are doing active Christian work under the mission; others have set up Christian homes, a great help to their community.

Although the greater part of the population are negroes, the East Indian coolies especially appeal to me, partly, no doubt, because I feel especially called to work with them. My school of East Indian boys and girls at Fellowship, which I have taught for only three weeks, is a joy to my heart. They are as bright and energetic as any children I ever taught in the U. S. And the way they can repeat Scripture, I am sure would put to shame many of the children at home. As I look into the faces of these bright, brown-faced children day after day, my heart prays continually that I may sow some seed in these Hindu hearts that may spring up and bear fruit—some forty, some sixty and some a hundred fold.

Most of the parents of these children live in barracks near the school and are the chief laborers on the large banana estates which surround the school. They are indentured by the English government to serve a term of five years and do heavy work under the most unhealthful conditions. Many of them live in their heathen customs, steeped in their Hindu belief. When these Indians are visited and told the story of Jesus, while some go on with their work and do not care to hear, others listen with intense interest as they follow carefully every word of the interpreter.

The harvest truly is great and much of the field is white unto the harvest. I am glad God led me to this place to live for Christ and these people. There is nothing that brings such joy and peace to the heart as being in the will of the Lord. Pray for us here that we may have strength of body in this trying climate and wisdom from on high to do the work of the Lord.

A Laymen's Missionary Convention

By SAMUEL L. HAWORTH

When a man has the chance to attend a Laymen's Missionary Convention, such as was recently held in Minneapolis, he ought to take it, unless he can convince himself that he has better use for his time and money. And, from the standpoint of an attendant, the burden of proof is on the man. Nay, rather, here are some reasons by which he may persuade himself to take the chance.

First, there were concentrated on one spot and in the short period of a half-week, facts and experiences of a generation of men in two hemispheres—from Alaska, "Uncle Sam's Ice-box," out of which has already been produced five hundred million dollars worth of stuff, the future empire of the far North; from Africa, the "Dark Continent" through which the streaks of light are running, whose vast population is in the grip of a mighty contest for supremacy; from Armenia, whose tragic career seems about to be closed simultaneously with the course of her oppressor, the Turkish empire; from India, whose teeming millions are in process of a revolution, silent yet not the less significant; from China, the "Sleeping Giant," aroused from millennial rest and stretching for the world struggle; from the United States, rich in resources, whose Christian life is called upon to bear the heavier part of the world's need. Over all hung the horror of Europe. In the presence of such world conditions, a man's outlook is extended and his sympathy broadened. He can scarcely listen responsively to the rehearsal of these conditions without becoming a bigger man.

Secondly, it was an inspiration to meet under the leadership of such men as were sent out by the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and to see them in action. One may sit by the evening lamp and read facts in books and magazines and get some knowledge of the world. But the personal presence which makes the experiences live again before the mind, is lacking. At this convention one could hear S. Hall Young, missionary for thirty years among natives and white people in Alaska, as, in his pleasant way, he talked of enjoying the rigorous climate of the North, where it was so cold that a man's breath would rattle like paper as it passed his ear; he could listen to J. P. McNaughton, who, after years of sympathetic service among the Armenians, knew how to appreciate their true worth, and who, full of feeling, yet holding himself in magnificent self-control, narrated the details of Armenian atrocities with dramatic effect, but with no plea for revenge; he could see Fred B. Fisher and hear his stirring recital of the transformation of India—hear him, with arm uplifted and in sonorous voice, sing again in the native tongue, "Victory to Jesus," as the native multitude had sung it at other times; he could feel the impulse of the constraining love of Christ for a perishing world as told in song by the soloist, Naftsgger. So, unless his soul were insulated by some sort of non-conductor, his faith grew and his sense of responsibility was quickened.

Thirdly, men were brought face to face with world-needs and world-problems under a sense that these must be met and solved in the spirit and according to the principles of Jesus Christ. It was worth something to face such needs and problems. They call for the heroic in a man. At the same time they make him know that the spirit which drags down the peoples of the world and creates the strifes of nations is moving in his own land and community, and that, wherever he is, he may put his hand to the work of relief and of redemption, sure that his effort will count in the total result. It was worth something, also, to realize again that the ultimate solution of world-problems involves the application of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Because this is true, we American people are not making full response to the appeal of the world's need.

One speaker expressed the conviction that we do not meet the need because we do not want to meet it. The Christian motive is lacking. It is easier to arouse enthusiasm for a proposition to spend five hundred million dollars on fighting machinery with which to repel possible attacks of other nations than to persuade people to spend that amount in manifesting good will and Christian helpfulness toward the nations. Yet the latter is the better way, as Shailer Matthews and Hugh L. Burleson, in calm assurance and heart-searching appeal, impressed on their hearers. Moreover, we otherwise spend our money for that which is not bread, either for ourselves or for others. So at least did the neighbor of one of the speakers who lives in an eastern city and who, with keen sarcasm, presented that neighbor in the picture of a "thirty thousand dollar necklace on a thirty dollar dog led by a thirty cent woman." But men and women of wealth do give of their means and men and women of spirit are consecrating themselves to the great work. May their number grow.

Practical suggestions were made for developing the missionary spirit and for expressing it in money, or "coined life." Every individual must do his part, small or great, if the whole work is done. World-problems, in miniature, present themselves for solution in each life and the Christian principles which solve them in the smaller sphere are applicable in the greater. It is worth going to, and through, a Laymen's Missionary Convention if one discovers that truth.

Minneapolis, Minn.

Give me thy harmony, O Lord, that I
May understand the beauty of the sky,
The rhythm of the soft wind's lullaby,
The sun and shadow of the wood in spring
And thy great love that dwells in everything!

—Alexander Pringle.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Daddy's Girl

Flying feet upon the stair,
Shining eyes and tumbled hair;
Laughing lips on mine to press,
With happy words and glad caress.
Little hands mine own to hold,
While change the skies from grey to gold
Sunshine lights the world for me,
With daddy's girl upon my knee.

In the toil and stress of life,
Weary days with troubles rife;
When the skies forget to shine,
And the darkest way is mine;
Yet there is a star that gleams
Ever in my troubled dreams,
To bid me know where'er I be,
Daddy's girl will pray for me.

Let the years come as they may,
Golden locks be changed to grey;
Shining eyes will on me smile,
Sweet and tender all the while,
Though the changing world forget,
Daddy's girl will love me yet—
Love me truly all the way,
Till the closing of the day;
And be to me, till life is o'er
Just "daddy's girl" for evermore.

—London Magazine.

A Straight Line

Robbie was working away at his drawing lesson. Presently the teacher came around to see what progress he was making. "Look here, Robbie," she said, "that line isn't straight." "No, it isn't quite straight, I know," answered Robbie, "but I can fix that up later."

"A straight line never needs straightening," said the teacher, quietly, as she turned away to look at the work of another scholar.

That simple remark that the teacher made set Robbie to thinking. "A straight line never needs straightening." How much better, then, to make the line straight rather than to draw a crooked line, which would have to be straightened afterward! Besides, a line that has been partly rubbed out and then made straight never looks quite so well as a line which is drawn perfectly true and straight the first time. So Robbie made up his mind that hereafter he would try to draw the straight lines straight the first time.

A thing that has been done right does not need to be done over again. When we speak the truth we do not have to stop to correct what we have said. Let us try to do and say things in the right way the first time, and we shall find that life is easier, and we shall make far better progress than when we do or say the wrong thing first. Let us always remember that a "straight line never needs straightening."—Apples of Gold.

ENGLISH MISSION FUND.

Our readers will remember a recent appeal in these columns from James Wood in behalf of funds to help English Friends meet their foreign mission obligations. A letter recently received by Dr. Raymond Binford of Earlham College from Henry T. Hodgkin, of London, which we are privileged to publish herewith in part, will indicate how generous has been the response on the part of American Friends, as well as the status of the work for the current year:

Dear Friend,

I dare say that you will, by this time, have seen a notice in "The American Friend" with reference to the conditions of our foreign missionary work, and the special need with which our Board was faced at the beginning of last month, when it seemed as though we were likely to close the year with a very large deficit. I am now able to tell you, with very great thankfulness to God, that Friends have responded in a wonderful way to the statement of our need that was then made, and that we have been able to close the year, having met all the liabilities incurred within it, and having practically covered the deficit which was brought forward from the previous year, so that I think that we shall now start the present year without any deficit at all, though I cannot be positive on this point.

There still, however, remains the fact that several large subscribers have died during the last few years, and that, especially during the last eighteen months, we have not been able to do more than a very little towards replacing the heavy loss which we have suffered through their death. We are, therefore, in the position of having work already in hand which is costing us something like £5,000 a year over and above the normal income received from subscribers. You will, I know, easily see how this situation hampers us in any forward work, and how it means that, from year to year, we are under the necessity of calling for special gifts. No doubt the financial stringency due to the war will begin to make itself felt more and more during the next year or two. For a little time, therefore, it would be an unspeakable help to us if there were some response from Friends in America to the statement of our need which, I hope, will be made through "The American Friend" and other Friend papers in the United States.

This is the year in which we hope to celebrate our fiftieth anniversary, and we are anxious that, at the close of that celebration, we should be able to advance steadily into some of the great fields which open out before us. We certainly should feel very bad indeed if our fiftieth year meant a heavy curtailment of our general work. We are, therefore, trying to raise, in connection with our Jubilee, a special fund, both for meeting special expenditure in buildings, etc., and for increasing our general fund for the carrying on of the work which we have in hand.

I am thankful to say that candidates are still coming forward, even at this time. I had an offer, only a day or two ago, from a fine young fellow who has recently joined Friends, having been brought to us through his very strong convictions in regard to war, and through association with Friends during his course at Cambridge University. It is splendid to know that some of these fine young fellows, who are feeling things most deeply at this time in connection with the war, have felt the call to go out as foreign missionaries. I hope that our work abroad will be greatly strengthened as some of them get into the field.

I feel sure that you will rejoice with us in the news which I am able to give you of the wonderful answer which there has been to our prayer and effort at this time. It may be that you and other Friends in America will feel that there is a possibility of your being able to do something to help us to meet the grave position with which we are still faced. I thank you for your very kind interest in the work which we are doing.

The amount received altogether, in answer to the statement of our need, is about £5,750, towards a total estimated requirement, in order to close the year without a deficit, of £5,850.

With kind regards and all good wishes for the New Year, I am,

Your sincere friend,

HENRY T. HODGKIN.

HEADQUARTERS IN LOS ANGELES.

The Committee appointed at last Yearly Meeting to take such steps as seemed advisable for the establishment of Friends' Headquarters in Los Angeles for California Yearly Meeting have been meeting in the office of A. F. N. Hambleton and formulating plans, which they hope will eventually result in the strengthening and the rebuilding of the membership of all the Friends Churches of California.

Past experience has proved to us that many eastern Friends, upon coming to California, get out of touch with the church, and that eventually large numbers of formerly active Friends are lost to our denomination. By the establishment of permanent headquarters in Los Angeles, which will serve as a bureau of information for all Friends contemplating coming to the coast, and by keeping in close touch with the clerks and pastors of eastern meetings it is hoped that all coming west may be kept in touch with Friends, and not allowed to drift away from the influence of our denomination.

To this end the committee, composed of Arthur C. Brown, A. F. N. Hambleton, Raybright Lewis, Lindley M. Greene, Florabel P. Rosenberger and J. J. Mills, have asked A. F. N. Hambleton to serve for the present as our Bureau of Information, using his office as Headquarters for Friends for the time being. It is the hope of the committee that pastors and others will cooperate with them in their effort to conserve the membership of Friends by notifying them of prospective removals to the Pacific Coast.

Those desiring to receive or give information will please send communication to A. F. N. Hambleton, 403 Columbia Trust Bldg., 313 W. 3rd St., Los Angeles, Cal.

W. C. T. U. AND PEACE.

Hannah J. Bailey, Superintendent of the Department of Peace of the National W. C. T. U., a well-known Friend, living at Winthrop Center, Maine, has recently made the twenty-eighth annual report of this department. The opening paragraph of the report is as follows:

"Our Peace Department and other peace organizations have found great need and incentive to extend their influence into all the world, for the entire world is affected by the terribly cruel and heart-sickening war now raging in Europe. There is no cause for discouragement or for halting in our efforts. Let us press forward toward the mark for the prize of victory, for the peace of the world. It will surely come sometime, for the Lord of Hosts, the Prince of Peace, is on our side and He will put to flight the armies of the aliens who oppose our efforts and put obstacles in our way. By God's blessing we will surmount them and the prophecies of world-peace will be fulfilled."

Remember that March 5 is "American Friend Day." It should be observed in all Friends meetings. See page 2.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

THE REPORT OF THE PANAMA CONGRESS.

In view of the fact that Friends are working in no less than three mission fields in Latin America—the American Friends Board in Cuba and Mexico, and California Friends in Central America—many of our readers will doubtless want to secure a full report of the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America. An account of the Congress from the pen of Charles Tebbetts will appear in The American Friend a few weeks hence. We are glad also to announce that the complete official report of the Congress will be published in three volumes as soon after the close of the Congress, February 10th-20th, 1916, as it can be properly edited. The price of the three volumes of the report has been fixed at $2.50, carriage extra. The report will be furnished, however, to all who send in advance orders, at $2.00, carriage extra. The report may be ordered through the office of the Board at the address indicated at the top of this page.

LAYMEN'S CONVENTIONS IN MANY CITIES.

Judging from reports which are coming in from the conventions in this year's series which have already been held by the Laymen's Missionary Movement, these great meetings of laymen are going far beyond the conventions of previous years in practical value to the churches represented in them and in spiritual power. We are convinced that any Friends Meetings within one hundred miles of any of the following cities which fails to have at least two of its men in attendance on the dates indicated will be missing splendid opportunity for quickening its spiritual power and enlarging its sphere of usefulness. May not the pastor or some other Friends in every such meeting take immediate steps for getting two or more men to attend.

Des Moines, Iowa.....February 20-22
Los Angeles, Calif....Feb. 27-March 1
Indianapolis, Ind.....Feb. 27-March 1
San Diego, Calif....March 1-3 and 5
Columbus, Ohio.....March 1-3 and 5
Worcester, Mass.....March 19-21
New York.....April 9-12
BrooklynApril 9-12

FROM JAMAICA TO PANAMA.

The last letter received at the Mission Board office from Charles Tebbetts was written at Port Antonio, Jamaica. With this letter was enclosed the second installment of his article on Cuba, which appears on an earlier page of this issue. An account of his visit to our various stations in Jamaica will appear at an early date. As the American Friend goes to press this week, the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America is in session in the city of Panama, to continue for ten days, closing February 20th. Beside Charles Tebbetts and his family, Sylvester Jones and Clarence G. McClean, of Cuba, and R. Solomon Tice and Genaro Ruiz, of Mexico, are representing Friends at this important congress at Panama.

SCHOOLS AND FARM AT VICTORIA

Solomon Tice, who for several months past has been laboring alone at C. Victoria, Mexico, and Genaro Ruiz, the pastor of the meeting at H. Matamoros, sailed from New Orleans on S. S. "Cartago" for Panama, February 2nd. Shortly before leaving Mexico, Mr. Tice sent a brief account of what had been accomplished at Victoria up to the time of his departure.

"I left things at Victoria in fairly good shape. I succeeded finally in getting teachers for the common school grades and opening the day schools of both Penn and Juarez. I got three teachers for each. I could not get the teachers I wanted for either school as they were all engaged and couldn't resign. The farm work is very uphill work. It needs the constant attention of one person to keep it going. I finished planting 225 lemon trees and 257 limes. Eight of the former were stolen from the field just a few days after planting. Am planting corn between the rows of trees as the ground is already plowed and irrigated. It has been so hard to get plowing done as we have only oxen to work with and there are so many things to do. Our cows are only in fair shape. Our feed problem is quite a serious one, though I did succeed in getting some meal and fodder with which to feed them in my absence and we have about six or eight acres of oats sowed that I think will furnish some green pasture soon."

It is upon this farm that the industrial work of the boys' school, Juarez Institute, will be conducted when that institution reopens.

DON NENGUE, THE BLIND PATRIARCH.

The day that the new church building was inaugurated in Gibara, Cuba, among the many who attended the services were three blind persons who for the first time heard the preaching of the gospel. One of them never returned, another came only on rare occasions, while the third, Don Nengue, became a constant attender and a member of the church.

Blind as he was, he learned the way to church and would come by himself. Each Sunday morning he would come tapping up the aisle with his cane and find his way to the chair that always awaited him at the right of the platform. He came with his clothes clean, but in his shirt sleeves and collarless. In all the years that I knew him, I do not remember of having seen him once with a coat or collar. In his working years he had been a sailor and always showed the bluff informality of the sea-faring life.

The religion of such a man could not admit of shams. Perhaps the blindness gave acuteness to his spiritual vision. His testimony was inspiring, as he would stand, leaning upon his staff, and tell of the love that had won him and of the light that shone upon his pathway. When he bowed his head and offered prayer, God didn't seem far away.

He did not know the year of his birth, but at the time of his conversion he thought he had passed his ninetieth year and most certainly he was well advanced in the ninth decade. He had lost his sight a few years previous, an almost unbearable loss to a man of his vigorous nature, but made bearable by a spiritual vision.

One day Don Nengue's chair was vacant at the meeting. Sickness which proved to be his last, had kept him at home. As he grew worse he frequently sent for me to pray with him. A shadow came into his last days because of the evil conduct of a relative, though not a member of his immediate family. As in all things, so in this he sought divine help, and it was given him to pass from earth in peace and receive his sight in a fairer world.

Don Nengue had raised a family of eleven children, most of whom also raised large families. He lived to know his great-great-grandchildren. At the time of his death, his lineal descendants numbered more than two hundred. As I write this I can recall forty-three of these that have been members of the church or Sunday school or have been regular attenders. The first marriages I performed in Cuba after being legally authorized were those of two of his grandchildren, who were well along in life and who had long lived in sin with their respective companions. In both cases the marriages were performed in the presence of their well grown children who had been born out of wedlock.

THE IOWA PAGE

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DEPARTMENT.

A new Christian Endeavor Society has recently been organized at Hynes, Iowa, in Oskaloosa Quarter. Ernest Wignall was chosen as President and Ruth James as Secretary and Corresponding Secretary.

A new Society was also organized at Hiteman on the same Quarterly Meeting about the same time. The Christian Endeavor Union of the Yearly Meeting extends a most cordial welcome to these new members.

Our Field Secretary, Ora W. Carrell, has just recently returned from a trip through Bangor and Honey Creek Quarters, where he held conferences in all of their Christian Endeavor Societies. He reports the work as most encouraging throughout these Quarters.

The LeGrand and Bangor Meetings are unique in that both Meetings have a Senior, an Intermediate and a Junior Society. Splendid work is being done under very efficient leadership. Marshalltown and New Providence each have a Senior and a Junior Society.

The Marshalltown C. E. has a very unique and successful Mission Study Class. From ten to fifteen minutes are devoted to Missions each Sunday evening. They are using Margaret E. Burton's "Comrades in Service," which is a series of most interesting Biographical sketches of great Home and Foreign Missionaries. Different ones are appointed to bring short reports of these characters without giving the names of the persons described while the rest of the Society must guess the name of the person thus presented. This book may be secured from Ross A. Hadley, Richmond, Ind., and comes at 60 cents in cloth or 40 cents in paper.

The Society at Nevada, in Bangor Quarter, has been doing splendid work even though but few in numbers. They expect to take up the Peace Study Lessons soon.

The Stanford Meeting, in Bangor Quarter, has a very active C. E. Society. This Society was not reported for some reason last year, but it has been organized for more than a year. Fay Hinshaw is President and Inez Rash, Union, Ia., is Corresponding Secretary.

A most excellent conference was held with the Honey Creek Endeavorers at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Mills. A splendid company of from 25 to 30 young people was present. This Society now has a Class in Expert Endeavor which has been meeting for a few weeks.

New Providence has a Society of more than 70 members. The interest is very good and excellent work is being done. They have taken up the Peace Study Lessons in their Society. Their prayer meetings are well attended and a good interest is manifest.

The Society at Hubbard has been very active along all lines of Christian Endeavor. A very fine relationship exists between their Society and the Epworth League of the Methodist church.

The Fairview Society has not been holding regular meetings for some time, but they hope to re-organize soon and take up the work in earnest. The Christian Endeavor Union of our Yearly Meeting is with you!

One of the newest members of our Union is the Society at Iowa Falls just organized since Yearly Meeting. Mrs. Frank Pemberton is President and Fern Cammack is Secretary and Corresponding Secretary. We are glad to know of the encouraging report from Iowa Falls.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT.

Men! Don't forget the great Laymen's Missionary Conventions to be held in our state this month. You cannot afford not to attend.

The Convention at Davenport is to be held February 13-16, while the one to be held in Des Moines is just one week later—February 20-22. Plan to attend the Convention nearest you. You will get to hear some of the most powerful missionary speakers of this country and have the opportunity of mingling with some of the most active church men of our state. It will be worth your while to go.

Men of every denomination will be there—all to consider together the biggest problems that have ever confronted the Christian church—the problems now rendered more clear to us by the light (or darkness) of the European war. Don't you want to be among the men of our nation who will dare to face these problems honestly?

There will be a sectional conference sometime during the Convention made up of the men of our own Yearly Meeting. Other denominations will hold their sectional conferences to consider their share of the obligation which rests upon the Christian church. We want to make the Conference of Quaker men just as large as possible—as a church we want to DO OUR share. We want you there. We NEED YOU there! You will not regret it—IF you go.

EVANGELISTIC DEPARTMENT.

Evangelistic meetings at Rubio, conducted by the pastor, W. I. Kent, resulted in eleven conversions and one renewal, making thirty in two series of meetings conducted by him, and a general stirring up of the membership.

Elgie McCargar was brought down with an acute attack of grippe while conducting meetings at Canby, where several cases of definite blessing resulted, but it cut the period arranged for in two. Brother McCargar was confined to his bed for a week at Canby, then went home for a couple of weeks and at time of writing he is in meetings at Middle River, where there is much conviction. His next place of labor is Motor.

Charles Moore of Indianola, has just closed a series of meetings at Arnolds Park. Very cold weather and deep snow hindered much, and the nineteen sessions held were not very largely attended at any one time, but Brother Moore and the pastor, E. L. Gregory, did some excellent work in visiting resulting in a manifest deeper interest on the part of some. Thirty conversions and renewals are reported, fully one-third of these being reached in their homes. Visitation pays.

Winneshiek Quarterly Meeting was held at Hesper, January 29 and 30. Snow and ice storms with extreme cold prevailed. Representatives from Valton and Kedron were present. At the meeting for ministry and oversight a considerable discussion and deep interest in the conditions prevailing in the meetings were manifest. The outlook is encouraging. H. R.

Keates preached on Saturday morning, after which the business session was held, but on account of stormy weather no meeting was held on Saturday evening. There was a fair attendance on Sunday, when H. R. Keates spoke in the morning and Oren L. Hutchins, the Quarterly Meeting Superintendent, spoke in the evening. He was followed with close attention and several raised their hands expressing their need and purpose of seeking a closer walk with God.

Arthur S. Moon, who has been supplying at Kedron, moves into the parsonage this week.

Springdale Quarterly Meeting was held at West Branch, February 4-6. The meeting on ministry and oversight was held on Friday afternoon and felt to be a profitable occasion. Among other things considered was our responsibility and duty on the peace question, both foreign and national. With the present trend of affairs it appears as though our loyalty to the principle of peace may be submitted to a severe test at home and it behooves us not only to be ready but to stand firm for non-intervention and quietness in America. The Quarterly Meeting was held in the disused Presbyterian church, kindly lent to the West Branch Friends while their fine new church is being built, and which is expected to be completed some time next month. H. R. Keates was in attendance and spoke on Saturday morning and Sunday evening, the pastor, Charles E. Mesner, having charge of the meeting on Sunday morning. At the business session the reports presented were of an encouraging nature. C. J. Bowles, who has lately undertaken the pastoral work at Muscatine, was present and was welcomed to the Quarterly Meeting.

On Sunday morning, H. R. Keates attended and spoke at Springdale meeting, which has been without a settled pastor for over a year, but has had student supplies on Sundays. We need a consecrated man of experience for this place, who can throw himself into the work of rallying the work by personal visitation and wise counsel. An effort is being made to provide a new church building and they have about two thousand dollars promised. It is sincerely hoped that they will carry this to a successful issue and be ready to start work in the spring.

We all have pierced him, and wicked Christians far more than did those of old who knew not what they did.—Christian Rossetti.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

PEACE STUDY TOPIC FEB. 27.

Interdependence of the Nations, I Cor. 12.

Paul sounded one of the truest notes in social life, when he pointed out to the Corinthian Church the basis of harmony in society. He showed them the law of interdependence. Society is grounded upon the principle of consciousness of kind. When this principle is ignored disintegration sets in. One cannot say, "unto thyself enough." He has responsibility towards others and they in turn owe him something.

Our food, every garment, every commodity of the household has been put there through the efforts of a multitude of men representing all nationalities. None of us would care to be deprived of our present conveniences and live as our pioneer fore-fathers did. And yet that is what we would have to do if we refused to use goods that had been sent to us by foreign countries.

Each nation, as each person, has some gift. It should develop that gift not for its own good, but for all. If through climatic conditions, geographical location or peculiarity of temperament God has made one nation unique that implies it has greater responsibility towards its neighbors. It should not be hated, but loved. It should not grow selfish, but altruistic. We all are members of one great social body with Christ as our head.

During these troublesome times, we ask every young Friend to stand true to his principles of Christian brotherhood. Let us be called dreamers, fanatics. We will stand until the world will be compelled to see a new type of heroism. Protest NOW! Write letters and send telegrams to your Congressmen NOW! This vast increase of preparedness must seriously impede the progress of the Friends ideals for Peace. Are you a Friend? Stand for her principles! Do you believe Christ? Make Christianity practical by practicing it!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, FEBRUARY 27.

Topic—"How to put the Bible into Life." Ps. 119: 105-112.

The Bible is a lantern that lights one's pathway. Let it shine in your community and the darkness of sin will flee away.

High Schools and Colleges are coming to see the great value of Bible study. It is educative, which is a good thing. But that is not all, it remakes a life. Study the Bible, and by and by the rough places in one's life will be ironed out and the free full spirit of Christ shall ride triumphantly into the citadel of our souls. Read it devoutly but carefully. Test all of it with close thought. It will thus become more wonderful.

NOTE—Because some Endeavor Societies have not taken up the Peace Study we will run some notes on the regular C. E. topic hereafter, also.

THE SPRING CAMPAIGN FOR YOUNG FRIENDS.

During the months of April, May and June, the Young Friends Board proposes to make a special campaign for Christian Endeavor and Denominational Loyalty. We have already surpassed our aim for Peace Study Classes. Far greater interest than we had hoped for has been expressed. We hope that an interest equally great will be showing itself in the spring campaign.

Christian Endeavor

The Board has a number of Efficiency Charts and Expert Endeavor books on hand which it hopes to place in needy fields. The new Chart shows how broad Christian Endeavor is. Study Classes, Social Service Groups, Fellowship Groups and any other special forms of expression can be included under the modern Christian Endeavor.

No one can work an organization well without knowing the same. It will be necessary therefore to study "Expert Endeavor." Examinations will be given either by the pastors, another expert or the Young Friends Board. Questions can be had upon request. Let us enter "The Million Campaign." We must have several hundred more Endeavorers this year.

Quaker Study Classes

Quaker Study Classes will use either Emmott's "Story of Quakerism" with accompanying outline, or C. E. Woodman's "The Present Day Message of Quakerism," with outline. The first contains twenty short lessons or ten full hour discussions. The second will be made up of eight rather short lessons. The first gives a general view of the church from its beginning to the present. The second presents its doctrines and their message for today.

Emmott's book is priced $1.25 with outlines at 5 cents each. Woodman's book sells for $1 with outline at 2 cents.

Send in for books at once, that you may have something definite to talk up for your Society. Considerable preparation must precede organization.

PREPAREDNESS, not for an imaginary foe, but a literary enemy. Fortify your home not by teaching your children hideous fairy tales, but by "Beautiful Bible Stories." This book for boys and girls contains more than fifty Bible stories splendidly illustrated, size 8x10 inches, 275 pages, substantial cloth binding. Price, postage prepaid, $1.50. Address Rev. P. D. Guyer (pastor Friends church), Paonia, Colorado.

CHURCH AT WORK

Long Beach, California—The Bible School at Long Beach has a good attendance with Clarkson Parker as superintendent. The meeting is fortunate in having for its pastor Andrew F. Mitchell, a man thoroughly in love with his calling and abundantly able to expound the Word in love and in the power of the spirit. He is never more at home than when he feels called upon to denounce all wars as being incompatible with the teachings of Jesus Christ. A congregation often fills the church auditorium with a goodly number of visitors generally present.

Muncie, Indiana—On the evening of February 4 the Friends Memorial Church held a get-together social for the entire membership in the Sabbath School rooms of the church. A splendid program was arranged in charge of Mrs. Flora Sayers. There was special music, then the Whittier Sabbath School class gave some sketches from the lives of our early Friends. First of all was an impersonation of George Fox, his parents, his life, his work, imprisonment and marriage to Margaret Fell. Next was a talk on Margaret Fox's life followed by William Penn coming forward and we were instructed by his life, his sympathy, his kindness and his treaty with the Indians. Last of all Elizabeth Fry and her great prison reform work were represented. Refreshments were served at the close in the dining room of the church.

West Elkton, Ohio—On Sabbath morning, February 6, Henry McKinley, pastor of the meeting here, preached an excellent sermon relative to peace, war and preparedness. He praised President Wilson for his attitude toward the warring nations of Europe and our sister Republic of Mexico, but he criticised him severely for the stand he has taken within the last few weeks in regard to preparedness, traveling over the country, creating a feeling among the people for war merely for the sake of political purposes. He said that during the first three years of the President's administration he was honored and respected by all lovers of peace, law and order, but since his swing around the circle he has lost much of that prestige. The pastor's text was from II Samuel, where David went out unarmed but in the name of the Lord and slew Goliath the Giant.

Sterling, Kansas—Dr. William L.

Pearson, professor of Biblical Literature at Friends University, Wichita, Kansas, acceptably attended Friends meeting here February 6, his subject being "Church Union." In the evening he spoke before a large and appreciative audience in the M. E. Church, this being a union service of Friends, Methodists and Congregationalists. His subject was "The Prince of Peace and World Peace," taking his text from Isa. 9:6, 7. The folly of the preparedness craze was ably set forth, the recent visit of President Wilson to Kansas giving emphasis to his remarks.

Denver, Colorado—Denver Quarterly Meeting was held in Denver, January 21-23 with representatives present from Boulder, Colorado Springs, Deer Trail and Sand Arroya. There were also some present from the Friends settlement near Arroya where a meeting was set up on January 29. On Friday evening preceding the meeting on ministry and oversight the ladies of the local meeting kindly provided a bounteous supper at the church for the pastors of the Quarterly Meeting, who thus met for a conference regarding future work. The meeting on ministry and oversight proved to be very interesting and beneficial, the subject for consideration being "The Responsibilities of the Ministry and Oversight Body, 1. To the pastor; 2. To the church at large; 3. To the world (non-church members)". These sub-topics were discussed by C. L. Nellis, Walter H. Wilson and Kirby V. Bowen respectively, followed by a general discussion participated in by John Fry, L. E. Kenworthy, Adrian DeLong and others.

At the meeting for worship on Saturday morning C. L. Nellis, pastor at Deer Trail, brought a helpful message from John 3:16. After a social hour and dinner in the church building the session for business convened at 1:30 o'clock with Mary E. Lewis and Ella Sorrells, clerks, at the desk. Reports on the state of Society showed the various meetings for the most part to be in a satisfactory condition. Quarterly Meeting sanction was given for the recording of Letson Burns of Arroya as a minister of the gospel. After a lengthy discussion of the preparedness program of the President and other related topics it was voted to remonstrate to our Congressmen against the support of any such program and also to commend those who are influentially standing against it. The committee appointed nine months ago to set up a Monthly Meeting at Arroya had been unable to perform the work, and the names of Walter H. Wilson and C. L. Nellis were added to the committee for the purpose of setting up said meeting January 29 and 30. On Sabbath morning K. V. Bowen of Boulder, Quarterly Meeting Superintendent, brought a stirring peace message based on Elisha's prayers as recorded in Kings 6:17-20. On Sabbath evening C. L. Nellis spoke from Matthew 11:28. God's blessing was manifest throughout the entire Quarterly Meeting. The next session will be held at Boulder April 21-23.

Lynn, Mass., Eastern Avenue—The Christmas spirit was keen at the Eastern Avenue Friends meeting. The C. E. Society held a "pound gift evening," the results from which were distributed to needy quarters. The Endeavorers also presented a beautiful cut glass water set to their minister, Tom Sykes, and his wife. The primary and beginners' department of the Bible School held a successful Christmas tree and social. The girls' classes of the School and the Lend-a-Hand class held a combined social in the gymnasium. The men's circle hit upon the happy idea of entertaining all the boys and men at a Christmas party in the gymnasium room. A "White Gift Service" and Christmas exercises were held on Sunday evening, the auditorium of the church being well filled. An effective and interesting program was carried out.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

Made from Cream of Tartar

NO ALUM—NO PHOSPHATE

Plattekill, N. Y.—Cornwall Quarterly Meeting, New York, was held here in January. Considering the weather and condition of the roads the attendance was good. The Temperance Committee decided to engage Mrs. Ella A. Boole, State President of the W. C. T. U., to give a lecture at her earliest convenience before a conference of the Quarterly Meeting.

In December the Clintondale Sunday School presented a pleasing and very impressive pageant, representing the birth of Christ. The other Sunday Schools of the Quarter had appropriate exercises. The ministers of the four meetings of the Quarter will continue to serve their respective meetings during the coming year, viz: Anson Coutant, resident minister at Tilton; Frank Allen, a Congregational minister, residing at Plattekill; Martha Bell, a resident minister at Milton, and John D. Piper, who was unanimously chosen as pastor for another year at Clintondale.

The C. E. Societies of the Quarter are doing good work. The Clintondale Society held a business meeting and social recently, at which time it was decided to give the envelope system of collection a six months' trial.

Greensboro, N. C.—The Spring Garden Street Friends have just closed a very successful series of meetings in which God honored us with His presence and wonderfully blessed and revived the work. Jasper M. Cain, evangelist from Mt. Airy, N. C., who for some time, has felt a deep concern for this meeting, led in the campaign. His method of conducting meetings is quite different from the plan usually followed by evangelists and God used it very effectively. His preaching was pointed and practical and large audiences gathered to hear him. During the meetings there were forty-seven professions of conviction and thus far there have been thirty-four applications for membership. We rejoice that God sent Jasper M. Cain this way, and the prayers of a grateful people will follow him as he goes to other fields.

Guilford College, N. C.—Albert J. Brown of Wilmington, Ohio, came to Guilford College in the interests of the Y. M. C. A. on Sabbath, January 30, holding two services that day in New Garden meeting house, where the students attend meeting. He held meetings with the boys each evening until February 3 and spoke at chapel on two different occasions. He had many private conferences with college classes and with individuals.

Bed Spreads, Pillow Cases, Sheets For Spring and Summer-Attractively Priced

Dependable qualities, of a kind that have added to the fame of our Bedfurnishing Store:

BED SPREADS—best quality, American made; white Crinkled Dimity, 63x99 inches, $1.50; 72x99 inches, $1.75; 80x99 inches, $2.00; 90x100 inches, $2.25. Of white corded dimity, 63x99 inches, $1.75; 72x99 inches, $2.00; 80x99 inches, $2.25; 90x100 inches, $2.50. Crochet weave, in Marseilles design, size 78x88 inches, $1.75. Marseilles Spreads, white satin finish, size 80x90 inches, $2.50. Fine quality Marseilles Spreads, satin finish, with scalloped edges and corners, cut for 4 feet 6-inch metal beds, size 88x98 inches, $5.00.

SHEETS—Strawbridge & Clothier special brand, bleached muslin of standard quality; size 63x90 inches, 80c; 72x90 inches, 85c; 81x90 inches, 90c. Extra lengths, 63x99 inches, 90c; 72x99 inches, 95c; 81x99 inches, $1.00; 90x99 inches, $1.10.

PILLOW CASES—S. & C. Special brand, bleached muslin; size 42x36 inches, 22c; 45x38½ inches, 25c; 50x38½ inches, 30c.

A Wide Assortment of Blankets and Comfortables.

Hundreds from which to choose, all marked at prices that are an exceptional economical inducement, because the bulk of our great stock was bought before the advance in manufacturers' prices.

You can order these Bedfurnishings with the understanding that if your purchase is not satisfactory in every way you can return it AT ONCE and your money will be refunded.

Please mention this publication.

Strawbridge & Clothier
Philadelphia, Penna.

Much good was done and new life came to many of the young men.

Berlinville, Ohio—Isaac Kinsey closed a series of meetings of three weeks' duration at Berlinville on January 30. There were thirteen who professed definite help. The meetings were of special value in that there has been a religious awakening throughout the entire community. Many have attended the meetings who had scarcely been in a meeting house for years. Isaac Kinsey is now engaged in meetings at Sullivan Avenue Friends Church, Columbus, Ohio.

Bloomington, Indiana—George H. Moore recently gave before the students in Bloomington Academy a series of Chapel Talks on War and Peace. He set forth in a very convincing manner arguments against armaments and strong pleas for the peaceable settlement of all difficulties arising between nations. Students were glad to make note of the facts presented for their use in meeting present day sentiments for "preparedness."

Our meeting has just experienced a gracious visitation of the Holy Spirit through the ministry of Lindley A. Wells of Portland, Oregon. His clear and forceful exposition of gospel truth, his insistence on holiness of heart, his thorough loyalty to the church and his large sympathy for men made a deep impression on all who heard his messages, and many testified to definite blessing in converting, renewing or sanctifying grace. A large work was done among the students of the Academy and the active co-operation of the teachers was a potent factor in bringing it about.

Highland, Ohio—Esther Cook of New Castle, Indiana, conducted a very profitable series of meetings at Highland, beginning on December 12 and closing on January 2. There were no conversions, but much good to the church has resulted and many were deepened in the divine life.

NOTICE.

A joint conference under the auspices of the Woman's Home Council and the Foreign Missionary Society of Western Yearly Meeting will be held at the Bertha Ballard Home, 411 North Delaware street, Indianapolis, Indiana, on February 29. The morning session will begin at 9:30 o'clock and continue until noon with lunch at the Bertha Ballard Home. The afternoon session will convene from one o'clock until two, then adjourn for the Women's Auxiliary meeting at the Second Presbyterian church at 2:30 o'clock. Delegates to the Women's Western Yearly Meeting Conference will be entertained for the night of February 29 and breakfast the next morning, so they can attend the sessions of the Women's Auxiliary on Wednesday, which are held in connection with the Laymen's Missionary Convention.

Claribel B. Harrison,
Secretary.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT—WOMEN'S AUXILIARY.

In connection with the Laymen's Missionary Movement Convention at Indianapolis, Indiana, Women's Auxiliary meetings have been arranged for the afternoon and evening of February 28, 29 and March 1. The sessions for women will be held in the Second Presbyterian church, corner Vermont and Pennsylvania streets. Some of the eminent speakers who address the men's meetings will also address the Women's Auxiliary. Among these speakers and gifted men are Bishop Hartzell of the M. E. church, missionary to Africa; Julius Hecker, the great editor, educator and missionary from Russia, and S. H. Little, for fourteen years a missionary in China. No woman who can possibly get to these sessions can afford to miss them.

A registration fee of twenty-five cents each entitles all women to the sessions of the Women's Auxiliary, including the mass meeting at Tomlinson Hall for both men and women to be addressed by President Woodrow Wilson and J. Campbell White, provided President Wilson can arrange to be present. He will speak on the Propagation and Power of Christianity Throughout the World. Any woman who reads this notice in The American Friend may send her name and address to Mrs. T. W. Grafton, Chairman of Committee, office Y. M. C. A., Indianapolis, Indiana, together with registration fee of twenty-five cents. Each one who does this will receive a button which will admit her to all sessions of the Women's Auxiliary. A thousand women is our goal. Overflow meetings will be held at the tabernacle Presbyterian Church.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCES.

An article by Samuel Haworth on an earlier page of this issue will re-

The American Friend Book Department

The American Friend is arranging to handle books, booklets and pamphlets which will be of general interest to Friends in America. Arrangements have already been made with the John C. Winston Company of Philadelphia, Friends Book and Tract Committee of New York City and the United Society of Christian Endeavor to receive orders for their publications. We hope soon to make similar arrangements with other houses, so that in the near future orders can be sent to us for practically any book that will be of general interest to our membership.

Some Suggestions in Books

The following books together with many others can be secured by sending your orders to this office. In this way you will be helping The American Friend.

Barclay's Apology, by Robert Barclay.....	$0.70
Beginnings of Quakerism, by William C. Braithwaite.....	3.20
Bright, John, The Life of, by G. M. Trevylan.....	4.70
Christ and War, by William E. Wilson, cloth, $0.70; limp.....	.50
Christian's Secret of a Happy Life, by Hannah Whitall Smith.....	.35
Decisive Hour of Christian Missions, by John R. Mott.....	.60
Dymond on War, Introductory Words by John Bright.....	.25
Dynamic Faith, by Rufus M. Jones.....	1.00
Fox, George, by Henry Stanley Newman.....	1.50
Fox, George, by R. M. Jones, two-volume edition.....	4.25
Student edition (same author), one volume.....	1.65
Friends and the War, Proceedings of Llandudno Conference, 1914.....	.55
Fry, Elizabeth, Life of, by Georgina King Lewis.....	1.20
Gurney, J. J., Life of, by J. Bevan Braithwaite.....	1.50
Grellet, Stephen, Life of, by William Guest.....	.75
History of Friends in America (Revised edition), by Allen C. Thomas.....	1.15
No Cross, No Crown, by William Penn.....	.70
Quaker Apostle, (In Memoriam of John T. Dorland), by W. K. Baker.....	.85
Quaker Diary in the Orient, by William C. Allen.....	1.00
Quaker Experiment in Government, by Isaac Sharpless (illustrations).....	2.25
(Without illustrations).....	1.50
Quakers, The Rise of, by T. Edmund Harvey.....	.75

The above are only a few of a long list of publications which can be ordered at any time. Send your order with remittance to veal something of the opportunity which Friends Meetings in the vicinity of Des Moines, Indianapolis, Los Angeles and other cities are confronting within the next few days. In Des Moines, on February 20th to 22d, and in Indianapolis and Los Angeles on February 27th to March 1st, conventions similar to the one held in Minneapolis will afford scores of Friends Meetings the opportunity of being represented. It is to be hoped that no meeting within 100 miles of any of these centers will fail to be represented by two or more men.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

MARRIED

Sheets-Lewis—At the home of the bride, Georgetown, Illinois, January 25, 1916, Herschel A. Sheets to Goldie Lewis, Elwood Lewis, grandfather of the bride, officiating.

BORN

Andrew—At Prairie Center, Kansas, August 2, 1915, to Alpheus L. and Della Andrew, a son, Charles Leslie.

Cosand—At Damascus, Ohio, January 23, 1916, to Clarence L. and Maggie V. Cosand, a daughter, Evelyn Lorene.

Gordon—At Prairie Center, Kansas, November 27, 1915, to William A. and Nellie Gordon, a daughter, Viola.

Holloway—At Saylesville, R. I., January 6, 1916, to Louis E. and Anna L. A. Holloway, a daughter, Aldah Arline.

Kemp—At Wichita, Kansas, December 23, 1915, to Wallace C. and Blanche Kemp, a son, Wallace Chester.

White—At Prairie Center, Kansas, December 17, 1915, to John M. and Ida M. White, a son, William Elbert.

DIED

Branson—Abner Branson, son of William and Eliza Branson, was born in Harrison county, Ohio, April 28, 1841, and died at Oskaloosa, Iowa, January 8, 1916, aged 74 years, 8 months and 10 days. He was a birthright Friend and converted at the age of eighteen years. He was ever interested in the forward movements of the church and especially active in peace and temperance work. He married Eliza C. Jepson in 1867 and after her death he married Esther Pickercell in 1892. He was in the nursery business for forty-nine years first at West Branch, Iowa, and later at New Sharon. For the last seven years he resided with his daughter at Oskaloosa. Five years ago he lost his eyesight but maintained a contented and cheerful disposition.

FOR SALE at a bargain: six 10-acre tracts of land and two large tracts. Some of these have bearing orange and fig groves; all located in a splendid Friends' community, near Friends church and academy, also near public school. Good hard roads. Located in the orange and fig district of Texas. For particulars address P. M. Hoke, Colfax, Illinois.

NOTICE

Owing to the death of the author, Dr. Charles Frederick Holder, it has been decided to close out the edition of "The Quakers in England and America" at the special price of $3.00, express prepaid. If you are desirous of obtaining this work, address C. F. Holder, 475 Bellfontaine Street, Pasadena, California.

BIBLE SCHOOL

FEBRUARY 27.

Subject—The Seven Helpers.

Lesson—Acts 6.

Golden Text—Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ. Gal. 6:2.

Was disaster already overtaking the policy of having all things in common, or were the Hebrews looking after those of their own race first, or were the numbers getting so large that the misistering force was not adequate to the needs? Probably there is some truth in all these surmises. When food is given away to members of an organization the numbers are apt to increase, and unless the supply is unlimited it is apt to grow smaller in amount. They followed Jesus for the loaves and fishes; possibly some of these saw a chance to live easily and comfortably, so the faithful had to devise new methods of administration.

Notice how carefully they planned the new regime. Men of good report, known to be filled with the Spirit were to be selected and we may presume men too with some business ability. One of the saddest features of church work is that too few business men—men who have administrative talents are placed on the financial boards and budget committees. It is well to have spirit filled men but that is not all the work demands. Let us hunt these out and set them to managing our religious organizations, while some of the rest of us that cannot make ends meet in our own petty purchases do something for which we have some ability. Note too that at least some of these men had a racial interest in the matter at hand. When Greek widows and orphans are to be cared for it is perfectly fitting that Greeks shall be on the visiting staff.

Division of labor here. Too few had been managing matters. Are there any schools, are there any meetings where all the work is done by a certain few? Perhaps the officers are all old people; what will become of the organization when these faithful ones are compelled to quit their tasks. Some go to the other extreme and ruthlessly turn all the old and experienced workers out. Let us strike the golden mean and train the young beside the tried and true.

This service seems to have given some of the seven just the opportunity needed to develop latent talents. Very soon Stephen is doing yeoman service in the ministry. In his analysis of the Christian message he seems to have anticipated Paul. The question of the Christian's relation to the Mosiac legislation was bound to come to the front sooner or later. In spite of the fact that some of the testimony of the "suborned men" was prearranged, it seems that Stephen had come to a new view of that relation and was starting the cleaving wedge.

What a mistake the legalists made in their haste. When facts cannot be summoned to silence an opponent's argument it is a great temptation to resort to force. The man must be silenced at all hazards even if stones or fire or ridicule or disownment has to be resorted to. The man against whom meeting houses were once locked is today one of the honored ministers of the church. They of Berea examined the scriptures daily to see if Paul's teaching were true, and they were more noble than those of Thessalonica.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED
In a private home in Washington. Convenient to car line and Union Station.
Laura N. Wilson,
46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list. $

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books
The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.
Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.
Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School; 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whittall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 8.

SECOND MONTH 24, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 8.

The Better Way

By PHOEBE CARY

I ask not wealth, but power to take
And use the things I have aright;
Not years, but wisdom that shall make
My life a profit and delight.
I ask not that for me the plan
Of good and ill be set aside;
But that the common lot of man
Be nobly borne and glorified.
I know I may not always keep
My steps in places green and sweet,
Nor find the pathway of the deep
A place of safety for my feet;
But pray that when the tempter's breath
Shall fiercely sweep my way about,
I make not shipwreck on my faith
In the unbottomed sea of doubt;
And that, though it be mine to know
How hard the stoniest pillow seems,
Good angels still may come and go
About the places of my dreams.
I do not ask for love below,
That friends shall never be estranged;
But for the power of loving, so
My heart may keep its youth unchanged.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,

RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Urgent Campaign Against Preparedness

Friends in America have probably never faced a more definite challenge to their cherished principles than they are confronting right now, in the astounding program of an increase of the country's military establishment that is being advocated by President Wilson and his administration. Never in the history of our country has there been such serious danger of the United States being saddled with the terrible burdens and waste of enormous military equipment in time of peace as at present. It is all the more appalling to have our President urging upon Congress vast increases in the army and navy when we remember what a reputation as a peace man he had up to a few months ago. But there is no question that at this time, nothing is being left undone by the National Administration that will help to induce Congress to authorize by law the carrying out of preparedness plans, that involve not only a great increase in immediate expenditures for the army and navy, but the gradual development of a military establishment that would place this country in a class with the leading European countries. The plans include even the possibility of conscription as a means of getting the needed men. Of course all newspaper readers know what strenuous efforts are being made by various organizations and individuals throughout the country to arouse sentiment favorable to the administration's program. Surely if the peace principles of American Friends were ever anything more than mere sentiment it ought to be now.

It has been reported how, with these conditions in mind and with a deep sense of the country's peril in their hearts, a group of Friends met in Washington a short time ago. They have gotten in touch with Congressmen, interviewed members of the Administration, attended committee hearings and in other ways tried to get a grasp of the whole situation with regard to "preparedness." Their Committee has now opened an office at 1811 I Street and Arthur M. Dewees has been engaged as secretary. There will be telephone connection with the office and it will be open every day. The hope is that this office may prove of real service in the course of the session of Congress in helping to organize and bring to bear in the most effective way the peace sentiment of Friends throughout the country. It is desired that the office shall be a clearing house and headquarters for all Friends who want their opposition to militarism and war to count for something. Help will be gladly furnished to Friends in anything they may want to do to help in the crusade against this hasty movement for a big army and navy. Already Friends in a number of Congressional Districts have promised to help and it is hoped to hear favorably from many others soon.

On the 9th, 10th and 11th, the Committee on Military Affairs of the House heard those opposed to preparedness. There were representatives of the National Grange and of the Farmers' Union sent to protest against large military increase. It was very interesting and gratifying to find in this delegation Oliver Wilson, a member of the Liberal branch from Illinois, who is Master of the National Grange, and L. J. Taber, of Barnesville, Ohio, Master of the State Grange, and a member of the Conservative body of Friends there. General Nelson A. Miles, retired, surprised all those present at the hearing by speaking in favor of a small and democratic army. Representatives of big labor organizations having hundreds of thousands of members and many prominent social workers protested against Congress going into plans for spending hundreds of millions of dollars for purposes of destruction, and asked that more money be spent instead upon human betterment plans in this country. Friends were represented by President Swain and Profs. William I. Hull and Jesse H. Holmes of Swarthmore, and by President Sharpless of Haverford, and Carolena M. Wood, of New York. The dangers to our national life of militarism and the undemocratic character and tendency of it were pointed out and it was urged that our ideals of the past should be held and developed toward arbitration instead of war. The Committee of Congressmen gave earnest and sympathetic attention to all that was said and these men appeared to be little affected by the excitement and clamor in the newspapers throughout the country. The struggle will doubtless come in Congress and Friends must make their ideals known, each to his own Representative, if they desire to save our country from extreme legislation at this time.

Whatever is done must be done quickly. Hearings are now over and the committees of Congress are at work preparing bills for presentation in the near future. Personal letters, telegrams and petitions should be sent immediately to Congressmen to let them know that further enlargement of the army and navy is not approved.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 8.

SECOND MONTH 24, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 8.

The Transformation Power of the Gospel

The tragedy of religion is that its vitality has all too frequently been obscured by ceremonialism and theologic contentions. In essence religion is a life, conformed to the teachings of scripture and to the will of God. No theory about its nature and its operations can ever be a satisfactory substitute for it. The difference between knowing God and knowing about Him, is the difference between a religion of experience and a religion of form. Religion is an affair of the heart and not alone of disciplinary definitions.

Religion that is not transforming will never be uplifting in any vital sense. Belief in the efficacy of repentance will never save a man, but actual repentance is the gateway into the kingdom of God. Faith as a theologic term gives no assurance of a new life, but faith as an experience of the repentant heart is the highway that leads to the place of divine forgiveness and to the joy of a transformed life. When Jesus said "Ye must be born again" He spoke the final word about a philosophy of life that is fundamental to all human experience.

The miracle of life is the transforming power of the gospel of Christ, operating upon human personality. Contrast Peter, trembling before the maid and denying in the face of commonly known evidence, that he was of the order of despised discipleship, and Peter filled with the Holy Spirit, standing a few days later with John within the circle of the accusing Sanhedrin and boldly proclaiming his allegiance to his Lord and Master. Contrast Saul, "breathing threatening and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord," and the transformed Paul who suffered persecution even unto death, for the sake of his abounding faith in the Christ whom he had met on the road to Dasmascus. Contrast George Fox, depressed and almost despairing, and George Fox, bold in the new found knowledge of Christ's ability to speak to his condition, ready to face magistrates and dungeons and the wrath of kings in testimony of the realism of gospel truth which had been made manifest in his own life.

See Jerry McAuley, serving imprisonment for robbery, turning from his vicious life to become the patron saint of missions in New York City. Go to the missionary lands, to the islands of the sea, where whole communities and tribes and peoples are being transformed into a new and better life through faith in Jesus Christ. We may turn to the saints of our own acquaintance, many of whom are marvels of the work of redeeming grace, as evidence of the transforming power of the gospel of Christ in their lives. As Christ was incarnated in the flesh, so must he be incarnated in human personality today, else religion is a meaningless jumble of words, a bit of ceremonialism that veneers the old life with respectability, without the vitalizing power of holy experiences in heart and life.

In the face of the existing world cataclysm, there is an ominous future before the Church of Christ. It is neither a time for self-exaltation, nor for emphasizing our goodly heritage. The slow, plodding tendencies of Christian activity will not avail in this hour. This crisis which is to test the stability of the church and the power of Christianity as a transforming, uplifting world force, cannot be met by any system of dogmatic theology, whether new or old. It is not a day for ceremonialism or ordinances. The whole world is face to face with the need of a living Christ, working through transformed human personality for the regeneration of society and governments and international relationships. The reflection of Christ in individual life must be revealed in community and world life, before the desert will rejoice or blossom as the rose. The idealism of the church will not save. It must have a membership that will be exemplars of the transformed life.

The church will not thrive unless it can succeed in changing the ideals of both the social and industrial order. There can be no caste in a religion that is potent to redeem the race. Religion must become the soul of business and politics and diplomacy, but public regeneration will come through the agency of personal regeneration. Human frailties and human proneness to sin must be transformed into human strength and the human practice of righteousness by the touch of God upon lives that are surrendered to His will.

A revival of Christianity in the personal lives of the multitudes will do more than all else to clean up community life, to regenerate the social order, to solve the perplexing problems of peace on earth, good will to all men. When the ruling thought of the world can be made to feel the touch of personated righteousness, there will be a new day break for the civilization of the race.

The Minister as a Preacher

(Paper read by Errol D. Peckham at a meeting of the ministers of New York Yearly Meeting at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., February 8 and 9.)

Preaching is one of many important functions of a minister. One minister has said, "I do not conceive my work as that of a professional teacher, preacher, visitor, organizer, comforter, priest, reformer, or even prophet. It is something of all these, but it is something more than the sum of all these." Whether this adequately defines his work or not, the successful minister is a person of many parts. I do not underrate the others when I emphasize the preaching function and express my belief that the minister has no more important function. We are warranted in the conviction that every period of great spiritual power in the history of the church has been a time of great preachers. The church started with preachers like Jesus, Peter and Paul. Among the early church fathers were preachers like Chrysostom, Ambrose and St. Augustine. Later, when the preachers became priests, the church degenerated. At the time of the reformation great preachers arose like Luther, Calvin and John Knox. Preaching declined and the church became cold and formal. The rise of Friends was marked by a generation of powerful preachers that sprang up about Fox and his message. The same could be said of John Wesley's movement and the times of Thomas Hooker and Jonathan Edwards.

One reason we do not have more preachers today who stand head and shoulders above everyone else in the community is the new conditions of life in which we live. Time was when the minister was the only educated person in many communities and one of the very few who could read and write. Today everybody reads and most communities have a fair degree of education. More than that, ours is a day of specialists. We have eye specialists, ear specialists, lung specialists. We have experts in law, in science and in agriculture. No man today can hope to be what the great preacher in former times often was, viz., the one man in the community who knew everything. With the general spread of knowledge and books, there has come a corresponding decline in the esteem which the minister held in the community life. "In the early days, he was considered superhuman, later he was looked upon as supremely human, still later he was regarded as interesting and useful, but we have fallen upon a day when great numbers of people look upon the minister as an impertinence or a boss."

If we agree that the times of greatest spiritual power have been times when great preachers have had the ear of the community, and if the work of the modern preacher has been rendered very difficult by the general diffusion of knowledge, we will all welcome any discussion which may help us as ministers to do better preaching. And since many of our ministers preach in rural districts let me urge you to magnify your office there. In a pamphlet entitled "Maine's Hall of Fame," four hundred and fifty prominent citizens of that state are named. The great majority of these and among them the most distinguished were reared in country places. Statistics gathered in four leading churches of Boston showed eighty percent of all the ministers and Christian workers born and brought up in the country. At the present time an increasing number of people are emphasizing the importance of the rural church, and that means a new day of opportunity for the individual who preaches in rural places. Not that the city can or should receive less attention, but that the country should and will receive more. Notwithstanding the so-called decline in preaching, notwithstanding the increased difficulty of preaching, I very strongly believe the preacher is here to stay and he who learns to speak God's message to the people is to have a large and very vital place in the days that are ahead. How then can we improve our preaching? I will present my subject under three heads: The preacher's material, the preacher's preparation and the preacher's power.

I. The Preacher's Material.

It has been well said that the preacher must be a constant student of two books, his parish and the bible. Our last hour has been used in a discussion of one book, his parish. This hour is to be devoted to a discussion of his other book, for the one thing I want to say and have remembered is that the Bible is the book of books from which preaching material may be taken. Robert Barclay said "The scriptures are not the fountain, but the declaration of the fountain and are, therefore, the most excellent writings in the world." Here are recorded the experiences which holy men of old have had in soul-fellowship with God. The preachers who have been able to read the Bible, discover its meaning and make that meaning plain to the people are the preachers that have lived in history. They are the great expositional preachers. Read Peter's sermon in second chapter of Acts or in Acts three. A very large portion of them is quoted from the Old Testament scripture. Read Stephen's sermon in Acts seven or Paul's in Acts thirteen. All these sermons are distinctly expository. St. Augustine, Ambrose, Martin Luther, Spurgeon, Campbell Morgan and John Henry Jowett are all examples of strong expository preachers. The burden of their work is and was "Preach the Word." In this day of spiritual unrest and unbelief people want the meaning of the Bible made plain. There never was a day when minds were more alert or keen in their questions but the day is rapidly coming when people will go to hear faithfully that preaching which gives the sense of God's word.

Two great blessings for the preacher are in expository work. They grow out of two serious things he must do. In the first place he must shut people in Pilate's council chamber alone with the Lord. You remember that day Pilate took Jesus into the council chamber alone and asked him concerning his kingship. You remember Pilate was convinced there was no fault in Jesus. He recognized Jesus' right as king of righteousness, but he heard the voices outside calling, "Crucify him, crucify him," and deliver him up. Men and women have voices of temptations calling on every side to crucify the Christ that is in them, and it is the business of the preacher to shut these men and women in the secret chamber with Christ and enable them to hear his solemn claim to lordship over their lives. There is no material a preacher can use which will so faithfully do this work as that in the scriptures. This truth is his shield and buckler. The other serious but joyous work of the preacher is to "Feed the sheep." He must not always be making a tirade against sin. People are busy, tired, ignorant, spiritually worn. They need comfort and tonic for the soul and happy is that preacher who can discover in the Bible the food for men's souls which is stored therein.

II. The Preacher's Preparation.

We have stressed expository preaching as that most worth while. An expository sermon is one preached on a more or less extended passage of scripture, a psalm, a parable, a paragraph or even a book. Other types of preaching like textual or topical often wander far from the Bible; expository preaching, never. Therefore, if one considers himself a textual or topical preacher he will do well to combine with these the expository habit. Two facts are outstanding in this habit; first, the setting of the scripture expounded and second the thought in that scripture. The setting of a scripture passage should take account of the circumstances under which the book in which it occurs was written. If you write a letter to a bereaved family and another to a family in the joy of a coming festival, your letters would undoubtedly differ in character, and a stranger reading them would have a clue to understand them if he knew the circumstances. Just so when one prepares to preach from scripture, say in the epistle to the Hebrews; he will better understand it and be better able to make others understand it if he knows this letter was written to a congregation of Jewish Christians; that it was written about 65 A. D., five years before the destruction of Jerusalem, when the shadows of that disaster had fallen on the Jews in persecution so severe that they were ready to backslide from Christianity to the faith of their Hebrew fathers. To know these things makes the argument of the book pertinent, as it seeks to convince the readers that Jesus Christ is the supreme revelation of God to man: proving first, that Jesus was superior to the angels by whom the first covenant was mediated; second, that Jesus was superior to Moses, the great Jewish law-giver, and finally that Jesus was greater than the Aaronic priesthood by which the fathers had drawn nigh to God.

Not only does the setting of scripture take account of the circumstances in which the book was written, but it has regard for the immediate content as well. Romans seven is a passage which illustrates the value of this. No scripture has puzzled people more, or received a greater variety of interpretations. The trouble is, we try to understand that chapter apart from the argument of which it is one block. We must see it in relation to the argument which begins with chapter 1:18 and closes with chapter eight. These chapters are all of a piece and one might as well try to get a clear idea of a point on one page of an argument twenty pages long, and that page in the middle of the argument, as to try to get a satisfactory grasp of Romans seven when the argument is not clearly in mind which leads up to that chapter. To change the figure, what adequate idea could one get of the function of a single wheel in a strange machine unless he could see it in proper relations to the entire machine?

Further, the expository habit will save us from many pitfalls of interpretation. How many times I have heard the assertion that one who preaches the real gospel will be heard gladly by the common people; and the point is proved by the scripture, which says the common people heard Jesus gladly! How many of you would risk the proof that you are preaching the real gospel by the crowds of common people which gather to hear you? The fact is, when you study that scripture in the light of the context, you see that the time the common people heard Jesus gladly was in the days when He was denouncing the scribes and leaders of the nation who were the oppressors of the common people. He was saying, "Beware of the scribes, who desire to walk in long robes, and to have salutations in the market places, and chief seats in the synagogues, and chief places at the feasts; they devour widows' houses and for a pretense make long prayers." Where could you not get a crowd of common people to listen today to a preacher while he denounced the sins of their oppressors? But what about the common people at Nazareth, where Jesus began his ministry? Did they not go about to kill Him by casting Him over a precipice? And what about the common people at Capernaum the day after five thousand were fed, when Jesus revealed them to themselves by declaring they followed Him for the physical benefits of loaves and fishes? Then it was that this crowd of common people who had been ready to take Jesus by force and make him king began to turn away until Jesus turned in sorrow to the twelve and asked, "Will ye also go away?" What about the common people at Jerusalem? Did not they cry, "Crucify him," "Crucify him?" When we take an expository view of "the common people heard him gladly," we see it was only under certain conditions that that was true. The common people need the preaching of God's word, and we may hope many will be won by faithful work, but do not let the fact that great crowds fail to gather to hear you be the evidence on which you determine whether you are preaching the gospel. I am pleading for the expository habit. Whether you do textual, topical or expositional preaching, consider the circumstances under which the book was written and pay attention to the context.

Let us now consider the preparation of the sermon with reference to the thought in the scripture to be expounded. I will mention four things in this connection, viz., the scripture thought, related thought, the skeleton and the flesh of the sermon. It is well to get the scripture in mind early in the week. Analyze it and set down the leading ideas on paper to carry with you until you have them fixed in mind. I want to add a hard saying for those who think they can bear it. If the scripture is not too long commit it to memory during the early part of the week. Let me give you a secret about fixing things in the memory. Take a short passage, a clause of a sentence and repeat it out loud and really loud at that. Repeat it ten or twelve times or whatever number of times is necessary to hook it onto the memory. I dare say you will be surprised how much this process helps. If you get the scripture or the leading ideas of the scripture fixed in mind early in the week, then recall them day by day; the Holy Spirit uses the truth thus planted in your mind to bring forth fresh meanings and new depth of old meanings. Thus sermonic material of your own by the Holy Spirit is created and these fresh creations are the things which will give spice and interest to your preaching.

In the second place you will do well to gather other thought and clear up difficult points in the scripture by reading a good commentary or two upon the passage. However, you must always have respect for your own ideas, i. e., you must stand on your own feet, but do not have your mind closed to any added light which may be thrown upon the scripture. With this start made during the first half of the week you will not find it difficult to gather related ideas from your pastoral work and general reading. I think it well also to make little notes of ideas which occur to you that seem specially good. By these means a goodly supply of sermonic material will grow up around your scripture passage by the latter part of the week.

The skeleton of the sermon includes your theme, text and outline. All the week you should be on the outlook for the one central thought in the passage. As you gather the truth of that scripture to your mind the Holy Spirit will often let that thought stand out like a flash of light and you feel that is the central thing, the big thing in your lesson. When that thought comes, fasten it. Work it over until you can state it in one simple sentence, clear as crystal. Bishop Wilberforce said a sermon that is worth anything should be capable of being written in one line. It would prevent much cloudy preaching if we would remember that. This sentence will be your theme. If you can select a verse of scripture which will embody it, that will be your text, although I do not believe we should feel slavishly bound to always find a text for this type of a sermon. As you repeat the scripture day after day or mull over its leading ideas, certain things will begin to stand out like mountain peaks, i. e., certain ideas will grip your mind as the important ones in that scripture. If your theme is well chosen they will be closely related to it. These three or four main ideas, seldom more for one sermon, are the heads for your outline. Try to find one word which will carry or suggest each point. The danger in outlining is to make it too full. An ideal to work for is a theme stated in a short, simple sentence and three or four related heads, each suggested by one word. But mark you, this is ideal and one should feel the greatest liberty in making this or any plan of sermon preparation very flexible.

The outline is but a skeleton. You must clothe it with flesh. Toward the end of the week go over your material, selecting and organizing it under the main heads of your outline. It is a good plan to keep before you certain individuals who may be in your audience, a tired mother, a wayward young man, a thoughtless girl, a tempted man; or certain classes of people as, the sickly, the devout, the tired, the business men, etc. This will help you make your sermon walk on the earth. If you write, it will help much in the long run to clarify your statement of ideas, and many find it helps to stimulate the mind to grasp their theme more fully. It is worth a deal of practice.

These ideas on the preparation of a sermon are suggestions at best. No rule of thumb can be given by which you can prepare sermons, for real sermons are living things. We should remember this as we seek to help each other in our discussion of the preacher's preparation. Neither do I pretend to have covered all the plans of preparation, but this is an effort to tell you things that have helped me.

III. The Preacher's Power

There are two words I would say about the preacher's power. They are work and pray. Books on preachers repeatedly refer to laziness as the preacher's cardinal sin. Business does not drive him nor a boss oversee him, so he lowers his standard and plays on the job. Men and women who toil regularly under the grind of a daily task will not find much power in a preacher they have come to believe is lazy. If the preacher's preparation I have discussed has not suggested labor I have failed. The work of becoming an expository preacher is a huge task in itself, to say nothing of a multitude of other claims on the minister. It will take years to become efficient, but the testimony of expository preachers is that any of us who has the pluck to stick at it will find it increasingly inspiring and informing. Preachers who do not develop this method tend to preach around a little circle of ideas over and over, no matter from what part of the Bible they speak. Hence so many short pastorates. Preachers stop growing and run dry. The expositional preacher never stops growing, is always adding fresh material to his supply. We must have fresh material if we preach with power and make false the current proverbs of our day, viz., "Dull as a sermon" and "prosaic as a parson." This will take work.

My second word on the preacher's power is, pray. "The rivers which turn the great mill wheels take their rise in solitary places." Nothing is more true of powerful preachers than that. Jesus spent hours in prayer. Luther prayed more, the more busy he was. Dr. Jowett, in his book, "The Preacher and His Work," says that the deepest secret of a preacher's power and the strongest safeguard against a preacher's dangers are sternly kept times of prayer.

Paul says we are grafted into Christ. This grafting process is accomplished by prayer. When a fruit grower grafts a scion from one tree upon the stock of another, he makes a wound in both. This is to expose the cambium layer, that soft layer between the bark and the wood of growing trees through which the sap flows and where the new wood is formed. The stock and the scion are so adjusted as to place the cambium layers of these wounded parts in close contact, and then this joint is sealed over with grafting wax to keep all foreign matter out while the parts grow together. The living union is formed by the life processes setting up connections between the cambium layers in both scion and stock and the life-giving sap flowing from the stock into the scion to nourish and give it strength. Now we are grafted into Christ. We are scions, he is the stock. The wounded cambium layer in our lives, we discover by the pain which conviction for sin causes. The wounded cambium layer in Christ, we discover in the consciousness that we ought to live right, the consciousness that Christ was wounded for our transgressions which records itself in our experience by a pull toward him. We first adjust these two wounds in immediate contact, when in prayer we hold our painful conviction for sin and Christ's pull in our heart toward him right together in our consciousness, and then believe, as we do this in utter surrender to Christ's pull, that the life-giving forces in Christ begin to flow into us, healing the wounds in both our hearts and forming a living union through which we continue to draw life from him as we are faithful in prayer. Secret prayer seals over this union and keeps out foreign matter just as grafting wax seals over the union of grafted plants and shuts out foreign matter while the parts grow together. It takes time for the scion to grow into the stock. It takes thought also for the Christian scion. It takes concentration of mind, for there is no spiritual power without concentration of mind. Therefore, pray.

It is said that the sugar maple trees are occupying the forests of New England because they can grow in the shade. When the trees fall in whose shade they have begun to grow, they have the start of all other trees and soon occupy the space. Many of us who preach for Friends must grow in the shade of larger churches, and often the shade of peculiar and trying circumstances, but I am praying we may find a method of preaching which will enable us to grow in the shade. Not that we think it is Christian to look for the places which larger churches are filling, but that we may overcome the trying places and grow into preachers of God's Word that can be used to occupy the barren places of tremendous need in forests of God's field.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

An Easter Program for the Sunday School

"The Hope of the World" is the title of the new Easter program for the Bible School. A similar program for last year was called "The Living Christ for Every Life and All of Life" and was used widely among our Bible Schools. Everywhere it seems to have made a profound impression alike upon those who took part in it and upon those who witnessed it.

This year's program, "The Hope of the World," contains a strong note of peace as well as of missions, and is to be used in connection with a reproduction of the painting of the same name by Harold Copping, showing Christ surrounded by a group of children from various countries.

Sample copies of the program may be secured for three cents in stamps. Schools expecting to use it should send without delay in order that thorough preparation may be made and the best results obtained. The prices are 25 cents a dozen or $1.80 a hundred, postpaid. In brown photogravure the picture costs 20 cents, and a larger, lithographed copy in colors, 40 cents. Inquiries concerning the program and orders for the program and for the picture should be sent to the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Indiana.

I Never Thanked Him

A Christian lady in the South of England was sent to see a gypsy boy who was dying, and in the course of her gentle pleading with him she thrice repeated the text, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish, but have everlasting life" (Jno. 3:16). He looked for a few moments intently upon her, then with life's last effort, gasped, "And I never thanked him!"—The Wellspring.

Southland College

(The following letter from Anna B. Wolford from Southland College to the Southland College Board of Indiana Yearly Meeting will be of interest to readers of The American Friend.)

Southland, Arkansas,

December 27, 1915.

Dear Mrs. Bellis:

Your Christmas greeting arrived Christmas morning and was opened, read and appreciated. Thank you.

No doubt the Southland Christmas would interest you, for it was generously sprinkled with laughter and with tears. Quite a number of the boys and girls went home for Christmas. Many were rejoiced to go and others left with eyes very "weepy." Those who remained were much of the same mood as those going—some looked wistfully, some satisfied, and others tearfully, and with all there was somewhat of confusion.

Two days before Christmas the mail, which comes twice a day, was very heavy. Numerous boxes from home arrived and to see their reception, one would think they contained "gold, frankincense and myrrh." Sometimes the boxes were broken and the contents "spilled" and there were sorted out of the mail bags, little home made cookies, crullers, sticks of candy, sausage and even roasted chickens. It almost took a Solomon to get the things justly divided.

We find the home folks have put forth much effort to send their children a nice box for the Christmas. The President and Matron are unusually well remembered with these edibles and at such times a famishing Esau is needed to consume all one is expected to relish.

On Friday afternoon before Christmas five of the teachers were called into the sewing room where a large box of clothing, toys, etc., had been brought. These things had been previously selected as the barrels from the north were opened. As each article is held to view the name of the recipient is announced and the article is wrapped, marked and record made of same. This procedure goes on until every student has four presents.

Christmas eve after the children had gone to the dormitories, the Christmas tree, which was of holly and reached to the ceiling, was placed in the large dining room and the presents put on and about it. The dining room had been decorated quite elaborately some days before by one of the college boys, who is an artist in this line.

Christmas morning at nine o'clock the children with many "ohs" and "ahs" passed into the dining room which was dimly lighted and partook of their breakfast of corn flakes, pressed beef, cold sliced pork, bread, butter, cocoa and orange. Before the students arose from the tables the teachers came in and the Christmas lesson was read and prayer offered while all faced the lighted Christmas tree. After this service the presents were taken from the tree amid much rejoicing. The teachers were as jubilant as the boys and girls.

After breakfast bundles of clothing, toys, candy, oranges and apples were sent to many in the neighborhood, especially to those without much Christmas. All such gifts seemed to be greatly appreciated.

At three o'clock dinner was served and this meal was as nice as we could make it, not the least being the baked goose and candied yams. Presents received were placed on exhibition in the possessor's room and there was much visiting back and forth to see. Night came early on Christmas day and everybody, tired and happy, was soon ready for bed, all glad that the Christmas which had been so slow coming had arrived with its many joys and kind remembrances.

Our Christmas sermon this year dwelt on the gift of good will to men, and we felt as we thankfully bowed our heads on Christmas night that though the good will of man for man in the world at present seemed so rare, yet Southland and her friends knew the spirit for they had shown it by their deeds.

On behalf of Southland I send to you and Mr. Bellis love and kindly greetings for the New Year.

Your friend,

Anna B. Wolford.

Somewhere in France

(From The Louisville Courier-Journal)

By MARY BOYLE O'REILLY.

As the channel boat churned into Boulogne a tremulous little old woman told me her trouble. "I am Mary McMillan, at your service, ma'am. My Jack has been wounded at Loos. The War Office sent word to come. This is my first journey out of England. You don't happen to know when a quick train goes to—?"

The withered hands trembled piteously. Alone, adrift in a world war, practically penniless, how could such a pilgrim make her way across France?

The clamor of a Gallic crowd rose from the quay.

"Does everyone speak French over here?" gasped Jack's mother. "Is there no one at all can help me reach my boy?" Slow tears rolled down her face. A big man wearing unmilitary khaki saw them and sprang up the gangplank. "Mrs. McMillan? Good; I come from your son. That's our motor-car waiting."

"Please, sir, are you an officer, or—or an army chaplain?"

"Neither," he answered cheerfully; "I am only a Friend. And—and I do not believe in war."

Then the great car plunged forward, carrying Jack's mother to her boy. "Only a Friend"—one of the religious sect often called "Quakers," whose creed stands for service, whose men neither fight nor swear. "Only a Friend" in a nightmare country blasted bare of life; fields catacombed with systems of man-deep galleries—trenches running across country for miles; shell-shattered woods empty of birds; mined quagmires; villages of dead houses—a world reeking with blood, canopied by perpetual smoke, echoing with the infuriating clangor of guns; in the midst of the reddest fields, a thousand men toiling at tasks of kindness—"only" the Society of Friends.

* * *

Maire Jeanne of Poperinghe told this story: "Our men have gone. Only the old and the weak remain. All we have in the world is here. To leave means to lose our fields. We must stay for the sake of the children. But behind the barbed wire fence we must have died—but for the Friends."

Along the shell-smashed road a canopy of yellow-flagged ambulances sped south to safety.

"Typhoid"... "the fields of Flanders are a charnel house. Round Ypres alone, 30,000 people were inoculated against the plague. To each one the Friends gave disinfectants"——

A broad-hatted Friend leaned from his motor to make inquiries. Three great trucks laden with new plows and harrows followed him——

"To-morrow the sheep and pigs and poultry will arrive," he told the villagers. "Next week I'll bring up the sacks of winter seed."

M. le Maire watched the last motor van recede from sight. "When the first Friends came we could not understand them," he said. "They are not fighters, but they know no fear. Across the fields their stretchers seek the slain. In the midst of gunstorm they silently spread a gospel of peace.

"Every village behind the lines has its war scenery. Every soldier's grave is first marked by a bottle holding the record of the dead.

"After every battle the Friends identify the graves of our heroes and replace the bottles with lettered crosses."

* * *

"The complete history of this war can never be written.... But the people of the war zone will remember and will tell their children's children how the 'Friends' came to take care of them in the great war."

American Friend Day, March 5

American Friend Day should be utilized throughout America in setting forth the mission of THE AMERICAN FRIEND to all the meetings within the Five Years Meeting. In an important sense the paper is a mirror of the life of Friends in America, and its highest purpose will be fulfilled in being able to bring to all Friends' families a real message week after week that will not only be an inspiration, but a positive help in the operations of every local congregation.

It is the business of the editor and all who have to do with furnishing the material which is printed week after week to maintain the paper with increasing efficiency to the whole church. It is the duty of its supporters and all others who ought to be its supporters to recognize it, not as the organ of one man, but as the spokesman of our entire church fellowship, and as the instrumentality of a common, progressive, denominational program.

It should be kept in mind and announced in all meetings on March 5 that new subscribers can secure THE AMERICAN FRIEND for the remainder of this year for $1.00 and we trust that in every meeting, and more particularly in the smaller meetings, a thorough canvass of the community can be made immediately following March 5, either by the pastor or by a team of interested young people, in the effort to secure additional subscriptions. THE AMERICAN FRIEND must be able to speak to a larger constituency, both for their own sake and the sake of all our meetings.

Praying Mary

A number of people were assembled for the discussion of difficult questions. Among others it was asked how the command to "pray without ceasing" could be complied with. Various suppositions were started and at length one of the number was appointed to write an essay upon it, to be read at the next monthly meeting, which, being overheard by a plain, sensible girl, she exclaimed: "What! A whole month wanted to tell the meaning of that text? It is one of the easiest and best texts in the whole Bible."

"Well! well!" said an old minister. "Mary, what can you say about it? Let us know how you understand it. Can you pray all the time?"

"Oh, yes, sir!"

"What! when you have so many things to do?"

"Why, the more I have to do, the more I can pray."

"Indeed! Well, Mary, do let us know how it is, for most people think otherwise."

"Well, sir," said the girl, "when I first open my eyes in the morning I pray, 'Lord, open the eyes of my understanding'; while I am dressing I pray that I may be clothed with the robe of righteousness; when I have washed me I ask for a washing of regeneration; as I begin to work I pray that I may have strength equal to my day; when I begin to kindle up the fire I pray that God's work may revive in my soul; as I sweep out the house I pray that my heart may be cleansed of all impurities; while preparing and partaking of breakfast I pray to be fed with the hidden manna and the sincere milk of the Word; as I am busy with the little children I look up to God as my Father and pray for the spirit of adoption, that I may be His child: and so on all day everything I do furnishes me with a thought for prayer."

"Enough! enough!" cried the old minister. "These things are revealed to babes and often hid from the wise and prudent. Go on, Mary, continue to pray without ceasing; and as for us, my brethren, let us bless the Lord for this exposition and remember that 'the meek will He guide in judgment.'"—Ex.

Canadian Friends' Conference

(From The Canadian Friend)

The First Conference of Friends in Canada is over. It remains to see what will be the results on the Meetings from which the delegates came. If the interest and enthusiasm manifested in the Conference can only be translated in living terms in the individual Meetings, new life will spring up in our work throughout the Yearly Meeting. Already one Meeting has planned for an Echo Meeting of the Conference. We believe others would do well to follow this lead. Still better would it be, if some of the Meetings that were represented by only a few members, could plan and hold a Conference of the same nature, though on a small scale perhaps. This should be done at once while the enthusiasm is still high, and before the rush of work begins on the farms. In many places it would be best to do it in conjunction with churches of other denominations in the same neighborhood. Make it a neighborhood affair for the discussion of community interests. We feel sure that leaders can be secured to introduce topics for discussion, and we believe an invaluable assistance might be rendered the communities which we seek to serve, if this were undertaken.

Conference Notes.

A very representative gathering met at Toronto in response to the call for a Canadian Conference. Representatives were present from Pickering, Newmarket, Rockwood, Wooler, Norwich, Pelham, Effingham, Rock Union and Toronto.

It was evident from the first that the meeting was gathered in the spirit and inspiration that had marked the larger Conference at Richmond. Though the first session was called for 9 a. m., yet some 35 were actually present.

A short devotional period, presided over by Clarence E. Pickett, opened the proceedings and then Mr. Groh, President of the Farmers' Association of Ontario, gave a most interesting address on "The Place of the Country Church in the Community." There was much that was helpful in the address, and some of the points made were: The country church does not vary from the city church in its purpose; it only varies in its methods; the influence of a church is infinitely beyond its numerical strength; the church is a civilizing influence and it reaches out beyond what is usually termed the religious life; the work of the country church is to put man where he belongs, into touch with God. The difference between city and country churches is that in the former the people live in a false conception of life and community life as such is really lost sight of. Men and women do not know one another in the same way as in the rural church. The unity of spirit is lost, and individuality and loneliness takes the place.

Dr. W. Carlton Wood followed along the same subject, "A Country Church at Work." Some of his most important points were: The church must touch the community on more than the religious side of life. The church exists to serve the community. Christ came, and so did the church, not to be ministered unto, but to minister. We have made a mistake in not stressing sufficiently the social, economic and even the political problems. The prosperity of church and community are interrelated, each to the other, by an indissoluble tie. The church must be the center of real communal life for young people. Try out plans, and when a good one suggests itself, stick right at it until success is assured. Recognize the fact that Jesus Christ is working through all our schemes, and let all work be carried on with this in mind. A deeply interesting discussion followed.

Charles M. Woodman of Portland, Maine, gave two illuminating addresses upon the subjects, "God, the Dynamic of Service" and "Service the Pathway to God." The two were closely related. He sought in the former to show that things can only be kept going when there is a point of contact with a given force, impelling and compelling. The possibilities of life are great, but nothing is ever accomplished without the point of contact. Pentecost was made possible because men and women were ready to receive the electric current of divine life through the removal of all corrosion by days of prayerful friction that had brightened their spiritual susceptibilities and the current flowed readily through them to others. The power of God was a potent factor in the 17th century, but it took a George Fox to get the point of contact. God must be a supreme factor in all our lives, and Jesus Christ becomes a dynamic for the impossible tasks. A rugged and persistent loyalty to God gives us the quality of dependableness. God is a dynamic to help us in the insignificant details of life.

In the second address he led us to realize how service really helped us to get to God. Service gives us a sense of God because it identifies us actively with His work. Worship is the human spirit seeking to get into touch with the Divine Spirit. By actual service we become workers together with God.

In the afternoon Mr. Caskey, Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, gave an intensely interesting and instructive address on "The Every Member Canvass." It was a very illuminating survey of what had been done in many churches, and showed the possibility of what might be done in all. As a concrete example he cited a church which raised its missionary collection from $490 to $1,700, and yet its revenue for church activities grew at the same time.

The evening was devoted to a very extensive introduction of the work of the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred, for a dry Ontario; and an address by Charles M. Woodman, on "The Place of Quakerism." He divided his subject into three heads of thought—1st, 50 Years of Aggressive Quakerism; 2nd, 150 Years of Quietism; 3rd, 50 Years of Awakening. He compared truth to a beautiful tendril twined around a column which in its coiling ever and anon came out into full light and then receded into the shade to reappear once more higher up the column in later years. Thus the full flush of Truth came into view during the first Christian centuries, only to disappear behind the column of history during the long centuries of the Middle Ages. Again it reappeared in the Reformation, only to be lost in the shadow of an infallible book, taking the place of an infallible church. But again it reappeared in the light during the 17th century, through George Fox and other leaders, and it has never since entirely disappeared. The whole address was an exceedingly clear and lucid statement of the Message and Place of Quakerism in History.

On Sunday Charles M. Woodman was present, and spoke in the morning meeting on "The Church of the Living God" and in the evening he spoke of God as active in the individual life. Both times he spoke with power and the meetings were very helpful.

In the afternoon he conducted a Conference of Young People on Young People's Work. The session was most profitable and suggestive.

As a whole, the Conference was a great uplift to all who attended and the "Spirit of the Living God" was mightily present.—Alfred Young

MEN'S CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

Many subscribers to the Men's Conference proceedings have not yet sent in their remittance. We trust that it will not be necessary to send bills for these as that means an additional expense for postage. We trust that all who have received these books will send remittance at once so that settlement can be made with the printers.

The price to registered delegates is fifty cents per copy, paper cover; cloth, seventy-five cents. To all who were not registered the price is twenty-five cents more. These books have been highly commended and contain addresses which ought to be in every Friend's library in America. Send orders with remittance to S. E. Nicholson, Richmond, Indiana.

ACTIVITIES AT WHITTIER.

The mid-year Bible School Conference of California Yearly Meeting was held at Whittier January 29. The trend of thought and achievement of our Bible School workers was shown in the discussion of the following subjects, considered in the adult section of the conference: "The Teacher—His Relation to Christ," by Emma F. Coffin; "His Relation to Modern Sunday School Methods," by Martha King; "His Relation to the Pupil," Harry Rimmer; "Is It Possible for a Small School to Have Genuine Graded Teaching?" Eunice Pearson; "The Value of a Workers' Council," Wallace E. Gill; "Aims and Foundation for Missionary Teaching," Florabel Rosenberger; "Characteristics and Needs of Pupils in the Teen Age," R. J. Hamilton; "How Can We Improve Our Financial System?" President Absalom Rosenberger; "Plant for Social, Literary and Study Periods," by Olema Rees; "How to Make the Bible Real," W. J. Symons; "Adult Class Activities," Levi Gregory; "Organization and Methods of the Home Department," by George Taylor.

Of these the extension of the graded system, the cultivation of the missionary spirit, the improvement of financial methods and holding to the church and its work pupils of the teen age were especially emphasized. Mabel Roberts, Bible School Superintendent for the Yearly Meeting, discussed "The Usefulness of Handiwork in Bible Teaching," in which she gave an extended display of outline maps together with relief maps in different colors and materials with various smaller articles representing objects included in the Bible lessons, many of which were the work of the younger pupils.

On the preceding day, the Pastors' Association of the Yearly Meeting held a session, in which notes of the methods and experiences of the pastors in their various fields were compared most helpfully. This meeting was addressed by Robert W. Douglas of Ohio on "The Distinctive Doctrines of the Friends Church," and by John S. Kimber of Providence, R. I., on "The Fundamentals of Effective Service." At a recent meeting of the Men's League of the Friends church a concern arose to make the influence of its four hundred members tell for the peace cause, and a committee, including Prof. H. S. Fawcett, Dr. W. V. Coffin and W. J. Symons, matured a cogent statement of the arguments against preparedness which was forwarded to the Senators and Congressmen from California at Washington. Of the replies received two are favorable to the views of the League, several were non-committal while others signified a disposition to give the matter very careful attention.

Significant of the increased interest and activities of the men of Whittier meeting a gospel team, numbering about a dozen members, has been doing excellent work in visiting the smaller Friends meetings upon invitation of the pastors, and occupying the hour of service with song, testimony and prayer. This gospel team is composed of men from a large Bible School class of which President Rosenberger of Whittier College, is teacher. Several members of the class are recent accessions to the church.

INTER-CHURCH ORGANIZATIONS.

The Commission on Federated Movements of the Federal Council of Churches with Fred B. Smith as Chairman and Roy B. Guild as Executive Secretary, has arranged for a conference of nation wide interest to be held at Atlantic City June 2-5. Addresses will be given by such men as John R. Mott, Robert E. Speer, Joseph E. McAfee, William J. Williamson and Raymond Robins. Representatives of Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.'s, S. S. Associations, the Laymen's Missionary Movement, the Missionary Education Movement, the various brotherhoods and young peoples' movements, the Home Mission Council and other similar organizations, will have a hearing at this gathering.

THE PEACE CALENDAR.

January 6, 1916.

Stanford University,
Palo Alto, Calif.

Dr. John J. Mullowney of Paxtang, Pa., a young man, a member of the Society of Friends, has compiled a peace calendar which has been received with great favor as the best of its kind which has yet appeared, the selections representing many of the very best things that have ever been said in favor of the reign of law, security and peace.

Unfortunately, and without realizing that a calendar is a perishable commodity, Dr. Mullowney contracted with the publishers to sell a very large number of copies himself. The calendars were not received until the first of December, and it has been impossible for him to sell the stipulated number. This has thrown a very heavy financial burden on a man not ready to bear it. This is to ask the friends of Peace into whose hands this letter may fall to buy one or more of these calendars, worthy of space in any library, for the sake of the cause and for the sake of relieving a burden undertaken purely in the interests of Peace.

Very truly yours,
DAVID STAR JORDAN.

(Dr. Mullowney will send the Calendar to any address on approval and will accept anything which the friends of Peace desire to give toward helping to pay for publication and distribution.)

FRIENDS AND CONSCRIPTION.

The following letter was sent to members of the Cabinet and of the House of Commons:

Compulsory Military Service.—"On behalf of the Committee of the Society of Friends specially appointed to have charge of this matter, we write to inform you that if any measure having the above for its object should become law, the opposition of our Society to it will in no sense be modified or withdrawn. Such opposition is fundamental, and is based upon a conscientious objection to all warfare. We are further to inform you that if any such measure should become law, the support and co-operation of members of the Society will be available for those outside their own body whose conscientious objection is based upon the same grounds as their own. Signed on behalf of the Committee,

Edward Grubb, Joan Mary Fry,
Robert O. Mennell.

NEW NOTES.

The annual social and tea of the Carlton Adult School of Toronto will be held on the evening of February 26.

Luke Woodard and wife, of Fountain City, Indiana, attended White-water meeting in Richmond on February 6.

Professor W. O. Mendenhall of Earlham College, spoke for West Richmond Friends on Sabbath morning, February 6.

Dr. T. R. Woodard of Knightstown, Indiana, who has been seriously ill with double pneumonia, is able for office work again.

Leanna Hobson, who suffered a broken arm early in the winter, is again able for her duties as pastor at Fountain City, Indiana.

Edgar A. Wollam of Cleveland, Ohio, has been holding evangelistic services at Farmland, Indiana, where Charles Swanders is pastor.

Joseph Elkinton of Philadelphia, visited the Quaker Study Class at Washington City on January 12 and 13, attending the regular mid-week meeting on the latter date.

According to the daily papers English and Canadian soldiers have succeeded a second time in breaking up a Friends meeting in England, called to consider the question of peace.

Baltimore Friends have resumed publication of "The Interchange" for the circulation of church news throughout the Yearly Meeting.

Daniel G. Hodgkin, pastor of the Friends meeting at Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, is assisting in a revival at Greenfield, Indiana, where Oscar H. Trader is pastor. The meeting opened on January 25 with good interest.

The women of the Friends meeting at Calgary, Canada, are engaged in knitting and sewing for the Friends Ambulance Corps. Two hours are spent each Wednesday evening for this purpose.

President Isaac Sharpless of Haverford College, was one of the speakers against the preparedness program at the hearing before the House Committee on Military Affairs at Washington on February 9.

Rufus M. Jones of Haverford College, spent Saturday, Sunday and Monday, February 5-7, in Boston and vicinity. On Saturday night he spoke to an invited group, on Sunday at Roxbury, in the afternoon at Phillips Brooks House, Harvard, and on Monday gave one of the Lowell Lectures at King's Chapel, Boston.

Among Eastern visitors who have been spending some time at Whittier, California, are Mercer Brown of Spiceland, Indiana; Joseph Hoskins of Wilmington, Ohio; Robert W. Douglas of Versailles, Ohio, and Isaac Ellis of Colorado.

Following the recent revival at New London, Indiana, a Bible class of young people has been started with thirty-four persons enrolled, and twenty-seven young people present at the first meeting to take the work in the gospel of John.

The annual gathering of the meeting at Toronto, Canada, was held on the evening of January 19, at which time reports were received from the various departments of the church. The meeting is planning for an every member canvass again this year.

The February issue of the Friends Missionary Advocate contains the annual report of the Secretary and heads of the departments of The American Friends Board of Foreign Missions. It is a valuable edition which ought to be in the home of every Friend in America.

H. B. Rush is in a Confederate Soldiers' Home at Ardmore, Oklahoma, a cripple for life, having suffered amputation of his left leg last summer. His wound has healed and his health is good. He writes that he hopes to be able to tell "The old, old story" again before very long.

The group of young men, who have been maintaining a meeting for worship at the State College in Pennsylvania, are arranging to do team work between the semesters this winter, and are planning to visit the meetings at Bellefonte, Half Moon, Unionville and Fishertown.

From The Interchange we learn that the Sunday evening prayer meetings, which have been a feature of the community life at Fishertown, Pa., since the "Bungalow" revival in 1913, have been more thoroughly organized this winter and are under the direction of Harper Corle, one of the new members at Fishertown.

Richard Simms and wife of Chester, Indiana, who have been spending the winter with their children in Chicago and vicinity, are expecting to return home shortly. Richard Simms has taken part occasionally in the Sabbath services in the Chicago meeting and on January 2 occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church at Berwyn, Illinois, giving an account in the evening of the peace work of Friends both at present and in the past.

* Professor Elbert Russell of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, has been giving a number of public addresses this winter on peace and on social and religious questions in and about Baltimore, at Washington City, New York and Philadelphia.

Through the efforts of John H. Williams and wife of Elkhorn Valley meeting, West Virginia, a Bible School has been started at Carswell in that state. They also hold a meeting on Sabbath evening, these activities being the only form of Christian work at this place.

A missionary conference of Walnut Ridge Quarterly Meeting was held at Charlottesville, Indiana, January 28 and 29. Addresses were given by Ross A. Hadley, Thomas E. Jones, Milo S. Hinckle and E. Harrison Scott, all of Richmond; also by Edith Shugart, of Bethel. It was an interesting and profitable occasion.

Arrangements are being made for a brief series of lectures at Friends meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, by President David M. Edwards of Penn College, Iowa. The time will be the last of February or early in March. The interpretation and practical application of the Christian faith will be the general theme.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Middlemiss, Ontario, Canada.

February 7, 1916.

Editor American Friend:

I am making an inquiry of the late Isaac Harvey's descendants whether they are in existence and still members of the Society of Friends. In the spring of 1823 Isaac Harvey, a member of the Society of Friends and connected with the Friends mission at Wapakoneta as Superintendent of Mills, was rescued by an Indian known as Captain Wolf, alias Biaseka, Chief of the Delaware Tribe. Would it be possible for the descendants of Isaac Harvey, with the aid of the Society of Friends, to erect a suitable monument for the heroic Indian Chief who gave himself for his friend, Isaac Harvey? Account is given in Edward Eggleston's writing, page 323, Tecumseh and the Shawnee prophet. Captain Wolf died in Canada on a reservation known as Muncey Town in the County of Middlesex, Township of Caradoc, Province of Ontario.

Hoping to hear a favorable reply at an early date, Sincerely yours,

J. P. WOLFE.

(Note: The American Friend will be glad to receive information or suggestions concerning the above.)

YOUNG PEOPLES PAGE

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PRAYER MEETING.

The question often arises how can one stimulate attendance in the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting? Various methods have been suggested, all of which have been worked with more or less success.

A few common suggestions are (1) a variety in program. (2) Do not read slips from the C. E. World or any other paper. (3) Hold a contest for members, and (4) Raise the social side of your meeting. While all these are good they are insufficient. The one supreme requirement for a growing attendance is to make the Meetings spiritual.

Hold a brief prayer meeting with the leader, president, and Prayer Committee chairman just before the regular meeting. Establish a precedent against any shallow testifying. No one should speak who does not feel that the message he gives is coming from his heart under the direction of God. Introduce silent prayer once in a while. At other times let silent meditation take the place of the singing. At all events make the meetings spiritual.

YOUNG FRIENDS IN PENNSYLVANIA STATE COLLEGE.

About thirty young Friends meet for worship once a week at Pennsylvania State College. The meeting is held in an upper room of the building where general religious meetings convene. The room is well lighted and filled with comfortable chairs arranged in rows like benches in a meeting house. The room is simple and artistic, giving the general impression of a Friends meeting house, with the exception that there is no pulpit or ministers' gallery.

The meeting is conducted on the basis of silence. For the first half hour anyone may speak who feels the anointing of the Spirit. The meeting is thoroughly unprogrammed. The latter half hour is devoted to a study of H. E. Fosdick's "The Manhood of the Master."

Pennsylvania State College is located in the central part of Pennsylvania, not far from Tyrone. It is attractively situated in the midst of beautiful blue mountains. The school is noted for its high standard of morality and religious life. The Young Friends in this institution recently gave Thomas E. Jones a very cordial reception.

There is a Real Difference

Cream of tartar, derived from grapes, is used in Royal Baking Powder because it is the best and most healthful ingredient known for the purpose.

Phosphate and alum, which are derived from mineral sources, are used in some baking powders, instead of cream of tartar, because they are cheaper.

If you have been induced to use baking powders made from alum or phosphate, use Royal Baking Powder instead. You will be pleased with the results and the difference in the quality of the food.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

They have decided to enroll in the Young Friends' Directory. It is a great encouragement to find so many educated young Friends maintaining the ideal of Friends during their academic life.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MARCH 5.

Topic—"The Consecration of Strength." (Consecration Meeting) Ps. 29:1-11.

How few of us are not moved by an approaching thunder storm! The jagged lightning, the cracking thunder, and the rush of wind thrill us with awe. At these times an egotistic, over estimate of one's self becomes plain. How insignificant one feels before the power of nature! The fear centers of one's psychical life are stirred and he turns to a power above man for help. No human authority can suffice in the crisis of life. Instinctively one turns to God. How many incorrigible children have promised in whispered awe while the thunder storm raged, that they would be good boys and girls if spared God's wrath this once. How many horny handed men and women have taken a more sober view of life when the power of God is revealed in nature! If this be true today, how much more true was it in the child-like race of Hebrew singers, twenty-five hundred years ago.

Poetic in instinct and theocentric in thought, the ancient Hebrew was necessarily deeply moved by the rush of a mountain storm. He saw something more than angry elements. He saw a majestic spirit back of all the external. He beheld one who had power not only to stir up angry air currents but to crush the lives of disobedient children. In this age of science, when stronghold after stronghold of ignorance has been demolished by laboratory, library and lecture room, we are inclined to give up wondering. Yet God is as great today as ever before. His strength encourages not only devotion but manliness on the part of man.

He says we are fashioned in His likeness. As He is strong, then may not we take new courage for our tasks. He has given us bodies endowed with strength. He has given us minds strong enough to control that body. And He has given us moral instincts which are powerful to keep our minds ordered aright. Supreme, above our moral instincts, God stands all powerful. He stimulates and encourages us to come to Him. He asks us to cleanse our minds and bodies from secret faults. He who throws away his strength in dissipation cannot expect to be strong. A broken down shambling wretch dependent upon charity is the consequence.

God asks for strong stalwart men and women. He gives you a chance. Why throw it away? If He has helped you, cannot you help one who does not appreciate this gift?

"We are not here to play, to dream, to drift,
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift.

Be strong, Oh men, Be strong!"
—M. D. Babcock.

PEACE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS IN AMERICA

NOTE—It is hoped that this page may present in brief form a record of activities typical of the work Friends are doing for peace. News items, short, pointed arguments, suggested plans, all will be welcome, and will be used subject to the limitations of space and the proper distribution and arrangement of the matter received. All communications intended for this page should be addressed to Allen D. Hole, President, 615 National Road, West, Richmond, Indiana.

PEACE ORGANIZATIONS.

By ISAAC SHARPLESS.

The question of Peace and War now so prominent in our country has resulted in an abundance of organizations for and against armaments, and looking towards various methods of settling the questions which will arise after the present war is over. The Army and Navy League is frankly in favor of a large increase of our material forces for attack and defense to provide for any possible use the nation may have for such equipment. The National Security League, now increasing in members rapidly in the Eastern States, would demand an armament for defense adequate to meet all possible exigencies. The League to Enforce Peace, less militant in its tendencies, would work for an international agreement providing for a court of arbitration for justiciable cases and a court of conciliation for other differences, supported by a small international army or navy to enforce their decrees upon powers which were members of the League but which refused to honor its decisions. At the other end of the line we have the Fellowship of Reconciliation protesting against all war for any purpose and placing its dependence upon justice and constructive good will.

Friends will by tradition and conviction fall most readily into the ranks of the last named organization. It expresses the views of their most honored leaders from George Fox down, and seems to them best to represent the spirit and life of Christ as expressed in the New Testament.

Whether they can be active members of the League to Enforce Peace will probably be determined differently by different consciences. The ultimate difficulty will lie in the military force by which the decrees of the Court are backed. This it is claimed, is simply a police force, no more objectionable than the similar organizations in civil life, which we all are willing to use.

One essential difference between a city police force, and the sheriffs and constables of our municipal units on the one hand, and an army on the other is that the former is organized to protect life and property and the latter to destroy them. The policeman is not expected to take human life. In London I believe he is not allowed to have firearms about his person. Here if he does shoot, it is an incident which he must accept only in extreme urgency. I do not believe that killing a man is ever justifiable under the Christian code, yet I am willing to support a police force because this feature is quite subsidiary to its main purpose.

Such the military force is intended to be by the advocates of the League to Enforce Peace. The history of arbitration in the past shows that, perhaps without exception, the force of public opinion is sufficient to enforce decrees of a Court into which a nation has voluntarily thrown its case. If not, the international army sees that it is done. Friends must decide, each for himself, whether this renders it impossible to aid in the beneficent program of the League.

There is an interesting similarity between the features of this League and one of the earliest arbitration suggestions on record, William Penn's Plan for the Peace of Europe. This plan proposed an international Congress composed of representatives of the different states somewhat in proportion to their numbers and interests, making ninety in all. He went into detail as to the arrangements to avoid struggle for precedence, etc., suggested that a three-quarters majority should be necessary to make a decision, and gave some idea of the rules of procedure. If any one of the combined sovereignties should refuse to submit its differences to the Congress or to abide by its decisions, "the other sovereignties united as one strength shall compel the submission and performance of the sentence," which suggests a military force as a last resort.

As I write, the statement of the Association to Abolish War, with headquarters in Boston, reaches me. This is an admirable presentation of the pacific position and it is satisfactory to note that the Secretary and Treasurer are both Friends.

It suggests the possibility of Friendly work for Peace, even when the number of Friends is small, in organizing such sentiment as exists, and making converts of undecided people.

The present is the time, when every one is thinking on the subject and when the advocates of preparedness and war are unusually active, for Friends to inform themselves on what can be said in opposition. They will find that their cause is stronger both on the moral and economic lines than many of them had conceived.

WORK IN NEW YORK CITY.

Some of the younger New York Friends have formed a joint committee with some of the young Hicksites to present the Quaker view of war and preparedness. The secretary can always be reached by telephone, and arranges for speakers to be present wherever there is opportunity given. In the last month nine meetings have been addressed by one or more speakers, and several more dates have already been provided for. It has been found that the audiences are much interested and will always stay for a long discussion. For the most part the people are undecided, and at no meeting has there been a large majority in favor of "preparedness." In fact, the most interested part of the audience is usually opposed to preparedness. It is endeavored to have one speaker at each meeting present the religious view and another present the economic view.

In view of the success of this New York work we would encourage Friends everywhere to take up this work. We find that many people are opposed to "preparedness," but do not know just why, and here seems to be a chance to give the world something of which it has heard little for many years.

FOR SALE—160 acres improved farm, one mile from Friends' church. Would give time on part. To trade four Main Street lots in Stafford, Kansas, for small residence in Long Beach, California. Address Box 655, Stafford, Kansas.

A Valuable Offer

"The Present Day Message of Quakerism," by Charles M. Woodman...$1.00
The American Friend (1 yr)..... 1 50

Total$2.50

Read This: The above valuable book will be sent together with each NEW subscription to The American Friend for one year for $2.00. Address THE AMERICAN FRIEND Richmond, Indiana.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

CONVENTION AT INDIANAPOLIS.

On Sunday afternoon, February 27th, occurs the opening session of the Laymen's Missionary Movement Convention at Indianapolis. The convention is to continue for three days and a half, closing Wednesday evening, March 1st. An exceptionally strong program has been planned, with addresses for some of the leading church workers and speakers of the country. Sessions will be held in the First Baptist church, with auxiliary sessions for women in the Second Presbyterian church. Every Friends' meeting in Indiana and the eastern part of Illinois should, without fail, have at least two of its members in attendance. A conference of all Friends delegates will be held on Wednesday afternoon, March 1st.

WHAT IS IN THE ANNUAL REPORT

In the February number of the Friends Missionary Advocate appeared the twenty-first Annual Report of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions. Separate copies of the report are now available and may be secured from the Richmond office of the Board, as given at the top of this page. A nominal charge of ten cents per copy, or eighty cents per dozen, is made for the report, which covers, in all, seventy pages.

The following are a few of the many questions to which this annual report contains the answer:

What effect has the war had upon missions?

In what countries are Friends' missionaries working?

Who are our missionaries in Cuba? in Africa? in Jamaica? in Mexico? and where do they each live?

What other Friends Mission Boards are there in America besides the American Friends Board? and what are their fields?

Who are the members of the American Friends Boards of Foreign Missions from your Yearly Meeting?

Of what use is a printing press in the Kavirondo country in Africa?

Which of our missionaries are now in America?

How much did your meeting give last year to missions?

How much did all Friends Meetings in America give to missions last year?

How much would they have given if they had contributed an average of five cents per member each week?

A NEW WORKER IN JAMAICA.

In last week's American Friend, an article bearing the title "After Six Weeks in Jamaica" gave our readers an opportunity of becoming a little acquainted with Lora P. Arms, our newest recruit in the Jamaica field. That interesting account of her first weeks in Jamaica showed how many things a stranger in a foreign country will see which an older resident fails to observe because of his familiarity.

Lora Arms is a native of Iowa. She regards Spencer as her home, though her family has for some time been located near Oskaloosa. She has attended Penn College and the Iowa State Normal College and has studied for a short time at two other Iowa colleges. For the past few years she has been engaged in teaching and has at the same time been active in church and Sunday school work. One year was spent in city mission work in Chicago.

On the 7th of last October, Lora Arms sailed for Jamaica and three weeks after her arrival she began teaching in our school for East Indian children at Fellowship, near Port Antonio. Through the school, she will be thrown in daily contact with between twenty and thirty Hindu children, and outside of school hours will find a ready welcome as she visits the barren, cheerless homes of these pupils. One of the striking characteristics of the East Indian is the high regard and affection in which he holds his own or his son's teacher. The opportunity of the Christian teacher, therefore, is unlimited and the mission school becomes a powerful evangelistic agency. We bespeak for this new worker and for her associates your prayers that they may have the strength and skill to use to the full the opportunities which they, as our representatives, are facing in the name of Christ.

There is nothing so great that I fear to do for my friend; nor nothing so small that I will disdain to do for him.—Sir Philip Sidney.

PREPARATION FOR EASTER.

If the event which Easter commemorates means as much to us as it did to the Apostle Paul, should we not observe it more seriously and intelligently? And ought we not to make such preparation for Easter that it may mean more to us and that we may bear more effective testimony to the present power of the risen Christ?

The Board of Foreign Missions is recommending the use in all Friends Bible Schools of an Easter Program called "The Hope of the World." A notice of this program with instructions for obtaining it appears on another page of this paper. The program contains three parts: I. The Easter Story; II. The Story Proclaimed by the Early Church; III. The Story for the Nations. It is made up of songs, Scripture selections, recitations, children's exercises and prayer.

For prayer meetings previous to Easter, we suggest the use of a small four-chapter book by W. E. Doughty called "Efficiency Points." Each chapter will provide a topic and abundant material for each meeting. The Board of Missions will gladly supply, without charge, a booklet of suggestions for the use of this book in prayer meetings. Pastors and others are urged to send for this booklet, which is entitled "Pastors' Pointers."

In this same connection, we would recommend a series of sermons or talks preparatory to Easter, giving a survey of the progress of Christianity in various mission fields. Material for such talks may be found in abundance in "The New Era in Asia," by G. S. Eddy, or in "Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands" by A. J. Brown, and in numerous other books and current missionary periodicals.

Another effective way of preparing for Easter will be for groups of people, both young and old, to take up the study of some book such as those above mentioned, which will show the power of Christianity among the nations of the world. Such a study group or class may meet once each week until Easter or later, and at the conclusion of the study the members of the class may well hold an open meeting, where several members give brief reports of the study they have carried on.

Those interested in any of these plans are invited to write to the Assistant Secretary of the Board for further suggestions or for material to use in carrying on this line of work.

Read The American Friend.

THE IOWA PAGE

BIBLE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT

Our Field Secretary spent the past week visiting the Schools of Pleasant Plain Quarter. Good weather and roads together with the very loyal support given made the work pleasant.

Rubio—An enthusiastic Conference was held at the home of the pastor, William I. Kent. This School has an average attendance of 65 and good work is being done. One pressing need of the School is for more room to care for many others in the community who might be enrolled. Teacher Training was presented and five books were ordered for the organization of a class.

Hopewell—The Conference here was held at the home of James Singleton. This School has an average attendance of 40. They have an interesting Young People's Class which has recently taken steps toward class organization.

Richland—The School here was visited by the Secretary and a very helpful Conference held on Sabbath afternoon, Feb. 6. This School has taken on new life since getting into its splendid new quarters—the beautiful new meeting house which was finished and dedicated last fall. The elementary department of the School will soon have special quarters in the basement. A. W. Jones is their efficient Superintendent.

Pleasant Plain—A very representative Conference was held at the home of their pastor, Charles C. Haworth. The School here has eight classes with an average attendance last year of 75. The pastor has a splendid young men's class which is doing good work. A cradle roll department has been recently organized with Mrs. Martha Sasseen as Superintendent.

One reason for the good work being done by the School here is due to the fact that regular monthly conferences are held of the Bible School committee and executive officers and teachers of the School. They thus keep in touch with all classes and departments of work.

Walnut—This is a rural School two miles out from Pleasant Plain. A very helpful Conference was held in connection with the mid-week prayer meeting. They expect to take up teacher training just following their weekly prayer meeting.

Woolson—The meeting was visited here but no conference was held on account of the revival services being conducted by Edwin Loft. Their School is very well organized, however, and is doing good work.

Chapel—This is one of the newest of our Friends Schools as the meeting has been recently organized as a Friends Meeting. While the active workers are few at present, yet there is a large community to be served with a splendid outlook for the School. Mrs. A. L. Palmer, Eldora, Iowa, is Superintendent.

New Providence—New Providence has a well organized School with an average attendance last year of 139. The graded lessons are being used in the elementary department.

A Quarterly Meeting Conference was held at New Providence on Tuesday, January 25. Three important lines of work of the church were forcibly presented. The forenoon session was devoted to the interest of the Bible School; the afternoon was a special Christian Endeavor session, while the evening was given over to the cause of Missions.

The Conference was well attended, much interest was manifest and it was felt to have been profitable in every way.

EVANGELISTIC DEPARTMENT.

Springdale Quarterly Meeting was held at West Branch February 4-6. At the meeting for Ministry and Oversight there was a general discussion as to the maintaining of our denominational principles and especially that of peace in view of the political agitation which is upon the nation. On Saturday morning H. R. Keates spoke on "The Believer's Inheritance In Christ Jesus." A basket lunch was served, after which the business session was held when reports of an encouraging character were read from various departments of work. A special offering was taken for the use of the Five Years Meeting Peace Committee. Charles Mesner spoke on Sunday morning and H. R. Keates in the evening. Taking it all through, the Quarterly Meeting was felt to be a good one.

The Friends at Springdale have been struggling with the proposition of a new church. The removal of quite a number of the older members had a rather discouraging influence for a while, but the younger members have taken on new courage and hope to carry the project to a successful issue this year.

Lynn Grove Quarterly Meeting was held at Searsboro February 11-13. The meeting on Ministry and Oversight held on Friday evening had a very fair local representation, but there was only one person present from the outlying meetings. The meeting, however, was felt to be a profitable one. On Saturday morning at eleven o'clock J. E. Hartsuck of New Sharon, spoke on "The Lost Christ," and was followed by Zeno H. Doan, who emphasized the thought of the message. After lunch the business session was held, much interest being manifest in the various items discussed. One interesting item concerned the work at Blue Point where the meeting was laid down some years ago. Laura Haisley has been holding meetings there for some time and the prospects are quite encouraging at present. A new furnace and gasoline light have been installed in the meeting house and new pews will be installed this month. At the close of the business session the General Superintendent spoke on the work in general and urged a deeper devotion to the work of evangelism and church extension. E. J. Hartsuck remained for the Sunday meetings.

Bear Creek Quarterly Meeting was held at Earlham February 11-13. The meeting for Ministry and Oversight was held on Friday afternoon and in the evening Walter F. Dexter spoke. President D. M. Edwards of Penn College, was present and preached on Saturday morning and evening with much acceptance. The Sunday morning sermon was presented by H. R. Keates and in the evening there was a Young People's Union service. Dr. Edwards spoke to a crowded house on "The Influence of Consecration."

Elgie L. McCargar concluded a series of meetings at Middle River on Sunday evening, February 13. A goodly interest was manifest notwithstanding the inclement weather and sickness in the community. Nearly thirty persons came to the altar for definite purposes. It is hoped that the work will continue along soul-saving lines under the pastor's care. Brother McCargar goes to Grinnell for his next campaign.

Edwin Loft has been holding meetings at Woolson and although not feeling very fit physically he has been doing good work. Full reports are not at hand.

L. Clarkson Hinshaw of Haviland, Kansas, has just begun a series of meetings at LeGrand, from which good results are expected.

CHURCH AT WORK

Charlottesville, Indiana—A Missionary Conference for the meetings of Walnut Ridge Quarterly Meeting and part of those of Spiceland Quarter was held at Charlottesville, Indiana, January 28-30. It was an occasion of unusual interest and power. Because of sickness and bad weather the attendance was small, but those who were there felt that they had rarely ever heard addresses superior to those given. Some of the leading speakers were Ross A. Hadley, Assistant Secretary of American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, Edith Shugart of Bethel meeting, E. Harrison Scott and Milo S. Hinckle of Richmond, and Thomas E. Jones, Secretary of Young Friends Board. We feel very sure that the inspiration of these speakers will bear large fruit in the various meetings represented.

Walnut Ridge Quarterly Meeting was held February 12-13. James B. Unthank of Richmond was there and spoke most acceptably on Peace and Preparedness. His address was full of his broad information and given with his usual conviction. Daniel Hodgins of Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, was also present. He has been holding a series of meetings at Greenfield, Ind. He gave an excellent message to the Meeting of Ministry and Oversight.

The Friends at Charlottesville have recently purchased a good seven-room brick house for a parsonage. The pastor and his family will occupy it very soon. O. Perry Bantz is on his second year as pastor of this meeting. His services and those of his earnest wife are very satisfactory in the community. New members are being added to the church and there seems to be a spirit of earnest work with the greater portion of the membership.

Greenfield, Indiana—Daniel Hodgins, pastor of the Friends church at Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, closed a series of meetings here February 13. We believe he is a safe man in the pulpit. Wholesome in doctrine and meek in spirit, he boldly denounces sin and confidently heralds the Christ of Calvary as being able to save to the uttermost. Many have been helped by the meetings. O. H. Trader is pastor here and led in the singing during the meetings.

Emporia, Kans.—Evangelist Charles R. Scoville ended his Emporia evangelistic campaign on February 13, by preaching his sermon, "The Second Coming of Christ," before an audience of five thousand persons. A total of approximately 4100 persons professed Christ during the campaign. Thirteen churches, including Friends, participated in the campaign.

Stafford, Kansas—Our Quarterly Meeting was held here on February 13, about thirty persons being present from other meetings in the Quarter. The weather was unfavorable, but we had a good meeting. M. J. Swafford, Yearly Meeting Superintendent, brought the message on Sabbath morning. At the business session on Saturday A. W. Whipple presented a paper on "What Kind of Literature Should Come Into the Home?" He also spoke in regard to The American Friend, saying that the church paper is what the readers or the members of the church make it. Every member should help to make the paper better.

East Parsonsfield, Maine—A series of meetings was held here between December 26 and January 16, which proved a blessing to this community. Perry D. Macy, our field worker on efficiency, helped much in the success of the work accomplished. On the 27th Lewis T. Jones, Davis Henley and Jennie Reynolds joined in the work, holding services each evening. They went from house to house, visiting the school and places of business, meeting the people and having personal talks, with the result that a number of persons accepted Christ. At the close of the meetings one field worker remained and organized a boys' club under the supervision of competent men. We think the influences of this will be far reaching. Our Monthly Meeting was held on January 19, followed by our church roll call. Letters were read and contributions were received from non-resident members. Refreshments were then served, and the Christian Endeavor with teacher and pupils from the day school came in to join us at the noon hour for a pleasant social occasion.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Under the leadership of Errol D. Peckham as pastor, this meeting has taken on several new phases during this season. One of the most interesting and gratifying is the establishing in somewhat remote districts of two mid-week prayer meetings, being in opposite directions from the central meeting, so that on Wednesday nights three prayer meetings are held, one in the section of the city known as Flatbush, and one in Richmond Hill, there being several Friends living in each of these sections, the pastor moving about one week in one place and elsewhere the next. The two other meetings are led by some member of the congregation with the result that each of the three meetings is larger considerably than the original one meeting had formerly been, and real Christian work is being done in the salvation of souls. This work was begun somewhat as an experiment, but it has developed into a real part of the church work.

The Sunday School has also increased about sixty-five per cent this year. One of the leading factors is that of the Men's Bible Class taught by the pastor. This is a regularly organized class with the motto, "We Mean Business," now reaching thirty-four in number and we hope to make it one hundred before spring. This is proving a great help to the entire church work. Mr. Peckham has shown himself a real general in marshalling his forces. His Sunday sermons are clear, logical and most helpful. Mrs. Peckham is teaching a Training Class for young women and should come in for her full share of the new life and interest which has come to Brooklyn meeting.

South Glens Falls, N. Y.—On Thursday evening, February 10th, a roll call meeting of Moreau Monthly Meeting was held at South Glens Falls meeting house. Notices had been issued to every member inviting them to attend, and to either bring or send a verse of Scripture to be read in response to the name when it was called. Owing to the distance from the meetings of Clark's Corners and Ft. Edwards, none from these meetings were present, but many sent verses of scripture. With these exceptions there was a goodly number in attendance and an enjoyable time was had. A program of musicals and reading was rendered, interspersed with the reading of the roll. At the close refreshments were served.

Mount Airy, N. C.—Mount Airy has been greatly favored by a recent visit from Thomas Newlin, President of Guilford College. On January 30, Dr. Newlin spoke at the Friends church at eleven o'clock, using as his theme, "Our Personal Responsibility." A splendid audience was present, including a large number of young people and children who were moved by the strong appeal to give our best gifts to the church in winning the world to Christ. The message, while powerful and scholarly, was simple and practical. In the evening President Newlin addressed the regular union meeting of all the churches at the Methodist church, speaking in place of our pastor, M. Davis Branon, whose turn it was in the rotation of pastors to preach. The sermon from the subject, "The Ideal Church," was just the message needed for this union service and the great audience seemed pleased with the way in which the subject was handled. We feel that Dr. Newlin's coming has been not only a great blessing and uplift to the churches of Mount Airy, but that Guilford College has had a new and favorable introduction.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Beginning Sunday, February 6, W. O. Trueblood, pastor of the First Friends Church, began a series of Sunday evening sermons on the subject, "Fruits of the Spirit, Native to the Soul." At the mid-week prayer meeting service he will give talks on "The Life of Christ." Interest is being increased at both these services. The boys and young men in the athletic department of the Bible School are doing exceptionally creditable work in competition with other similar organizations in the various Sunday Schools of the city. An attempt is being made to support and encourage this branch of the work.

Vermilion Grove, Illinois—Vermilion Quarterly Meeting was held in regular session here February 11-13 inclusive. At the meeting of Ministry and Oversight on Friday, eight of the pastors of the Quarterly Meeting were present. Short, helpful messages were brought by several of these and the occasion was one of spiritual uplift. Mead A. Kelsey of Richmond, Indiana, was present throughout the meeting which followed and in strong, masterful sermons brought gospel messages. He represents the National Christian Association in the capacity of field agent and held meetings in several of the surrounding neighborhoods. The Quarterly Meeting endorses the work of the Association as represented by him.

On Saturday at the business session Aurilena Ellis, President of the Board of Trustees of Vermilion Academy, reported a recent gift to the Academy of $1,000 by our beloved Friend, John Henderson, the interest of which is to be used annually in the Biblical Department of the school. From its beginning John Henderson has been one of the Academy's strongest supporters and this new evidence of his faith in the institution is appreciated

Bed Spreads, Pillow Cases, Sheets For Spring and Summer—Attractively Priced

Dependable qualities, of a kind that have added to the fame of our Bedfurnishing Store:

BED SPREADS—best quality, American made; white Crinkled Dimity, 63x99 inches, $1.50; 72x99 inches, $1.75; 80x99 inches, $2.00; 90x100 inches, $2.25. Of white corded dimity, 63x99 inches, $1.75; 72x99 inches, $2.00; 80x99 inches, $2.25; 90x100 inches, $2.50. Crochet weave, in Marseilles design, size 78x88 inches, $1.75. Marseilles Spreads, white satin finish, size 80x90 inches, $2.50. Fine quality Marseilles Spreads, satin finish, with scalloped edges and corners, cut for 4 feet 6-inch metal beds, size 88x98 inches, $5.00.

SHEETS—Strawbridge & Clothier special brand, bleached muslin of standard quality; size 63x90 inches, 80c; 72x90 inches, 85c; 81x90 inches, 90c. Extra lengths, 63x99 inches, 90c; 72x99 inches, 95c; 81x99 inches, $1.00; 90x99 inches, $1.10.

PILLOW CASES—S. & C. Special brand, bleached muslin; size 42x36 inches, 22c; 45x38½ inches, 25c; 50x38½ inches, 30c.

A Wide Assortment of Blankets and Comfortables.

Hundreds from which to choose, all marked at prices that are an exceptional economical inducement, because the bulk of our great stock was bought before the advance in manufacturers' prices.

You can order these Bedfurnishings with the understanding that if your purchase is not satisfactory in every way you can return it AT ONCE and your money will be refunded.

Please mention this publication.

Strawbridge & Clothier
Philadelphia, Penna.

by all interested Friends. The Sabbath evening service was in charge of the Missionary Superintendent, Sibyl J. Haworth. Mary C. Hadley of New London, President of Western Yearly Meeting W. F. M. S., was present and gave a helpful address. The Quarterly Meeting was a feast of good things and we trust Christ's kingdom is being strengthened and built up in this part of his heritage.

SPECIAL CONFERENCE OF PASTORS.

For the first time in the two hundred and twenty-one years' history of New York Yearly Meeting, a special conference of its pastors was held on February 8 and 9 at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The meeting of the pastors was called and the conference conducted under the direction of the Evangelistic and Church Extension Committee of the Yearly Meeting. From beginning to end there was a glowing warmth of fellowship which meant much to the ministers coming from their widely separated meetings, where some of them hardly come in touch with another Friends' pastor from one session of Yearly Meeting to another, and all expressed a great desire that the conference might become a permanent factor of the Yearly Meeting.

The conference was forcefully and fittingly opened by Alfred T. Young of Newmarket, Ontario, Canada, on the subject of "Prayer," and throughout the discussions at each session there was sounded a deep note of consecration. The four featured subjects were: "The Minister As a Pastor," "The Minister As a Preacher," "Sunday School Efficiency" and "Work of Young People." The last service of the conference, which was a consecration service, led by Alfred Young, was a time of great power and inspiration. The thought was that we might go back into our trenches of service with a loyalty and consecration unto the Kingdom of our Lord, such as is exemplified in the life of the European soldier in his loyalty to the country of his birth.

PREPAREDNESS, not for an imaginary foe, but a literary enemy. Fortify your home not by teaching your children hideous fairy tales, but by "Beautiful Bible Stories." This book for boys and girls contains more than fifty Bible stories splendidly illustrated, size 8x10 inches, 275 pages, substantial cloth binding. Price, postage prepaid, $1.50. Address Rev. P. D. Guyer (pastor Friends church), Paonia, Colorado.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON
MARCH 5.

Subject—The Death of Stephen.

Lesson—Acts 7:1—8:3.

Golden Text. Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life. Rev 2:10.

This lesson is a continuation of the one of a week ago. Stephen is now before his accusers in the "prearranged" trial. The time for him to speak has come and he begins his defense, but not as we might expect. His is a message for his inquisitors concerning the Christian faith, rather than a reply to personal accusations which they had made against him. The gospel of Jesus the Christ is on trial rather than Stephen the deacon. This is an unexpected opportunity to preach to the rulers of Israel. What does it matter what becomes of a single unit in the newly organized church?

Stephen's sermon, (if we may call it that) is an interesting example of what must have been the common method of developing the publicly delivered message within Jewish circles. The new faith is shown to be a development of prophetic Judaism. Jesus is the Messiah whom God had promised. Stephen with all the power at his command undertakes to drive this view of the truth home to his hearers. The first forty-seven verses were not offensive to his accusers, but the next statement is a direct thrust at the temple and its services as held by those before whom he was being tried. Verses fifty-one to fifty-three are sharp and cutting. We would say that they were lacking in tact and show very poor pedagogical principles. Stephen was a bold and fearless advocate, and like many of his kind paid the penalty for his method.

What shall we say about the religious leaders who now give vent to their pent up hate, hasten the Christian out of the city and stone him to death? Let us think twice before we throw stones at them. Paul afterwards declared that he was doing his part with a clear conscience. The law condemned the blasphemer; here was one, as they judged matters, so, true to the teachings of their law and their religion, they put him to death, and felt as good over it as modern church people do when they have disowned a heretic. O how cruel religionists are to each other! What murders, tortures, agonies and wars have been done even in the name of the Prince of Peace.

Evidently Stephen was one of the first, if not the very first of the Christian martyrs, but in a very short time others were to suffer a like fate and before the new faith was to be at peace in the world many thousands were to follow him. Could it have been otherwise, would tact and kindness have spared them? In many instances, yes, in many more, no. Jesus had failed in this respect and his disciples could not hope to always escape, but that was no excuse for later ones to seek occasions to die to the disgust of the Roman Tribunes.

Stephen's death as pictured by Luke is a remarkable exhibition of the courage and hope of the early Christians. He may have experienced some

Bumper Grain Crops Good Markets — High Prices

Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses

The winnings of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The list comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sweep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the excellence of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producer.

In Western Canada you will find good markets, splendid schools, exceptional social conditions, perfect climate, and other great attractions. There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

Send for illustrated pamphlet and ask for reduced railway rates, information as to best locations, etc. Address

G. W. Aird, 215 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Canadian Government Agent.

SHARES

In

THE INDIANA RURAL CREDIT ASSOCIATION

Are offered for investment. They are non-taxable and mortgage loans are made only to shareholders upon farm property.

Loans may run 10, 20 and 30 years. Small annual payments repay principal and interest. Ask for Booklet.

MORD CARTER, President,
1214 Merchants' Bank Bldg.,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

favors not shown to others but his courage in the hour of death was no greater than scores of others. Maidens of tender years seem to have faced their executioners with a courage and faith that astounded soldiers, hardened by experience on many battle fields.

BORN

Partington—At Union Springs, N. Y., February 10, 1916, to Eliezer and Flora H. Partington, a daughter, Mary Elizabeth.

Pruitt—At Greenleaf, Idaho, January 6, 1916, to Edward H. and Bessie Pruitt, a daughter, Estella Elizabeth.

DIED

Birdsall—Catharine Birdsall, wife of Thomas W. Birdsall, was born in Leptondale, N. Y., December 11, 1829, and died at Newburgh, N. Y., January 8, 1916. She was a birthright Friend and for thirty years an esteemed elder of Marlborough Monthly Meeting. While she always kept in touch with the outside world and was blessed with a large circle of friends, her life was centered in her loved ones and her home.

Brown—Clayton Brown was born in Preble county, Ohio, November 11, 1822, and died at Greenleaf, Idaho, December 14, 1915, in his 94th year. Moving to Indiana in early life he was for many years a member of Whitewater Monthly Meeting. He married Phebe Roberts in 1853, and after her death married Susannah Knowlton in 1885. He was the pioneer Quaker of three Monthly Meetings, at Paton, Iowa, Harmony, S. Dakota and Greenleaf, Idaho. For many years he was a sufferer from asthma and sought changes of climate at three different times. His trust in his Savior was an inspiration to his meetings. The widow and three children survive him.

Hubbard—Bertha Johnson Hubbard, wife of Homer S. Hubbard and daughter of George Y. and Matilda H. Johnson, died December 14, 1915, while visiting her mother and sister at Portland, Oregon. She was the granddaughter of Washington Hadley. Interment was at Los Angeles.

Mills—Ola R. Mills, daughter of Seth A. and Rhoda J. Mills, was born in Elwood, Illinois, September 24, 1887, and died at the home of her parents, Greenleaf, Idaho, October 6, 1915. She was converted in early childhood and lived an earnest, active Christian life. She led many to Christ and her highest aim was to do her Master's will. She served two years as recording clerk of Newberg Monthly Meeting, Oregon. For the past year she was a great sufferer, but was always hopeful and cheerful.

Morgan—Enos Averl Morgan, son of Enos and Minerva Morgan, was born in Cherokee county, Kansas, April 4, 1884, and died at his home in Long Beach, California, December 26, 1915. He was a birthright Friend and was converted early in life. He came to California with his parents in 1887 and two years later settled in Long Beach. He was an active member of Bethel Monthly Meeting and during months of affliction exemplified God's wondrous grace and victory. He married Grace A. Swayze in 1910. He leaves a widow, two children, his father and mother, one brother and three sisters.

Overman—Benajah Overman, son of Joseph and Anna Overman, was born near Amboy, Indiana, October 21, 1853, and died at the same place January 5, 1916, aged 62 years, 2 months and 14 days. He was a birthright Friend, was of a quiet disposition and a conscientious Christian, thoroughly upright and honest in all his dealings. His illness was of short duration. He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter.

Patton—Elizabeth Hensley Patton was born near Bloomington, Illinois, October 31, 1839, and died at the home of her daughter, at Arnolds Park, Iowa, December 28, 1915, aged 76 years, 3 months and 28 days. She married John Patton in 1856. She was recorded a minister of the gospel in 1881. She had a special gift in prayer and song and in her early ministry was engaged in evangelistic work, winning many souls to Christ. She was a charter member of the Denver Friends meeting and later was a successful worker in the Crittendon Mission at San Jose, California. She served as pastor near Newberg, Oregon, for seven years. She worked the work of Him that sent her while it was day. One son and three daughters survive her.

Sanders—Zillah Sanders, wife of J. C. Sanders, and daughter of Elias and Mary Ann Newlin, was born near Georgetown, Illinois, November 15, 1840, and died at Newberg, Oregon, December 20, 1915, aged 75 years, 1 month and 5 days. She was a birthright Friend and was converted in early life. She leaves her husband, two daughters, two step-children, nine grandchildren, three brothers and three sisters.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED in a private home in Washington. Convenient to car line and Union Station. Laura N. Wilson, 46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
 Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
 Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY

Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books
1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books
 The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.
Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.
 Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committe, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
 T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
 J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
 J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
 DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
 SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
 J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
 WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
 JOHN WAX, Assistant Treasurer
 J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
 Asa S. Wing
 Marriott C. Morris
 Robert M. Janney
 Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
 Frederic H. Strawbridge
 John Thompson Emlen
 Morris R. Bockius
 Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
 George Wood
 Charles H. Harding
 J. Whitall Nicholson
 Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 9.

THIRD MONTH 2, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 9.

THE MANLY MAN

The world has room for the manly man with the spirit of manly cheer;
The world delights in the man who smiles when his eyes keep back the tear;
It loves the man who, when things go wrong, can take his place and stand
With his face to the fight and his eyes to the light, and toil with a willing hand.

The manly man is the country's need, and the moment's need, forsooth,
With a heart that beats to the pulsing tread of the allied leagues of truth;
The world is his, and it waits for him and it leaps to hear the ring
Of the blows he strikes and the wheels he turns and the hammers he dares to swing;
It likes the forward look in his face, the poise of his noble head,
And the onward lunge of his tireless will and the sweep of his dauntless tread.

Hurrah for the manly man who comes with sunlight on his face,
And the strength to do and the will to dare and the courage to find his place!
The world delights in the manly man, and the weak and evil flee
When the manly man goes forth to hold his own on land or sea!

—Herald and Presbyter.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,

RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

The Road Through the Wood

The woods were dark and the night was black,
And only an owl could see the track;
Yet the cheery driver made his way
Through the great pine woods as if 'twere day.

I asked him, "How do you manage to see?
The road and the forest are one to me."
"To me as well," he replied, "and I Can only drive by the path in the sky."

I looked above, where the treetops tall
Rose from the road like an ebon wall,
And lo! a beautiful starry lane
Wound as the road wound and made it plain.

And since, when the path of my life is drear
And all is blackness and doubt and fear,
When the horrors of midnight are here below,
And I see not a step of the way to go,
Then, ah! then I can look on high,
And walk on earth by the path in the sky.

—Selected.

American Friend Day

We trust that no Friends' meeting will forget that according to the custom of the last few years next Sabbath, March 5, is American Friend Day. This periodical needs and ought to have the prayers of the entire church, and we regard it as entirely proper that the publication and literature interests of the church should form the subject matter of a sermon upon that day.

It should be announced in all meetings that for the remainder of this year new subscribers can receive the paper for $1.00 each, and we are quite satisfied that from one to a dozen new subscribers can be secured in each meeting, if following the announcement a team of young Friends can be set to work to canvass the community during the week following. Now that the paper consists of twenty pages each week, it is in better position than ever before to minister to the upbuilding of the whole church. If subscriptions are sent in without delay the subscriber will receive 860 pages of literature by the first of January next, all for $1.00.

An Emergency Fund

Jonathan K. Taylor, a prominent member of the other branch of Friends, living in Baltimore, has initiated an appeal for the raising of $100,000 to be expended in a nation-wide campaign for the passage of the national prohibition resolution now pending in Congress. The National Legislative Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League is reported to have said that he would almost be willing to guarantee the passage of the resolution if there were sufficient funds on hands to push the campaign.

Efforts are now being made in a constructive way to raise this $100,000. A committee of a hundred friends of this resolution has been organized to participate in the effort. Friends should certainly not be left out of such a movement. Anyone interested in having a part in this patriotic service may write to Jonathan K. Taylor, Fidelity Building, Baltimore, or Howard H. Russell, Westerville, Ohio.

Claims of Conscience.

The following is the concluding portion of T. Edmund Harvey's bold speech in Parliament on Conscription:

"I believe that it is possible for citizens to serve the State without transgressing the higher claims in which they believe conscientiously. When religion and conscience tell a man that he must not take human life, I believe the State ought to recognize that and ought to allow him freedom to find other forms of service which may be of the truest value to the community, not merely in the time of war, but throughout the whole course of national life.

"When the right honorable gentleman, the Member for Exeter, appeals to Members of this House to put aside political maxims, I would answer that we will go with him as far as we can, but this is not at all a question of political maxims with us. It is a matter of the profoundest conviction. We are prepared if need be, I believe, to lay down life itself in the cause of our fellow countrymen, but we cannot take life even at the call of the State, and that because we recognize a higher call even than that of the State itself. It is not divided loyalty although it may seem so—the loyalty that we owe to the eternal State, the eternal city of God, and the loyalty that we owe to the State of today. We would do our utmost in so far as it is possible to serve that State in accordance with the light that we have been given, but we cannot disobey the clear command of our conscience; we cannot disobey what we believe to be the eternal law of God." —Philadelphia Friend.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 9.

THIRD MONTH 3, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 9.

Keeping the Church Well Balanced

The writer of the Gospel of Mark relates the story of a demoniac, who having been dispossessed of the unclean spirit, was found "clothed and in his right mind." It has been a tragedy of religion that some of those who have made profession of faith have given evidence of disturbed and unbalanced minds. The proof of the power of the supernatural does not lie in a disordered and unnatural experience. The trance is far more often the evidence of a diseased anatomy than it is of the operations of the Spirit of God. Extreme emotionalism that may be excused in nervous people is not to be taken as positive evidence of the power of God.

Abounding joy is an inevitable characteristic of the miracle of divine forgiveness, but that is quite a different thing from those forms of distorted and unnatural conduct, sometimes associated with revivalism, that bring schisms into communities and destroy the faith of some. Extremes either in philosophy or theology are not conducive to stability or well balanced judgment. Liberalism that disturbs faith has its counterpart in excitable revivalism that produces corresponding doubt in the minds of many. As in the days when Jesus worked the miracle of order in diseased and sinful lives, so now should His disciples be exemplars of constancy and Christian decorum. Sin is abnormal, an alien element in human life, and therefore destructive, but the grace of God restores man to his rightful place of sonship in the family of the Father.

As Friends we lay great stress upon the operations of the Holy Spirit in life and conduct. Let us beware that nowhere within our borders do we become blind leaders of the blind, by incorporating within our practices elements of conduct that belie our holy professions. It is well to remember that as humanity differs temperamentally, all men do not find God in the same way; and as Paul would eat no meat if the eating of it caused his brother to stumble, so should Friends with their high professions of faith in Jesus Christ and in the leadership of the Holy Spirit guard their conduct, that no idiosyncrasies of action or demeanor become a stumbling block to any.

Holiness as a vital experience of human life has frequently been discredited in many minds by the loose and oftentimes false teaching of some of its advocates. In the same way many are turning from revivalism because of its frequent liberalism in conduct, and because certain of its advocates have not learned to restrain their deportment in harmony with Christian sanity and well balanced, attractive evangelism. Abnormal and grotesque practices in the church defeat their own purposes and tend to warn seekers away rather than attract them into the fold. Those who lay stress upon particular kinds of outward demonstrations are apt to grow intolerant of the experiences of others, just as it is a singularity of liberalism sometimes that it can fail to exercise liberality toward others of different vision.

Our controversy is not with revivalism. On the contrary we plead for the Christianity of Paul who became all things to all men that by all means he might save some. Our concern is that the religion we profess shall become a religion of heart and of life, and not a manifestation of grotesque outward performances and excitable demeanor that suggests the vaudeville in the Christian life. It is a fatal handicap when the church fails to stress vital Christian living as the very essence of the Godly life. Experience must be expressed in service, or its value is depreciated many fold. There is little difference between a religion that voices itself in ceremonialism and a religion whose chief exhibit is a bodily torture visited under the spell of abnormal emotionalism. It is the every day life that counts. Neither the orchard nor the field yields fruit spasmodically or under the stress of great natural disturbances. True religion goes to the depths of life that is constant and abiding.

The work and teaching of Jesus were not conducive of excessive demonstration. The same multitude that tried it upon His entry into Jerusalem were ready to crucify Him before the week had ended. It is the ocean current that runs deep that is undisturbed by wind or tide. The times are calling for a Christianity that refuses to expend itself in unrestrained spiritual hilarity, but that goes to the depths of man's nature, transforming him into a new creature in Christ Jesus, established in every good work.

Friends of this generation have traveled far from the landmarks of the fathers. We cannot say that their zeal has been misplaced. But we have suffered because here and yonder there has been no restraining hand extended to check the excesses of enthusiastic endeavor. Friends will excel only as they maintain a church that is sensible continually of its immediate relation to God. Our estimates of values must be governed by spiritual standards, and these will ever lead us away from the trivial and the excitable into a realm of conscious fellowship with our Lord.

Quaker Contribution to Our Common Christianity As Seen Through Other Eyes.

(The following is the outline of an address delivered recently at Berkeley, California by Dr. Raymond C. Brooks, pastor of the First Congregational Church in that city. The local Friends meeting was adjourned and the members attended the meeting at the Congregational Church in a body. We are indebted to A. J. Weaver for this outline.)

"The Quakers, as they are called, or the Society of Friends, as they prefer to call themselves, have exercised an influence upon the life and thought of the world out of all proportion to their numbers. Indeed more consistently, it seems to me, than any other body of Christians, they have measured values in spiritual rather than in material terms and have sought for quality rather than quantity. In our best moments it is clear to all of us that the desire for quality is the only worthy human ideal. It is the bond which unites men on the higher levels of endeavor in stable, worthy, mutually helpful relationships, while the desire for bigness, especially the desire to be bigger than our neighbors, has been the source of unending strife. There can be no doubt that this desire for bigness has been an important factor in church history and it is worth much to all of us that at least one company of disciples has been so largely free from it.

"It has been not uncommon in popular thought to identify the Quakers with certain peculiarities of dress and of speech, and of worship, and to suppose that their external peculiarities sufficiently indicated their character. It takes only a moment's thought to see how superficial such a judgment is. Let me sketch the background of their history that the nature of their principles may be revealed.

Origin in England

"The Society of Friends had its origin in England in the seventeenth century. In the midst of the efforts that were being made to rescue the church from the corruptions that had grown up around it and to restore to the church purity in doctrine and worship and life, there were men who felt that the reform movement led by the Puritans had not gone far enough. Such men found a leader in George Fox.

"Now Fox was a man of singular purity and simplicity of character. From childhood he was of a serious religious disposition. As he grew up his relatives wanted to make him a priest, but he was put out as an apprentice to a shoemaker. When nineteen he was much grieved by the careless life of those about him who were known as disciples of Christ and then began a life of much concern and of wandering from priest to priest to look for comfort and guidance, without finding any. At this time he formed the habit of going apart by himself in the fields for meditation and to read his Bible. In one of these hours he heard the voice which said to him, 'There is one, even Jesus Christ, who can speak to your condition.' When he was twenty-four he began to speak in the fields and in the market places and sometimes in the churches, and because his preaching was with unusual power and because his message was needed many gathered about him in sympathy and in friendliness. He longed to bring to others his discovery that the religion of Jesus was spiritual, not formal, not credal, not sacramental. He announced it as his aim to restore primitive Christianity and the burden of his message was to lead people to dare to trust the leadership of the spirit of God by whom they would be led into all truth. He undertook to make it clear that one became a true disciple of Jesus, not by the assent of the understanding to the truths contained in the Bible, not by any sacrament, but by a real change of the heart, through the power of the spirit of God. The inward light became not merely a mystical communion with God but a source of strength and guidance in the practical affairs of life.

Spread of Influence

"The soil was ready for this doctrine, but the rapid spread of Fox's influence was surprising. All classes flocked to his preaching. Among his converts were persons of the leading families in England, priests of the established church, ministers of other societies and many men of wealth and learning. For four years Fox was the only preacher for the society, going on foot through England at his own charges. Within a few years the Society of Friends was organized under his leadership and a considerable group of preachers went everywhere preaching his doctrine. It was not surprising that the church at the time should be disturbed by his preaching just as the Pharisees were disturbed by the teaching of Jesus. Again and again Fox was imprisoned for preaching without authority. For nearly forty years the Friends were persecuted with cruelty and persistence both in England and America, but it is said that never were persecutions borne with a more heroic spirit of endurance or more Christlike spirit of forgiveness.

"When the days of persecution had passed the Quakers became less aggressive and won fewer converts to their views or to their practices. But they devoted themselves to the practice of the Christian virtues as they understood them and to philanthropy and to a most rigid discipline among themselves, even excommunicating anyone who dared to marry outside their society.

Religion of the Spirit

"In their effort to conform the practice to what they conceived to be the religion of the spirit, some of the singular practices associated with the Quakers began. For example, their belief in the spiritual character of the religion of Jesus led them to do away with the outward rites of baptism and the Lord's Supper. It seems to the Quakers that one of the important religious tasks for us is to distinguish between the essential and the non-essential, between the accidental and the permanent, between the spiritual and the form in which it is presented to us. It seems clear to them that we may easily lose the permanent spiritual values by making too much of the literal observances. Because they think it so important that we have the baptism of the spirit, they refuse to substitute for it the baptism of water.

"It seems to them also that many of the practices associated with public worship tend rather to hinder than to help the spirit of worship. Some felt that the introduction of musical instruments was undesirable because it seemed to be invariably accompanied by the declining of spirituality in worship. In like manner objection was made to any pre-arranged program of worship, to the spoken prayer and to the prepared sermon. The manner of dress and of speech, refusal to sanction the practice of putting on mourning, and other customs, were the result of a protest against 'the fashions of this world,' and an effort to conform their practices to the spirit of the religion of Jesus. But of far greater importance than these matters has been their steady and insistent protest against slavery, against the use of oaths, against the assumption of priestly authority and against war.

"If now we attempt to measure their contribution to our common Christianity, we will find it at least in three directions. First, the whole Christian world is indebted to the Friends for their steady recognition of 'the inner light.' For centuries men have been taught to look for authority in religion to a book, or a church, or to a person, until they have not dared to trust 'the light that lighteth every man' without whose shining life is dark indeed. The chief duty of man is to keep the windows of his soul wide open that the light may stream in. Second, it taught us to know the ministry of silence. Not until we learn to live in the silence can we expect to live wisely with our fellows. Third, they have patiently and steadily revealed to us the greatness and the goodness of simplicity."

Religion in Action

By THOMAS NEWLIN

When God wanted to impress upon Moses his duty as a leader, he gave this command, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." This same command needs to be sounded in every one of our neighborhoods and in every meeting. Christianity is fundamentally and essentially progressive. The church as well as the soul can never stand still and live. In Old Testament history we read that Abram was called from Ur, Joseph was taken into Egypt, and Israel was called out of Egypt, and when they were between Pharaoh and the Sea, the command was "Go forward."

In New Testament history Christ set his disciples to work. He chose the twelve and put them to work. He sent forth the seventy; he wanted them to learn by action, saying, "If ye do my will ye shall know the teaching," and when he was nearing the end his last command was "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

It is thus evident that in all history Christianity is the progressive religion. This religion evangelized the Roman Empire in the Dark Ages and gained to Christianity Northern Europe, and later came the Protestant Reformation. The nineteenth century was characterized as the time of great missionary awakening. The Christian church in the opening years of the twentieth century has been aroused to a living sense of its social mission. It certainly is reassuring when we realize how Christianity has proved to be a religion of eternal vitality. New movements have sprung from her loins time and again as the needs have appeared. The Sabbath School, Missionary activity, The Christian Endeavor, The Laymen's Missionary Movement, the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

We know that many good, honest and sincere people have been distressed and troubled over the origin and introduction of every one of these movements. There has been an honest fear lest the church would go astray on social lines. "Not social service, but doctrine and creed" has been the warning sounded.

Back of all our social thinking lie such facts as "One is your Father, even God, and all ye are brothers" and "There is one family in heaven and on earth." Then we are to live as one divine household. But what shall I do with this man next to me, my neighbor? If we follow Christ's teaching there can be but one answer—treat him as my brother. In this way Jesus lived and taught. He gave one generalization of the Law and the Prophets, "Love thy God and love thy neighbor."

It is most remarkable that Christ's plan of redemption embraced the universe, for world-wideness was foreign to his day. The people were divided into Greek and Barbarian, Jew and Gentile. In Latin one and the same word meant stranger and enemy, and in each of these classes there was a narrowness and intolerance most intense. And then to think that among one of these narrow classes Jesus came, himself being a member of the class, yet teaching universal redemption. In the parable of the Sower is the statement, "The field is the world." "Go teach all nations" was Christ's final message. But since we cannot do all at once we are to begin at Jerusalem, and the disciples were sent particularly to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

Where is our Jerusalem? Who are the lost sheep of the house of Israel? Is not Jerusalem our own headquarters, our home, our neighborhood, our parish; and are not the lost sheep those of our own people who have wandered away—no longer care for the church? What a flourishing meeting we could have in almost any city in our land if we could only gather in all those who have been in some way connected with us!

And who is our neighbor? This has ceased to have a local meaning, for we now see that our neighbor is any one whom we can help, whether in our own neighborhood or in China. What are we to do? Care for the body and soul, feed the hungry, visit the sick, comfort the sorrowing and do anything and everything as the need appears.

Much harm and misunderstanding has come because we have not always made a clear distinction between the sphere of action of the church, and the function of the church. The church in the name of Christ should claim every field of action as her own, but it does not therefore follow that in every field the church must do everything. The church should influence labor conditions, but it is not her function to be a labor organization or a labor bureau. She should deeply influence politics, but not presume to settle partisan questions except as she influences the lives and hearts of citizens. It seems the church may have a sphere and a function in regulating and providing amusements for the young and all who have needs in this line.

Every new organization and every new movement in Christianity has come through a vision of what the church ought to do and what the church ought to be. O, for more men of vision who will organize our religion into action! Every church ought to function in at least five different departments, should have five planks in its platform—to fill the needs for Christian activity and the real needs of communities—1. Bible Study. 2. Evangelism. 3. Work for Boys and Girls. 4. Social Service. 5. Missions.

Churches that have organized to do something along all of these lines have been the growing churches. In the last few years the two movements, The Laymen's Missionary Movement and The Men and Religion Forward Movement, have done more to awaken the religious consciousness in men than anything that has occurred in the last century. These things have not resulted in a mere passing emotion. Already more than a million men have been added to the church in America. These movements have stirred whole communities, boys and girls have been looked after as never before, wages have been increased in certain cases, good and sanitary lodging houses have been built, and club houses for men and boys, and all these things from a Christian standpoint.

Christ was so manly, and Christianity of the first centuries was so virile that it seems strange to read the history and find that after twenty centuries it has become so largely a woman's religion. Of the Protestant population in the United States by the census of 1910 sixty per cent were women and forty per cent men. There are not too many women workers, but not enough men. There is a challenge. Such conditions must not continue to exist. The history of the Brotherhood movements is all modern. It is true that there were some early monastic and ecclesiastic bodies. The middle of the seventeenth century saw the Scotch Covenanters, and the Holy Club founded by Wesley and Whitfield was the real beginning of the Methodist church. But the first of the modern type so far as I can find was by the Episcopal church in Chicago, 1883, when St. Andrew's Brotherhood was organized. This was almost contemporary with the founding of the Christian Endeavor Society. Other churches soon followed until nearly every evangelistic church in the land has some sort of men's movement. This has reached many million men and boys in America.

What is the object and mission of all this work? I answer, simply to put religion into action, to develop initiative and increase the efficiency of the men in the church and thereby bring more men into the church; to make the church practical as well as inspirational. It aims to grip the men who are not in connection with the church, but in sympathy with it, and to grip and hold the boys and young men.

The intense needs of the age demand a better leadership in Christian work than ever before. The church in its leadership needs thinkers, men and women of intellectual grasp and spiritual insight, who have mastered the principles of Christian work, and who are able to attack the social, industrial and intellectual, as well as religious problems that seek a solution. Men and women who direct this activity must have great heart power, and couple with the organization vital friendship, brotherhood and love. They must sympathize with those who are tempted, those who are struggling with earthly toil, and those who sin. To be prepared for our gigantic problems we need resolute purpose to keep at our task without wavering. As the young men of Europe have gone out at the command of their rulers, so must our men in our churches go forth with the spirit of sacrifice and devotion to serve our King. For all this work we need and must have the superhuman help of God which is promised to be our strength.

Guilford College, N. C.

Evangelistic Note in Preaching.

By THOMAS E. JONES

Seers tell us that we are at the dawn of a new day in spiritual manifestation. The masses as well as scientists and philosophers are coming to see that agnosticism and atheism are shallow and unsatisfying. They are struggling forward like men groping in the dark. Van Dyke says, "They are as men in a storm standing at a cross roads with all the guide posts blown down." The old axiom "When in doubt do nothing," they have found also to read "when doing nothing one is always in doubt." They are as Winston Churchill tells us, "Conscious of a power that demands allegiance, but they do not understand how to place themselves in subjection to it."

This unrest is shown in the number of "isms" and sects that have sprung up in our country. These have been tried and have failed, as a report of the Federal Council of Churches shows. It says in part that few fads or "isms" are making headway. Twenty years ago the number of new religious platforms put forth were some twelve or fifteen a season. Most were local to given cities and had one man or woman behind them. A few gained national headway each year. Now the number of these annual outputs is hardly more than six, possible some years eight, and very few gain any real following that lasts beyond four or five years.

This fact may have two meanings, (1) People find that there is nothing in these fads and are coming back to the churches, or (2) they are losing all interest in any kind of religion. The former seems to be the most likely because as far as we know men never have lived without religion and it is not likely that they are going to begin now. Furthermore it has been demonstrated by various men that these masses are available and easily reached if approached in the right manner.

It is pretty clear that men have become too wise to be willing to have their religion made and thrust upon them. They realize more than we often think that they and God must settle this matter in the end, and it will not be settled by buying Him off with ritualistic performances. It is as deep as life and as important as God Himself. Men do not come to God for ecclesiastical gymnastics! They hate sham and pretence. They want truth in all its simplicity, ugliness and power. I say ugliness, because its bare bones are sometimes unpleasant. People come to hear a preacher who isn't afraid to speak out the truth no matter how hard it hits. It may cause some deacon or elder to chafe uneasily, but if it hits the case of the sinner may God forgive us for not daring to proclaim His truth. One reason why men flock to hear Billy Sunday is that they know he is not afraid to preach what he thinks.

Here we come to a lamentable situation. Often the church and evangelists are at sword points, with the odds in favor of the evangelist. Now there is no need for this antagonism. Campbell Morgan radically denounces it as wrong, and Dr. Dawson of London says the time is ripe for educated evangelists and evangelism. Poor people like big churches; the best sermons that can be produced and a wide awake church that is taking a personal interest in them. Morgan further says "No church ought to be allowed to exist that has not added to its membership by confession of faith. If a church is existing only by letters of transfer, it is time the doors were closed and 'Ichabod, the glory of the Lord has departed,' was inscribed across them." A cross begotten enthusiasm for humanity will direct us into the right ways. Nothing else will be permanently effective, and while I believe in every method which can be pursued in reaching the people, I am sure none of these methods are in themselves "open sesames." What the world needs today is a living, loving church, glad because it possesses and proclaims the great message of the love of God, and proclaims it not only with eloquent and faithful lips, but by self-sacrificing lives. Let churches make Jesus visible and the world will be illuminated. He that says, "I am the Light of the World" also says "Ye are the Light of the World."

On the other hand the evangelist should not fight the church, but should recognize that here is a great God-given institution that can be wonderfully used in presenting the evangelistic message. The difficulties of class feeling, parochialism of idea and fastidiousness of false culture in a wealthy parish, as well as the narrow minded, selfish conservatism of poorer meetings can soon be broken down by comparing the results of an evangelistic policy with that of a non-evangelistic meeting.

Arthur T. Pierson speaking of Spurgeon on this point, says: "The Lord has added daily to his church for thirty-five years. The people flock to hear him because they get a blessing. They can get concert singing and stage performances elsewhere, but where else can they hear such praying, praising, preaching and get such a lasting blessing?" They can get essays, dissertations on politics, current events and literature out of Scribner's, Everybody's or the Springfield Republican, but they cannot get the burning message of Jesus Christ that will save the world.

The first thing then that is necessary to make an evangelistic church is to find an evangelistic minister. I do not mean by this a man like Billy Sunday, Gypsy Smith or Sam Jones, but rather a dignified, educated minister who has been gripped by the power of God like such men as W. J. Dawson, Spurgeon and Chapman. We must feel the crying need of fallen humanity whose very life is depending upon our ministry. I think we must care less for the form of our message and our meeting and more for the people we are trying to uplift. Milton says of ministers that "Some are blind mouths. The hungry sheep look up and are not fed." Too many pastors preach for a living or to fill up space in a profession. We need men who will launch out with the enthusiasm of Paul, willing to go the limit in suffering that men may know the Gospel of Christ.

Dawson says: "I am yet more astonished at the miraculous way in which a single spark of enthusiasm for souls, once kindled, is able to pass like a flame through a church and set it moving in a crusade of love, pity and human service." And thus enthusiasm and power are acquired by living near to and wrestling with God for men's souls. Ministers must become deeply in earnest if they hope to do much telling work.

The evangelistic message must be a combination of deep emotion and intellect. Emotional preaching alone will not go far today, and purely intellectual preaching will accomplish less. It must be both. The sermon must have a passionate, definite motive, must be presented with unquestionable authority, and must bring a revelation of God to men's deepest need. One need not be afraid of doctrinal preaching if it has these characteristics.

In conclusion let me say that the church offers a tremendous opportunity to the young men and women of our day. Narrow sectarianism is fast breaking down; freedom to work out the heavenly visions that have come to some is already assured; sufficient support will come if the worth of the church is demonstrated. Churches are needing a revival that will last not only two weeks, but years. Multitudes are waiting to be let into the Kingdom of God. Our Heavenly Father is challenging the youth to bear the missionary message to the coming generation; to the foreigner within our gates; to the struggling millions in war-ridden Europe; to the hungry multitude of Buddhists, Hindus and Moslems. The call to Christian service has always been great, but it is incomparably greater today than in any previous age. No other profession can possibly present a field of service where one can so completely lose his life for Christ's sake. Here is a situation that challenges every ounce of manhood or womanhood that God has given us. Here is a field in which we grow constantly bigger and richer. Let every minister live closer to the source of all power that men's lives may be transformed into His likeness; let an army of youth be in preparation, not only intellectually but spiritually, that they may meet the ever increasing demand for religious workers.

Earlham, Indiana.

Why Not Live In The Light?

Our God is willing to light up our ordinary roads, even the byways and back streets of our daily life. Few of us spend our days in the main streets. Most of our life is passed in very quiet ways, often in trudging along very rough and rutty roads. Well, we can go along them all "by revelation," with God's soft light of grace falling upon the deep ruts and the sharp stones. In every path of duty we can have these revealing rays, warm and sunny with the very love of God. Every man can be illumined, and in the heaviest and most miry road the place of our feet can be glorious.—Exchange.

Active or Passive Christians.

By C. E. COSAND.

The grammatical principle, that the active voice represents the subject acting while the passive voice represents the subject receiving the action, is thoroughly applicable to the classification of Christians. The passive Christian is one who consumes the energy of the church in being ministered to, while the active Christian is the one who adds to the energy of the church by ministering to others.

A story is told of two squirrels living on the campus of the University of Michigan which were led into a passive existence by the kindness of the students. Through the month of September they were fed lavishly by the students. October came, and with it came the challenge to every thrifty squirrel to prepare for winter. The trees on the campus laden with nuts, the cool nights and the frosty mornings all warned and invited the squirrels to duty. But the daily bread had been coming so easily and so bountifully that the squirrel instinct had been lulled to sleep. Day after day passed until beautiful October was gone. Chill November came, with its more emphatic warnings, but still the students showered their bounties upon their little friends, and the little friends delayed their preparations for the winter. Then suddenly the winter storms came. The squirrels' harvest time had passed. At the same time the students' interest in their little pets ceased. With no supply of food stored away, and with their artificial means of sustenance cut off, starvation ended the lives of the squirrels.

Does this not illustrate the spiritual life of too many of our church members? We allow the editors of our religious papers, our pastors, and our Bible School teachers to do our thinking for us. We say, in spirit if not in words, "It is the business of these people to supply us with our spiritual food." With little thought of the source of the supply and with no care for the loving sacrifice of these willing servants, we devour the pre-digested morsels which they serve to us in the most appetizing manner possible. Many of us even neglect engaging in any sort of exercise for our Master that would vitalize this food in our own lives. We forget, too, the fine old doctrine of the priesthood of believers, which gives to each one the privilege to go to the same source of spiritual food that our leaders draw upon so heavily. We, as well as they, may obtain our own food by direct communion with God in quiet meditation, by an unfaltering prayer life, and by a faithful study of the Bible. If, instead of living this active spiritual life, we become merely the passive recipients of good things supplied by our brothers and sisters, we shall find our higher life waxing feebler day by day.

From this attitude of depending on others for our spiritual service, it is but a short road to the condition of the innumerable throng, who are seeking the loaves and fishes. Having lost their spiritual faculty, they drop back and demand of the church the baser material benefits. Failing to have this need supplied they drift away from the church into the various fraternal and social organizations which promise to make good the failure of the church to minister to the material needs. The parasite in physical life loses first the ability to procure its own food, and secondly the ability to digest the food procured from its host. Herein lies the tragedy of the spiritual degenerate. He may listen to the deepest spiritual messages but his unused faculties grow less and less responsive until they become wholly inactive. Activity in the spiritual life is absolutely necessary. Even the Son of Man came not to be ministered to, but to minister.

Again it is not those who say, but those who do who are promised the best things spiritually. It is easy enough to say fine things under the spell of a great religious conference where men's hearts are melted together by the fervor of the multitude. The real test, however, comes when it is not words, but deeds that are called for. The newspapers, a little while ago, contained a report which, if true, shows this principle in a very painful way. In one of the few strongholds of Quakerism, a city in which Friends play an important part in business, political, educational and religious activities, a business men's meeting was called to consider the advisability of endorsing President Wilson's military program. The meeting very enthusiastically spoke and voted for the President's most extreme policies. Notwithstanding the fact that more than a score of Friends prominent in the affairs of this city had just a short time before attended a conference characterized by wonderful addresses against militarism, only one Friend, the report states, was present to challenge the hysterical action. It is not difficult to send a letter to a Congressman a thousand miles away, telling him what he ought to do, but when a fine opportunity to really do some vital work at home for the cause of peace offered itself, only one Friend was courageous enough to grasp the opportunity. Do we not get our pronouns mixed when some militant duty comes knocking at our door, and instead of responding, "Lord, send me," we falteringly say, "Send him."

And lastly there is another phase of the passive Christian life that devotes so much energy to repression that it has no power left for expression. The tragedy of the life of the rich young ruler lay not in the fact that he had loved and obeyed the law so well. That was all very well so far as it went. Jesus looked upon him approvingly and loved him. It seemed quite plausible that one who had such powers of repression should have the ability on the other hand of carrying out a program of positive action. But when Jesus suggested to this capable young man a possible means of expressing himself in a vital way, he turned away sorrowfully and went back to live his narrow, negative life.

Almost every church has one or more members who are pointed out as examples of goodness. When we have asked concerning some of these, what good things they have done, we have been disappointed in the answers. Have they identified themselves with any of the church activities? Have they helped in any positive, progressive program of reform? Have they changed in any vital way the spiritual atmosphere of their communities? No, but they are so good! They never have done anything wrong and they have never given offense to any one. Ah! and the rich young ruler had lived just such a life.

A man such as this was recently characterized as a positive force for evil in his community because of his passive goodness. He was so good, and yet he never allied himself with any positive effort to better conditions. Would it not be well for us as a church to be sure that we are not merely existing passively in being content to receive the good things of the kingdom, in saying good things while we send some one else to do the fighting, and in expending our energy merely to observe the "shalt nots?" Shall we not continue to pray not only that the words of our mouths and the meditations of our hearts may be acceptable in His sight, but also that we may do the will of our Father who is in Heaven?

Indianapolis, Ind.

The Prayer Meeting

By AARON M. BRAY

The average attendance at prayer meeting and at the Sabbath School is probably as good an indication of the work being done by a body of believers as can be obtained. It has been said that the prayer meeting is the power house of the church.

The statistics of California Yearly Meeting for last year are so arranged that the average attendance is given for each meeting, hence it is possible to make a study for each meeting. There are five meetings with a resident membership of more than 150 each, and 17 small meetings with less than 150 members each.

The statistics show the five large meetings to have a resident membership of 1746, and an average attendance at prayer meeting of 11 per cent and an average attendance at Sabbath School of 58.2 per cent. Fourteen small meetings reporting with a membership of 1182 show an average attendance at prayer meeting of 22.3 per cent. Sixteen small meetings reporting with a membership of 1249 show an average attendance of 92.7 per cent at Sabbath School.

These figures would seem to indicate that the only way that a large amount of work can be done is to keep the congregations small. Two churches of 200 members each occupying practically the same field will do more work than one church of 400 members.

If the statistics of other Yearly Meetings give the necessary data it would be interesting and valuable to have a study of them published in THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Anti-Preparedness

At the recent conference of Friends in Washington 520 copies of the following letter were written by hand and sent to Representatives, Senators and government officials:

"A group of members of the Religious Society of Friends, representative of that Society in the United States, has gathered in Washington and is holding meetings daily at the Friends' meeting house.

"A deep religious concern for the spiritual welfare of our country prompts us to invite thee and the members of thy family to gather with us in a meeting to seek for divine guidance in the crisis which our country is now facing. The meeting will be held at the Friends' meeting house, 1811 I St., at 8 p. m. on Fourthday (Wednesday), the 26th."

The following are selected from some fifty replies received, showing that our concern was at least partly understood:

"I have received a number of letters from the different Societies of Friends and individuals of the different Societies in California on the subject and have been glad to be able to say to them that I am opposed to the program for preparedness for war and am also earnestly opposed to the exportation of arms and munitions of war to aid in carrying on the war that is now raging in Europe." Senator John D. Works, California.

"Some of my best friends, for whom I have the highest regard, are members of the Society of Friends and I thoroughly believe in and appreciate the importance of conscientious efforts to secure guidance in trouble by sincere conscientious believers." Representative Woodson R. Oglesby, N. Y.

"I respect you and your communion most sincerely and it gives me pleasure to say that I shall spare no pains or labor to prevent war as long as I am in Congress." Representative Joseph Taggart, Kansas.

"I have a great respect for the Religious Society of Friends and am sure that I should be benefited by listening to any suggestions relating to the spiritual welfare of our country which might emanate from your Society." Representative C. S. Page, Vermont.

"I think that there never was a time when our country stood in such urgent need of divine guidance." Representative Edward Keating, Colorado.

"I am happy to know that you have established headquarters here, as you can do a great deal of good among all Christians and humane people." Representative Isaac R. Sherwood, Ohio.

"It is certainly a matter of some cheer that a group of people feel a deep religious concern in the present crisis of our country." Julia C. Lathrop, Federal Children's Bureau.

"May I say that I appreciate your thought of me and my family. In this most critical stage of the world's affairs the earnest prayers of the righteous are needed and by no nation more than ours." Representative David J. Lewis, Md.

Sent from Friends' Peace Headquarters in Washington by Carolena M. Wood.

WITH THE CHILDREN

A Boy I Know

By REBECCA B. FORESMAN.

I know a boy who has a watch
But never thinks to wind it,
And when he ought to be on time
He's always just behind it.

And when he has a task to do,
He says, "Wait till to-morrow";
And when he can not find his things,
He simply says, "I'll borrow."

That boy may make a business man—
I know he wants to do it—
But he must mend his careless ways
Or he will live to rue it.

That boy must do his work to-day,
And plan work for to-morrow;
Good habits, everybody knows,
Are something boys can't borrow.

—Ex.

A Truthful Boy

How people do trust a truthful boy! We never worry about him when he is out of sight. We never say: "I wonder where he is; I wish I knew what he is doing." We know that he is all right, and that when he comes home we will know all about it and get it straight: We don't have to ask him where he is going, or how long he will be gone, every time he leaves the house. We don't have to call him back and make him "solemnly promise" the same thing over and over. When he says "Yes, I will" or "No, I won't just once, that settles it.—Robert Burdette.

Bent Nails

"Draw the nail out carefully, my boy. Be careful not to bend it."

"I could straighten it if I did bend it, couldn't I?"

The carpenter smiled into the earnest face of the young man who was learning the trade under his teachings.

"You might get it quite straight, but it never would be as strong as if it had not been bent. It would bend easier next time, and you could not drive it just as true to the spot as you did at first."

It was a lesson the young carpenter never forgot—the nail which has been bent once will bend easier next time. It never is as strong to resist a blow as it was in the beginning.

The power in us to resist the inclination to do wrong is like a bright nail. Once bent it will bend easier next time. Yield to temptation today and to-morrow you will have less strength to hold fast.

Just as long as you stand up bravely and say: "I do not think this is right; I cannot do it!" just so long the metal is strong and pure in your heart. It is easier the next time to say the same thing. But as surely as you say: "I'll do it for this one time!" the steel is weakened and your life-work endangered.—Our Juniors.

LETTER FROM ALASKA.

(Received at Richmond Feb. 7)

Noorvi, Alaska, Nov. 23, 1915.

The American Friend:

Now that we are settled in our new home and have the details well in hand, we are in position to give a few facts about this interesting work. Our location at Deering for two years gave us quite a better understanding of the needs of the Eskimos in these parts. So, finding the many disadvantages of the Deering village, a new location was sought and found in the present site of Noorvik, within a reservation, set apart in October, 1914, by the President, especially for the Deering people and such others as might feel inclined to move to them.

We are now about 60 miles (air line) from Kotzebue, or "Cape Blossom," up the Kobuk river. The river is a large one, being navigable for over 300 miles. We are situated in a timber belt where the trees are as large as two feet in diameter, but are short and brushy. Some will make a log forty feet long, suitable for lumber, which is considered good in this country. The river just in front of us is eighty-feet deep and contains many large fish which contribute greatly to the food supply of the village, which already contains a population of over 400, and there are more to come.

Geographically, we are about the center of the field of the Friends activities in the Arctic, and of ready access from all points. The place being yet new there are many things to be done, but some have already been completed satisfactorily. In four weeks, lacking one day, we constructed the home for the Government teacher, the house being 30x38 feet and a story and a half high. It is built on a ridge in the timber overlooking the river, and can be seen for several miles. The top of the ridge is about 100 feet above the average water level and 60 feet above the high water line. Being located in the upper end of the great deltas, we can see for many miles in every direction.

The ground is frozen all the year round and thaws only about 10 inches under the deep coating of moss that abounds everywhere. The trees which grow from this ground spread out their roots through this thin layer of thawed ground like a great palm leaf fan. To put in a foundation for a building we must sink far into the frozen ground and then it will thaw sometimes at the bottom of the posts and let the building settle to one side.

On the flat down by the river the ground thaws very deep and there is where we have our gardens in which we can grow all the hardy garden vegetables needed.

The people are enjoying most the new houses which they have constructed of fine logs and moss. Some of them never lived in anything but a dug-out lined with willows and covered with earth, into which they crawled on hands and knees or at best greatly doubled up. Here, they actually have full sized doors and large windows, and are warm, having an abundance of wood for fuel.

The Government being unable to erect a school building this year, the natives, with the materials sent in by the Yearly Meeting Board of California for a church at Oksik (eight miles above us), have built a meeting house, quaint but comfortable, 22x40 feet, and loaned it to the Government for school purposes. The building was finished in eleven days and is constructed of logs split in half and set vertical all around the walls outside, with the bark out; then four inches of moss is held in place by building paper and ceiling lumber inside. It is roofed with Malthoid Roofing paper. It contains two rooms separated by six folding doors for a partition. There are two teachers and over seventy children in attendance with more to follow.

There is a tower clock on the ground, to be put in the gable of the church as soon as the people can spare the time from their traps to do it. The clock cost $342.00 laid down here, and was paid from the tenth money of the Monthly Meeting. The Monthly Meeting by the direction of California Yearly Meeting is now called Noorvik Monthly Meeting. Over half of the church are tithers, and all of them contribute to the support of the religious work.

Here are some of the items as reported by the treasurer to the Monthly Meeting as received for the church: Squirrel skins, fox skins, fur clothing, dried salmon, muk-a-luks (fur boots), cash, ptarmigans, seal skins, seal oil, and whatever comes to their hands in the way of life. Even the reindeer increase is tithed. They do enjoy giving as one man when making up his part to the church, laughed in great glee, that he had the privilege to give it.

Our new home has so many and greater advantages than we had at Deering. The drinking water is just down the hill instead of over a mile away. The trails are all good long before the sea freezes up. The river closed this year on October 8, a little later than usual, and is already covered with 4 feet of fine ice, such as would break the ice trust if the people could get it. So far we have had only 23 degrees below zero, but it usually goes down to 60 below sometime in the winter, but only for a few days at a time. The intense quietness of the north at those times is appalling, and seems to portend death. It is the salvation of the country, as if the wind should blow it would be difficult for any living thing to survive. The blizzards do not affect us in our new home. They rage around us everywhere but do not get nearer than a mile and a half.

The trapping season (the natives' hope) promises little this year and a struggle for food is imminent in the late winter. The people depend on their catch for their food at the trader's. They can live wholly on a meat diet when forced to do so, but it weakens them greatly for the heavier manual labor needed in their new life. They are rapidly throwing off the ways of darkness that enveloped them for the many thousand years past, and are cultivating a new Eskimo, whose manhood is in better harmony with the teachings of Jesus.

They have truly been converted and have much to do to renovate the life and clean out the taint of the old man: however, many have made such progress as would eclipse some of the better informed and boastful white brethren. We are now beginning to feel that we have about accomplished the work for which we were led here to do, and some time in a year, or two can return to the work of the church at home as the way may open.

Sincerely,

CHAS. & MAY REPLOGLE,
Noorvik, Alaska.

A COMMUNITY EFFORT.

Wilmington, Ohio, 1-31, 1916.

Editor The American Friend:

The report of the Social Service Commission contained in the Minutes of the last Five Years Meeting, in discussing the economic problems of rural communities, makes this statement, page 143: "The primary remedy in all such cases is the introduction of scientific farming." It did not take many days to make a partially correct diagnosis of our case here at Beech Grove, Wilmington Yearly Meeting, Clinton County, Ohio. That was three years ago. We would like to tell the American Friend readers our success.

A farmer's club was soon organized under the auspices of the Grange. At once we came in direct touch with all the agricultural agencies of the State and United States as well. For want of a better place the meetings are held in the old church building. From the Agricultural College came men to talk on soils, feeds, fertilizers, live stock, tiling, limeing, spraying, beautifying home school and church grounds, etc. Some of the lectures were finely illustrated. The expense is borne by the state and federal governments. The only cost to us was the entertainment of the speakers while here.

Results? A fifty per cent increase in Bible School and meeting; new carpet, blinds, gasoline lights and desk for Church. $120.00 more pledged for minister than was ever paid before. Recently fifty excellent volumes were received from the State Traveling Library. We may keep them for eight months, the only expense being the express bill of seventy seven cents.

A movement was started in our meeting a few weeks ago to secure an agricultural agent for the county. It may prove to be more far reaching in its effects than at first supposed. Some of God's fields will probably get better treatment in the future than in the past or present.

Salvation may come to some of us "heathen" farmers and soil robbers. Truly does John R. Cary in your issue of 11-12, 1914, repeat "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

CHINESE NEW YEAR.

At the Brooklyn Friends' Chinese School on Sunday, February 13, a celebration of the Chinese New Year was held with a special program, a much enjoyed part of which was a turkey dinner served by the Chinamen to their teachers, friends and several representatives of Friends Church. The dinner consisted of all the good things that go with roast turkey and also some choice Chinese dishes. After this treat was enjoyed several of the guests made speeches, including the teachers.

Lucy E. Beck, the faithful Superintendent, who has given her life to the work for seventeen years, occupied the chair as toastmaster, and came in for a full share of commendation and hearty endorsement of her noble work by the speakers. The leading address was made by Wm. C. Taber, followed by Chas. Frost, Arlando Marine, and others.

Y. W. C. A. AT GUILFORD COLLEGE.

Every Christian organization has its work to do, whether that work is done as it should be done or not. One of the very important things about almost all Christian societies is their connection with or relation to either home or foreign missions. Still this prominent phase of Christian work is in many cases sadly neglected. The ideal is probably seldom, if ever, reached. Yet we have the command of our Savior: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel unto every nation."

Some one has asked what the Young Women's Christian Association at Guilford College is doing for missions. Since our association is necessarily small so far as membership goes, we can send only small amounts of money to the foreign missionaries. Each year we send $10.00 to help support a Sunday School in Japan and $10.00 to another missionary in India. We feel that this is only a little, but we are glad to be able to do even this much to aid in the evangelization of the world.

In order that we may learn of the people and conditions in various countries, and feeling that we may be the means of some one deciding to become a foreign missionary, we have adopted the study of missions into our association. This year we have five of these mission study classes, led by young women of the association; and every young woman in the dormitories has enrolled as a member of a mission study class.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

First day, January 30, being the thirty-eighth anniversary of the marriage of the pastor, Jesse Hawkins and his wife, Nannie Wood Hawkins, upon the pronouncement of the benediction at the morning meeting for worship the congregation quietly adjourned to the pastor's home, a half mile distant, and upon their arrival surprised them with a house filled to overflowing with a jolly, good-natured crowd, and a table laden with groaning with good things.

Thirty-eight years ago when Jesse Hawkins brought his bride to this community, a larger crowd made her welcome and congratulated him. Of these only three were present on this occasion. This gathering however was no less enjoyable for it marks another milestone in a double life of fruitful loving service to church and community interest. Fifty-eight were present.

Read The American Friend.

W. F. M. S. AT VERMILION GROVE.

The W. F. M. S. of Vermilion Grove is enjoying a healthy, steady growth, as is evidenced by the increased interest and membership. The study book for the year is fascinating in interest and more copies are in the hands of our women than any book previously used. The Missionary Advocate also is growing in favor and our members are beginning to feel that to keep properly posted on the work in foreign fields they must have it.

On Sabbath evening, February 13, it being our regular Quarterly Meeting occasion, the Monthly Meeting Missionary Committee and the W. F. M. S. presided over by our Quarterly Meeting Superintendent, Sibyl J. Hawthorn, gave a most excellent program, carefully prepared for the occasion. In addition to special music, readings and talks by local talent, there was a stirring, inspirational address by the Yearly Meeting President of W. F. M. S., Mary C. Hadley, of New London, Indiana. It was the feeling of many that this was one of the very best sessions of the Quarterly Meeting.

Mrs. Hadley met with our women for an hour Saturday evening and in an informal way talked over the work of the coming year. On Sabbath afternoon at three o'clock she met with the Georgetown auxiliary in a similar way. Her helpful suggestions and encouraging words were a benediction to the workers in Vermilion Quarterly Meeting.

PROHIBITION IN CONGRESS.

The time is at hand for the country to voice its sentiment on various prohibition measures now pending in Congress. Friends generally ought to write at once to their Senators and Congressmen asking them to support without the referendum amendment the bills providing for prohibition in the District of Columbia.

They should write also in behalf of the national prohibition resolution pending in both Houses, action upon which will probably be taken by the Judiciary Committees within the very near future. Friends, as a whole, ought to voice a unanimous sentiment in behalf of these various measures. Individual letters, resolutions by meetings, Bible Schools and Young People's Societies ought to be sent in without delay.

To live a martyr's life for the sake of a good cause is a much greater strain on the energies of the soul than to die a martyr's death.—Ex.

MEN'S CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

Many subscribers to the Men's Conference proceedings have not yet sent in their remittance. We trust that it will not be necessary to send bills for these as that means an additional expense for postage. We trust that all who have received these books will send remittance at once so that settlement can be made with the printers.

The price to registered delegates is fifty cents per copy, paper cover; cloth, seventy-five cents. To all who were not registered the price is twenty-five cents more. These books have been highly commended and contain addresses which ought to be in every Friend's library in America. Send orders with remittance to S. E. Nicholson, Richmond, Indiana.

LONDON YEARLY MEETING.

London Yearly Meeting, whose regular session is held in the spring, reconvened in an adjourned session January 28-30. The meeting was a most remarkable occasion, some of the sessions being attended by a company that crowded the meeting house. Questions incident to the war were considered most earnestly and prayerfully, at the conclusion of which the following Minute was adopted, as showing the judgment of this body of Friends:

Minute.

This Yearly Meeting has been specially called together to consider the situation caused by the Military Service Act, which has just become law; and we take this, the earliest opportunity, of re-affirming our entire opposition to compulsory military service and our desire for the repeal of the Act.

War, in our view, involves a surrender of the Christian ideal and a denial of human brotherhood; it is an evil for the destruction of which the world is longing; but freedom from the scourge of war will only be brought about through the faithfulness of individuals to their inmost convictions, under the guidance of the Spirit of Christ.

Our position is based upon our interpretation of the teaching of Jesus Christ. We regard the central conception of the Act as imperiling the liberty of the individual conscience—which is the main hope of human progress—and as entrenching more deeply that militarism from which we all desire the world to be freed.

It follows that our opposition is not removed by the provisions with regard to conscience, welcome as these are. We have in mind not only conscientious objectors, but also a large number hitherto held back from military service from no unworthy motive, but by a restraining influence to which they would find it impossible to give expression. The effect of compulsion is ruthlessly and indiscriminately to sweep all these into the army.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure
No Alum—No Phosphate

We consider that young men may do important service by going before the Tribunals, claiming exemption and making clear their reasons for doing so. At the same time we cannot admit that a human tribunal is an adequate judge of any man's conscience. The final appeal can only be to the source from which the conscientious convictions themselves spring.

Our lives should prove that compulsion is both unnecessary and impolitic. They should manifest a sense of duty not less strong than that which has driven many whom we respect and some even of our own members into the fighting forces. We can identify ourselves to the full with the griefs of our nation in which few hearts are not torn by suffering or harrowed by suspense. We pray that in steadfast conformity to the path of duty we may be set free to serve—to give to the community the fullest service of which we are capable—each one in the way of God's appointing.

JOHN H. BARLOW, Clerk.
Devonshire House, 136 Bishopsgate,
London, E. C.

DID YOU ATTEND EARLHAM?

The Old Scholars Association of Earlham College at Richmond, Indiana, is making an earnest effort to secure the names and addresses of all persons now living who ever attended that institution, both during Boarding School days and since it became a college. The committee will take it as a great favor if all who know of persons who were ever enrolled in the institution more especially in the early days, will send the list either to Prof. Allen D. Hole, 615 National Ave., West, or Henry C. Wright, 603 S. W. A Street, Richmond, Indiana.

FRIENDS' IN THE TROPICS.

The annual meeting of the Friends in Guatemala was held at Chiquimula, January 22-30 inclusive. There were represented seventeen places in the Friends' territory and thirteen from the territory of other missions. This included representatives from three republics and six different missions. The attendance was large, representing a large territory also. From the west they came two hundred miles, from the northwest one hundred fifty, from the east one hundred and from the south one hundred twenty-five.

This annual convocation grows each year in interest and numbers. A larger palm tabernacle and dining room were built this year. Sweetest harmony prevailed, many hungry hearts were fed, a church was edified and illumined and fifteen new volunteers presented themselves in one service. Our book store was well patronized. Carts and mules were taxed to transport many visitors from the railroad twenty-five miles distant. A United States flag hung beside a Guatemala flag in the rear of the pavilion. Beautiful Scripture texts hung from the eaves. Guitars, violins, a tambourine and flute helped the organ to make His praise glorious. The preaching, by both men and women was in the power of the Spirit. The blessing of the Lord was among us and the people rejoiced.

SPECIAL MEETINGS IN CUBA.

Alfredo Santana, one of the most eloquent native preachers in Eastern Cuba, has just held two series of special meetings—one week at Gibara and another week at Velasco.

As a result of the meetings eight have joined the candidates' class in Gibara and fourteen in Velasco. This does not in any adequate way represent the work accomplished.

The average daily attendance at all the meetings in Gibara was a little over 200. In all, 84 made profession of faith in the two series of meetings.

Alfredo Santana, the minister, is only 22 years of age and was born and raised in Gibara.

In the Gibara S. S. he received the first impulses toward Christian life.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

IVA VIOLA PICKERING.

We are glad to introduce to readers of The American Friend another recent recruit for Cuba, Iva V. Pickering, whose letter on her first experiences on the field appears on this page. Iva Pickering is a native of Kansas and took both her academy and her college work at Friends University in Wichita where she graduated last June. During her college days, she found time for work in a mission Sunday school, in the Y. W. C. A. and in the Christian Endeavor. During the present year, Iva Pickering is spending most of her time at language study and for this purpose she is temporarily located at Banés. Even in the midst of language study, she is making opportunities for helping in the work of this mission. We would especially draw attention to the request for prayer at the close of her letter. All of our representatives abroad would agree with her statement, "above all, we need your prayers."

ESSENTIALS IN MISSION STUDY.

In connection with Mission Study, two things stand out with great prominence as prime necessities—first, consecrated leadership, and second, a definite, practical aim, toward which the increased knowledge and quickened heart and soul may be directed.

We cannot over-estimate the power of consecrated leadership or its influence over a class or group. How can we measure the power of prayer and thought which makes the furthering of the kingdom a ruling passion? How can we limit the possibilities of work directed by souls which pray unceasingly for wisdom, tact, patience, and power to touch others for the Master till they are indeed "live coals," till discouragement cannot touch them even when the way is dark with difficulties, because they are working hand in hand with the Master workman?

We have no way of measuring the effect of one lesson given prayerfully and wisely by some leader; it may set forces working which only eternity can limit. What a number of our great leaders have been given the impetus for their life work by some life faithfully and consistently lived, some teacher, or pastor or consecrated worker walking daily close to the Master with ear quickened to hear His voice and eye keen to see the opportunities He sends!

The second is just as necessary as the first—something to do which helps to further the Kingdom—entering doors as He opens them and points the way. If work is not provided—not "play" work, necessary work, real help for some portion of the cause—enthusiasm must by nature die. Leaders who are awake to their opportunities study to discover others to assume responsibilities for which these are fitted—study to discover needs both at home and abroad which their class can help to meet. They strive to bring into personal contact the missionaries and those who are maintaining the home base, for upon us at home rests the responsibility of holding them up by prayer, and of giving of our substance that their work may be as efficient as possible.

Mission study should result in quickened activity along all lines. The Master's work is all one and has one purpose, that all the world may know Him. There is no time to be idle or indifferent to the call. The need is the call and the need is everywhere. When once we have heard the cry of the burdened world, lost without Jesus, we cannot rest till we are working to the limit of time and strength.

CAROLINE C. TRUEBLOOD.

A LETTER FROM CUBA.

Banés, Oriente, Cuba,

Jan. 4, 1916.

Dear Friends:

It is just a few days over four months since I arrived in Cuba. Then everything was new and strange, the country, the people, and the language. Even our workers here were strangers to me, then. But now, the "jabbering" is becoming more intelligible and my acquaintances among the people are increasing. The country itself seems to increase in beauty. I never tire of looking at the stately palms, the magnificent laurels, many colored crotans, etc., and at this Christmas time the poinsettias make a beautiful showing.

But, of course, the people are the most interesting. The Cuban people are a mixture of several races, so in our congregation we have people whose complexions range from the very blackest to very fair. The congregation isn't so very large as yet, but there are a few who seem to be quite faithful and I'm sure are doing much for the Kingdom not only by words but by their lives.

There seems to be an increasing desire for education in the mission schools and some have been asking for another school here which, of course, cannot be supplied now, on account of a lack of both funds and workers.

The Jamaican congregation is one of great interest to me, especially their Christian Endeavor Society. These people are of the African race and are very enthusiastic workers when they get the vision of a need. Not long ago, they started a temperance campaign in the C. E. The pledge was presented and a few of the more aggressive and stronger ones signed it. These formed themselves into a prayer band to pray and work for the destruction of the liquor traffic. Every Sunday for several weeks the subject was presented and an opportunity given for others to sign the pledge. Whenever anything of special interest about the temperance work in the States or elsewhere is found, it is given to the Society in the Information Committee's report. They have set about this with such faith and earnestness that I'm sure there will be great results in the future. In fact, the fruit has already begun to ripen. For instance, at a recent wedding of a member of the C. E., no alcoholic drinks were served as has always been the custom, and, on the other hand, Mr. Holding, our pastor here, was asked to give a temperance talk. This seems remarkable in the face of the fact that only a few months ago they would not even listen to a temperance talk.

The prayers and testimonies of the earnest, consecrated Christians are a constant inspiration. One knows that they have been with Jesus and oh! how they do sing! As I hear them and the other congregation too, I wonder what it will be when people from every nation shall gather around the throne to sing the praises of our Redeemer.

We need more workers and more money but above all we need your prayers. Pray earnestly that there may be a great awakening here in Cuba and that we who work here may be guided continually by the Holy Spirit.

Iva V. Pickering.

THE IOWA PAGE

PENN COLLEGE.

The friends of John W. Stribling, of Earlham, Iowa, living in the many communities where he has ministered as pastor and evangelist, will enter heartily into sympathy with him in his trying affliction. He has been in failing health for some time. Recently a specialist has diagnosed his case as ulcerated stomach and has put him upon a treatment which it is hoped will bring relief and finally a permanent cure.

It was the writer's privilege recently to visit him. It was a benediction which will not soon be forgotten to find him contented and even happy in his affliction, sharing thoroughly in the frame of mind which prompted the Apostle Paul to say, "For me to live is Christ, to die is gain." It is seldom that one finds an afflicted person so resigned and even contented with the conditions in which he finds himself. It will be a great blessing to John W. Stribling if his many friends will write him expressing their sympathy with him in his illness.

C. E. DEPARTMENT.

The C. E. of the First Friends Church of Des Moines has been improving in spirit for the last year and they are out to win. Their motto is "For Christ and the Church." Alta Jewell, chairman of the Prayer Meeting committee, led the meeting January 30. The topic was Jamaica Missions. Different members spoke of the life and work of our missionaries in Jamaica.

This meeting was also a candle light meeting. Each one present was given a little candle, about which was wrapped a Bible reference. As these were read the candle was lighted. A large C. E. was placed on a table in front and candles were arranged on the letters, and before the meeting closed these, too, were lighted. This meeting proved helpful and gave new interest in our mission work.

During the week preceding Christian Endeavor week, the Lookout Committee planned a campaign for six or seven teams of the Society to visit the young people of the church who are not interested in C. E. Mrs. Ruth Kirk, Superintendent of Efficiency in our society, explained the chart. In the evening the pastor, R. R. Newby, preached a sermon for young people. On Feb. 9, Mrs. O. F. Comfort, an honorary member, led a meeting and spoke on "Loyalty to the Church." Miss Ione Willitts sang a solo.

On Feb. 6, the C. E. quartet and the pastor held a service at the Des Moines General Hospital. On Feb. 15, a business meeting and social was held at the home of Miss Pearl Edworthy. Several new members were received at this time. The social which followed was in the nature of a Valentine party. Games, music and refreshments were in keeping with the occasion.

Our C. E. Field Secretary recently visited in Pleasant Plain Quarter. Probably the most important work on this visit was the organization of an enthusiastic society of twenty-seven members at Rubio. Omer Johnson was elected president and Blanche Bagle, Rubio, was chosen corresponding secretary. The prospects for this society are good. The Union extends greetings to this and all other new societies. Ora W. Carrell also visited the meeting at Pleasant Plain and spoke on "Some Accomplishments of the C. E. Movement." At the close, a conference followed. There was a good attendance and a helpful meeting.

Oskaloosa C. E. has begun the study of the Peace outline suggested by the Young Friends' Board. Clarence M. Case has charge of the class and is making the lessons most interesting. A number of the church members are taking advantage of this study.

BIBLE SCHOOL.

Our Field Secretary, Ora W. Carrell, recently returned from a three week's trip through Bangor and Honey Creek Quarters. He reports a splendid trip with good Conferences and hearty support everywhere.

Notes from Bangor Quarter.

Le Grand—The Le Grand School has recently organized a Home department. Teacher training was presented in the Conference and five books ordered for the forming of a class.

Nevada—The School was visited by the Secretary and a Conference held immediately following. Faithful work is being done by our workers there. Five copies of Oliver's "Preparation for Teaching," were ordered for their teacher training class.

Bangor—Bangor has a well organized School with Cradle Roll and Home departments. The School had an average attendance last year of 95 with an efficient corps of workers.

Marshalltown—This School has reached practically all points of the Bible School standard. It has a Cradle Roll with an enrollment of 20 and a Home department of 50 members.

Liberty—The School here was visited and a Conference held following the morning service. It is a very well equipped rural school with much interest manifest.

Stanford—A beginning has been recently made for a Sunday School library which will be of splendid service to the School and community. They have recently organized a teacher training class. Abbie J. Lake, their pastor, is doing very efficient work as Quarterly Meeting Bible School Superintendent.

Notes from Honey Creek Quarter

Illinois Grove—Mrs. Leslie McCargar, the wife of the pastor, has recently been appointed Superintendent of the Cradle Roll and will take up the work of the Home department in connection with it.

Chester—An excellent Conference was held and the decision made to organize a Teacher Training class. Six copies of "Preparation for Teaching" were ordered.

Fairview—The teachers here began a course in teacher training last year but did not finish; they expect to resume the work soon.

Honey Creek—This School is well organized with Cradle Roll and Home departments. They have two organized classes.

Hubbard—The graded lessons are used here in three classes of the School. A helpful Conference was held on Sabbath afternoon.

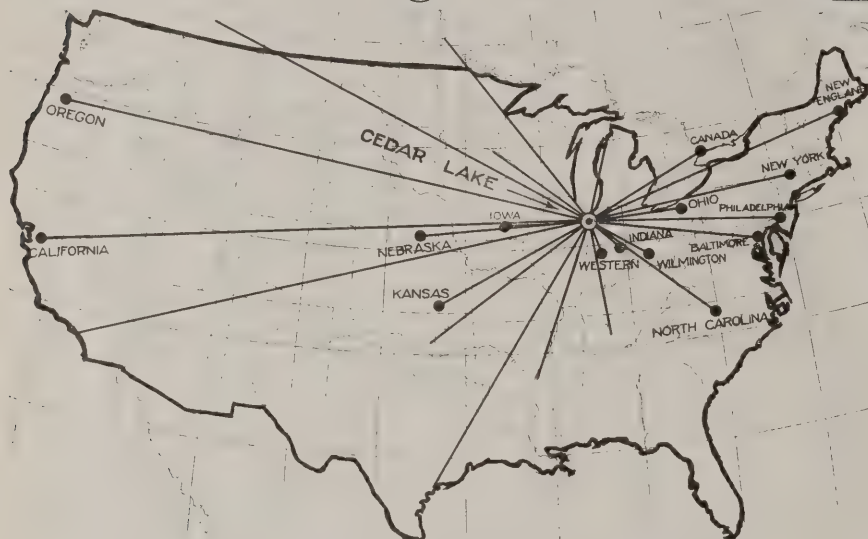

FIELD NOTES.

Oskaloosa, Iowa—Zeno H. Doane, pastor of the Friends meeting at Lynnvillle recently spoke at chapel exercises at Penn College, at which time he sharply criticised President Wilson for his recent preparedness trip. He said that there are three kinds of people advocating preparedness: "First, those engaged in the army and navy service; second, those engaged in the manufacture of munitions and third, that body of citizens who get scared by all the imaginary dangers that seem to confront one on every hand."

An errand of help to some one else is a path toward God. "The law of kindness" is spoken of in the Bible, and is a part of the divine law.—Herald and Presbyterian.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

Are You Going to Cedar Lake?

YOUNG FRIENDS' GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Winona Conference goes to Cedar Lake, Indiana, Aug. 4-13, 1916. This is a beautiful secluded lake about forty miles south of Chicago on the Monon railway. It is within easy reach of Crown Point and Gary Interurban lines and auto-bus makes the lake easily accessible.

Isolation from the detractions of city together with the fact that the grounds are to be under control of the conference committee, promises an excellent recreational spiritual gathering of young Friends.

Indications are that this is to be the largest, most comprehensive conference yet held. Watch these columns for further information on this subject, or write The Young Friends Board, at Dunreith, Ind. Appoint delegates early.

PLEA FOR THE CHILDREN.

One Sunday a bright little fellow entered a Junior society, after looking around he asked, "Where's the preacher? I thought he was here." The preacher was immediately sent for.

I have gone into scores of Friends Meetings and felt the same way, only I said, "Where's the children? I thought they were here."

Why longer discuss the cause of loss in membership, looking for it among the older ones, when the children are being neglected; the children the hope of our Future Church.

The age most suitable for learning the simple lessons of personal trust in Christ and loyalty to the Church, is that between six and fourteen when character is easily formed—the age covered by the Junior Christian Endeavor Society.

Following are some plans that have been successfully tried by pastors:

Five-minute sermons for children.

Responsive Scripture reading, congregation and children.

Repeating of Bible verses by the children.

Hold occasional church or denominational meetings where the children are taught Friends history, doctrine and church government.

Attend the Junior Society as often as you can do so.

Write personal letters of encouragement occasionally to the boys and girls.

Encourage the children to stay for the morning service; reserve a "Junior Corner" for them.

Organize a children's choir.

Robert E. Speer tells this story: "I heard a little voice in the darkness and stillness of the night saying, 'Father, have you got your face turned toward me?' And I said, 'Yes, little boy,' and the darkness was as the light of day to him."

Dear, busy pastors, do you have your faces turned toward the children? Then the darkness of perplexity regarding the future of the Church will all banish away.

"For the promise is unto you and to your children."

Seriously yours for His little ones,
Lillian E. Hayes, Dunreith, Ind.

PEACE TOPIC.

MARCH 12.

Subject—"The Present Need of International Appreciation, and Good Will." Matt. 7: 1-5.

Fairness is a noteworthy tenant of the American people. Because foreign peoples have believed fair treatment would be accorded them, America has become the "Melting Pot" of the nations. Many times, idealizing foreigners lose faith in America when, upon arrival, they find a bitter race prejudice confronting them. Very few people who have traveled abroad maintain this deep feeling of antagonism towards their cousins across the sea.

The weakness of our country stands out against the strong points of other nations. Each nationality has its strong points as well as its failures. Every effort should be made to magnify the strong points in each. These should be advertised and adopted. As foreign peoples come in contact with the best American institutions and ideals we need have little fear that they will hesitate in taking them up. Japan has become famous through her three great characteristics, "adopt, adept, adapt." The eternal laws of progress assure us that the best will prevail whether first discovered in Japan, Africa, Germany or America.

One who always talks against his neighbor is usually a poor neighbor himself. Do the names "Sheeny," "Dago" and "Nigger" indicate a true spirit of fairness on the part of Americans? Are those who permit inherited prejudice to sway their good judgment true Americans? Do they manifest the spirit of Christ's teachings in Matt 7: 1-5?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

MARCH 12.

Topic—"The Cause of Failures in Life." Prov. 10: 1-32.

A most fascinating pastime is to observe the actions of other people. Such an occupation may become the source of great knowledge if one maintains a proper attitude. Both philosophy and psychology are the outgrowth of such observations.

The wisdom literature of the Old Testament is therefore not only exceedingly interesting but most worthy of our study. In the topic today the philosopher points out some of those characteristics which make for failure and success. According to his usual custom he places wisdom as the most essential of the virtues. This is followed by an observation, the happiness of the diligent and the sorrow of the indolent. Justice also receives place in the authors' catalogue of Virtues. One who is unjust will find ill treatment and injustice heaped upon him. Haughtiness or egotism is sure to undermine all other good qualities one may possess.

During the latter part of the chapter the author assures us that allegiance to Jehovah will most certainly make for success. He establishes righteousness, gives joy, expands life and pours out blessings.

CHURCH AT WORK

Knightstown, Ind.—A union tabernacle meeting was held here, beginning January 2 and closing February 13. Sin was denounced in the plainest terms by the evangelist, Daniel S. Toy, of Winona, Indiana, and Jesus Christ as the Savior was exalted. Many accepted Him and signified their intentions of living a Christian life. After the close of the meetings "round up" services were held in each of the churches. Truman C. Kenworthy, Evangelistic Superintendent of the Yearly Meeting, assisted Willis H. Bond, pastor of the Friends Church here, preaching strong and convincing sermons on the doctrines of the Friends Church. Twenty-two have been received into membership. On the morning of February 20, Robert L. Kelly, President of Earlham College, presented the interests of the Laymen's Missionary Movement to an interested audience. Levi T. Pennington, of Pacific College, and a former pastor at this place, delivered a sermon in the evening on "Quakerism," which was strengthening to the church and much appreciated by all. Knightstown meeting seems to be on the upgrade, is growing in interest and enthusiasm and is increasing in attendance in every department of work.

New Holland, Indiana—A revival meeting was held at New Holland meeting near Wabash, January 30 to February 13. There were some seekers at the altar and one man and his wife were saved at their home after the closing service on Sabbath evening. Clifford Pearson of Monroe, Indiana, was the evangelist in charge and rendered valuable service to the church.

Paonia, Colorado—Young Friends Day was observed here by the rendition of a peace program. About thirty young people participated. The service was vitally interesting and the result wholesome to the entire congregation. The work at this place is taking on new life. Almost every Monthly Meeting witnesses the reception of new members and quite a number of new scholars have recently been added to our Sabbath School. We attribute these blessings to faith in God coupled with intelligent activity.

South Glens Falls, N. Y.—Glens Falls Quarterly Meeting was held at South Glens Falls on February 19. George C. Williams of Newark, N. J.,

Bed Spreads, Pillow Cases, Sheets

For Spring and Summer—Attractively Priced

Dependable qualities, of a kind that have added to the fame of our Bedfurnishing Store:

BED SPREADS—best quality, American made; white Crinkled Dimity, 63x99 inches, $1.50; 72x99 inches, $1.75; 80x99 inches, $2.00; 90x100 inches, $2.25. Of white corded dimity, 63x99 inches, $1.75; 72x99 inches, $2.00; 80x99 inches, $2.25; 90x100 inches, $2.50. Crochet weave, in Marseilles design, size 78x88 inches, $1.75. Marseilles Spreads, white satin finish, size 80x90 inches, $2.50. Fine quality Marseilles Spreads, satin finish, with scalloped edges and corners, cut for 4 feet 6-inch metal beds, size 88x98 inches, $5.00.

SHEETS—Strawbridge & Clothier special brand, bleached muslin of standard quality; size 63x90 inches, 80c; 72x90 inches, 85c; 81x90 inches, 90c. Extra lengths, 63x99 inches, 90c; 72x99 inches, 95c; 81x99 inches, $1.00; 90x99 inches, $1.10.

PILLOW CASES—S. & C. Special brand, bleached muslin; size 42x36 inches, 22c; 45x38½ inches, 25c; 50x38½ inches, 30c.

A Wide Assortment of Blankets and Comfortables.

Hundreds from which to choose, all marked at prices that are an exceptional economical inducement, because the bulk of our great stock was bought before the advance in manufacturers' prices.

You can order these Bedfurnishings with the understanding that if your purchase is not satisfactory in every way you can return it AT ONCE and your money will be refunded.

Please mention this publication.

Strawbridge & Clothier
Philadelphia, Penna.

a member of New York Yearly Meetings' Evangelistic Committee, was present and rendered very acceptable service. On Wednesday and Thursday evenings preceding, he held services at the South Glens Falls meeting, and on Friday evening attended the Men's Assembly of the Glens Falls meeting. On Saturday morning he brought the message during the hour of worship and on Sabbath morning and evening he preached at the South Glens Falls meeting house and in the afternoon at Fort Edward Center. At each service his messages were helpful and profitable to all who heard them. On Saturday afternoon Rev. Paul Abbott, a returned missionary from the northern part of China, working under the Presbyterian Board, gave a very interesting and instructive address on his work and the need there.

Union Springs, N. Y.—Scipio Monthly Meeting was held in the assembly room of Oakwood Seminary at Union Springs on February 16. The good sleighing brought two loads of Friends from Poplar Ridge. William J. Reagan, pastor at Poplar Ridge, brought a helpful message from the passage in Luke 14:28, on "Counting the Cost," which was appreciated by all. During the business session the intention of marriage of Fred E. Fossett and Leona Woody, according to the custom of Friends, was presented to the meeting. Fred E. Fossett is a member of New England Yearly Meeting and a former teacher of Oakwood Seminary, who now has a position in Hampton Institute, Va. Leona Woody is a member of Union Springs meeting and is the very efficient teacher of music in Oakwood Seminary. The proper action for furthering the marriage was taken by the meeting.

Guilford College, N. C.—Guilford College profited quite largely from the Laymen's Missionary Conference recently held in Greensboro. Three of the principal speakers on the program were brought out to the College where they addressed the faculty and students. In this way they were enabled to hear Dr. John N. Mills of Washington, D. C.; Dr. W. W. Pinson, of Nashville, Tennessee, and William T. Ellis, all of whom greatly interested and instructed their audiences. On February 16 U. S. Senator Theodore E. Burton, of Ohio, delivered an address before the students, faculty and many friends of the college.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON.

MARCH 12.

Subject—Heroes and Martyrs of Faith.

Lesson—Hebrews 11:1—12:2.

Golden Text—Hebrews 12:1, 2.

What do we mean by the term, Faith? Here is an attempt to give an exact definition. Faith is assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen. But our translators are not satisfied with the words they have used so they put into the margin another rendering, Faith is the giving substance to things hoped for, a test of things not seen. A student of Church history soon learns that though we have this "exact" definition, no translation has yet been made, no interpretation written giving universal satisfaction to the Christian world. In fact the followers of Christ are today divided into opposing camps because they differently interpret this very short word, yet a word so big in meaning.

Faith to some people is a mere intellectual acceptance of some creed, and they glibly recite, I believe in God the Father, Jesus Christ the Son, etc. Judging from the lives of some, they live Faith has nothing to do with moral conduct. To others a little broader meaning is given this idea and their faith is expressed by accepting the creed of some church and attempting to live according to its prescribed plan. Others, accepting the writings of James as a clearer expression of the meaning of Faith, not only accept Jesus Christ as their personal savior but undertake to demonstrate their faith by their works. Others feel that Paul has given the clearest statement and say that Faith is lacking until one has in a mysterious way become identified with Jesus Christ.

In some sense unexplainable, one is crucified with Christ. It is no longer I but Christ within. I can do all things through Christ. Buried with him in baptism. Risen with him to newness of life. Dead to self, to the old man. I have put on Christ Jesus. Many phrases are quoted to show this conception. Then what is Faith? Perhaps we have as yet too little comprehension of it to give a satisfactory definition. There are experiences which words cannot define. Paul and James and the author of Hebrews have each tried to express their feelings, to explain their experiences. They have failed. But they have said enough to warrant us in giving ourselves wholeheartedly to the kind of life they have each endeavored to describe. The invitation is most cordial to come, taste and see for ourselves.

As our author looks back into the past he sees many evidences of the value of faith. The great men of the Hebrews have seen visions and have not hesitated to sacrifice all in the noble effort to make those visions real. Even God himself had faith in man and built the world, or ages, that man might come to his destined end. Today we stand on a hill top in Christian progress, and can look back and see the achievements of so many Christians that time would fail us in the attempt to tell of all of them. Therefore, let us, seeing that we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses—run with patience the race that is set before us.

ANOTHER APPEAL.

The Board on Legislation and Temperance of the Five Years Meeting finds it necessary to supplement its appeal made in these columns a few weeks ago by asking for additional contributions. Several meetings have reported with contributions, but only a comparatively few. If the Board carries out its plans in behalf of the legislation pending at Washington to protect the Quaker name from commercial use, and if it aids properly in the campaign now on for national prohibition, additional funds must be in hand.

Will not a number of meetings which have taken no action as yet, take an offering on next Sabbath and forward the same to the Treasurer of the Five Years' Meeting, Francis A. Wright, Jr., 520 American Bank Building, Kansas City, Mo., with the request that the same be credited to the Board on Legislation and Temperance?

Know what your sin is and confess it; but do not imagine that you have approved yourself a penitent by confessing sin in the abstract.—T. L. Cuyler.

PROMOTE PEACE by distributing America's cherished land mark post cards: Macy-Colby House, Golgotha Rock, Friends Meeting House, N. C., Stanton's Statue (Unveiling) four for five cents. Postcards containing essentials of Dick Military Law, five for 5 cents. C. E. Lukens, Marion, Ohio.

SHARES

In

The Indiana Rural Credit Association

Are offered for investment. They are non-taxable and mortgage loans are made only to shareholders upon farm property.

Loans may run 10, 20 and 30 years. Small annual payments repay principal and interest.

Ask for Booklet.

MORD CARTER, President,
1214 Merchants Bank Building
Indianapolis, Ind.

WINS ORATORICAL CONTEST.

Earlham College won first honors in the Indiana college oratorical contest at Indianapolis on the evening of February 25. Donald B. Snyder of the freshman class, was the successful contestant, leading the next college by six points. His subject was "Military Education in Our Public Schools."

Earlham has won first honors in this contest seven times since 1902.

NEWS NOTES.

The membership of the general meeting of Friends in Australia is 664, being an increase of 19.

Frank Cornell, pastor of the meeting at Winchester, Indiana, preached a sermon on February 20, appropriate to Washington's birthday, from Luke 7:5.

Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting was held on February 8 and was well attended. Three visiting ministers were present and the underlying unity of the messages was manifest.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation receipt from R. Esther Smith, Chiquimula, Guatemala, of "Conference Echoes," the same being a special report of the Seventh Annual Missionary Conference of the Missionary Societies working in Central America.

Professor Elbert Russell of Johns Hopkins University is offering an additional course of lectures in that institution for the second half year, which began the middle of February. Arrangements have been made for Professor Russell to remain at that institution for another year.

In the article entitled "Interpretations" in Vol. VII of Hastings Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics (p. 395) George A. Barton, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., is named as one of the nine Americans selected as worthy of mention for their work as interpreters of the bible.

William P. Pinkham, pastor of Friends meeting at Huntington Park, California, has published a pamphlet of twenty pages on "Some Reasons Why the Friends Church Disuses Outward Ordinances." Single copies of this tract can be secured by mail for 5 cents, three copies 10 cents, fifty copies $1.00, hundred copies $1.50.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation the seventeenth annual report of the Lebanon Hospital at Asfuriyeh near Beyrout in Syria. This is an institution founded and established by Theopholis Waldmeier. The institution is asking for funds with which to carry on its work. Contributions may be sent to Asa S. Wing,

The American Friend Book Department

The American Friend is arranging to handle books, booklets and pamphlets which will be of general interest to Friends in America. Arrangements have already been made with the John C. Winston Company of Philadelphia, Friends Book and Tract Committee of New York City and the United Society of Christian Endeavor to receive orders for their publications. We hope soon to make similar arrangements with other houses, so that in the near future orders can be sent to us for practically any book that will be of general interest to our membership.

Some Suggestions in Books

The following books together with many others can be secured by sending your orders to this office. In this way you will be helping The American Friend.

Barclay's Apology, by Robert Barclay.....	$0.70
Beginnings of Quakerism, by William C. Braithwaite.....	3.20
Bright, John, The Life of, by G. M. Trevylan.....	4.70
Christ and War, by William E. Wilson, cloth, $0.70; limp.....	.50
Christian's Secret of a Happy Life, by Hannah Whitall Smith.....	.35
Decisive Hour of Christian Missions, by John R. Mott.....	.60
Dymond on War, Introductory Words by John Bright.....	.25
Dynamic Faith, by Rufus M. Jones.....	1.00
Fox, George, by Henry Stanley Newman.....	1.50
Fox, George, by R. M. Jones, two-volume edition.....	4.25
Student edition (same author), one volume.....	1.65
Friends and the War, Proceedings of Llandudno Conference, 1914....	.55
Fry, Elizabeth, Life of, by Georgina King Lewis.....	1.20
Gurney, J. J., Life of, by J. Bevan Braithwaite.....	1.50
Grellet, Stephen, Life of, by William Guest.....	.75
History of Friends in America (Revised edition), by Allen C. Thomas	1.15
No Cross, No Crown, by William Penn.....	.70
Quaker Apostle, (In Memoriam of John T. Dorland), by W. K. Baker	.85
Quaker Diary in the Orient, by William C. Allen.....	1.00
Quaker Experiment in Government, by Isaac Sharpless (illustrations)	2.25
(Without illustrations).....	1.50
Quakers, The Rise of, by T. Edmund Harvey.....	.75

The above are only a few of a long list of publications which can be ordered at any time. Send your order with remittance to

THE AMERICAN FRIEND,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

409 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

From the Evening Bulletin of Philadelphia we learn that a voluntary student movement against preparedness designed to embrace all colleges in Pennsylvania has been started at a mass meeting recently held at Haverford College.

In the absence of Charles E. Tebbetts, Ira C. Johnson of Lynn, Indiana, preached at the West Richmond Friends meeting on the morning of February 13, Thomas E. Jones on the morning of February 20, and Professor D. W. Dennis the morning of February 27. The Young People's Fellowship Association had charge of the vesper service on the evening of February 20.

When one comes and knocks at the door of my heart and asks: "Who lives here?" I reply, "Martin Luther used to, but he has moved out and Jesus Christ now lives here."—Martin Luther.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES

A tenfold lesson equipment, secured for anybody anywhere for $1.00.

PHARIBA W. STEPHENS,
111 S. 16 Street, Richmond, Ind.

Patronize the American Friend's advertisers.

contains 288 pages, four color and four duotone plates, besides numberless photographic true-to-life reproductions. It lists all the standard varieties of Flowers and Vegetables, as well as the best of the season's novelties.

Thenewest Roses, thebest Dahlias, and Dreer's Improved Hardy Perennials are given special prominence.

Sent free to any one mentioning this weekly.

Dreer's Orchid-Flowered Sweet Peas—with immense wavy flowers in sprays of 3 and 4 blossoms each. Our mixture contains a full range of colors. 10 cents per packet. 25 cents per ounce, 60 cents per 1/4 pound. Garden Book free with each order.

HENRY A. DREER 714-716 CHESTNUT ST. PHILADELPHIA

Married.

Miars-McPherson—At the close of the meeting for worship February 20, 1916, at New Burlington, Ohio, Clifford D. Miars to Hetty Walton McPherson, Jesse Hawkins officiating.

Switzer-Hollingsworth—At the home of the bride's brother at Marshalltown, Iowa, December 29, 1915, L. Glenn Switzer to Ida Hollingsworth, both of Bangor, Iowa, W. S. Kitch, pastor, officiating.

Born.

Coffin—At Berlinville, Ohio, January 31, 1916, to Merrill M. and Anna Haldy Coffin, a son, Louis Haldy.

Dexter—At Oskaloosa, Iowa, January 9, 1916, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Dexter, a son, Walter Franklin.

Hadley—At Manchester, Oklahoma, November 26, 1915, to J. Perry and Gertrude Motter Hadley, a son, Herbert Motter.

Hollingsworth—At Bangor, Iowa, December 27, 1915, to Warren M. and Lilly Hollingsworth, a son, Warren Carey.

Stuart—At Seattle, Wash., October 30, 1915, to Harry H. and Hester T. Stuart, a daughter, Margaret Annis.

DIED

Anderson—Thirza J. Anderson, wife of Dr. J. E. Anderson, was born in Montgomery county, Illinois, December 1, 1848, and died at Colorado Springs, Colorado, January 15, 1916. She was a birthright Friend and until she was grown was a member of Sugar River Monthly Meeting. For the last twenty-five years she was a member of First Friends Church, Indianapolis, Indiana, and before going west an active member for many years in this meeting. She was ever ready to extend a helping hand. Believing, trusting and rejoicing in Him she passed away, conscious to the last, giving assurance of her readiness and of going to her "last resting place without a fear."

Davis—Sarah Davis, daughter of John and Mary Davis, was born in Hendricks county, Indiana, April 20, 1835, and died December 26, 1915, aged 80 years, 8 months and 6 days. She married John P. Davis in 1853. She was a birthright Friend and early in life became an active member and was a consistent Christian all her life. She was a member of Rose Hill Monthly Meeting, Kansas. Five children survive her.

Patton—Elizabeth H. Patton was born near Bloomington, Indiana, August 31, 1839, and died at Arnolds Park, Iowa, aged 76 years, 3 months and 28 days. She married John Patton at Secore Iowa, in 1856. She afterward moved to Ridge Farm, Illinois. In 1866 she helped established Stanton meeting near St. Joseph, Illinois. In 1880 she moved to Vermilion Grove, where her children could have the educational advantage of Friends Academy. She was recorded a minister in 1881 and had a special gift in prayer and song and in evangelistic work. Through her ministry many souls were won to Christ. She was a charter member of the Friends church at Denver, Colorado, and later a worker in the Charles Crittenden mission at San Jose, California. After living in Newberg, Oregon, for seven years she moved to Spencer, Iowa, in 1899 where she has since resided, spending much of her time with her daughter in Arnolds Park. Her good works will live on. Funeral services were conducted by Harry R. Keates. She is survived by one son and three daughters.

Peckham—Emily Drake Peckham, a Friends minister, died at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., December 31, 1915, aged 83 years. She was a woman of rare spiritual life. At the close of the Civil war she spent considerable time in Christian work among the mountaineers of North Carolina, and was ever a consecrated and faithful Christian. Her early days were spent in comfort and peace in the old ladies home of Poughkeepsie.

Skiff—Mariam Skiff, daughter of D. L. and Bessie N. Skiff, was born at Boulder, Colorado, December 29, 1906, and died at the same place December 31, 1915, aged 9 years and 2 days. She was a beloved member of Boulder Monthly Meeting of Friends and one of Jesus' most charming, talented and attractive jewels.

Slocum—Elizabeth H. Slocum, a member and elder of Dartmouth Monthly Meeting of Friends, Massachusetts, died at Tiverton, R. I., December 20, 1915, aged 84 years. A noble Christian wife, mother and church member has been called home. She was the widow of Captain Henry A. Slocum, for many years the resident minister of Allens Neck meeting.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED
In a private home in Washington. Convenient to car line and Union Station.
Laura N. Wilson,
46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.

Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue. Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY

Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books
1915-1916Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ching China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 10.

THIRD MONTH 9, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 10.

Thou Knowest Best

"Father, hold Thou my hands;
The way is steep;
I cannot see the path my feet must keep;
I cannot tell, so dark the tangled way,
Where next to step. Oh stay;
Come close; take both my hands in Thine;
Make Thy way mine.
Lead me. I may not stay.
I must move on, but oh, the way;
I must be brave and go;
Step forward in the dark, nor know
If I shall reach the goal at all—
If I shall fall.
Take Thou my hand;
Take it, Thou knowest best
How I should go, and all the rest;
I cannot, cannot see;
Lead me, I hold my hands to Thee;
I own no will but Thine;
Make Thy way mine."

—George Klinge.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.
For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

The Comforter

Brother, you may drop your burden
At the closing of the day—
In the Father's eyes your labors
Are but prattling babies' play;
And He longs to show His mercy
And to soothe your cares away.
Hear that soft voice
Croon above you,
"Peace, my careworn
Child, I love you."
Then the arms called Everlasting
Slip beneath you—tender, strong,
And your tired heart ceases sighing,
While your lips send forth a song.—Anon.

Circulating The American Friend

Every few weeks the name and address of some person who is not able to subscribe for THE AMERICAN FRIEND is given us in the hope that in some way a copy of the paper can be furnished. These persons are for the most part interested in church work, but are not able to spend the subscription price of the paper.

It has occurred to us that perhaps quite a number of Friends would be willing to give THE AMERICAN FRIEND management the authority to draw upon them to the extent of $5.00 or $10.00, more or less, in order to send the paper to such persons as we have indicated, payment to be made only when such names are added to the list. The names would be furnished the person paying for same in each instance.

If any of our Friends are interested in this proposition we shall be glad to hear from them. These subscriptions will be furnished at the regular club rate of $1.35 per year.

A Message From Washington

In these days of war and rumors of war, the spirit of a lover of peace is sorely tried by the atmosphere of militarism that prevails at the National Capital. When one stops to think of what terrible happenings are taking place in Europe and remember that all of the nations engaged in that war have been involved in the mad race for military preparedness for decades it makes one very uneasy to know that in this country tremendous pressure is being brought to bear upon Congress in an effort to launch the American nation upon a vast military program. There surely can be no Friend anywhere in the country who does not know at least something of the tremendous activity of the advocates of greater naval and army strength. But for the average citizen it is an easy matter to be more or less indifferent to questions coming before Congress and that powerful body is left to settle matters as it may see fit.

Day after day at the present time one of the most absorbing topics of discussion at Washington is the matter of army and navy expansion and the prevailing thought appears to be that Congress will provide for an increase in the country's military establishment. Some idea of what the increase in the army will be may be gotten from preliminary reports of recommendations to be made by the House Committee on Military Affairs. These recommendations include enlarging the regular army to about 150,000, federalizing the National Guard and establishing a military training school in every state. Of course no one can tell what the bill as finally drafted may include. But it is sure that as matters now stand Congress will be asked to authorize a considerable increase in the military expenditures of the country. This will not only increase our waste upon the destructive things of militarism but it will serve to still further arouse the suspicions of other nations against us and it will weaken our position as a people rather than strengthen it.

Fortunately a campaign of no mean proportions is being waged against the "preparedness" people. Many men in Congress, some of them quite openly, are opposed to our having any larger army and navy than at present. Thousands of people over the country have expressed themselves as opposed to the program and one is in decidedly "big company" when raising his voice against the plans of the militarists. Friends' Washington Peace Headquarters is endeavoring to strengthen the movement against the new military policy proposed for the country. As personal influence is the thing that counts most, it is earnestly hoped that no Friend will fail to write at the earliest possible moment to his Congressman and Senators, urging them to oppose any increase. There are some Friends in a majority of the Congressional Districts of the country. Surely their peace principles are worth a few minutes of time consumed in letting their representative at Washington know what they would like done on this most vital question. There should be no delay. The letters should be written now. Any Friend desiring information or advice regarding the "preparedness" situation at Washington may get it by writing to the Friends' Peace Headquarters, 1811 I Street, Washington, D. C.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 10.

THIRD MONTH 9, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 10.

Building a Christian Civilization

It is the business of the church of Christ to construct in this world a Christian civilization. Of course the immediate and primary purpose of the gospel is to regenerate the human family, expressed in terms of individual units, but unless out of this is developed a reconstructed and Christianized social order, a limitation is put upon the operations of divine truth that was never intended. The purpose of Jesus was to build up a spiritual kingdom that would ultimately dominate the whole of human life. It may not be that all individuals will ever acknowledge Jesus Christ as Lord and Master, but religion must become the soul and the controlling impulse of society whether regarded locally, nationally or in world-wide relationships, else discipleship will have failed at the point of its supreme responsibility.

The church cannot afford to stop short of constructing a new internationalism that will bear the positive stamp of righteousness. Through the medium of missions, the light of gospel truth is slowly penetrating the submerged elements of the human family. No less must commerce and diplomacy, the twin heralds of internationalism, bear the characteristics of Christianized justice and mercy that will elevate Christianity to its rightful place among the nations.

Was there ever such an opportunity for the young Christian manhood and womanhood of the world to assert themselves constructively in behalf of a transformed and holy civilization? A mission like this lifts religion out of provincialism, out of sectionalism, out of factionalism, out of every otherism into the realm of world relationships wherein all men are brothers and children of a common Father. A revival of Christianity among our youth would be prophetic of a new world order. Let the old concern themselves with dogmas and preparedness and doctrines of expediency, but let youth face the dawn of a Christianized world empire and set about erecting a highway for the triumphant march of the saints of God.

The old order changeth and the day is ripening for the reign of a victorious Christ, no less in devastated Europe and in the waste places of the heathen world than in so-called Christian America. The philosophies of Bernhardt and of Nietzsche, the infidelity of unchristianized nationalism, the selfishness of unregenerated diplomacy, no less than the greed of commercialism, the sordidness of vice and the pollution of society and government must all yield in the end to the persuasive appeals of the Christian faith, to the gentle, winning power of a love that is divine. The goal of the church should be the Christianization of the social order of the world, in order that temptation may be lessened and holy aspirations strengthened, and that the human family may have a fairer chance to find its way to God.

They do violence to the program of our Lord who would confine the operations of the church to disputations, to ceremonialism, to ecclesiasticism or even to creeds, fundamental as these may be as guide posts to belief. For individuals religion is a life to be lived, and not to be philosophized about; for society in its corporate relationships, it should be a controlling, uplifting, transforming force, fashioning the human order into the pattern of divine approval. Holiness in personality should find its culmination in collective righteousness. The state is only the multiplication of individuality. Individual conscience has its counterpart in community conscience. Incarnate personal regeneration should mean in the aggregate social regeneration.

A Christianized social order will have no spirit of toleration for the saloon, or war, or oppression of any kind, and Christian experience is supremely selfish that has no concern for the unregenerate society of which it is a part. The church needs to adopt a bigger program that is inclusive of the tremendous purposes which Christ has for the salvation of his world. Christianity must be both idealized and popularized as a practical program for the nations.

Above the roar of battle and beyond the tumult of frenzied men can be heard the voice of Jehovah commanding his church above all else to stand for righteousness in the earth, to maintain the ideals that will ultimately bring order out of chaos, to rally with unflinching faith about the Man of Galilee whose message of peace and good will to men is waiting for fresh exploitation to this troubled twentieth century. The church must become something other and better than the world. In place of waiting for world reconciliation, the church of Christ should even now be planning for a world conquest by the power of an unbounded love. As the spirit of hatred and suspicion dictated the commencement of the great war, so should Christianity be the propelling force in settling the terms of peace. Christianity as the exponent of the divine will should stand at the cross-roads of every crucial experience in human life and be able to speak the final word of good cheer to every element concerned. To every troubled soul the church should be able with commanding authority to bring the message of a mighty hope, voiced in the words of Deity Himself, "Be still and know that I am God."

Safety First

The gravity of our international relationships, especially with Germany, cannot be minimized. The tensivity of the present situation might easily lead to dangerous complications at almost any time. It helps little when one has to consider that the fright about preparedness is fanning the flames of suspicion rather than helping to put them out. The pacifists are not the dangerous elements in our American life at this hour.

The President is entitled to great credit that we have escaped serious difficulty thus far, but we cannot escape the conviction that he has endangered his program of pacifism by his insistence upon a larger militarism. Nor has he helped to guarantee the peace of the United States by his determination to force the issue of the right of American citizens to travel the high seas in this time of supreme danger.

When the spirit of bloody riot is abroad in any of our cities is no time to settle the issue of the right of neutral and non-combatant citizens to pursue their usual peaceful avocations. No one questions their right to walk the streets at all hours of the day, but while danger stalks abroad, prudence and a proper regard for the safety of the citizens would compel the authorities to give positive warning of the danger. The father, who, knowing that a riot is rampant upon Main street, still insists upon the right of his boy to use that thoroughfare upon his way to school, and fails to warn of the danger, would be held to be criminally negligent. "Safety first" might well be our national motto at this time, not alone for the protection of individuals, but for our national protection from the possible scourge of bloody war.

Never in all her history was there such need that America apply herself to the cultivation and maintenance of that spirit of fraternity and good will which has been the surest guarantee of our security through so many years of our national existence.

New York Adult School

By HENRY RICHARDSON.

Marvels of Redeeming Grace

To those whose only acquaintance with the work of the New York Friends at 144 East 20th Street is from observing the men going in or out of the gate, or an occasional glance through the basement door, the name "Adult School" must indeed seem a grotesque misnomer. From that point of view, they would naturally regard it as at most only another of the numerous "missions" to the "down and outs" of New York. But to the actual worker, or even infrequent visitor, the name "Adult School" is recognized as appropriately descriptive of its methods and purpose.

Not merely are the men gathered there physically below grade. Their mentality is either warped or undeveloped and hence inferior. Many of these men are less capable of sustained physical effort than the average school boy twelve years of age; many of them too are as little capable of any but the briefest mental activity. Long months or years of half-starved, shabby, idleness have lowered both their muscular and mental tone to the point of chronic ennui. The sudden odor of food and drink will momentarily brighten them; but their daily realization that not much else but the odor ever reaches them schools them to resignation towards the unattainable, and they soon lapse into the protective calm that nature has created for the mitigation of their misery. The reason for their condition, whosoever the fault may be, is in their morals, or rather, the absence of morality. They are not positively wicked, not more so than any other class of men; they are merely without character—out of step with the world, disorderly, unprincipled, childishly unheeding of every law of prudence that experience has taught the average man to observe in life.

Every "Mission" furnishes daily illustration that the attempt to superimpose religion upon such emptiness is futile. "Salvation" for them is at a premium in the "missions," and "converts" of this class circulate from mission to mission, and are "saved" by the hundred, over and over again, in every mission they enter, where their "testimonies," unctuous and voluble, are a grief to the spirit of those who, recognizing their insincerity, believe with John Ruskin that "the religion of a knave is the rottenest thing about him." But the attempt to convert such men is not only futile, it is unscriptural. Witness Paul, writing to the Galatians (Gal. III., 23-25): "Before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore, the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster."

The trouble with these men is, they have no law; and the function of the Adult School, which justifies its name, is the recognizing of this lawlessness and endeavoring to supply the lack. They need instructing in the every day manners of honest life, and to gain a little confidence in their application; and then, the law, so learned at the Adult School, becomes their schoolmaster to bring them unto Christ.

That this method, founded upon the principle thus laid down by the greatest evangelist of the early Christian church, is sound and effective, is evidenced by constant experience in the Adult School, and emphasized by contrast with the course of things in other similar gatherings. In an average mission, coffee and rolls are the reward of listening to two hours of preaching and singing; and to insure such spiritual fare being enjoyed by the soul while the body is kept waiting to be fed, the doors are locked at the beginning of the exercises. No wonder, therefore, that a beadle is a most important functionary of such a meeting, constantly moving about, waking up those to whom sleep has come as a sweet relief. How many, but for the locked doors, would come only in time for the bread and coffee, we have no means of knowing.

On the other hand, at the Adult School, coffee and rolls are given to all present at the beginning of the meeting, when those who desire nothing more are free to depart. At first only about twenty per cent remained—the place was strange to them. Today, after five years acquaintance with the Adult School, fully sixty per cent remain to the end of every meeting. One recent Sunday morning, after a heavy snow-fall, a call having come in for some good men to work at shoveling snow, ten such went out to find the work but, arriving too late to be employed, nine of them returned for the sake of enjoying the last half-hour of the meeting.

Rarely is a professional "hobo" seen at the Adult School. Most of the men are either physical weaklings or suffering from the liquor curse. Many unquestionably are capable of better things, but have lost hope. They sit in the parks through the day, or, if they actually seek diligently for work, often for one or another good reason they can truthfully say "No man hath hired us," as at night they shuffle from one mission to another. No other class of men hear so much preaching as they. We believe that so much preaching is positively detrimental to their souls; that if half the time in the missions spent in preaching to them were devoted to checkers and dominoes instead, it would be vastly to their spiritual advantage. We act upon our belief, and give them preaching, checkers and dominoes in about equal proportions. Diversity of studies and much opportunity for recreation are essential to success in school or college. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." And a little pure amusement is a sure cure for religious biliousness.

As a drowsy fish rises to the attractive fly, so a new interest in a song may lure a man to a different view point of life, from which a faithful friend may succeed in reaching his soul. So a rollicking song of Harry Lauder's on the phonograph will inspire a discouraged soul with greater confidence than he could possibly receive from the profoundest sermon from the third chapter of Job. That is the reason why in the Adult School we never take the third chapter of Job as a text, but frequently listen to the ranting strains of the "Victor" giving forth "It ver-r-ry ver-r-ry nice to get your breakfast in your bed on Sunday morning!" That is why, too, with hearty will we sing "It's a long way to Tipperary," and half an hour later are thrilled by the living silence that broods over the meeting after we have sung "Nearer My God to Thee."

The gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation to a lost soul. Unless we preach this gospel in all its fullness, we fail as husbandmen in the great harvest field of God. But we must also strengthen the feeble knees and cheer the broken-hearted and them that have no hope or ambition left. In the animal world we find remarkable instances of ambition. The little skylark, as I remember it in England, rising higher and higher from earth, sings ever stronger and more sweetly as its tiny form recedes from sight, till—"up in heaven, or near it, it pours its full heart." The burdened horse pulls cheerfully even when blind and old. The half-famished dog will plunge into the torrent to save a drowning child. Yet we meet in the Adult School men, made in the image of God, who seem to live in a state of morbid mental drowsiness from which they cannot rouse themselves. It behooves then those who enjoy spiritual good health to diagnose the condition of such who drift across their path, and try by any reasonable treatment to make them strong men.

A Diamond in the Rough.

That same shrewd old evangelist, before quoted, remarks: "To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak; I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." (I Cor. 9:22.) On such a plea we would excuse, were excuse necessary, what happened in our dealing with a young atheist, who came into our evening gathering some weeks ago slightly under the influence of liquor. Approaching three of us who regularly work there, he defied us to find a remedy for his inability to give up drinking alcohol. One of us suggested there was one man in this world who could firmly grasp the fiend of drink within him and cast it out.

"Who is that?" asked the man.

"Yourself."

Upon his disclaiming such power in himself, another friend suggested that, since his own will was not strong enough, the power of Jesus Christ entering into his very soul would meet his demands.

With a scornful laugh he replied, "None of your Jesus Christ gag for me. I don't believe in him even as a man, to say nothing of His claim to be divine."

To which the same friend replied, "Well, I have studied Him rather carefully, and like Pilate, the Roman governor of Judea, who tried Him upon a charge of political crime, I can say, 'I can find no fault in the man.'"

"Fault!" exclaimed our critic, "I have no use for a man who fails in the ordinary civilities of speech to his mother"—referring, of course, to the marriage at Cana, when our Saviour, in reply to His mother's remark "They have no wine," said, "Woman, what have I to do with thee?"

The third friend endeavored to explain that the original Greek of John 2:4 would not bear out the harsh interpretation that he imputed to it. To this the man retorted, "But Jesus and His mother didn't speak in Greek; they used a Hebrew patois."

Our Adult School had acquired a new pupil, of no mean intelligence, and he still awaited a satisfying reply to his first question.

He asked if he might speak to the 150 or more men that were present and tell them his views of the unvarnished facts of life as he knew them, and of the uselessness of their pretense of reformation, when in truth they were just as hell-bound and booze-bound as he. We have no set program, and fairly welcomed an exposition of his views, that we might see its effects upon those who should hear it.

With a few words the chairman introduced him, but even those few words he complained of as having a tendency to "hypnotize" the men he was to address. To this the reply was made, that if he feared any hypnotic interference, the chairman would retire from the room, which for a few minutes he did. On returning, he found a little uproar rising among the men because in his harangue their orator had accused them of being a lot of hypocrites and "bums."

Thinking it was time to interrupt, the chairman then asserted that he had considerable confidence in the good character of many of our men—those whom we term "pals," members of our "Catch-my-Pal Club," who have promised to try to lead decent lives and to try to help "the other fellow" when they had a chance.

"I tell you they are all hypocrites," was the vehement reply, "everyone of them is as weak as I am and would drink a glass of beer this minute if he had a chance."

"Some of these men haven't touched liquor for weeks, some for months, some never," was the modest defense to this attack; quickly followed by the challenge:

"I dare you to put a glass of beer under any of their noses."

It was then a crisis. One hundred and fifty men were sitting under this taunt, intently watching. The work of five years was before us with this question, How many of these men will stand such a test? Only our mighty God heard the prayer flash forth, for quick thought to suit quick action.

An empty bucket was produced, and one of the pals, a teetotaler, went out with the man to buy a bucketful of "suds" at the nearest saloon. The expectancy of the crowd may be imagined. One dear good aged pal, a broken-down and thrown-aside member of the clerical profession, could not approve of what was taking place and beat a hasty retreat. One of the workers approached the chairman and whispered, "I don't know what is in the back of your mind, but now you have started the game, play out your hand"; and so we stood on our holy ground, trembling at the word of the Lord, while we sang together "It's a long way to Tipperary!"

The men returned with the frothing pail. Our visitor, foreseeing triumph, as he supposed, made his demand: "Now give me a square deal. Don't ask the men to come up to the platform. I'll take it around and hand it to them, and I'll bet ninety per cent will drink it."

With the bucket and some empty cups, which half an hour before had been filled with appetizing coffee, he passed before the men, from bench to bench. Almost the first man it was offered to put the cup to his lips and drained it. The third or fourth took it in his hand, smelled it, and then poured it back into the pail; he had won but—it was a struggle. Another, whom we have often seen the worse for liquor, refused with a brave look, but we knew at what cost. One by one we counted the cups that were taken, until in all fourteen men had each drunk and emptied one. More than ninety per cent had absolutely refused; and, cajole as he would, those who had already had one drink were the only ones willing to take more; and that we would not permit.

"You have hypnotized this crowd, all right," was the sneering charge we then received, "the men are afraid. I defy you to turn out the lights!"

"We'll do it," said the chairman, "we'll send those who have already had a drink over to the other side of the room, and you will find that all the rest will stand firm."

To this came the sarcastic reply, "There isn't beer enough left in the bucket for those who would take a drink in the dark!"

"All right, go and buy more."

Out he went again with the bucket, accompanied as before by the teetotaler pal.

While awaiting their return should we sing the hymn "Yield Not to Temptation?" "No," spoke a silent voice, "stand still and see the salvation of God. He needeth not the help of man." So at the signal the pianist struck up "Tipperary" again, and we joined in the singing, knowing that over this rough ground, though the ark of God's covenant might jostle in our sight, no human hand need steady it.

The man returned and placed the bucket brimming with beer on the platform. There was a hush as with squared shoulders he faced the crowd. A moment he stood as if confused or dazed, and then made an effort to pull himself together.

"You've been praying, or singing some of your hymns, while I was out," he declared.

We appealed to the crowd to bear witness that the only audible or visible thing that had occurred was the singing of "Tipperary."

The Transforming Power.

It was apparent that some change had been wrought in the man. His defiance had all vanished; his eyes were on the floor. Turning to the chairman, in humbled voice he said, "May I say a few words to the men again?"

"Go ahead."

"Men," he said, "something has happened since I went out that I cannot understand. I thought you had been praying, or perhaps singing a hymn. I know I've been in the wrong, and I ask your pardon for what I have done in asking any of you to have a drink. There is a power in this room that is entirely new to me. I had a Christian father and mother, who led godly lives and are now both gone. They tried to bring me up in the right way, but I wouldn't have any of their teaching and became a drunkard. Now this strange power that is present here makes me feel that I can let liquor alone and that I have drunk it for the last time." Then, turning to the chairman, he asked, "What shall I do with this beer?"

"Take it out and pour it into the gutter."

This he did, under the eye of the same teetotaler pal, and on his return with the empty bucket he said, "If any of you men had told me twenty minutes ago that I would voluntarily throw away a pailful of beer tonight, I would have answered, not until I had done my best to drink it all myself. I have asked everyone of you tonight to have a drink. I want now to ask how many will join with me in henceforth trying to lead a sober life?"

About eighty men stood up, and at the chairman's suggestion, he went round and shook hands with each of them as they remained standing.

So, under the covering of the Holy Spirit, with this repentant drunkard and the men whom his coaxing and his taunts had alike failed to shake in their purpose, at strong hand-grips in a common high resolve, this strange meeting came to a close.

New York City.

Then and Now

By ELIZA ARMSTRONG COX

A long time ago a certain people were seized with a craze for preparedness. They looked about them and saw the various Gentile nations were under kings. They had their armies, horses and chariots, their infantry with suitable weapons, which all made a fine display; while they, though Israelites, had none of this showy "pomp and circumstance." The nations around them were ready for a conquest at any time, and were also fortified against each other. They laid the complaint of their present defenseless condition before the prophet Samuel and clamored for a king.

Their pride rose up and resented what seemed to them an inferior comparison with others. Samuel remonstrated with them, all to no avail. He laid the matter before the Lord and was told to grant them their request, saying this was the logical outcome of the course they had been pursuing from the departure from Egypt to the present time. They had been forsaking Jehovah and serving other gods until this awful climax was reached.

But they were to know just what it would mean to them to have a king. It might go very satisfactorily for a while, but the time would come when an army for a proper police force would not be sufficient. The king would take "your sons" by conscription. They would be reduced from the status of a man to that of a mere machine to carry out the king's requirements. They would be his slaves in the army, in the field, in the shops. All their service would be for the king and the army. Nor was this all, not only their sons would be reduced to a place of servitude, but their daughters also. They would be cooks and bakers for the army, and oh what a life of degradation this would entail upon the Jewish maidens. This would not be all. But the time would come when the king would confiscate their fields, vineyards, olive yards and the proceeds of these would go to support the great military system. The oppression of militarism would become increasingly intense and grievous until "ye shall cry out in that day because of your king whom ye have chosen unto you. And Jehovah will not answer you in that day."

The warning fell on deaf ears because they had fully determined in their counsels that this disgraceful condition of unpreparedness should not continue. The remedy was only to be found in a king who would at once call out and equip an "adequate" army, and be ready for any issue that might come. And so a king was found and the chosen people of God took the sword for their defense and protection, trusting in horses and chariots instead of the God of Abraham, of Isaac and Jacob, of the Red Sea, Sinai and the Jordan.

This awful burden of militarism so lightly assumed became unbearable in Solomon's time, who by this means maintained an "armed peace" with the nations about him, and led to a serious disruption of the kingdom after his death. With the progress of time, they, having taken the sword, were finally destroyed as a nation by the sword in the hands of Titus.

How is it now? Again the clamor is ringing all through our country for "preparedness." Our army and navy must be largely increased. Our military training must include our boys and young men. We must be ready for an attack from any source. To be sure, we will not wage any offensive warfare, but we must be ready for defense and the preservation of our honor. This "preparedness" is the present day demand and it lies exactly parallel with "but we will have a king!" Our prophet this day is the earnest pleading of godly men and women for peace, for the trying out of the principles of the Sermon on the Mount that would have no room for war. Our prophets are showing us that the governments of this world are administered yet under the old dispensation whose law was an eye for an eye, of retaliation, of "getting even" or "one better." They are teaching us that the church which our Lord founded is built upon the law of grace, the new covenant, love instead of revenge, doing good for evil, and has no place for a military system. They are pointing to a time when men "shall learn war no more." But they are being received much as Samuel was in his intercession. Preparedness for defense only! Oh, certainly! But it is the nose of the camel that is not separated from the body of the animal. Admit this much, and all too soon the whole military system in all its ghastly array will be fastened upon us with all its terrible results. Our Lord drew a definite line between the way his kingdom was to be established and those of this world when he said, "My kingdom is not of this world, else would my servants fight." And Paul declared that strongholds could be pulled down by weapons that were not carnal.

As the Jewish nation this long ago denied Jehovah the opportunity of displaying His wondrous power to protect and deliver His people from their enemies, so it seems now this same privilege of being the nation through which God might have another opportunity of proving His power to save without sword or gun, was given to the United States; that through our government he might show a better way to the world out of difficulties that would preserve both manhood and honor. And are we too going to deny him? Are we going to rob ourselves of the wonderful, glorious, infinitely glorious privilege of being the agency through which the King of Kings may display his power? Alas! Alas! to lose such an opportunity.

Azalia, Indiana.

God requires so much faith, nay, he accepts, nay, he excuses no such faith as believes without reason; believes, it knows not how nor why. As faith without fruit, without works, is no faith, so faith without a root without reason, is no faith but an opinion.—Donne.

Two Weeks in Jamaica

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS

We landed at Port Antonio, on the north side of Jamaica, early on the morning of January 19th. Miss Mary White met us and took us to her home. This home is quite the center for Friends arriving in Port Antonio and also for people passing between our two mission fields on the North Side and in the East End. For this purpose, her cottage of seven small rooms and two porches becomes at times quite a hotel. There were fourteen guests the first night of our stay, two of whom were babies. Five had come down from Seaside, three had come up from the North Side, one from Fellowship, our party of three, and two belonging to the home. The next morning three more came from Seaside, two from Buff Bay, and thus the entire missionary force were together for their council meeting, which occupied the day on Thursday. The various interests of the entire field were pretty thoroughly canvassed.

East Indian Work on North Side

The main East Indian work is done in the district about Port Antonio under the care of Mary White; the Annotto Bay District under Miss Sada Stanley; and the Port Maria District under Miss Alice Kennedy. The last two districts lie between twenty-five and forty-five miles west of Port Antonio, and can be reached from the railroad running from Port Antonio round to Kingston, though Port Maria is nine miles from the railroad. The East Indians are indentured by the British government for a period of ten years; they are brought from India and indentured to the large fruit estates. The owners of these estates are responsible for their care and allow them certain sums for their labor. (A day's wage for this section is about 24 cents for women and 37 cents for men.)

All, both men and women, are obliged to be in the field during certain hours unless sick. If they are sick, government hospitals are provided for them. Four of these hospitals with about 200 beds each are in this territory, located in the towns. Barracks of an inexpensive character are provided on the estates for all. After their ten year period, they are free to do as they like. Some return to India, but a large portion remain as permanent residents of Jamaica. No other church than Friends is doing any work among them in this part of the island. There are several thousand of them in the three districts mentioned above. In each case they are distributed within a radius of six or eight miles of the center of the district. In each district there is a native catechist who assists the missionary in visiting the barracks and hospital.

A large part of the work consists in visiting the barracks, which must be done after working hours, if they reach the men. This entails a great deal of driving over steep mountain roads. Miss Kennedy probably drives 25 miles or more two or three times a week, and does not reach her home until near midnight.

Three schools are maintained for the Indian children; Miss Hoover and Miss Arms each presides over one of these, at Orange Hill and Fellowship, respectively. Each has a native assistant. A native teacher has charge of a school at Osborne. These schools are in considerable part sustained by government funds. In Buff Bay district, two similar government schools are under mission care with native teachers and held in mission property. These are mainly for the Creole pupils. The Indian children are peculiarly bright and attractive. They have the brightest eyes I have ever seen. Their brown faces are smiling and they are very lovable in disposition. It is hard to get the girls in school, as the Indian idea of their subordinate place makes them think girls should not go to school.

The mission has five neat chapels for the Indian work in the three districts and two for Creoles in Buff Bay district.

The visiting of the hospitals is an especially important feature of the work. There the Indians are temporarily disabled for work and, while convalescent, are especially open to approach. They love to have the missionaries come to talk to them and sing and pray with them. This has to be largely in the native Hindu language. They ask questions very freely and these occasions furnish frequently the most direct access to their souls.

(To be continued)

Save the Hawaiians

A bill is now pending in each branch of Congress at Washington, designed to prohibit the liquor traffic in the territory of Hawaii. Petitions signed by upwards of 3500 persons, mostly native citizens of the Islands, praying for the passage of the bill, have been presented. A strong appeal has been made by the temperance interests of this country for Congress to come to the relief of the native Hawaiians who are fast being destroyed by the liquor traffic. While writing to your Congressman and U. S. Senators in behalf of national prohibition and the D. C. prohibition bill, put in a strong appeal in behalf of prohibition in Hawaii.

Why the Association to Abolish War?

1. Because there is no other organization, other than a few denominational groups, unalterably opposed to war under all circumstances. Every so-called peace society has either evaded the issue or come out for a limited amount of preparedness for self defense.

2. To bring together into one organization the people of all denominations and beliefs who stand against war.

3. In order to make an effective protest against the present-day demand for preparedness.

4. To do active, definite work for the cause of peace.

WHAT TO DO

1. Invite all the people who believe that all war is wrong to come together for a conference.

2. Organize by appointing an Executive, Extension, Correspondence, Publication and Publicity, Membership, and Finance committee.

3. Meet once in two weeks or once a month, not to convert each other, but to receive definite reports of the work accomplished by the various members, and to outline future work.

4. Plan to hold such public meetings as may seem desirable.

5. Do not be discouraged if only two or three respond to your invitation.

6. Resolve that individually you will talk the matter of peace with your friends and acquaintances wherever and whenever the way may open.

7. See that every time your paper publishes an article in behalf of preparedness your editor receives a written protest from every one of your members. However, do not stop with protesting. See that articles on the things which make for peace are published, even if you have to buy space.

Historical Note

The Association to Abolish War was first organized in October, 1915. It has grown steadily from the beginning. Branch associations have been formed in various parts of the United States, and the largest group is at Boston, Mass., the original association. It now numbers over 150 and is composed of many prominent people in the city of Boston. Charles F. Dole, the chairman of the Executive Committee, is President of the Twentieth Century Club of Boston. A few of the other members are Willard L. Sperry, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Boston; J. Edgar Park, pastor of the Congregational Church, West Newton; William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., grandson of the William Lloyd Garrison of slavery days; W. Harris Crook, Hibbard Fellow of Oxford University, Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel, and Professors Emily G. Balch, Mary W. Calkins, and Eleanor D. Wood, of Wellesley College. Outside of the city of Boston, connected with the association, are John Haynes Holmes of New York, Charles M. Sheldon of Topeka, Kans., and Dr. Washington Gladden of Columbus, Ohio.

For information or literature on the subject, address Wilbur K. Thomas, 12 Hazelwood Street, Roxbury, Mass.

All Named Alike

"Well, Davie, did you enjoy your visit to the museum?" "Yes, Mother." "Do you rememehr any of the nice things you saw?" "Oh, yes, I remember lots of them." "And can you tell me what they were called?" "Yes, most of them were called 'Do Not Touch'."—The Congregationalist.

You find yourself refreshed by the presence of cheerful people. Why not make earnest effort to confer that pleasure on others?—L. M. Child.

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

Anson and Melissa Cox, former pastors of the Friends Church at Greenleaf, Idaho, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at that place on February 8. The ladies of the missionary society together with the church planned a very pleasant program for the occasion. From ten o'clock until noon the resident ministers and their wives, together with the members of their Sabbath School class called. A short but very impressive service was held in which the pastor, Ezra Pearson, on behalf of the church, spoke many kind words of appreciation for the faithful ministry of Anson Cox and for the earnest Christian lives of him and his wife. He also presented them with $50.00 in gold, donated by friends and relatives with a list of names and addresses beautifully written in gold.

Anson Cox and wife spoke of their appreciation of the love shown them and of their Heavenly Father's care through all these years, also of the mingled joy and sorrow of the day. Their youngest son who had wandered away from God gave the assurance that he had gone back to the Father's house again, while a telegram brought the sad news of the death of a daughter-in-law in Indiana. During the afternoon other members of the Sabbath School called, followed by the students from the academy and public schools.

In the evening teachers, business men and others came in, making a total altogether of 142. The very bad roads prevented many from coming. Of their children, Mr. and Mrs. Verling Cox of Middleton, Idaho, Mrs. Hulda Tozier and two children of Nampa and Miss Velma, who is still at home, were present. These together with the absent children presented their parents with a Victor talking machine and a few choice records. Eighty-three letters and postcards were received and the occasion was indeed a blessed one, the memory of which lovingly lingers.

IN RETROSPECT.

Fairmount Quarterly Meeting, Indiana, was established in 1841. At first it was known as Northern Quarterly Meeting and was held at Back Creek, a country place midway between Fairmount and Jonesboro. About the year 1868, the time of which I write, the meeting house was surrounded on the south by a nice grove, on the west by the woods and a creek, on the north by the cemetery and on the east by a gravel road. The house itself was of brick 40x80 feet, with a partition in the center containing shutters to separate the men and women during business meetings.

The Quarterly Meetings were largely attended at this time. There were always ministers present traveling in the service of truth, sometimes as many as eight to twelve. Especially was this true in the Sixth Month each year, at which time hundreds came, the company on First day often being estimated at from eight to ten thousand. This particular session was known far and near as the Quaker Yearly Meeting. People came in wagons, in buggies, on horse back and on foot, for there was no railroad near, no street car, no autos, but folks came and all had a good time. A stand was erected in the grove, the house was filled and often someone would preach from a wagon.

The writer remembers that Frances C. Jenkins, then in the prime of her life, attended one of these meetings. The house was filled, with children sitting in all eight of the south windows, while people were standing in and about all of the four doors. Frances sat at the head of the meeting on the north side of the building by the partition. She arose and began to speak. Her voice although not loud, was clear and very distinct and she could be heard in the farthest corner of the room. My husband and I as children were at that meeting and the power and spirit of it have followed us all these years.

As I read of the death of Frances Jenkins in The American Friend, I felt that truly a good woman in Israel has fallen, but then came the text, "The Lord taketh pleasure in the death of His saints."

RUTH T. CAREY,

Jonesboro, Ind.

THOMAS E. JONES AT WESTTOWN
(From "The Brown and White.")

"He that walketh with wise men shall be wise: but a companion of fools shall perish." Proverbs 13-20. This was the verse Thomas E. Jones used in his talk to the boys last Seventh-day, the 22nd. He told us of a school "pal" of his with whom he was so chummy that each was largely responsible for the success of the other. There was another young man in school about the same time who did not form good companionship, but was the only son in the family, and so was given his own way in life. He endeavored to assert his authority, and to give the impression that he was of a high social standing by smoking and gambling, and he ended up by killing his mother one day because she was unable to supply him with more money to squander.

Young men do not realize that when they "crib" in exams. and do that sort of thing that they are laying the foundation for a finish similar to this fellow's. A person who cheats in school will certainly cheat in business, because cheating becomes a habit, a parasite that eats away the foundations for a man's high moral standard. Many young men are out for a good time while they are young. They soon come to the end of that time and want to get a responsible job. Every employer to whom they apply asks, "Who knows you? We will write to him for a recommendation of you." The young man finds that his former character holds him down, no concern will trust him in a responsible position, because he has a reputation for drinking, cheating and dissipating. The man was a floater, he must still be a floater, because he has prevented himself from becoming a man. Will power is what the young man needs, ability to stand up for a certain thing and stick by it regardless of the consequences. The world is looking for men with strong, noble characters, and she will give them an opportunity at every step they take. Thomas Jones finished by asking God to give us the strength and volition to become real men.

All during the afternoon he had personal interviews with the fellows, singly or in groups. He was planning to leave about ten o'clock in the evening, but so many wanted to talk with him that he was forced to spend the night here, leaving early First-day morning.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

The following sentences are taken from letters reaching The American Friend office and these are typical of those that come in in quantities almost every day:

"The editorial last week was worth the price of the paper."

"I do not see how Friends can get along without it."

"I would take The American Friend if I had to borrow the money to do it with."

"The paper is increasing in interest and helpfulness all the time."

"God bless you in the work; you are making a great paper of our church paper."

"I have read it ever since the beginning and it is better now than it has ever been before."

Read The American Friend.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

After about eighteen months in the States, spent in recuperating failing health, Susie J. Martin is again with her husband, Zenas L. Martin, at Holguin, Cuba. All the workers on the field and especially the converts at Holguin welcome her to their midst.

Hussey Institute, the girls' school at Matamoros, Mexico, opened last September with an exceptionally large enrollment. At the end of November, the pupils numbered 178. Unfortunately, it became necessary on about the tenth of December to close the school on account of smallpox. On December 13th, Nancy Lee, who is in charge, wrote that they hoped to begin work again on the third of January.

H. Alma Swift, writing from Buff Bay, Jamaica, says: "The beautiful, consecrated lives of our two Bible women, one an East Indian, the other a native girl, and the girls in this home have helped to raise the standard. People see in them vital Christianity and want their girls to be like them."

From Lloyd H. Mendenhall at Puerto Padre, Cuba: "Our sympathy was called out recently for one of our candidates who was arrested on a charge of stealing. He was taken to Holguin for trial but was quickly cleared and acquitted. He had bought a statue of another man who had stolen it, as was learned later. He denied having ever had it in his possession, however, so both of the men were arrested. While the circumstance was a very unpleasant one for the man and his family, they were cheered by the many expressions of confidence and sympathy which they received from their neighbors. Several of the business men of the town offered to advance any money that might be needed for lawyers' fees or other expenses in connection with the trial."

CORINTH ACADEMY.

Far beyond the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia in the heart of the peanut belt, is located Corinth Academy. Tall pine trees abound in this section and a rich carpet of needles gives one a smooth pathway to the school. Under the efficient management of C. E. Trueblood, the school is doing some excellent work. It is continually growing, not only in numbers, but in efficiency and spiritual power.

One cannot help being impressed by the hearty spirit of co-operation that exists between student and teacher in this school. It is remarkable what this school has done for the section of country in which it is placed.

For years after the civil war this community could scarcely survive. The school system was poor, much property had been destroyed, the negroes were freed and the land was not fertile. At last prosperity began to come back. This school was established and many old and young who could not before, were taught to read and write. During recent years agriculture, manual training and the arts have been taught to the great benefit of the place.

Recently, three Christian Endeavor Societies have been formed in this section. They take the "Dixie Endeavor" and The American Friend. They have enrolled in the Young Friends Directory. May God continue to bless the efforts of religious workers in this rich field.

NEWS NOTES.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation greetings for this new year from Thomas D. Hubbard, of Kimball, Kansas.

Hannah M. Hubbard, of Edmond, Oklahoma, spends from two to four days each week working in the "Peoples Gospel Mission" in Oklahoma City. She preached the evangelistic sermon on January 31 and on February 5 spoke to over two hundred news boys. House to house visitations are a part of her work.

M. Davis Branon and several other Friends of Mt. Airy, N. C., attended the recent Laymen's Missionary Convention at Greensboro in that state, and during the following week attended the Ministerial Conference and denominational rally of North Carolina Yearly Meeting held at Greensboro, February 10-12.

The members of E. S. Hockett's Bible School class of the Union Street Friends Church at Kokomo, Indiana, had a merry time on the evening of February 15 at a poverty sociable given in the Sunday School room of the church. All shared in the games and contests, in which the valentine idea was carried out. Refreshments were served.

The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation receipt of a souvenir of Berlinville Monthly Meeting of Friends, Berlinville, Ohio. It contains an excellent photograph of the meeting house, together with a list of elders, overseers, Monthly Meeting officers, ushers, trustees, missionary committee, Bible School officers and committee and teachers, together with a list of pastors who have served the meeting, beginning with George J. Bartlett in 1880 to the present pastor, Merrill M. Coffin. There is a total membership of 113, and the financial statement shows receipts for the year of $1134.26.

MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.

The following is the program of the Ministerial Conference and Denominational Rally held at the Friends Church, Greensboro, N. C., February 10-12, during the sessions of the Laymen's Missionary Convention:

Thursday Afternoon.

2:30—Devotional—Samuel Barnes.
2:45—Our Part and Responsibility in the World Wide Evangelism—Dr. S. Newlin.

3:15—Present Missionary Conditions of N. C. Yearly Meeting, and How to Remedy Them. A General Discussion, led by Annie E. Williams.

3:45—Those Local Financial Problems—Henry White.

4:15—Open Parliament—M. D. Branon, Presiding; Missionary; every Member Canvas; Financial; Family Worship; Family Visiting.

5:00—Business Session.

Friday Afternoon.

2:30—Devotional.
2:45—The Pastoral Problems of Our Yearly Meeting—L. W. McFarland.

3:15—The Need of a Young People's Society in Every Church—Fred E. Smith.

3:45—Discussion.
4:15—Some Practical Methods For Our Bible School—J. H. Peele.
4:50—Discussion.

Saturday Morning.

9:30—Devotional.
9:45—Gathering up the threads of the Missionary Conference and the Forming of Definite Plans for Our Y. M. Work.

10:15—Our Rural Church Problems—G. J. Welker.

10:45—The Place of the Minister in the Social and Spiritual Development of the Community—Ada E. Lee.

11:15—General Discussion—David Sampson.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

The following sentences are taken at random from letters recently received at The American Friend office. They are samples of numerous expressions which continue to come in:

"The American Friend continues to improve and more nearly meets the needs of the church than ever before. May you be blessed in your arduous tasks."

"I like The American Friend very much and think it should be in every Friends' family."

"I think the paper ought to be taken. I also think it ought to contain more spiritual food."

"I like the paper since it was taken over by the Five Years Meeting, and would recommend it to all Friends."

Read the American Friend ads.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

SPRING CAMPAIGN.

Let every Young People's Society begin to talk up this campaign. What is it? It is a special campaign in Endeavor, Instruction and Enrollment. Friends should not miss the great benefits to be derived from the Millions Campaign for Endeavor. With other denominations working at this great task, why should not Friends join in? Send for an efficiency chart and organize your Society on a modern basis. It will be worth the effort.

Charles Woodman's book on the Present Day Message of Quakerism has been written and advertised to stimulate Young Friends to greater intelligence in their denominational affiliations. Why not procure a book and form a study class? Begin plans for this now.

Send to us for enrollment cards in the Young Friends Movement. They cost you nothing but the trouble of filling them out. We need to know you. You need our reports and the fellowship of Friends. We follow you up!

Young Friends General Conference motto, "The Entire Church Task." Begin talking up the Cedar Lake conference now. There is little question that this will be the largest and most efficient assembly yet held among International Young Friends. This conference will minister to the spiritual, intellectual and recreational uplift of all who attend. You come to learn, to be happy, to make bigger decisions for your life work. Boost! Begin now!

Write the Young Friends Board for further suggestions.

AT STATE COLLEGE, PA.

Among the Friends who come to State College there are several from the vicinity of Philadelphia, some from other parts of Pennsylvania and a few from Ohio. These have all united with the few families residing here to form a Friends meeting, held every First day evening. Then after our meeting, a half hour is devoted to Bible study or a discussion of our own problems. This year we have been using a little book, "Life At Its Best," which is issued by the Y. M. C. A., for the use of college men. The attendance varies from twenty to forty people, several of whom are usually non-members.

The Friends who live here very kindly invite us to their homes, and in these social gatherings we grow much better acquainted. Situated as we are, in a college of 2300 men, most of whom differ from us on the questions of preparedness and war, in a college where military drill is required, except in the case of Friends, we find a great need for our Quaker message of peace. There promises in the near future to be occasion for decisive action on our part in the cause of non-preparedness.

Moreover the Y. M. C. A. work and the religious campaigns, which State has annually, give us many opportunities to help "the other fellow." This year Raymond Robbins of Chicago, is leading a revival in an effort to reach those men who heretofore have not accepted Christ. Last year John R. Mott conducted a similar campaign with magnificent results.

During the short vacation between semesters, groups of our Friends visit the various small meetings within convenient reach of the College. This year three men went on one of these pilgrimages to Fishertown, a meeting below Altoona. On account of its poor railroad facilities, State college is a hard place for travelers to reach. We are, therefore, especially grateful to those who come to visit us. Friends who may come, will find here a small group, who believe firmly in the principles of our Society.

C. CANBY BALDERSTON.

PEACE TOPIC.

MARCH 19.

World Federation, a Means of International Justice. Ps. 92:7-15.

In the third division of the Psalter is found the ninety-second Psalm. It is typically Judaistic in style and content. Jehovah is considered as especially favoring Israel. He will defeat her enemies who are wicked because they are not Jews. The one way to be a good Jew or a member of any other nation is to be righteous. That the righteous will triumph was a theory especially prominent among the Jews during the first century B. C.

Nations no less firmly believe in that principle today. The difficult matter, however, is to define what righteousness is. What determines a standard of justice? It seems to be founded upon a basis of morality existing among individuals who compose the state. The rule of fairness or the "square deal" is founded upon the old testament law of doing unto others as you would have them do unto you.

Every opportunity for magnanimous treatment of our neighboring nations should be seized with joy. If we selfishly "carry a chip on our shoulder" some other nation will selfishly knock it off. If on the other hand we should go out of our way to do some deed of righteousness for those who are now seriously criticizing our international policies the cause of peace would be materially advanced.

Can young Friends become too serious in their pursuit of the ideals of peace? Should not society be based upon Christianity? The whole spirit of Jesus' teaching is being trampled under foot by war advocates in our country as well as by directors of armies abroad. Let us arise with courage and determination to practice Christ's teachings—organize a Friends Fellowship Group, sign Christian Endeavor peace cards, organize a peace study class in another church, get up a peace tramp, protest to Congress now.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

MARCH 19.

Topic—"Getting Power from our Pledge". Ps. 25:1-14. (Honorary Members Meeting)

There are some objections to taking the C. E. Pledge, perhaps because it is a hard and fast rule, or contains too much formality, or it is so often not kept, or if adhered to, is done so merely for the sake of the letters and not the Spirit. Does not the latter reflect on the pledge signer rather than on the pledge itself? And do we not, as members of the church, pledge that we will do and be those things that becometh a Christian?

We do not make the pledge to the church or to ourselves, but to the Lord Jesus Christ, in whom we trust for strength, and who is the source of all power; thus he alone can help us keep it. "I will make it the rule of my life",—forming habits of prayer and devotion through which this power comes.

We promise to pray and read the bible every day—not carelessly, but through necessity just as we take the food that nourishes the physical.

We promise to support the church, which helps us become unselfish in giving and in service. Some one has aptly said: "We can give without loving, but we cannot love without giving."

We promise to take some part aside from singing and perform a special duty at consecration meeting. This is the clause to which many Friends object. Yet there is service for every young Friend in a meeting. He can bring Christ into the meeting. If one has a speaking gift let him use it, for speech is one of God's special instruments for influencing others. As we publicly express our religious life we come to have more life to express. However no Endeavorer should speak merely for the sake of speaking, but if we come to God to be filled, He turns us not away empty. As we then strive to keep the pledge in the Spirit, Christ will unfold its beauty and power as a part of the reward for keeping it.

A Valuable Offer

"The Present Day Message of Quakerism," by Charles M. Woodman..$1.00
The American Friend (1 yr)..... 1 50

Total$2.50
Read This: The above valuable book will be sent together with each NEW subscription to The American Friend for one year for $2.00. Address
THE AMERICAN FRIEND
Richmond, Indiana.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

ANOTHER LETTER FROM CHARLES TEBBETTS.

On an earlier page of this issue of The American Friend appears the first installment of the description of Charles Tebbetts' visit to our Mission in Jamaica. We commend this interesting account which Charles Tebbetts has prepared to the attention of all readers of the paper. It gives a splendid impression of conditions on the field and contains some very interesting incidents in connection with his visit.

OBSERVING EASTER.

A number of Friends Bible Schools are planning to use the special Easter service entitled "The Hope of the World," which was referred to in these columns two weeks ago. It is greatly to be hoped that a much larger number will this year use this Easter program than used the corresponding program a year ago. This program has an Easter theme with a missionary application. It has splendid music, some of it new and some which will be familiar to almost every school. The program as outlined may be extended or abbreviated to meet local conditions. The use of the picture, "The Hope of the World" in connection with the program will be found a most interesting feature and in this exercise the program finds its culmination.

Copies of the program and of the picture to be used with it may be secured from the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions at the following prices: Programs, 25c a dozen or $1.80 a hundred, postpaid. In brown photogravure, the picture costs 20c and a larger, lithographed copy in colors, 40c. Sample copies of the program will be sent upon receipt of 3c sent in stamps. The address of the Board is Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Indiana.

FRIENDS AT LAYMEN'S CONVENTIONS.

At the Laymen's Missionary Movement Convention held at Des Moines, Iowa, February 20th to 22d, a good number of Friends from Des Moines and from other meetings within the limits of Iowa Yearly Meeting were in attendance. It is most encouraging to find that Friends are getting more into the way of attending these interdenominational gatherings and we can not but believe that the state of missionary interest within our denomination will show a decided increase as a result of it. At the Friends rally held on the last afternoon of the Des Moines Convention, there were no less than 85 Friends present. Plans were laid for carrying the power and information which the Convention afforded into every quarter of the Yearly Meeting. It was decided to observe the week preceding Easter as a special time for giving toward Friends work in Jamaica. Friends in other Yearly Meetings will be wishing for Iowa Friends abundant success in this special effort.

The Laymen's Convention at Indianapolis occurred on February 27th to March 1st. More than 30 Friends Meetings outside of Indianapolis were represented. A large number of women Friends attended the auxiliary meetings for women held during the afternoon and evening of the last three days of the convention. Exact figures are not at hand but it is believed that an even larger number of meetings were represented at these auxiliary sessions. At the Friends rally held on the afternoon of Wednesday, March 1st, it was decided to have special conferences held in each Quarter within the Indianapolis Convention area, with a view to extending the benefits of the Conference to every particular meeting.

We learn that Friends were also represented at the Laymen's Conventions at Minneapolis, January 23d to 26th, by 13 delegates; at Dayton, February 9th to 13th, by 11; and at Columbia, S. C., February 6th to 9th, by 2 delegates.

A DAY AT THE HAPPY GROVE BOYS' SCHOOL.

Br-r-r-r! goes the alarm clock, at 5:30 a. m., and a moment later the gong clangs its unwelcome sound into the drowsy ears of eleven sleepy boys. All gather the first thing for fifteen minutes of "setting-up" exercises; then go to bathe, dress and make their beds. At 6:30 comes "morning prayers," in the dining-room (which also serves as study and sitting room.) The daily readings from the "Penn" quarterlies are used, something connected with the lesson is discussed or studied up, then all join in prayer.

The boys then separate for their morning duties. Harry and Ernest sweep the dining room, set the tables, and get the food on. William straightens up the dressing room, while Claude sweeps the dormitory. John looks after the assistant teacher's room, and the front veranda; while Willie airs and cleans the school rooms. Fred and David fill the water barrel from the pipe a few rods away, and the earthenware "coolers" for drinking water. This work keeps all busy until time for the morning meal, "tea," at 7:30; then by the time Joubert and Allan have cleared away and washed the dishes, some one of the teachers is around for "inspection" of rooms and personal appearance. "Bed No. 9 is not made nicely." "Some dirt in the corner of the dining-room." "Your 'boots' are not blacked." "Your hair needs brushing"—these and similar remarks call attention to neglected duties. When house and boys are tidy, all form in line to march to the school room. School opens at 8:30, and lasts until 12:30, consisting mostly of recitations.

A hungry crowd answers the dinner gong at 12:45; the tables are soon cleared of food, the dishes are washed, and then there may be time for a few minutes of "ball" before the afternoon industrial classes, which meet from 2 to 5. The tailoring class is getting along far enough in their work to begin making the uniforms for the school boys. The advanced class in wood-working has been making tables, book cases and other articles of furniture; while the newer ones are learning the use of the tools in making simple articles and repairs.

The play-hour from 5:00 to 6:00 passes quickly in playing cricket, with jumping and running at times for a change. After the evening meal comes "study-hour" when all are in the dining room under the oversight of one of the teachers. Usually some heads begin to nod before the stroke of nine sends all scurrying off to bed. At 9:30 the last signal, for "lights out and silence" ends a busy day.

W. G. FARR.

Do not be a slave. Go at your job with enthusiasm. To get enthusiasm in work, work. Work creates enthusiasm for work.—Charles F. Thwing.

PEACE DEPARTMENT

NOTE—It is hoped that this page may present in brief form a record of activities typical of the work Friends are doing for peace. News items, short, pointed arguments, suggested plans, all will be welcome, and will be used subject to the limitations of space and the proper distribution and arrangement of the matter received. All communications intended for this page should be addressed to Allen D. Hole, President, 615 National Road, West, Richmond, Indiana.

NON-RESISTANCE AS A VITAL ASSET OF CHRISTIANITY.

By JESSE EDGERTON.

"Ye have heard it said, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, but I say unto you that ye resist not him that is evil; but whosoever smiteth thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go with him one mile, go with him twain."—(Matt. V., 39-41), R. V.

It would seem from the prominence given it, in Christ's Sermon on the Mount, that the doctrine of non-resistance is of vital importance to the religion of Jesus; and none of His teachings are more strikingly illustrated by His example than this.

At the outset we will state, as a premise to this essay, that in harmony with His character, the Savior in His Sermon on the Mount, did not indicate that we should yield subservience to evil, but that we oppose evil with good! As the Apostle Paul says in Romans (XII., 21): "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

Willard L. Sperry, a Congregational minister of Boston, Mass., in a sermon on Non-Resistance, delivered last winter said, "This, then, is the Christian attitude of non-resistance, not a craven acquiescence in evil.

"It is not lying down and letting the evil walk over you. It is a standing on your feet, and facing evil with good! It is marching unarmed, up to the muzzles of the guns! Let us have done with the idea that the non-resister is a coward! He is the only man who can understand the scripture saying that, 'Perfect love casteth out fear.'

"Non-resistance is the fearless assertion of justice and love in the face of wrong."

It would seem that the teaching of Christ, in regard to this matter, either has not been comprehended, or not taken seriously, by the professing Christian world. If comprehended, has it been found wanting in its adaptation to the needs of mankind? Has there been any honest trial of its efficiency, in the settlement of world-differences?

It is unfair to brand the Savior's plan of non-resistance as inadequate, or impossible, without having given it a trial.

It is true, and an encouraging truth, that notwithstanding the progress of the most gigantic war in the history of the world, there have been many international disputes settled by arbitration, or other civilized methods, but none, so far as we know, by actual test of non-resistance, by "turning the other cheek" to the smiter; by going the "second mile" when compelled to go one mile.

It is true that oftentimes, in the international controversies that have arisen, one, and sometimes both parties have been non-Christian, and Christian principles might not appeal to non-Christian peoples; yet the fact remains, that no matter what the religious profession of the nations, whether Christian, Mohammedan, Buddhist, or other type of pagan religion, war never fails to drag down to its hideous and barbaric level, all its participants, of whatever creed or country.

But, as God, Omnipotent and Omnipresent, has through His Son Jesus Christ, given us the doctrine of love and non-resistance, may we not safely trust Him, relying upon His promises, and His unfailing help?

We believe that the practicability of this teaching, and its application to the problems of life and statesmanship, are appealing to the hearts of men as never before. Long ago the Royal Psalmist wrote, "It is better to take refuge in Jehovah than to put confidence in man. It is better to take refuge in Jehovah than to put confidence in princes."—(Ps. CXVIII., 8-9, R. V.). The Savior's doctrine of non-resistance was most remarkably illustrated and enforced by His conduct on that eventful night in Gethsemane, that night of desertion and betrayal, when with all the power of God at His command (see Matt. XXVI., 53, R. V.), He would not use this power to defend Himself or resist His betrayal by Judas Iscariot, or His arrest by the forces of the high priest.

If the events of that night in the Garden seem to cause us to distrust His plan of non-resistance, as a practical thing, let it be remembered, that in the working out of the Divine plan of salvation for the whole human family, it was needful that "The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and chief priests, and be killed, and the third day be raised up." (Luke, IX, 22, R. V.) How wonderfully does the grandeur of our Saviour's example on that sad night, shine down the ages! Knowing as He did, the ignominious death that awaited him upon the cross, His humanity cried out, "Oh, my Father! if it be possible, let this cup pass away from me," but His Divinity made answer, "If this cannot pass away except I drink it, Thy will be done."

In the light of such love, such abandonment of self, is it not reasonable to believe, that in the outbreak of this war, if the nations, against whom the Teutonic campaign was launched, Belgium and France, had simply laid down their arms, or more befitting the supposition, had they been altogether UNARMED, and absolutely refused to fight, can we not feel reasonably sure that the frightful loss of life, and destruction of property would have been avoided? Had the Allies been banded together for peace instead of war, how much richer and happier would Europe be today! The German Army, prepared and efficient as it was, for the destruction of life and property, would have been useless, had there been no military forces to oppose them, no army to attack.

We cannot believe, or imagine that the Germans would have attacked or slaughtered unarmed, or inoffensive Belgians, or French. Such an act on their part, would have put upon the German Empire the brand and curse of Cain. It would go down in history, as the greatest horror of the ages.

While such an example of non-resistance would have been unique, yet we believe it would have won its way, even among the war lords of now desolated Europe, and would have prevented this cruel and needless war.

Might not the welfare of France and Belgium have been conserved by refusing to be drawn into a war, which has almost totally destroyed Belgium, and sadly devastated northern France? Would it not have been the really patriotic thing for Belgium to have done, to have saved those religious and educational institutions, most valuable to their country, and the homes and lives of their people, more important still? That non-resistance would have proved effective in the preservation of life and property in Belgium, we have no doubt, and had it been invoked, would naturally have dropped into its normal and appropriate place, as a vital asset of Christianity.

The Christian Herald of First Month 19, 1916, in an editorial, concludes thus, "More than all else we must remember that if this nation is to fulfil its destiny in the world, its reliance must be, not upon arms, but upon God."

Fellow-Christians! had the Church, had we, as individual members of the Church of Christ, been true to our mission, had we been brave enough to preach the whole Gospel of Christ, the Golden Rule, love for our enemies, non-resistance, the brotherhood of man, and the Fatherhood of God; had all these things been taught and recognized as vital and necessary parts of the mission of the Church, had they been preached with conviction, and in the power of the Spirit of Christ, the world would have a very different estimate of Christianity today.

A Christian would be Christlike! Christian nations would not be engaged in war. Non-resistance would not be counted a Utopian dream, and the world would not be resounding to the roar of cannon, nor trembling beneath the shock of contending armies. Fellow-members of the Church of Christ, the Church universal; let us stand for a Christianity that makes us Christlike. When this condition prevails, then the message, so long ago delivered, "Peace on earth, good will to men," will become a real and vital force for world-betterment, and human salvation.

Damascus, Ohio.

A FITTING TRIBUTE.

Phebe Lindley Doan of Westfield, Indiana, has expressed her intention to contribute occasionally volumes to the public library of the village in memory of her husband, Abel Doan, who died November the twenty-eighth, 1915. Arrangements are being made for a book plate with suitable inscription. Although a uniformly successful man of affairs, this recently deceased Friend was also an unusually widely and deeply read person. Many men, women and children treasure the gift books chosen from the world's best literature which Abel Doan laid in their way at times of particular need in their lives. This unobtrusive memorial to his memory is thus a fitting manner of continuing the work so long and quietly carried on by him.

The deceased was a son of John and

Worth Careful Thought

Do you read the label to know whether your baking powder is made from cream of tartar or, on the other hand, from alum or phosphate?

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes, and adds to the food only wholesome qualities.

Other baking powders contain alum or phosphate, both of mineral origin, and used as substitutes for cream of tartar because of their cheapness.

Never sacrifice quality and healthfulness for low price.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

Eunice Hadley Doan; born at Mooresville, Indiana, in 1843. At the age of thirteen he came with his parents to the present Doan homestead in Westfield. After reaching manhood he became closely identified with the business, educational, reform and charitable agencies of his community, and severed his Monthly, Quarterly and Yearly Meetings in various capacities.

His surviving children are: Mary Doan Hole, Richmond, Indiana; Martha Doan, Earlham College; Emma Doan Furnas, Westfield, Indiana; John Lindley Doan, School of Horticulture for Women, Ambler, Pa.; Anna Doan Stephens, Muncie, Indiana, and Frances Doan Streightoff, Greencastle, Indiana. The youngest son, Edwin Lindley Doan died two years ago.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On the afternoon of February 21, a number of the relatives of Abel and Lucinda Gilbert gathered at their home at Hopewell, Henry County, Indiana, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. After the company had assembled a portion of Scripture was read and prayer offered. Extracts from the minutes of Hopewell Monthly Meeting of 1866, liberating them to accomplish their marriage according to the custom of Friends, were read, after which they stood and repeated the ceremony as they did in the old meeting house at Hopewell fifty years ago.

The marriage certificate was read and it was found that of the fifty persons who signed it as witnesses, only four are living. But two persons who attended the wedding were present on this occasion. During the happy social hour, which followed, refreshments were served and the guests departed with the memory of an event which occurs in the lives of but few people.

ASSISTING ALIENS.

Anna B. Thomas, Secretary of the Emergency Committee for the Assistance of Germans, Austrians and Hungarians in distress, writing to The American Friend from London, England, under date of February 17, says: "We are in urgent need at the present moment of increased subscriptions to carry on the work. We hope you will kindly encourage Friends and others to help us as generously as they can this year." The American Friend will be glad to receive and forward any contributions for this important work which English Friends are doing at the present time. Contributions should be marked "Alien Relief Fund."

THE IOWA PAGE

BIBLE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

A Teacher Training class has been organized at Liberty of about 15 members. They are using Hurlbut's Course and the class is held on Wednesday evening, in connection with the mid-week prayer meeting. A very fine interest is being manifest in the work.

The Bible School at Center has recently had a reorganization of officers: E. W. Day being elected as Superintendent. A Cradle Roll Department has just been organized with Orpha Osborn as Superintendent and Mrs. Moses Mendenhall as assistant. The class of boys and girls taught by our pastor, Moses Mendenhall, has recently been organized. The Young People's class is also an organized class. They recently spent a very pleasant evening at the home of their teacher, Irving Wilson. Leah Baldwin, a member of this class, is correspondent for our school.

The Bible School at Illinois Grove has recently organized a Teacher Training Class of 10 members, which is taught by the pastor, Leslie McCarger. The class meets on Thursday afternoon and a good degree of interest is being shown.

C. E. DEPARTMENT. Des Moines.

On February 20, we had the pleasure of having with us Ora W. Carrell, Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor Work. He spoke at the morning service on "Missions," which was a fore-runner for the Laymen's Missionary Convention which was held at Des Moines February 20-22.

At 5:30 in one of the lower rooms of the church, Mr. Carrell was the guest of honor at an informal gathering, and at this time he told of his work in Iowa Yearly Meeting, especially of the Christian Endeavor work. A lunch was served by the Social Committee of the Christian Endeavor Society.

At the regular Christian Endeavor hour, we adjourned to the C. E. room and Mr. Carrell in the first half of the meeting spoke on the topic for the evening, "How to Put the Bible into Life." Then he continued his talk, explaining the C. E. Union work of Iowa Yearly Meeting. He especially made the appeal that the young people need to attend the sessions of Iowa Yearly Meeting pertaining to C. E. work.

The Wheat Yield Tells the Story

of Western Canada's Rapid Progress

The heavy crops in Western Canada have caused new records to be made in the handling of grains by railroads. For while the movement of these heavy shipments has been wonderfully rapid, the resources of the different roads, despite enlarged equipments and increased facilities, have been strained as never before, and previous records have thus been broken in all directions. The largest Canadian wheat shipments through New York ever known are reported for the period up to October 15th, upwards of four and a quarter million bushels being exported in less than six weeks, and this was but the overflow of shipments to Montreal, through which point shipments were much larger than to New York.

Yields as high as 60 bushels of wheat per acre are reported from all parts of the country; while yields of 45 bushels per acre are common.

Thousands of American farmers have taken part in this wonderful production. Land prices are still low and free homestead lands are easily secured in good localities, convenient to churches, schools, markets, railways, etc.

There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

Write for illustrated pamphlet, reduced railroad rates and other information to
G. W. Aird, 512 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.
 Canadian Government Agent.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

He told of the Young Friends activities, the one especially that had been held at Winona Lake, Indiana, but which has been changed to Cedar Lake, Indiana. It is the wish of the writer that Des Moines C. E. will be represented at this conference. As this was the first day of The Laymen's Missionary Convention in Des Moines, we had the pleasure of having at our C. E., members of other Christian Endeavor Societies in the Yearly Meeting. At the evening service Mr. Carrell gave an address on "The Model Sunday School." We, the Des Moines Endeavorers, welcome Ora Carrell at any time.

FIELD NOTES.

Albion, Ia.—Howard Cope, pastor at Hartland, Iowa., closed a series of meetings here on February 13. Trouble among the members had resulted in the meeting going down, no services being held except Monthly Meeting. A request had been sent to the Quarterly Meeting to lay this meeting down, and the Quarterly Meeting appointed a committee to look into the situation. The committee arranged with Howard Cope to preach here on Sabbath afternoons and after one month of these services he held a two-weeks' series. The church was greatly awakened and about fifteen were at the altar. William Sheckles, of Somerville, Ohio, was present to conduct the singing and did splendid work. The meeting with the aid of the Quarterly Meeting is now ready to employ a pastor and go to work again.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Laymen's

Missionary Convention held in Des Moines February 20-22 was well attended by Friends from all over the state, while many from the local church registered as delegates. Ora W. Carrell, who is Field Secretary for Missions, Bible Schools, Endeavorers and Penn College, gave a splendid address in the local meeting on Sunday morning while here attending the Convention.

The Home Missionary Society of the local meeting had the privilege recently of listening to an address by Mrs. Wilson, who is the instigator of the "police woman" in Des Moines. It was an interesting and instructive address.

Miss Sara C. Kirk, a member of the Friends Church in Des Moines and a teacher in the Des Moines Sunday School Institute, for ten years religious work director of the Y. W. C. A., left Des Moines the latter part of February to take charge of the same department in the Baltimore Association.

On the afternoon of February 12 the Elizabeth Fry class of the local meeting was entertained at the beautiful home of Mrs. C. A. Swanson as a farewell courtesy for their teacher, Sara Kirk. The hostess was assisted by Myrtle Shoemaker, Effie Stanley and Verna Coffin. A social time was greatly enjoyed and refreshments were served in the dining room, after which speeches were made by Elizabeth Keates, M. Emma Newby, Margaret Burt and other members of the class, all of whom told how Sara Kirk's teaching had helped and benefited them. She replied with appropriate and touching remarks.

CHURCH AT WORK

Richmond, Indiana—On Tuesday evening, February 22, the congregation of East Main Street Friends Church, together with a number of invited guests, gathered together for their annual supper. It was arranged as a Colonial affair and guests were received at the doors of the church parlors by George and Martha Washington, impersonated by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dalbey. At 6:30 o'clock a bountiful supper was served in the large dining room to about two hundred and fifty persons. At the conclusion of the supper the following program was rendered: Patriotic song by two little girls, Lucile and Elizabeth Mote. We were greatly favored by the presence of Joseph Elkin-ton, a prominent Friend of Philadelphia, who returned from a trip to Japan last fall, and who made some very interesting remarks. Mrs. Shallenberg gave a reading from "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." The girls' quartet of the church then gave two numbers and Mrs. Shallenberg gave another reading. Then followed a dialogue, "Life Experiences of Six Old Maids and Six Old Bachelors." Timely remarks were made by the pastor, Milo S. Hinckle, and by Truman C. Kenworthy. The little Mote girls sang another song and the benediction was pronounced by the pastor. It was an enjoyable occasion which has added much to the social life of the church.

Greensboro, N. C.—About thirty of the members of the Ashboro Street meeting here have organized a Quaker Round Table. The meetings are held twice a month, with an interesting paper on some phase of Friends' history followed by discussion. Mary M. Hobbs, of Guilford College, started the course with a paper on "Religious and Political Conditions in England Leading up to the Rise of Quakerism." Dr. L. L. Hobbs, of Guilford College, two weeks later spoke on "The Modern Conception of the Inner Light." Dr. Ledbetter led the discussion on George Fox.

Greensboro Friends were glad to have Lewis McFarland, Yearly Meeting Superintendent, present at Sabbath morning service on January 30. On February 14 an overflow meeting of the Laymen's Missionary Convention was held at the Ashboro Street Friends Church. The Westminster Presbyterian congregation united and

Bed Spreads, Pillow Cases, Sheets

For Spring and Summer-Attractively Priced

Dependable qualities, of a kind that have added to the fame of our Bedfurnishing Store:

BED SPREADS—best quality, American made; white Crinkled Dimity, 63x99 inches, $1.50; 72x99 inches, $1.75; 80x99 inches, $2.00; 90x100 inches, $2.25. Of white corded dimity, 63x99 inches, $1.75; 72x99 inches, $2.00; 80x99 inches, $2.25; 90x100 inches, $2.50. Crochet weave, in Marseilles design, size 78x88 inches, $1.75. Marseilles Spreads, white satin finish, size 80x90 inches, $2.50. Fine quality Marseilles Spreads, satin finish, with scalloped edges and corners, cut for 4 feet 6-inch metal beds, size 88x98 inches, $5.00.

SHEETS—Strawbridge & Clothier special brand, bleached muslin of standard quality; size 63x90 inches, 80c; 72x90 inches, 85c; 81x90 inches, 90c. Extra lengths, 63x99 inches, 90c; 72x99 inches, 95c; 81x99 inches, $1.00; 90x99 inches, $1.10.

PILLOW CASES—S. & C. Special brand, bleached muslin; size 42x36 inches, 22c; 45x38½ inches, 25c; 50x38½ inches, 30c.

A Wide Assortment of Blankets and Comfortables.

Hundreds from which to choose, all marked at prices that are an exceptional economical inducement, because the bulk of our great stock was bought before the advance in manufacturers' prices.

Please mention this publication.

Strawbridge & Clothier

Philadelphia, Penna.

Dr. Lilly, presiding officer of the Convention, pointing to biblical laymen as examples, pleaded with the men of today to take their place in the work of the church.

The Christian Endeavor Convention of the Northwestern District was held in the Presbyterian Church of The Covenant, January 15, 16. Eli Barker, one of our young Friends, is president of this district and more Societies were organized during the year than in any other district in the state. Fred E. Smith, pastor of our meeting, is chairman of Young People's Activities in the Yearly Meeting, and through his efforts the work is growing in interest. A Young Friends' Conference will be held at Guilford College in June.

Wichita, Kan.—Eli Reece has just closed an eighteen-day evangelistic campaign at University Friends church. His work was crowned with gratifying success, and his teaching was highly appreciated by the church as a whole. Several students and others were converted or received the blessing of the Holy Spirit during the meetings. Evangelist Reece is now engaged in a similar effort at Argonia, Kansas.

Salem, Ohio—A three weeks' revival meeting has just closed at Salem. Charles E. Hayworth, pastor of the meeting at Damascus, Ohio, was the evangelist with Clarence Sams leader in song. These meetings throughout were characterized by the manifest presence and working of the Holy Spirit. Over forty knelt at the altar for pardon or purity and we have reason to believe that the Lord graciously answered their petitions. The church has been encouraged and strengthened. A number have applied for membership.

Bloomington, Indiana—Bloomington Quarterly Meeting was held here February 18-20 with a good degree of interest manifested in all the different lines of work. Mead A. Kelsey, of Richmond, Indiana, Field Agent of the National Christian Association, was present and brought helpful and inspiring messages in the meeting for ministry and oversight, in the meeting for worship on Saturday and also on Sabbath morning at eleven o'clock. On Sabbath evening he gave an impressive discourse on "Why We Oppose Secret Orders," and held the closest attention of the audience as he presented most convincing arguments against secret orders. This presentation, it is believed, will do much good, especially in influencing young people, in strengthening their loyalty in the faith of their ancestors in regard to secret societies.

In the missionary conference on the morning of the 19, four young women reviewed the work in Mexico, Cuba, Jamaica and Africa. In the Bible School Conference on Sabbath morning a very interesting paper was read by Solomon B. Woodard on "The History of Bible School Work in Bloomington Quarterly Meeting." Mead A. Kelsey gave a practical talk on "Efficiency in Bible School Work."

Spring Valley, Ohio—Miami Quarterly Meeting was held at Spring Valley February 11, 12. On Saturday we were favored with the acceptable presence of Alice Lawrence of Dunreith, Indiana, who is engaged in an evangelistic effort at Waynesville, Ohio, who delivered an ably prepared missionary address. We also had a stirring exhortation from Samuel Mosher of Mt. Gilead, Ohio, who is holding a series of meetings at Chester, a country meeting near Wilmington. Samuel and Lulu Mosher enriched the meeting further by their service of song. Homer G. Biddlecum of Xenia, supplemented the remarks of Alice Lawrence by pointed remarks concerning the Laymen's Missionary Conference which had been held in Dayton, Ohio, a few days before. The business of the meeting was conducted in its usual well ordered way and the clerks were instructed to send a letter of sympathy to Elma D. Cook, whose illness has confined her to her home for some time. For many years she has faithfully served this meeting as reading clerk.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON MARCH 19.

Subject—Philip and the Ethiopian.
Lesson—Acts 8:26—40.

Golden Text—Understandest thou what thou readest? Acts 8:30.

This incident introduces us to what we may call the second period of Christianity. It is also the beginning, so far as our extant accounts tell us, of the widening of the circle of Christian activity. It further interests us because we have here an account of another of the deacons who turns evangelist. Philip's work does not end in a tragedy as did Stephen's. We should further note that the preaching of the Gospel is not now limited to the twelve. A little later we may have occasion to see how quickly the active propagation of the Gospel outside of Jerusalem and Judea passed into the hands of others than the immediate first circle.

This second period was launched as

SHARES

In

The Indiana Rural Credit Association

Are offered for investment. They are non-taxable and mortgage loans are made only to shareholders upon farm property.

Loans may run 10, 20 and 30 years. Small annual payments repay principal and interest.

Ask for Booklet.

MORD CARTER, President,
1214 Merchants Bank Building
Indianapolis, Ind.

a result of the persecution in Jerusalem which followed the death of Stephen. It seems however that the Apostles remained in the city; at least they seem to send Peter and John from there to Samaria to superintend the new situation resulting from Philip's preaching.

From Samaria our evangelist passes southward, under divine direction, and had his opportunity with the Ethiopian Eunuch. Whether there were further results of his effort other than the conversion of that trusted servant we do not know. He had probably been visiting Jerusalem on some mission and was now returning to his queen. It is interesting to note that he was able to read and that he was acquainted with the scriptures of the Hebrews. What was the language in which he was reading this passage? Was it Hebrew, Greek or had the scriptures been translated into his own native tongue? All questions which we are unable to answer.

About whom was this prophet speaking, himself or some other man? This gave Philip his opportunity. This was a favorite Messianic passage in the Christian circle and has so remained to this day. It is from a beautiful section, one very puzzling in some of its aspects, presenting problems over which scholars have pondered a great deal, but with great unanimity they agree with Philip in this that no man so fulfilled the ideals set forth by the prophet as did Jesus. The explanation and winning testimony of his teacher so impressed the seeker that he was quite willing to openly declare his new faith.

The prescribed method of initiating a proselyte into the Jewish faith was through a ceremony which included a baptism in water. For a long time the Jerusalem Jews, who became Christians maintained that their faith was but the divine turn given to the faith of their fathers, theirs was the logical development of the religion of the prophets so they continued to use the old services in the new light, in memory of the Messiah who had just left them. How natural then that they should initiate their Christian converts, when coming from non Jewish stock, by the same formula used to initiate the converts to Judaism; indeed it seems quite certain that they thought that these Gentiles must become Jews before they could become Christians. The change in emphasis did not come until Paul began to preach among the non Jewish populations whom he met on his journey. His experiences soon convinced him that the Mosiac ceremonies were nailed to the cross with Jesus and that thus the Gentiles were free from Jewish ceremony.

PACIFIC COLLEGE FUND.

Levi T. Pennington, President of Pacific College at Newberg, Oregon, is now in Indiana seeking to complete as quickly as possible the fund to make up a deficit that arose while the $100,000 endowment fund was being raised for the permanent maintenance of the College. In permanent advantages, such as adequate buildings, laboratories and library, strength of faculty and permanent endowment fund, the College is in the best condition in its history. But a fund of $10,000 is absolutely necessary to carry the College over the difficulties attendant on the raising of its endowment. The campaign for this fund is fully endorsed by the Board of Education of the Five Years Meeting of Friends in America, and Friends in the east have responded most generously to the call for help. If the Friends of Indiana and Western Yearly Meetings and others who are interested, will respond promptly, the fund can be completed in a very short time. Contributions may be sent in care of The American Friend.

NOTES FROM CHICAGO.

At the Chicago monthly meeting held in first month, seven new members were received: Dr. Willard S. and Faith Hastings, and their daughter, Edith, Norman and Magdolina Tolson; J. Irving Parker and Walter Cammack. Dr. Hastings is instructor in pathological bacteriology at the Honeman Medical College. Norman Tolson and his wife are both artists and came to Friends from the Presbyterian. Irving Parker is a young man from Kansas, a graduate of Friends University, now doing work in the Wilson Ave. Y. M. C. A. Walter Cammack is a young graduate of Whittier College and is doing work at the Y. M. C. A. College, in Chicago.

At the Monthly Meeting held in second month, a certificate of membership for Marjorie Hill Allee and minor son, Warner Allee, was received from Walnut Ridge Monthly Meeting, Indiana. The Allees are living in Lake Forest, where Professor Allee is located in the University.

OAK GROVE SEMINARY.

Profoundly believing in the type of Quaker cultural training given at Oak Grove Seminary, Vassalboro, Maine, the Board of Managers has voted to place the school on a more substantial, permanent footing. The present administration is to be retained; a campaign for fifty thousand dollars additional endowment is to be at once inaugurated, and plans for far-reaching extension have been made. The Friends of America have but few real Quaker preparatory schools left on this continent. We cannot afford to lose one that we have. It is to be hoped that as the Oak Grove project is launched it may be met with an enthusiasm equal to its importance. Big things are bound to come for its future.

Sincerely yours,

LOUIS T. JONES.

YEARLY MEETING 1916.

Philadelphia—Fourth & Arch Streets, Philadelphia. (Other data not at hand).

New York—At Poughkeepsie, May 24—Clerk, James Wood, Mt. Kisco, N. Y.

Nebraska—At Central City, Neb., May 30 to June 4. Clerk, Eli H. Parish, Central City.

Oregon—At Newberg, Oregon, June 7-13. Clerk Levi T. Pennington, Newberg, Ore.

New England—At Oak Grove Seminary, Vassalboro, Me., June 26-July 2. Clerk, Walter S. Meader, Gonic, N. H.

California—At Whittier, June 26-July 3. Clerk, John Chawner, 765 Summit Avenue, Pasadena, California.

North Carolina—At Guilford College, August 8-14. Clerk, L. L. Hobbs, Guilford College, N. C.

Wilmington—At Wilmington, Ohio, August 16-22. Clerk, Albert J. Brown, Wilmington, Ohio.

Ohio—At Damascus, Ohio, August 22—Clerk, Edward Mott, 58 Coit Avenue, East Cleveland, Ohio.

Iowa—At Oskaloosa, August 28-September 3. Clerk, S. M. Hadley, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Canada—At Pickering College, Newmarket, Ontario, Canada, September 7—Clerk, William Harris, Rockwood, Ont., Canada.

Western—At Plainfield, Indiana, September 12-18. Clerk, W. O. Trueblood, 313 East 13 Street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Indiana—At Richmond, Indiana, September 18-24. Clerk, Robert L. Kelly, Earlham, Indiana.

Kansas—At Wichita, Kansas, October 3-9. Clerk, Edmund Stanley, Wichita, Kansas.

Baltimore—At Baltimore, Md., November 17-22. Clerk, Allen C. Thomas, Havertford, Pa.

POSITION WANTED. Companion-nurse to semi-invalid or elderly lady, or will assist with management of a home. Refined capable woman desires position in Philadelphia or suburbs. Highest reference. Address W, American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

contains 288 pages, four color and four duotone plates, besides numberless photographic true-to-life reproductions. It lists all the standard varieties of Flowers and Vegetables, as well as the best of the season's novelties.

The newest Roses, the best Dahlias, and Dreer's Improved Hardy Perennials are given special prominence.

Sent free to any one mentioning this weekly.

Dreer's Orchid-Flowered Sweet Peas—with immense wavy flowers in sprays of 3 and 4 blossoms each. Our mixture contains a full range of colors, 10 cents per packet, 25 cents per ounce, 60 cents per 1/4 pound. Garden Book free with each order.

HENRY A. DREER 714-716 CHESTNUT ST. PHILADELPHIA

Christian Endeavor Supplies

BOOKS

Bible Chains.....	$0.35
Child's Quiet Hour.....	.35
Christian Endeavor Manual.....	1.00
Clean and Strong.....	1.00
Enjoyable Entertainments.....	1.00
Fifty Missionary Programmes....	.35
F. E. Clark Year Book.....	.50
Good Times With The Juniors.....	.50
Junior Endeavor.....	1.00
Manual of Physical Training.....	1.00
Prayers for the Quiet Hour.....	1.00
Why We Believe the Bible.....	1.00
Adventures in Tibet.....	1.50
Bible in Lesson and Story.....	1.25
Citizens in Training.....	.35
Continent of Opportunity.....	1.50
Daily Message for Christian Endeavorers.....	1.00
And many others.

HYMN BOOKS

(Purchaser pays shipping charges)
Service Songs (in quantities).....	$0.20
Jubilant Praise (in quantities)....	.20
The Praise Book (in quantities)....	.25
The Endeavor Hymnal (in quantities).....	.25
And others.

PINS AND NOVELTIES

Various Endeavor Pins, ranging in price: Solid gold, from 60c to $1.50; and in silver from 15c to 75c.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

Present Day Message of Quakerism.....	$1.00
Men's Conference Proceedings, paper, 75c; cloth.....	1.00
Monthly Meeting Chronicle.....	.15

Send orders for the above to

THE AMERICAN FRIEND
RICHMOND, INDIANA

Nicholson & Bro., Richmond, Ind.

Friends' Marriage Certificates:

On Parchment, postpaid.....	$3.00
On Bond Paper, postpaid.....	$1.10
Books at publishers' prices, postpaid.
Remit by P. O. order.

MARRIED

Reece-Seabury—At the home of Samuel L. Haworth, pastor of the meeting at Minneapolis, Minnesota, February 23, 1916, Ethmer Reece of Iowa Falls, Iowa, and Nellie S. Seabury of Union, Iowa, Samuel L. Haworth officiating.

BORN

Cosand—At Georgetown, Illinois, February 20, 1916, to Lyman G. and Nora Carter Cosand, a daughter, Miriam Elizabeth.

DIED

Balderston—Rachel E. Balderston died at her home in Philadelphia January 5, 1916, aged 75 years. Her life was utterly unselfish and was devoted to the best interests of her family and friends. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of friends and various testimonies were given to the sweetness and helpfulness of her life.

Bowles—Rachel Bowles, daughter of Elias and Deborah Hadley, was born at Monrovia, Indiana, July 19, 1836, and died January 6, 1916, aged 79 years. She married Alfred Bowles in 1857. She was a life long Friend and adhered strictly to the Friends' principles. Her every day life bore testimony to the divine life within. She was baptized in suffering which was very intense and was often heard praying for help during her last sickness. Two sons and three daughters survive her. Funeral services were conducted by Joseph Winslow and T. J. Burrige.

Clark—Anna Clark, daughter of Alfred and Annie J. Clark (the former deceased) and a member of West Union Monthly Meeting near Monrovia, Indiana, died at Whittier, California, December 22, 1915. Worn with a number of years teaching in the home schools she sought health and restoration in California. After two years of suffering with heart trouble she passed peacefully away trusting in the mercy of her Savior who called her up higher.

Cook—Daniel H. Cook was born at Vermilion Grove, Illinois, February 27, 1855, and died at his home near Strathmore, California, January 6, 1916, after a brief illness of pneumonia. He was a birthright Friend and always interested and active in the work of the church. He was recorded a minister in 1895 by the Monthly Meeting at Oskaloosa, Iowa. He had been especially active in Sunday school work in recent years. Services were held at the home and at the Friends church in Lindsay, California, in charge of Harry Rimmer, pastor of the Lindsay Friends Church and Samuel B. Harris, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Strathmore. He is survived by the widow and only daughter.

Evans—James Evans, a member of Haviland meeting, Kansas, was born near Georgetown, Ohio, August 25, 1836, and died at Haviland, Kansas, January 16, 1916, aged 79 years, 4 months and 22 days. He left the testimony that he was ready for the change.

Kinzer—Jacob Kinzer, an old resident and esteemed member of the Friends Church at Carmel, Indiana, died at the home of his son January 7, 1916, aged 78 years, 9 months and 6 days. His wife died several years ago. He leaves three sons and one daughter. Funeral services were held at the Friends Church in Carmel conducted by Lewis E. Stout, the pastor.

Kirk—Nathan Kirk, son of Mahlon and Sarah Stanley Kirk, was born in Columbia County, Ohio, November 17, 1832, and died at Bangor, Iowa, October 23, 1915. He married Abigail Whinnery in 1853, moving to Marshall County, Iowa, in 1866, where they settled at Bangor. He was a birthright Friend, was successful in business and always active in the affairs of the church, being for many years one of the main financial contributors. He is survived by one son. Funeral services were held at the Friends church in charge of N. M. Hodgins, assisted by W. S. Kitch, the pastor, I. N. Rich, of Marshalltown, and Mr. Clayton, of Clemons. Interment was in Bangor cemetery.

WANTED a middle aged Christian woman that wants a good home and small wages, no hard work, but will help to be a companion to afflicted wife. David Hammar, Box 382, Jefferson, Iowa.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES

A tenfold lesson equipment, secured for anybody anywhere for $1.00.

PHARIBA W. STEPHENS,
111 S. 16 Street, Richmond, Ind.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED in a private home in Washington. Convenient to car line and Union Station.
Laura N. Wilson,
46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union,
2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.
Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.
Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills
Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.
Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward
Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 11.

THIRD MONTH 16, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 11.

Peace

Peace will not come with pomp and pageantry.

With gathering crowds, and unfurled banners bright;

She will not come with gold and gems bedight,
Nor pride-puffed envoys, sailing over-seas.

Peace comes not in a guise like this, but she Comes to the soul, led by Love's steady light,—

Trained high in purpose, by Truth's changeless might—

To those who pray alone and ceaselessly.

When you and I shall love each other well;

Shall put away vain strivings after gold

And fame and power, a blossom will unfold

White, shining petals, and its fragrant spell

Shall draw Peace hitherward with Man to dwell,

The Rose of the Millennium behold!

—L. A. Sherman, in Springfield Republican.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.
For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Some Important "Do Nots"

Do not send news matter or manuscripts offered for publication to the office at Urbana. The editorial office is at Richmond, Indiana.

Do not send payment for the Men's Conference proceedings to Urbana. These remittances should be sent to S. E. Nicholson, Richmond, Indiana.

Do not forget to give both the new and old address when asking for a change of address on AMERICAN FRIEND subscriptions.

Do not forget to give the name of the subscriber when remittances are made on subscriptions to THE AMERICAN FRIEND.

Do not forget to send remittances on subscriptions to the office at Urbana, Ohio, which is the publication office. All other correspondence except about subscriptions should be sent to the main office at Richmond, Indiana.

American Friend Day

Of course there were a number of meetings that either forgot or ignored American Friend Day on March 5. Will not such meetings on next Sabbath give attention to this most important matter? We are confident that many more subscribers can be secured if only our meetings generally will observe the day. It is a matter of the utmost importance that every meeting give attention to this subject.

Our Advertisers

THE AMERICAN FRIEND management has endeavored to be extremely careful about the character of the advertisements found in these columns. We believe that all advertisers whose offerings are accepted are worthy of patronage. We believe that our subscribers owe it to the publication to patronize these advertisers and when corresponding with these firms mention should be made about THE AMERICAN FRIEND. These firms always have something to say that is worth while.

Men's Conference Proceedings

One hundred and eighty-six persons have not yet sent in their remittance for their printed copy or copies of the Men's Conference proceedings at Richmond, Indiana, last October. It is important that subscribers do not compel us to send statement, which will require additional postage and will, therefore, add to the already large cost of publication. Please let this notice serve as a reminder that you have not yet made remittance. Send payment to S. E. Nicholson, Richmond, Indiana. The price to registered delegates is, paper cover 50 cents, cloth 75 cents. To all others, 25 cents additional.

There are a number of other extra copies on hands which ought to be in the libraries of our members and meetings. There are few other publications which contain so much high-grade literature. Why not order today?

Our Washington Letter

It is easily seen that the "preparedness" people are not having things all their own way. There is no abatement in the activities of those working against the "preparedness" program. It is said there are no less than ninety men of the Democratic side of the House of Representatives who refuse to follow the President in his plans for the army and navy. And there are many Republicans who will stand with these men.

Probably hundreds of thousands of copies of speeches in Congress and statements before committees have gone out. Good use is being made of the statements of such men as General Nelson A. Miles and Walter L. Fisher, ex-Secretary of the Interior. The former had no sympathy for the so-called continental army plan; he practically laughed at the suggestion of a foreign army invading this country; he would not have a standing army of more than 150,000 men and he was absolutely opposed to compulsory service. Ex-Secretary Fisher must have been just as much of a discomfort to the "preparedness" propagandists as General Miles, as he disapproved of a big standing army and he objected to any further building of dreadnaughts for the navy. General Miles was also opposed to federalizing the National Guard.

In all of the "preparedness" clamor the assumption is strong that at present the nation is without any military protection but General Miles and other army and navy men have said things to indicate that we are already in a position to compare quite favorably with other leading powers.

The effort being made through the Friends' Peace Headquarters in Washington to persuade Friends throughout the country to tell their Congressmen what they would like done on this grave question is bringing results. Many Friends have responded and there are reports of a large number of letters sent. It is urged that there be no delay on the part of anyone who has not yet written to his Senators and Representative.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 11.

THIRD MONTH 16, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 11.

Practical and Serviceable Christianity

Under the gospel plan of redemption for the human family, there is a paramount obligation resting upon every erring individual, through repentance and the seeking of divine forgiveness, to find reconciliation with God and fellowship with His Son, Jesus Christ. This experience is fundamental to the Christian life. George Fox had to find peace of soul and a satisfaction of mind before he could enter upon his great mission of evangelism. There can be no social regeneration except through the medium of personal regeneration.

Unfortunately for the church and the interests of the kingdom of God there is all too frequently a divorce between Christian practice and Christian profession. Even among intensely spiritually minded people—judged by the fervor of their testimony—there is sometimes a laxity relative to temporal obligations that is surprising and disheartening. Christian experience that does not harmonize its deportment with the program of Jesus Christ is hypocritical and an occasion of stumbling to others.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." Of course we condemn the man who sits with the air of sanctimony in the pew on the Sabbath day, and on Monday sells goods by a short yard stick or drives a sharp bargain with one who needs sympathy and help. But what shall we say of the man who proclaims holiness unto the Lord as the fundamental basis of his Christian faith, and yet grows impatient with the more worldly minded of the flock, and becomes a gossip over the frailties of his neighbors? The church loses immeasurably because so frequently the influence of the Christian appeal is nullified by the example of un-Christian demeanor in every day life. Men speak to the world no less through the medium of conduct than by means of the spoken word. He is a poor witness indeed whose actions belie his testimony.

It is well nigh a tragedy that men will stand in the pulpit and proclaim the eternal mercies of God, and yet have little concern over the derelicts of human society, over the man or the girl who is not receiving a living wage, or the multitudes who go starving to bed because the saloon has filched the bulk of their earnings. The religion of Christ avails for the conversion of sinners, but no less must it avail to develop workmanship in the building of God's kingdom upon earth. Religion is a misnomer that does not make a man a good citizen and a sympathetic neighbor. The man who professes holiness in the sanctuary must sustain his profession throughout the remainder of the week. Men must exercise their Christianity in order to keep it. No man can be a high pressure professional and a low pressure practitioner.

The church cannot maintain its standing as the exponent of gospel truth through an avowal of interest in the soul welfare of humanity while wholly or practically indifferent to its bodily needs. Christianity must show its faith by its works, and upon no other theory can we account for the reign of evil in the world except that those who confess obedience to its precepts have not lived up to this ideal. Statesmen and diplomatists who meditate upon the unbounded love of God in the church service and then go out to practice the spirit of self-interest and to sow the seeds of international suspicion and hatred may expect to reap a harvest of bloody war. Our lawmakers cannot sing the songs of Zion on Sunday and then wear the collar of the saloon on Monday. Nor can the Christian worker grow ecstatic as he contemplates the goodness of God and under other circumstances through careless gossip work detriment to his neighbor.

Christ is summoning his church to a more practical and serviceable Christianity, to a more sympathetic fellowship with our neighbors, to a Christ-like demeanor in daily life that will win men and women to the Christian life. Holiness in life must mean holiness in action. Men who are searching for grapes will not be attracted by thorns, and those who find dross where they were seeking for gold are apt to lapse into hopeless discouragement. The world needs less of religious professionalism and more of applied Christianity, and when the church learns the art of incorporating its ideals into the warp and woof of its working membership, the day of the world wide triumph of the gospel will have been ushered in.

Evangelistic Work and the Social Problem

By ELBERT RUSSELL

One of the queries in our discipline inquires whether members of the meeting on ministry and oversight manifest "an earnest religious concern for the conversion of sinners." It is a concern which every Friend should feel.

The attempt to work out this concern, however, brings us face to face with the social problem. For converting a sinner from the error of his ways is today less than ever a simple matter of personal influence or of dealing with people as individuals.

It is a commonplace to say that people can be tempted to evil by social influences. The converse is also true; by proper influences men and women can be "tempted" to good. Evangelistic campaigns are attempts, organized on a large scale, to influence people to accept Jesus Christ. By such means it is sought to supply or strengthen the motives which lead to a Christian decision.

We believe in the freedom of the will, but we recognize that choices are never arbitrary. We recognize that the will is susceptible to social influences. Under powerful temptation a large proportion of us are pretty sure to yield. Back of those who do not yield there is pretty sure to be some strong counter-influence in past training or present environment.

On the contrary, a well organized evangelistic effort will certainly "reach" a large number of people in a community; and those whom it fails to reach are kept from yielding to its influence by evil influences in past training or present life. There are some environments in which it is very improbable that men will turn to Christ.

It follows from that that the efficiency of evangelistic work may be increased either by increasing the influences that draw men to Christ or by decreasing the influences that tend to lead men into the ways of sin and to keep them there.

I remember when this first became clear to me. I was going every night to a mission in one of the worst districts in Chicago. We succeeded in getting a few drunkards, or tramps, or other human derelicts every night to profess conversion—and it was a good work. But every door on both sides of the street for two squares from the mission was either a saloon, brothel or gambling den; while we were reclaiming a few at the mission these places were dragging down hundreds. The words, "What are we among so many?" kept ringing in my ears. I concluded that successful evangelistic work required effective work at both ends of the problem, and that whoever closed these saloons and brothels would be playing an essential part in any successful effort to save most of these men.

The social problem becomes in this way a vital part of the church's evangelistic problem. The root of the failure to get many men converted lies beyond the individuals themselves in their social environment. It was an unwelcome task of my boyhood to keep the weeds cut out of a blue grass pasture. I soon learned that when some of the weeds were cut down in July or August that was the end of them, while others it seemed would sprout up and seed almost as soon as my back was turned. I learned that these hardy weeds had great roots, roots in which was stored the reserve energy of months or years of growth. There is a great deal of human nature in weeds. The evangelist finds some who are converted easily and for good, while others can scarcely be won or quickly backslide after the revival is over. These latter will be found to be deeply rooted in some social organization that gives vitality to evil habits or influences.

The church must recognize more fully than ever before the social conditions that hinder evangelistic work and labor to remove them, while, at the same time, it seeks to supply influences and institutions that make Christian living easy and natural. The saloon, brothel, gambling joint, immoral literature and plays are recognized as hindrances to the spread of the Kingdom of Christ. Obstacles to successful evangelism not so generally recognized are fatigue induced by excessively long hours of labor which create an unnatural desire for exciting recreation and break down moral resistance to temptation; wages below the rightful scale of living, which tempt men and women to crime in order to get normal pleasures or needs of life; idleness, whether it be the enforced idleness of men who cannot find work in our fluctuating, disjointed industrial system or the voluntary idleness of the idle rich; the unnatural celibacy of young men and women, who love, but dare not marry because their jobs are too uncertain or their wages too low; competitive business, that limits or violates the law of love.

Such things hinder and nullify the work of the evangelist; they make it hard to feel the reality or practicability of the gospel; and they influence men to believe the Christian ideal impracticable or the Christian life in existing conditions impossible.

In order to remove these obstacles to the success of evangelistic efforts, it is necessary to do more than to destroy a few of the worst institutions. When we attempt to do that we find that they are intertwined with social institutions that most evangelists do not believe the church has any quarrel with. When the saloon is attacked it takes refuge in corrupt politics; and corrupt politics is fostered by private men and corporations seeking special privileges and protected by a system that removes officials from direct popular control. If we try to destroy the "white slave traffic" and to suppress prostitution we find their sources largely in wages inadequate to give working girls a normal living and too low to allow young men to marry and rear families. Wages again are kept low by the ruthless competition of cheap labor in foreign countries and in other states, by the competition of immigrant against native, of women against men, of child against woman, and by the demand of the public for cheap products, no matter what they cost the laborers in health, morals and life.

Here is a boy upon whose ears the pleas of the evangelist fall in vain. Why? Because he has served time in jail for a petty offense, society has put its unforgivable stigma of "jail-bird" upon him. He has come to hate the world for its attitude and does not believe that the God who made the world practices forgiveness any more than His professed people do. But what led the boy to the crime that thus led him to burden his heart? Statistics show that the great bulk of petty criminals are illiterate—and this boy was robbed of his chance at education by a preventable and uncompensated accident to his father in a factory or by the low wages of his father, so that he was put into the mill to help support the family when he ought to have been in school; or politicians wasted the school funds, or a rascally bank president embezzled his mother's savings.

Here is a woman who questions God's love and resists the evangelist's appeal. Why? Because her only baby was taken from her while her rich neighbor's was spared. The rich neighbor had inherited her wealth and left her child to nurses; while she herself earned her living and cared for her child with her own hands. The rich neighbor was irreligious and selfish and worldly, while she was neighborly and pious. Both children were ill with the same ailment and God spared her neighbor's child and took her own. She cannot believe the message of God's justice, let alone of His love. And what caused the death of her child? The children of the rich do not die of measles. They can afford nurses and physicians. But among the children of the very poor as high as ten per cent die from measles because of poverty. There are 90,000 babies that die in the United States every year from socially preventable causes—die from ignorance and poverty—and every such case becomes in some degree an obstacle to the evangelization of the world.

The work of building up a Christian social order is an essential part of the evangelistic task of the church. Christian faith finds it hard to maintain itself in an anti-Christian atmosphere. The spirit of the age largely determines our beliefs. In seventeenth century England it was easy to convince people that some one was a witch because everybody believed in witches and feared them. Today, for similar reasons, we do not believe there are witches and no proof is required. The spirit of organized society disposes people to accept or reject Christianity, because seen through the social atmosphere, it looks real or unreal. In a society where the soldier is honored above the workman; a society that cultivates and builds on class distinctions, race prejudice, and international hatred; where the idle rich are envied and material accumulation at the expense of character is called success; where ruthless competition is the law of business, where religion is perfunctory and formal, and men believe in material laws and forces, but are agnostic as to the soul and God—in such a society it takes hard work to even convince a sinner that the gospel is true, to say nothing of turning him from his evil way.

On the other hand, in a society where character is valued above wealth; where peaceful pursuits are honored above military service; where co-operation is the law of business and service the test of greatness; where religion is a vital force in life; where men believe in God and the spiritual world is regarded as real and of supreme value; and where brotherhood is the social ideal—in such a society the truth of the gospel of Christ would seem self-evident, and Jesus appear the normal ideal of humanity.

Baltimore, Md.

What Think Ye of Christ?

No. 2

By LUKE WOODARD.

The right view of Christianity hinges upon the correct answer to the question at the head of this article. We are dependent for such answer on the New Testament record of His life, including its account of His person, His sayings and His works, and especially His death on the cross, together with its divinely revealed purpose emphasized by His resurrection and ascension.

One sometimes hears the expression: "The fact of the Atonement must be distinguished from theories of the Atonement." It is true that a matter of fact is not altered by an opinion concerning it, but it is easy to show by many illustrations that our opinion about a thing may very seriously affect us. Thus: it is related of a certain wealthy prince that he chose a novel way to bestow a benefit upon a poor but worthy peasant. He enclosed in a small box some valuable gems in their rough state, and sent them to his poor friend with a note signed by himself, informing him that the enclosed was designed for his benefit. The recipient, unfamiliar with gems, on opening the box supposed the contents were worthless pebbles and felt himself to be the victim of a practical joke and angrily threw them away. Some time afterwards when the prince met him he asked him if he had received the present he had sent him. He replied, "I received a parcel of stones." "What did you do with them?" "Do? I threw them away. It is bad enough to be poor without being ridiculed for your poverty."

This man thought this box contained only worthless pebbles; they were diamonds, nevertheless. His opinion did not change the fact. But a mistaken opinion resulted in his missing the benefit his friend intended and which had he trusted the prince would have lifted him out of poverty. Likewise whatever men may think of Christ their opinions do not change Him.

The apostle speaks of some to whom Christ crucified was preached a stumbling block. Instead of building on that foundation, they stumbled at that stumbling stone. In contrast with this, "He was chosen of God and precious," and this Christ, without change in Himself, was also precious to those who had come to know Him experimentally. "To you therefore, that believe He is precious!" I Pet. 2:7.

While men's opinions did not then, and do not now, change divine facts, what men think of Christ will shape their action and change their destiny. "He that believeth on the Son of God hath everlasting life." While on the other hand Christ says: "If ye believe not that I am He, ye shall die in your sins." Manifestly because, not believing, they will not come to Him for salvation. To those of this class He says: "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life."

My illustration, the prince and the peasant, will serve to show the great importance of the right answer to the question, "What think ye of Christ?" It is evident that in order to give such an answer, reliable testimony must be afforded. Such testimony is given in the Holy Scriptures of which Christ says, "They testify of me." And John says further: "These things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, and that believing, ye might have life through His name." "Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

In addition there is a cloud of most trustworthy witnesses who can testify from experience that these things are true, and can say with Peter that "Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God," and that they have realized that He has power on earth to forgive sins; and His spirit is ever present to confirm the testimony of these witnesses.

But we should ever bear in mind that saving faith is something more than mere opinion, however correct that opinion. Intellectual conviction of the truth is well, but something more is needed. Many saw Him when He was on earth, heard His words, beheld His miracles, and believed these things as facts, and yet did not believe on Him. He said to some of these, "Ye also have seen me and believe not." A divine influence operating within is needed. "No man," said our Lord, "can come to me except the Father which has sent me draw him," and to this drawing the individual must yield. As bread must be eaten to give physical life, so He, as the true bread, must be partaken of spiritually in order that we may have spiritual life.

Fountain City, Indiana.

Whoever has good executive ability, the power to make things go, to bring things to pass, will miss the better part of his life if he does not share his blessings with others. He should leap for opportunities of serving mankind in positions of oversight and leadership.

Idealism vs. Expediency

By ALFRED MITCHELL DAME.

The ancient Greek historian, Herodotus, in his account of one of the nomadic tribes of Scythia, tells a story that may well arrest our attention at this crisis in the world's history. After describing their dwellings, he says: "No men molest them, for they are called holy. But they possess no weapon of war. They act as arbitrators in their neighbors' disputes, and whosoever flees and takes refuge with them is immune from harm."

Here is a tribe, in the dim past, putting in practice those principles of non-resistance that we have so long cherished. They commanded not only the respect but even the reverence of their neighbors. Why? Because they were living out an ideal.

In these days, when our peace principles are confronted by the opposition of an increasing array of statesmen, legislators, educators and thoughtful men of all shades of political and religious belief, who seem to be swept by an irresistible tide into the advocacy of the Old World military system, there appears to be one encouraging symptom. I refer to the frequency with which advocates of force are admitting that Christianity and war are irreconcilable.

Professor G. Lowes Dickinson, who is touring the United States in the interests of the League to Enforce Peace, has recently written as follows of the pacifists: "The one party—the extremer pacifists, and perhaps the more logical—say that treaties must be their own sanction. The whole point of peace is that men rely on law, and not on force. And to attempt to secure peace by arms is, and always has been, the fundamental error of mankind. This attitude, I think, goes along with the complete and uncompromising application of Christian ethics. Those who hold it would probably say that force should never be resisted by force. They would expect to conquer force by meekness. They are the real Christians. And I respect and honor them in proportion to their sincerity. But I cannot go with them. What is more important, I know well that almost nobody goes with them."

Here we have a man of profound learning, a man genuinely desirous of peace, advocating the use of force to insure it and at the same time openly admitting that our principle of non-resistance is the Christian attitude. In other words, he is on the brink of an ideal, seeing the vision, hearing the call, but hesitating to break away entirely from the shackles of Old World methods. The ideal is too visionary; too many men are against him.

Once more Professor Dickinson recognizes the strength of our position. "Every dogma of conscience," he says, "is irrefutable," and "I hope, therefore, that after meeting the opposition of the skeptics and the practical men, I shall not have to meet that of the idealists." Surely this, from a man of his standing, is significant.

From another quarter comes a similarly encouraging remark. Professor Bliss Perry, of Harvard University, is quoted as having recently said, in an address before the Congregational Club of Boston: "Never have I seen a peace-at-any-price man. If I were to see one, I would take off my hat to him, for though my judgment does not go with him, I honor the way in which he reads the New Testament."

I have felt that somehow or other we as a Society have not been letting our voice be heard sufficiently in this grave crisis. Such indications as I have cited seem to show what is stirring in men's minds and hearts: the spark is there, let us fan it into a blaze.

Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

Two Weeks in Jamaica

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS

(Continued)

An Ideal Sunday Service.

On Sunday, January 23rd, we attended in the morning the meeting at Fellowship. A lovely drive of four and one-half miles, mostly up hill, over a fine English road, up a beautiful mountain valley, brought us to a little chapel nestling in a grove (they call it "walk") of bananas. Down below us was a fine view of the valley, with its coconut trees and bananas filling the valley, while the mountain sides were interspersed with the native tropical verdure. As we drew near the chapel, we heard the low beating of an Indiana drum, and a little further on the voices singing a hymn in the weird Indian tune. The native Christians had gathered in one of their cottages close by the chapel for a time of prayer and worship preparatory to the morning service. In the chapel were a group of bright Indian children gathered for the Bible School lesson. In none of our American Bible Schools are the children more eager to recite the lesson and sing the gospel hymns.

As the time for meeting drew near, the people came in, and as they took their seats, the men on one side and the women on the other, each paused a moment with bowed head in reverential prayer. There was no social chatting, so common in our meetings at home, to scatter thought previous to worship. There were one or two hymns in the earlier part of the meeting. They love to sing the gospel hymns, and they clearly do so in a spirit of worship. The tunes are sacred tunes, somewhat weird in character. They sing the hymns through; the third stanza is not omitted as though it was of no consequence. One of the native members read a Bible lesson in Hindi. Two or three offered prayer in Hindi, but the spirit of prayer needed no interpreter. They listened eagerly to the message, the native catechist interpreting.

At the close of the meeting occurred a most inspiring scene—the taking of a real offering as an act of worship. They were taking a missionary offering for our Africa work. I never before saw such an exhibition of "cheerful giving." Each one—man, woman and child—had an offering wrapped in a handkerchief or other safe receptacle and evidently any one who had not an offering to give would have felt humiliated and ill at ease. They took the Bible literally: "Bring an offering and come into His house." (What right has any of us to ignore it?) As I heard the coins drop on the plate, and saw the spirit in which it was done, two scenes came to me; one was that of Christ over against the treasury, and the poor widow and her mite; the other was of the way the missionary offerings are often taken at home, and as this latter scene came to me I have to confess I turned my face away, as I could scarcely keep back the tears from very shame at the way so many Friends at home treat this act of worship. Here were these children of India, not one of whom receives over forty cents for the day's work and many of them not over twenty-five.

Those who are free and have taken land to work have lost their entire crop this year because of the August storm, and scarce know where their living is coming from. And yet I was told that even if a child could not bring some offering they would have remained away from the service. There were about sixty present, and at the close they put in my hands about nine dollars as their missionary offering. I wish our home meetings, with their abundance of temporal blessings that God has given, would look upon this offering and then upon their own.

They stood for the benediction and then sat down with bowed heads for a few moments of silent worship. At the close of the meeting, every one, young and old, came with thankful faces to take us by the hand, and quietly dispersed to their humble homes, some of the men only stopping to render such assistance as they could to help us away.

On Sunday afternoon we attended a similar meeting five miles in another direction, at Burlington. Both of these stations were turned over to Friends a few years ago by the Presbyterians, whose main work is on the other side of the island. Miss Mary White has charge of this work and was our good guide for the day. On Tuesday, Miss Kennedy took us on her twenty-five mile round, with an evening service at her Trinity Chapel (Trinity is the name of the estate), near Port Maria. Eighty East Indians came out after their hard day's work.

At Orange Hill, on Wednesday evening, a similar meeting was held in the chapel there, with thirty-five present. On Thursday evening we were at Osborne Chapel, with thirty-eight present. Both of these latter are in Miss Stanley's district. The neat chapel at Osborne was a gift from Mr. Benbow, the owner of the estate, in appreciation of the value of Miss Stanley's work.

On Friday, all the workers on the North Side, both white and native, held an all-day quarterly conference at Annotto Bay. Only Miss Stanley was absent; she was detained at Miss White's home at Port Antonio for ten days, suffering from a bad carbuncle. These quarterly conferences are times of training for the native workers. A regular course of study, modeled after that provided by the English Friends for their Missions in India, is required of the native workers, and these meetings are times of examination and review. It was a pleasure to hear them and to address them, as they eagerly drank in every word. On Friday evening we went to Buff Bay to spend the week-end with Mrs. Alma Swift and visit the work in her district.

Correspondence

Oskaloosa, Iowa, February 20, 1916.

S. Edgar Nicholson,

Dear Friend:—I have read with interest your excellent editorial in reference to my article of this week, and also the many able editorials on the same general subject at various times during the last few months. While personal controversy is undesirable, and you do right to discourage it, it seems to me that calm and courteous discussion of principles is highly beneficial. Discussion of the present type ought to stimulate the minds of both writers and readers, and thus advance the truth, which we each and all so earnestly desire may prevail.

When I wrote my article I did not have Penn's "Plan" before me, but was so sure that I had the exact word that I placed the term "enforce" in quotation marks in all good faith. Since then I have examined the document again, and find that a different word, conveying the same idea to my mind, was used by him instead of the word "enforce." While I do not think there was any violence done to his thought, I am very desirous that his exact expression should be reported, especially upon a very vital question such as this. After saying that "Peace is maintained by Justice, which is a Fruit of Government," Penn proposes that "If any of the Sovereignities that constitute these Imperial States, shall refuse to submit their Claim or Pretensions to them, or to abide and perform the Judgment thereof, and seek their Remedy by Arms, or delay their Compliance beyond the Time prefixed in their Resolutions, all the other Sovereignities, United as one Strength, shall compel the Submission and Performance of the Sentence, with Damages to the Suffering Party, and Charges to the Sovereignities" that caused the trouble.

This I interpret to mean the use of physical force, rather than economic or moral force, for several reasons: First, the passage indicates that the nations were to possess "Arms" under this Plan; second, international trade and investment were then too slight to render economic pressure a dependable force in world affairs; third, international law, feeble as it has proved itself today, after two hundred and more years, was then in its very infancy, and therefore the public opinion of the nations can hardly be the means by which Penn proposes to "compel" submission; fourth, the context of the document leads naturally to the inference that the "One Strength" referred to is the strength of an international police force. It was reasoning such as this which led me to think that Penn had used the word "enforce" as well as the idea.

Sincerely yours,

CLARENCE M. CASE.

Men and The Church

By MRS. ODESSA RAYLE

Generally speaking, Christianity has never captured the masculine mind. Men with the freedom of the world want to do something worth while in the eyes of the world. They hear the call of their country to arms, the call of wealth and fame and the call to business along different channels. But the call of God they do not hear. They do not take time to listen to the "still, small voice."

Our Saviour gave to men explicit orders for doing his work, "Go ye into all the world," "Feed my lambs," and "Go work in my vineyard," and with a few exceptions this gigantic task has lain on the shoulders of women all these ages. Jesus Christ was compassionate, kind and gentle. This does not appeal to the average masculine mind. They would rather command than persuade, speak in harsh tones than in gentle and tell you they could not manage people if they did otherwise, and they are honest in the thought. This world is still a Bethel. Bethel means house of God, and we have made it a den of thieves.

Our kings of finance have forgotten God in their ease and great prosperity. Our great manufacturers have not heard the still, small voice of God, or we would not hear the cry of little children with their starved, wasted bodies, as they work day and night in the mills and factories, or hear the groan of anguish as the thousands of mothers go to work midst the whirr and buzz of machinery, when they should be in their homes caring for their health and rearing their families.

Our boasted republic is still far from a government by and of and for the people. The saloon holds sway over one-half our land and the other lands, destroying lives in this world and souls for eternity. Lust breeds its vermin in the darkness and infidelity stalks abroad in the day. Generally speaking, men have forgotten their two-fold nature, their God-nature and their human nature.

When Jesus was on earth he knew just how to get people to live up to the best that was in them, and it should be our daily prayer that our Spiritual Father would show us the same plan. The church needs men who talk to God about their business, who live a spiritual life in their business life, who throw themselves and their spirituality into the service of the world.

There is no one who needs a close walk with our Lord more than the business man, be he mechanic, manufacturer, farmer or shop keeper, all along this narrow way, with just room enough for two. You have Jesus Christ to guide you in the right way, to strengthen when you are weak and bring encouragement when you think you have failed. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." If our busy men will only follow Jesus Christ, then the coming generation of young men would think it worth while to recognize the church and spirituality as necessary factors in a successful business life.

"Man's inhumanity to man makes countless millions mourn." Instead of militarism in the saddle riding that race horse, "preparedness," into a war that will cost us millions of the best men of our land, let us as a Christian nation (not so-called) be on our knees asking God for a closer walk with Him and a greater spiritual life that will give us "peace on earth, good will toward men."

Muncie, Indiana.

English Quakers and the War

By CHARLES S. MACFARLAND
General Secretary Federal Council.

Ruskin once declared that humanity honored the soldier, "not because he goes forth to slay, but to be slain." The Quakers are, by virtue of the constitutional principles of their faith, prohibited from participating in war, although, as a matter of fact, I recently found some Quaker soldiers fighting in the English ranks.

Over against their conscientious objection to war arise instincts of patriotism, defense, and their consciences are thus between conflicting senses of duty.

The issue has been met by one group of Friends in England in a manner which illustrates Ruskin's words.

Philip J. Baker, twenty-five years of age (son of Hon. J. Allen Baker, M. P., president of the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the Churches), an Oxford man, former president of the Oxford Union and a world-famous athlete, not only at Oxford but while also a student at our own Haverford College, with other virile young Friends, proposed the Friends' Ambulance Unit to solve this conflict of conscience and duty, his chief helpers being his wife and his brothers, Allen R. Baker, Joseph S. Baker and Bevan B. Baker, with the well-known writer, George M. Trevelyan, who became commandant, with Philip Baker as adjutant, and Mrs Baker as head matron of the hospital section.

The work of the Friends' Unit has become one of the institutions of the European war. It has secured the confidence and commendation of the military authorities of three countries, both in the field and at home. And it has gained its unique position among voluntary units by none of the social or influential channels. It has been assisted by no decorative or sensational personalities. It has hardly been mentioned in the press. On the contrary, it has had to make its way against the inevitable military understanding of principles such as prevent a large and conspicuous collection of strong young men from enlisting; against the jealousies of more socially prominent but less well-organized units; against the cold-shoulder and suspicion which must always surround the efforts of any non-military and philanthropic undertaking strong enough to force its way into the atmosphere of fear, death and necessary disregard of individual suffering such as characterize a war zone, where civilization is dead, every motive is suspected, and men are but cunning to kill.

It has won its position by the courage, tact and patience of its officers in recognizing and seizing opportunities of service and in establishing cordial relationships with officials of all classes and of three races, and by the discipline, good will, self-abnegation and unwearying work of its young men.

On their way to Dunkirk to constitute the Belgian unit, the first piece of work crossing the Channel was the manning of boats to save the crew of the torpedoed "Hermes," in October, 1914. At this time they numbered only forty-three workers, but they attended, redressed and assisted 1,250 men the first five days and nights.

Their next point was Ypres, where they organized a second hospital, the method being to find and care for the places of the greatest need and neglect, and within a couple of months the staff grew to about 250 workers of all kinds for relief and restoration.

After the organization was established in what was left of Belgium and Northern France, the leaders moved on to Italy and organized the Italian Unit. Many of them served entirely at their own expense as well as without pay.

The work is one of constant danger, driving cars over precipitous mountain roads by night, without lights; often running the gauntlet of shell fire, sometimes with disaster, although thus far they have wonderfully escaped any serious losses.

In addition to the work of gathering up the wounded from the field, their care in the hospitals, the clothing and housing of refugees, provision is also made for religious service and spiritual ministrations.

The staff at Dunkirk now consists of about 500 trained men and 40 women. There is a large fleet of motor ambulances and two ambulance trains. There are seven hospitals. The newer Italian Unit is also assuming large proportions.

Our brethren, the Quakers of England, have thus entered the war, not to take a single human life, but to save, and have vindicated their self-sacrificing sense of patriotic duty without violating their consciences or their religious faith.—The Christian Evangelist.

Faith is both subjective and objective; an operation of the mind impelling to action upon the subject which the mind has grasped and in which it has confidence and a doctrine or religious principle in which we believe. Overcoming, victorious faith is subjective, and springs from confidence and trust in God.

Correspondence

Editor The American Friend:

May I find space to speak briefly of two concerns that have been growing with me of late?

There seems to be a growing tendency today to discredit or disregard the plain teaching of the Holy Scriptures in regard to the second coming of Christ. In THE AMERICAN FRIEND, issue of February 3, W. Irving Kelsey says, "Others are beginning to feel that the bringing into the kingdom of God of the whole world is a task which he actually expects His church to accomplish, and that the work must be done in the same way that He began it two thousand years ago, by really living the life of sonship to God and brotherhood to man, and that in order to do this one must be ready, if needs be, to sacrifice property and even life itself." And in the issue of December 16, the editorial has this expression: " * * * and that God purposes to save the world and find the solvent for all of its problems through saved personality."

In none of the sessions of the Laymen's Missionary Congress which I attended here in Denver last October did I hear one hint of the doctrine of the second coming of Christ, but all the addresses implied that the Church, through faithful witnessing and work, would eventually banish sin from the world and establish the reign of Christ on the earth. The current number of the Expositor quotes Josiah Strong, D. D., in part as follows: "The kingdom of God is coming in the world. A society from which have been eliminated ignorance and selfishness, and therefore, poverty and sin and wretchedness, begins to seem to men not simply a far off, abstract possibility to be dreamed of, but an infinite good to be struggled for,—an ideal capable of being approximately realized, and so glorious that it is inspiring passionate longing and persistent endeavor."

To me this seems a dangerous and unwarranted tendency. I find no statement of Jesus to indicate that the world is to be saved and brought into the kingdom of God in this age or in any other, much less by the faithful endeavors of His Church.

Jesus said: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations and then shall the end come." But I find no suggestion here that the result would be world salvation. Rather did He teach plainly, by parable and by direct statement, that He would come again finding many unprepared and much of the world unsaved. I am not pleading for mere evangelistic effort, without the additional endeavor to apply the Gospel principles, in a practical way, to business, political and social, local or world conditions, but I would warn us to stay on scriptural grounds and be content with an honest, consecrated effort to carry out the program the Master left us. If the Church ignores the scriptural doctrine of the second coming of Christ, to that extent at least she becomes a blind leader of the blind.

Related to this tendency is another that I feel is equally wrong. Much is being said of the need and possibility of forming a world federation in order to prevent war in the future. This seems to me clearly unscriptural and quite misleading from the Christian standpoint. Certainly our acceptance of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord obligates us to exert our utmost influence in opposition to war, as well as all other forms or manifestations of sin and vice—because these things are un-Christian, and in order that "by all means we may save some"—not in the hope that we can thus actually banish these vices from society and usher in the reign of Jesus Christ and the brotherhood of man.

Denver, Colorado.

WALTER H. WILSON.

The Cross the Cure for Trouble

What is the cure for all this social chaos, domestic trouble, secret pain—this wrong-doing as between kings and subjects, fathers and children, man and man? The one cure is the cross of Christ. Have I not preached that with some consistency ever since you knew me? Have I ever given a second prescription for this malady of the world? If I ever have, allow me now to tear it up—publicly tear it up—so that nobody can ever patch it together so as to make one word of it through all time. The prescription I will give is given to me. The prescription by which I would abide according to the exhortation of Scripture—the prescription which I would preach to all mankind—is this: "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from sin."—Joseph Parker.

The Divine Presence

Thou hast not gone this way before. But there is love about thee still. Go where thou mayest, there is the air, go where thou mayest, there is thy Father's love. Thou art going home, perhaps, to bed, not to arise from it for some months. Thou hast no apprehension just now of what lies before thee. It is as well thou shalt not know. Trouble not thyself about the morrow. If thou art to be sick, if thou art to die, thy Father's love will still be with thee. Therefore go on; fear not; he can not, will not, turn away from thee. An omnipresent God means omnipresent love, and omnipotence will go with omnipresence.—Spurgeon.

Striking the Last Balance

What will your life be when it is finished? When you wind up all your affairs in this world? Blessed will you be if you can look upward and say, "Father, I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do." If you have lived merely for the gratification of sense and self, what an awful review of the past your last moments will reveal! What an awakening when the last day of your life is being finished! One hour would have been enough to have claimed by faith Christ's finished work, to have entered into partnership with Him in this life, and in heirship with Him in the riches of His eternal life.—The Christian Herald.

A CUBAN VOLUNTEER.

For some time Francisco Gonzalez, a Gibara convert, has felt the call to prepare himself for religious work among his people. He lacked the means to secure educational advantages, but eagerly improved his opportunities at the Gibara Station. His father is a drunkard, and though not yet twenty years of age, the burden of supporting the large family has fallen upon the shoulders of Francisco. Recently there was an unexpected "windfall" that improved the financial situation of the family. After seeing the family provided for, Francisco's first thought was to realize his cherished dream of schooling. Through the missionaries, arrangements were made and he is now in the El Cristo Schools, preparing himself for the work of the ministry to his people.

NEWS NOTES.

Smith Clark and wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home in Pickering, Ontario, February 18.

The annual meeting of the Bible School of the Toronto, Canada, meeting was held in connection with a social and program on February 11.

J. Edgar Williams, formerly of Carthage, Indiana, and now of Albuquerque, N. M., attended the Kansas City meeting on the morning of February 20.

A surprise was given the pastor of the Emporia meeting, Kansas, George C. Wise, Jr., together with his family on the evening of February 7. Everyone took something for them.

Edward King, son of Rufus P. King, has been engaged in Y. M. C. A. work for several years and recently assisted in a series of meetings at the State University of North Carolina.

Dr. David M. Edwards, President of Penn College, will give a series of lectures at Kansas City on the evenings of March 30 and 31 and April 1. He will attend the Kansas City Friends meeting on the morning of April 2.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal of the school at Westtown, Pa., visited Richmond, Indiana, on February 27 and 28 and addressed the vesper service of West Richmond meeting on Sabbath evening. Morris Leeds of Philadelphia, accompanied him.

About seventy-five Friends of Indiana and Western Yearly Meeting attended the Friends' denominational rally at Indianapolis on March 1, held in connection with the Laymen's Missionary Convention. Addresses were given by Ross A. Hadley, Milo S. Hinckle, President R. L. Kelly, Lydia Hoath and Thomas E. Jones.

George C. Levering, pastor at Selma, Ohio, has been confined to his bed for the past two weeks with inflammatory rheumatism, but is now improving.

In the absence of the pastor, George C. Levering, on account of illness, J. Edwin Jay, President of Wilmington College, preached at Selma, Ohio, on February 20.

Attention is called in another column to the advertisement of the Indiana Rural Credit Association of which Mord Carter is President. Mord Carter is a well known Friend of Indianapolis, a former member of the Indiana Legislature and is a reliable financier.

Esther G. Frame with her niece, Olive Wilson, spent February 6 at Whittier, California, attending both services and in the evening Esther Frame spoke at some length with much of her old-time power. On the following day Dr. Lindley M. Green gave a dinner to her and several of her old friends.

Volume twelve, number four of the Journal of the Friends Historical Society of which Norman Penny of London, England, is editor, is at hand and is an unusual interesting and valuable number. Amelia M. Gummere has an interesting article on "A Glimpse of Old Nantucket." Price per number 50 cents; for the year $1.25.

The January report of Clark and Elma T. Brown, superintendents of work among the Indians, shows that while the winter has been most severe, the missionaries at the various stations have been at work. A report shows that Professor Hansen of the State University of Iowa is now making a study of the Indian from the psychological standpoint.

Calvin Knight, a student at Friends University, Wichita, Kansas, has been awarded the scholarship to Haverford College, with Noble Cain as alternate. Ruth Payne was chosen as the winner of the Fellowship which is offered to Friends by the Kansas University, with Ruth Meeker as alternate.

Charles O. and Sarah H. Newlin of Plainfield, Indiana, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on March 7th.

Etta Johnston Camp, who for some years was a missionary teacher at Ram Allah, Palestine, and who later with her husband worked among the Jews in Arabia, is now at Mt. Pleasant, Michigan. Since her husband's death in 1910 she has been in government service among the Indians. With the help of an Indian assistant she has the care of a hundred and fifty-two girls in a non-reservation school of three hundred and fifty Indian students.

At Hesper Quarterly Meeting, Kansas, this week, William P. Haworth of Lawrence, Kansas, discussed at the meeting on ministry and oversight the subject, "What Are the Advantages of a Good Organization? Is That of Our Meeting a Good one?" Frank G. Smith gave a peace and foreign mission address on Saturday evening, while Sterling L. Williams of the Missouri S. S. Association gave an address at the Sunday School rally on Sunday afternoon.

CHURCH AT WORK

Chester, Indiana.—Chester Monthly Meeting was held on the evening of February 23. A program on temperance had been planned and was carried out by readings, talks and songs on that subject. On February 27, Walter Jerge and companion attended the meeting for worship and brought a very edifying message. Jesse Beals, Gilbert Shambaugh and others from Earlham College have acceptably attended our Sabbath services. Elwood Davenport has preached regularly here every two weeks, all of which has given us a real spiritual uplift.

Muncie, Indiana.—The eighth anniversary of the Friendly Helpers' Sabbath School Class, taught by Martha Haisley, was observed at Friends Memorial Church on February 22. The exercises were opened with a banquet attended by 160 people, after which an interesting program was given and a report was made of the year's work. Eight years ago Mattie Smith was instrumental in starting a class of three members, which has increased to eighty-three on roll call, twenty members being added this year. Of this total, fifty-five belong to the church. Business and social sessions are held once a month. During the past year $153.43 was paid out for home mission work. The flower committee sent thirteen sprays for the dead and seventy-three bouquets and forty-two pot plants to the sick at a cost of $23.75. A thank offering of $25.00 was given to the church. The visiting committee reported 369 visits in the interests of the church and 1030 visits to the sick. The amount of the social collection was $26.60. The Sunday morning collection was $42.10.

The class is composed of busy mothers.

New Castle, Ind.—The Bible School at this place is taking on new energy. We conducted an attendance campaign in the Bible School beginning with the first of December and closing with the first of February. The result has been highly satisfactory. The average attendance has been raised from eighty to more than one hundred. But the most encouraging feature of the contest is that we are continuing the work and the attendance is growing right along. We have not set any attendance goal but we have almost unlimited opportunities here with a very limited capacity for accommodations. The contest was won by the Whittier Class. The highest attendance of this class was thirty-two. This is a class of young married people and they are very wide awake in the work, and are doing their best to make their class what they think it should be. Jesse O. Mendenhall is the efficient teacher of the class and is lending all the help a teacher can give to build it up.

The Christian Endeavor also is doing some splendid work, and is having an average attendance of from forty to fifty. The society observed C. E. week, the week beginning the thirteenth, which in many ways was a great success. On Wednesday evening of that week Charles W. Sweet of Muncie came and gave us a splendid sermon on giving Christ the pre-eminence in our lives. The week closed with the service Sabbath evening with several additions to the Endeavor society and one conversion.

Emporia, Kansas.—As the result of a union revival campaign in Emporia, seventy-nine new members have been received into the Friends' meeting. A reception for these was given on the evening of February 23. The new members were given a white badge and the old members a blue badge, the friends of the church being given a red badge to wear during the evening. The first fifteen minutes were taken up with getting acquainted with the new members. Our pastor, George C. Wise, Jr., then conducted the devotional service, after which the new members were asked to form a circle around the room, and as they did so the old members and friends passed around and gave them the right hand of fellowship. The president of each department of the church gave a three minute talk, after which the new members were given a card containing the different organizations of the church and each one was asked to mark the department they wished to join, as follows: Bible School, Christian Endeavor, Men's Gospel Team, Women's Missionary Society and Woman's League. Opportunity was also given to state the amount of a weekly pledge which each desired to give to the church. Refreshments were then served. More than three hundred persons spent a very pleasant evening.

Hopewell, Kansas.—On February 23 we closed what was in many respects the greatest revival with which Hopewell has ever been blessed. Frederick Kludas was the evangelist in charge and we most heartily endorse him. He is a preacher of full salvation and knows how to obey God. He has had considerable experience, not only in pastoral and evangelistic work, but also in mission work. Fifteen persons were converted, fifty renewed and sixteen sanctified. But these numbers are but a small part of the real results of the meeting.

Liberal, Kansas.—John I. Huff, the efficient pastor of the First Friends Church of Liberal, has resigned his pastorate here to accept a call as first assistant to George W. Trotter, (brother of Melvin E. Trotter) the world renowned mission worker in Pittsburg, Pa. While we feel the loss keenly we believe it is the Master's gain. Brother Huff was the first pastor of Friends Church here, and in the two years he was with us he had the pleasure of seeing it grow from a membership of about thirty-five in a downtown store room to a membership of over a hundred and fifty, worshipping now in a beautiful modern church home. While we feel like sheep without a shepherd, we feel that God may richly bless him in his new field of labor. Word has just been received that within four weeks time in his new field more than a hundred persons have been definitely blessed through his service.

Sterling, Kansas.—Sterling Quarterly Meeting was held at Sterling February 26. While we had no noted ministers from outside our limits, yet the Word was clearly set forth by the local pastor, Herbert J. Starkey, ably assisted by C. E. Bowers and John Ross, young men from the Biblical Department of the Friends University at Wichita. There was a good attendance and harmony and good will prevailed throughout the meeting.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Nine Partners Quarterly Meeting, held at Poughkeepsie on Friday and Saturday following the recent conference of ministers of the Yearly Meeting, was a very interesting and profitable occasion. Homer L. Morris of Columbia University, gave an address on Friday evening and also spoke at the close of the business session on Saturday afternoon upon the attitude of our denomination toward preparedness. A committee was appointed by the Quarterly Meeting to send a communication to the representative from the district, stating not only that we are opposed to this movement, but giving the reasons for our position. Upon invitation of the Poughkeepsie Friends Brotherhood Mr. Morris returned for an address on February 27, his subject being "The Fallacy of Preparedness." Many of those in attendance were not Friends. His clear arguments and statements were very convincing.

Bloomington, Indiana.—On February 27 the temperance committee of Bloomington Monthly Meeting arranged for a special service in the Bible School and also that the pastor, George H. Moore, should deliver a message at the meeting hour on the Extermination of the Liquor Traffic. The sermon and exercises in the Bible School were full of interest.

Providence, Indiana.—On February 3, Frank Stafford, of Sheridan, Indiana, began a series of meetings at Providence, one of the meetings belonging to West Grove Quarterly Meeting in Hamilton county. The meetings continued with increasing interest and power for nearly three weeks with the result that twenty-seven persons were converted and renewed. The gospel was preached with power and clearness. Thirteen persons have united with the meeting, some of them heads of families. We bless the Lord for the coming of our brother.

Watseka, Illinois.—The meeting here has recently experienced a good revival. W. E. Stanley, of the U. B. Church, formerly a Friend, was with us in the meeting. There were some definite results and the meeting was strengthened. Some new members have been received and others will follow. We have begun plans for quite an extensive remodeling of the meeting house which we hope to accomplish in the early summer.

Pasadena, California.—John S. Kimber of Newport, R. I., assisted part of the time by his wife and son, conducted a series of evangelistic meetings at Pasadena from February 17 to 27. The meetings were quite well attended and resulted in a number of conversions, especially of young people, and in the deepening of the spiritual life of the membership. On the evening of the 16th Esther G. Frame was welcomed at the regular weekly prayer meeting and in a discourse on the necessity of choice, appropriately opened the evangelistic campaign. G. Arnold Hodgkin and wife attended one of the evening meetings. On the evening of February 13 William C. Allen spoke at Pasadena Friends Church, giving some account of his peace mission to the Orient.

Anderson, Indiana—The revival meeting, which began at the Friends church here on February 6, closed on February 27. Millie Lawhead and her sister, Lillian Parker, were in charge of the work. The message was clearly delivered and brought conviction to the hearers. Many from all denominations attended these meetings and gave testimony that they were greatly helped. Special emphasis was laid upon the baptism with the Holy Ghost, and at one service twenty-seven persons testified that they had received this baptism during these meetings. Among these were talented young men and women whose usefulness in the Lord's work will be of great importance. Miss Parker with her singing contributed materially to the success of the meeting.

On February 24 an all-day meeting, called "mid-week Sabbath" was held at the church. Every pastor of the city responded to the invitation and gave a helpful three-minute talk and the pastors' quartet sang. A special invitation had been given to girls and others to attend the noon hour service and they responded well. A hot substantial lunch was served to the listeners as they sat in their seats and there was no break in the service. More than 225 were served. We believe that this day firmly established the Friends' church and its standards of Quakerism in the city of Anderson. Two Sunday afternoon mass meetings, together with the Bible study given every afternoon of the week, helped greatly to clear the minds on points of doctrinal truths. At the closing service of the meetings the front part of the house was filled with those who had experienced definite blessings in the meetings. There are sixteen requests for membership.

Van Wert, Ohio—One of the most powerful revivals in the history of the church is now in progress in Van Wert meeting. The meetings began the last Sabbath in January and are still in progress at this writing, March 6, with interest deeper and attendance larger than at any previous time. The entire city and surrounding community are stirred under the mighty power of God. People are attending from all the churches in the city and from neighboring towns. Deep and pungent conviction has gripped all classes of men and women. One of the striking things about this revival is the large number of men that are being saved. More than eighty persons have already been converted or reclaimed and many others have been definitely blessed. Practically all of these are adults and many are heads of families. Men who were never seen in church services before have been suddenly brought under the mighty power of God and have yielded their lives to Jesus Christ.

The spirit of prayer that is upon the Christian people is very remarkable. In the beginning of the revival a prayer list of men was made up, and every praying person was asked to pray for the conviction of these men. Some thirty-five of this number have already been reached. At 9:30 o'clock every morning the church bell rings calling everybody to prayer; this is having a profound effect and members of other churches are heartily joining in this. Every evening at 6:30 an inquiry and prayer service is held in a separate room in the church. This has proved to be a great help to the meetings.

Fred H. Tormohlen, our pastor, is doing the preaching and Miss Mary Brantingham of Alliance, Ohio, has charge of the music. The working church was never in better condition and never in the history of the church was there seen such a large attendance of young people.

Wabash, Indiana—Evangelist Daniel Whybrew and singing evangelist, Lloyd Oatley, came to Wabash meeting February 13 and held revival services until March 5. The attendance was exceptionally good, especially on Sunday evening, when the largest audience that ever gathered in the Friends Church greeted the evangelist. The preaching stirred the community and while there were not many conversions, a revival spirit took hold of the people and our meeting has caught a new vision. The other churches of the south side gave noble assistance. Mr. Oatley led a splendid chorus throughout the meeting. Several large children's meetings were held, when the children came direct from the public schools.

Wabash Quarterly Meeting was held March 3-5. Truman C. Kenworthy, our Yearly Meeting Superintendent, was present on Saturday and brought the message. The Friends meeting here is steadily gaining new ground. The Sabbath School under the direction of its efficient superintendent, Garfield Smith, is constantly asking for more room for classes, and on a recent Sunday morning the pastor lifted an offering of $223 for further improvements in the basement. This is the third year of the pastorate of A. J. Furstenberger and his wife. During this time several families of good standing have been taken into the church. Wabash meeting feels a just pride that one of its young men, Donald Snyder, brought honors to Earlham College recently in the state oratorical contest.

Gate, Oklahoma—Gate Quarterly Meeting was held at Laurence Academy, February 25-27. It was a time of real blessing to all and one young woman experienced the blessing of sanctification. Delegates were present from all the Monthly Meetings. The home ministers were present and brought the messages.

Oak Creek, Kansas—Walnut Creek Quarterly Meeting was held at Oak Creek in February. Although no one from outside the Quarter was in attendance a very profitable meeting was held. The preaching was done by Alpheus Rees, Levi Johnson and Professor Clark of Northbranch Academy. The latter has resigned his position and will go to Haviland Academy next summer. Northbranch Academy has prospered this year with the largest enrollment in its history and it will be hard to get a satisfactory man to fill the place of Professor Clark.

Webster, Texas—Friendswood Quarterly Meeting was held on February 25-27. There were no strangers in attendance, but the Lord was with us and we had a favored Quarterly Meeting. Lemuel and Rachel Middleton were liberated by Friendswood Monthly Meeting and also the Quarterly Meeting for service within the limits of Indiana and Western Yearly Meetings and also to attend Canada Yearly Meeting. They expect to go north the last of April to spend the summer.

Denver, Colorado—At the recent Quarterly Meeting Meeting at Denver, E. T. Albertson, State S. S. Secretary, was present on Saturday night and gave an arousing talk on the organized class work for the Bible School. As a result we have a men's class of fourteen members and a women's class of eighteen, both fully organized. Interest seems to be genuine and the prospects are that this move will prove very helpful in the work here. Our School has two other organized classes, a young people's class and a boys' class.

North Loup, Nebraska—Platt Valley Quarterly Meeting was held here February 18-20. There was an unusually large attendance, the house being filled both Sabbath morning and afternoon. Representatives were in attendance from the other Monthly Meetings, also our Yearly Meeting Superintendent, Theodore Foxworthy, and he with John Mills, pastor at Central City, brought to us some very helpful messages. Reports from the various Monthly Meetings showed most of them to be growing in spiritual power and some of them in attendance and membership. One has suffered because a number of its members have moved away. The subject, "What should the church do with able bodied ministers who have neglected their call", was discussed at the business session. There are needy fields without pastors and it seems that something should be done to get these men and women to work.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—M. Davis Branon, G. C. Welch, Walter P. Welch and Otis Branon attended the Laymen's Missionary Conference at Greensboro last month. M. Davis Branon attended and took part in the ministers' conference of North Carolina Yearly Meeting which was held at the same time and place. A very interesting account of the conference was given by the pastor on the night of February 12. Our Bible School work has never been in better condition. A strict gradation has just been effected and sixteen classes formed, accommodating almost every age in the primary and intermediate departments. A teachers' meeting recently organized is proving an important factor in the work. A good number who are not teachers are taking advantage of the work as a Bible study. The enrollment is now the largest in the history of the school. The meeting is planning for a conference of the entire membership to discuss the various departments of church work. The problems which are most in the way of the progress of the church are to be faced and solved if possible.

Haverford, Pa.—On the evening of March 1, Homer W. Tope of the Pennsylvania Anti-Saloon League gave an address at Haverford College on "America's Greatest Shame." The meeting was held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. of Haverford College. The audience was deeply interested in the address.

Marshall, Indiana—Five churches of Marshall united in an evangelistic campaign of one month. W. T. Shearer, of Angola, Indiana, was secured upon the recommendation of the union evangelistic association of Winona, Indiana. He came to us on January 9 and preached the plain, unvarnished gospel, denouncing sin in plain terms. This effort has proved to be the greatest blessing that has come to our town for years. One hundred and nine confessed their Savior and declared their purpose to live a new life. The churches of the town have been greatly blessed and helped. At the last Monthly Meeting Friends received into membership four persons by letter and forty-three by request. The Friends meeting and Sabbath School are well attended and good interest is manifest in all departments of the work. We feel that this evangelistic campaign has been a God send to us.

Lost Creek, Tennessee—We are having a wonderful awakening in this meeting. The old fashioned Friends meeting house was filled to its utmost, the people coming for miles to hear the gospel message delivered by Elihu Frazier and wife, of Ohio. The Lord has greatly blessed his labors since he and his wife came to us. Brother Frazier held a very good meeting at New Hope in Greene county. Rhoda Bails, of Friends Station, Tennessee, is pastor of New Hope and Lost Creek meetings and is doing good work. Quite a number have been converted. I think every family of Friends should take The American Friend.

MEMORIAL TO PRESIDENT.

The following memorial was adopted by Pasadena Quarterly Meeting, January 22, and directed to be sent to the President:

Woodrow Wilson, President—

Our Quarterly Meeting now in session has been brought into a deep concern as we contemplate the tragic horrors of war and the welfare of all for whom the Prince of Peace died. We most heartily commend you in your successful efforts to keep our nation neutral during the war in Mexico and in Europe. The cool candor and firmness of the earlier months of your administration commanded the respect and confidence of all our intelligent

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

Made from Cream of Tartar

NO ALUM—NO PHOSPHATE

people. Your present policy of preparedness calling upon our people for unprecedented enlargement of our army and navy is not in harmony with the wisdom of the earlier years of your administration and we deserve respectfully to protest against its being pressed upon the people.

In Christian service we are your friends.

On behalf of the meeting, (Signed)
Clerk.

SUMMER SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

The Minnesota Summer School of Missions will be held in the Olivet Congregational Church at St. Paul June 14-20. A number of well known women interested in mission work will be the leaders on the program. Both home and foreign missions will be given large consideration. There are two normal classes and the text books issued by the Missionary Education Movement on "The Two Americas" will be used. Application for membership should be made to Mrs. J. P. Gribben, 1373 Summit Avenue, St. Paul.

WHEN TO SMILE.

It is easy enough to look pleasant,
When the Spring comes along with a rush;

But the fellow worth while
Is the one who can smile
When he slips and sits down in the slush!

—Lippincott's Magazine.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

NOTICE.

Plans for the Spring Campaign among young Friends should be undertaken now!

Let the executive committee of each Christian Endeavor Society and some leading members in all other young people's organizations meet to outline a plan of campaign for the local Meeting.

Do you have a Christian Endeavor Society? Then undertake your share of the Millions Campaign. Every Christian Endeavor organization in the Society of Friends should increase its size and efficiency by from one-third to one-half within the next four months. Can you do it? How? See that your president and corresponding secretary become alive to the possibilities of Christian Endeavor. Give them pamphlets. Send them to a Conference. Personally talk the problem over with them.

Send to the Young Friends Board for Christian Endeavor Literature. Have you seen the New Efficiency Chart? Will you take the examination on "Expert Endeavor?" We are prepared to give this examination. Get the book, study it, send for the questions, return your papers to us, and we will grade them. Do you take the "Young Friends Bulletin News?"—formerly The Winona Conference News? It gives a report of Young Friends Activities from all over the United States and Canada. It discusses plans for this year's Conference, Go-to-Yearly-Meeting Campaigns, the Young Friends Directory and the Announcements for the Study Classes in Friends History and Doctrine. 35 cents per year.

The motto for the Young Friends General Conference was not stated correctly in these columns last week. It should read, "The Entire Church At Its Entire Task." Think this over, it grows upon one. Should your Meeting have the benefit of this Conference

WHY I AM A FRIEND.

By Elihu Grant.

I have been asked the question above and I am put to it, not to find reasons, but to give them in their true order. I would not wish to be like the committee in a Massachusetts town which waited upon an honored guest, the elder President Adams, to explain the omission of the usual salute with booming cannon.

The first reason was "We have no cannon." "Gentlemen," said the President, "I do not wish to know the other reasons."

A few years ago I transferred my membership from the Methodist Church to the Friends for a testimony. Personal liking for Friends or a desire to be one of them did not, for a number of years, seem to me adequate reasons. But when the official custodians of authority prosecuted the two greatest religious teachers in my university, I made my way to protest to a group more spiritually minded.

It seems to me well worth while to join a prophetic group of Christians, to whom religion is a personal thing of first importance. The small Quaker group is chiefly concerned with the possibilities of the Spirit. We believe that man's trust in God and man's trust in man are yet to be rewarded by infinitely more glorious results.

We serve the truth in love and obedience and would not resort to carnal means to insure our standing in the religious world. Some have built up a set of material circumstances and dignities that would make the cheapest politician pause before giving affront. But that is no triumph of religion. Our cause does not progress thereby. The Kingdom is not of this world.

The Friendly platform has the fewest and the strongest planks known to Christian discipleship. Its spiritual method clears it of centuries of entanglements, of diverse personalities and institutions and schools of thought. Of the Christ we say "Thou art the way, the truth, and the life, yesterday, today and forever."

Northampton, Mass.

PEACE TOPIC.

"The Peace Movement and other Agencies."

In accord with Christ's teaching regarding the kingdom of God, our experience tells us that all great movements have had a feeble beginning. If we desire to change national or world policies we must begin with a small group of people. Into the fertile soil of these minds and hearts the prophet may thrust the seed of his conviction.

It usually takes time for this thought to germinate. For a time it may seem dead or practically forgotten but then it bursts forth verdant and strong.

If we believe in the cause of Peace, it behooves us to become prophets and plant our ideas in other people's minds. The best way to do this is to select a small group of those most interested and to meet for discussion in a Study Class once a week. When one group has been convinced, they should go out to teach other bands.

Friends young people who believe in the cause of Peace would do well to ally themselves with some larger organization that the whole may strengthen the parts. If all the peace sympathizers were organized under one head and with a common purpose, national policies would be determined more markedly.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

MARCH 26.

Topic—"Great Home Missionaries", Luke 10: 1-20.

In a wonderfully stimulating fashion the writer of Luke's Gospel describes the first organized missionary effort of Christ's ministry. Perhaps both to give his followers experience in propaganda and to supply the enormous demand for Christian instruction, he sent out with his disciples seventy other workers. Their function was that of the home missionary. They were to carry the glad tidings of salvation to a philosophically gorged but spiritually starved body of people. Faith in their message of salvation fired them to go out. The need was so great and the demand so urgent that Christ said if reluctance in accepting the message is manifest anywhere, pass on to a field that lies open.

Later in a world of opposition this method was modified. In this new circumstance he told his disciples to go prepared for the worst. Opposition would be so great that even suffering must be undergone for the name of Christ. However, perseverance would be rewarded by victory. Again our hearts thrill when we hear of modern attempts to plant Christianity in the world. Pioneers, like Samuel J. Mills, Peter Cartwright and Gideon Blackburn stir our imagination with stories of the Christian conquest of the great middle west.

The Society of Friends has not lacked for pioneers. From the days of Fox, Cannon and Audland to the present missionary age, the Society has pushed out where sin is flagrant and Christianity is young. For illustration, let us examine the lives of William Penn, George Fox, John Woolman, Elijah Coffin, Allen Jay and other prominent Friends. Let us also look at the work of modern missionaries like Arthur and Edna Chilson in Africa, Gilbert and Minnie Bowles in Japan, Robert and Margaret L. Simkin in China, Solomon Tice in Mexico and Charles Replogle in Alaska, and others.

Suggestions for Missionary Meeting.

Copy various parts of the present report of the Friends Board of Foreign Missions found in Friends Missionary Advocate and distribute a week before the meeting. Let each speaker tell from memory about Friends Mission work in various lands,

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

FOLLOWING UP THE LAYMEN'S CONVENTIONS.

The conventions recently held by the Laymen's Missionary Movement, in Des Moines, Los Angeles, Indianapolis, Portland (Oregon), and other cities have given thousands of men and women a great spiritual uplift and a new enthusiasm for the extension of Christ's Kingdom at home and abroad. It is encouraging to learn from several sections of the country of plans which have been made for carrying the results of these conventions into a great number of Friends meetings.

One of the most promising efforts in this direction appears in the case of a certain Quarterly Meeting where a letter similar to the following has gone out to each of the pastors.

"We are planning to make the coming Quarterly Meeting the best one we have ever had. We have a concern that it be missionary in character from start to finish. After attending the Laymen's Missionary Conference, we feel that we must bring back to this Quarterly Meeting some of the good things we heard there.

"There will be a men's banquet Friday evening at 7 o'clock, after which a speaker who attended the conference will give a message on 'Men and Missions.' We are sending tickets for the banquet, which we trust you will place in the hands of every man you can get to come, or who thinks he may come. Also, tell your people that if they will come Friday afternoon they will be entertained overnight, so they will be here for the Quarterly Meeting. In connection with the regular worship of the Saturday morning service, there will be a report of the conference given by a man who was there.

"We feel greatly concerned that the people of the Quarterly Meeting become more acquainted with the great enterprise of the Kingdom. We trust you will enter into the spirit of this and help boost, and pray earnestly that this may be a great meeting, and that God may fire this Quarterly Meeting with a missionary zeal it has never known before.

"We are sending tickets for the banquet this week so that you can place them in the hands of the men on next Sunday morning. Please announce it from your pulpit in a way that will make them think something is going to happen and we will try to make them feel that they have not been fooled when they come."

Conferences similar to the one planned for this particular Quarterly Meeting have been held in a number of places at some other time than at the regular session of the Quarterly Meeting. It is to be hoped that a great number of these conferences may be held during the next two months. The secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions at Richmond, Indiana, will gladly send a tentative program and suggest speakers to any who are trying to arrange for such a conference.

MATERIAL FOR MISSIONARY MEETINGS.

Charles Tebbetts' account of his visit to an East Indian Friends Meeting in the island of Jamaica appears on an earlier page of this week's American Friend. His article is one of a series describing our work in Jamaica and several other installments of his account will appear in following issues. We mention these articles here in order to draw attention to the excellent material which they contain for use in missionary meetings. These incidents and descriptions written by one who has just visited the field can be used with audiences large or small and we sincerely hope that they will be widely used in this way.

EASTER IN FRIENDS BIBLE SCHOOLS.

Easter comes this year on April 23d. We believe that the program entitled "The Hope of the World," which has already been mentioned in these columns, ought to be given this year in five hundred Friends Bible Schools. This attractive program has three parts: I. The Easter Story; II. The Story told by the early church, by witnesses from Jerusalem, Corinth, Antioch, Philippi etc., using mainly quotations from the Book of Acts; III. The story as told today to the nations, in which children representing various countries show that the risen Lord is indeed "The Hope of the World."

The program culminates in the unveiling of a beautiful picture called "The Hope of the World," an exercise which can be omitted without seriously marring the program but which, if used, can easily be made the climax of the service. A copy of the picture 12x17 inches in size can be secured for twenty cents and a larger copy in colors for forty cents. The program itself costs only $1.80 per hundred with ten supplements, of 25 cents per dozen with two supplements. The programs and the pictures may be ordered from The American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, Richmond, Indiana. A sample copy of the program diana. A sample copy of the program in stamps.

RUPERTA, THE FIRST FRUITS.

Soon after we came to Gibara, in 1900, Emma Phillips (Martinez) began visiting some families on the hill back of the town. As a result of these visits, which were really cottage meetings, Ruperta was converted. When the Monthly Meeting was organized she was one of the charter members.

Many times converts in these countries have to face problems resulting from their conversion that are almost if not quite unknown in the home land. In Ruperta's case her problem was the fact that for twenty years or more she had lived in carnal relations unhallowed by legal marriage vows. The man with whom she had relations, Ricardo Fernandez, was a carpenter and for some months had been working away from home in Banes, where the sugar mill was then in construction. Earnestly did Ruperta pray for grace to meet the crisis when he should return, and especially that he might see the light as she had seen it. The way opened wonderfully, for when Ricardo returned he at once consented, contrary to expectation, to be legally married. As none of the missionaries were at that time authorized marriage officers, the marriage was by the civil officers, but Ruperta, not satisfied with this, asked to have it solemnized by religious service also,—which was done.

Not long after, husband and wife moved to Banes where Ruperta was one of the nucleus that formed the Banes church. Ricardo, while sympathizing with the faith of his wife, was not yet converted. An amusing story is told of him about this time. The priest at Banes was a Frenchman, who sought by threats and cajolings to keep the people away from the meetings and by calumny to discredit the missionaries. Ricardo would not stand for this. One day when the priest in his presence began to slander the missionaries and their work, Ricardo took upon himself the office of "defender of the faith" and did it with a vigor that made the priest cower and tremble with fear. Afterward when Raymond Holding told him that it might be better to use more peaceful methods, he replied in his simple way, "But, pastor, that priest needed a tongue lashing and I knew you missionaries were all sanctified and couldn't give it like it ought to be done, and, as I'm not even converted, it was up to me to do it." It is only necessary to add that soon after this Ricardo was converted, and while he lost none of his vigor he became as harmless as a dove.

While she lived in Gibara a cottage meeting was held in Ruperta's home every Tuesday. This was continued in Banes until her death. She was instrumental in leading a large number of her family and neighbors to a knowledge of Christ.

At the time of her death, Charles C. Haworth was pastor at Banes, and he relates that at Ruperta's funeral there was a man who had resolutely resisted all religious influences, but who at that time was so impressed that he became a constant attender.

SYLVESTER JONES.

NEWS NOTES.

Rosa E. Lee, of North Carolina, is taking post graduate work in Chicago University.

Walter H. Jerge, who is now a student in Earlham College, has been recorded a minister by Hartland Monthly Meeting, Farmington Quarterly Meeting, New York.

Lindley A. Wells, of Portland, Oregon, recently closed a series of meetings at Boulder, Colorado, and is now engaged in a like service at Denver. From there he expects to go to Colorado Springs.

Whitewater Quarterly Meeting was held at Richmond, Indiana, on March 4. Levi T. Pennington, of Pacific College, Newberg, Oregon, and Professor Edwin Morrison of Earlham College, brought the messages during the devotional hour.

Professor Edwin Morrison, of Earlham College, preached at West Richmond meeting on the morning of March 5. The Young People's Fellowship had charge of the evening service, at which time Thomas F. Jones gave an address on what Christ had to say on the war question.

GIRLS' DRESSES.

We accept orders for these Dresses with the understanding that if not satisfactory in every way they can be returned at once and your money will be refunded.

KM 44103—Girls' Dresses of pretty plaid gingham with pink, blue or brown the predominating shade—a serviceable Wash Dress for school and general wear. Made with hemstitched collar and cuffs of white drill; broad button-trimmed panel down the center of the front. Gingham belt; full plaited skirt finished with deep hem. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Price, postpaid. $1.00

KM 44123—Practical and unusually attractive is this Gingham Wash Dress for girls 8, 10, 12 and 14 years old. The waist of plain blue or pink material is a jaunty Russian blouse with collar, cuffs and belt of striped gingham. The full plaited skirt of pink-and-white or blue-and-white striped gingham is attached to the waist and finished with a deep hem. Price, delivered postpaid. $1.50

Mention The American Friend.

Strawbridge & Clothier
Philadelphia.

THE IOWA PAGE

PENN COLLEGE.

The catalog reporting the work of 1915-16, and announcing the work for 1916-17 is in the press and will soon be ready for distribution. Some interesting changes are being made. Only one degree, that of the A. B., will be conferred after this year. The group system of studies has been adopted. There will be almost no change in the faculty for the coming year. It is a great accomplishment when an institution is able to keep in its employ such excellent men and women as now compose the faculty of Penn College. While the finances of the institution do not make it possible to offer attractive salaries, yet the loyalty which men and women who regard teaching in a Christian college as one of the finest opportunities that can be afforded, offsets the difference in salary and is a sufficient inducement to make them willing to remain year after year for a small remuneration.

Homer L. Morris, Professor of History and Instructor in Debating and Oratory, will remain in Columbia University for an additional year. Professor Morris is working toward his master's degree.

Miss Mildred Jones, Dean of Women and Instructor in Physical Education for Women, has been granted leave of absence for the year 1916-17. Her work as Dean of Women will be taken care of by Mrs. W. I. Kelsey. The instructor in Physical Education for Women has not yet been secured. Miss Jones will spend the year's leave of absence at the Chicago School of Physical Education and Expression, and will return at the opening of the year 1917-18 as Librarian and Instructor in Physical Education for Women.

Ora W. Carrell, who is serving as Field Secretary for three of the Yearly Meeting boards during eight months of the year, will spend the months of May, June, July and August as Field Secretary for Penn College, giving his entire attention to soliciting new students. Mr. Carrell's intimate acquaintance with the young people of the Yearly Meeting will fit him excellently for this task.

Walter F. Dexter, who has been serving since last June as Financial Secretary, will continue his work. A campaign has been instituted to increase the permanent productive endowment to one-half million dollars. Mr. Dexter has made an excellent start on this campaign.

Plans are being laid for a twelve-week Summer Term following commencement. A complete Normal Course of study will be offered. This will afford opportunity for teachers to meet the state requirements. The attention of all persons desiring work for the Summer is called to this term. Professor F. C. Stanley is Principal of the Summer Quarter.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT.

Friends Rally At The Laymen's Missionary Convention Des Moines, February 22, 1916.

Nearly two thousand delegates were registered at the Laymen's Missionary Conference in Des Moines and a goodly number of Friends were present to share in the inspiration of the great gathering.

The Friends' rally was held at the Y. W. C. A. on February 22 from four to seven o'clock. It had something of the nature of a surprise party, for the committee on arrangements had directed that provision be made for thirty-five or forty persons, and eighty-five were present. The social fellowship, while the company gathered and during the cafeteria supper, was a pleasant and profitable part of the evening. All but two of the fourteen Quarterly Meetings of Iowa Yearly Meeting were represented.

The topics discussed clustered around the theme of our relation as a church to the forward movement of the Kingdom. The meeting opened with a time of earnest prayer, and one message presented the imperative need of prayer, if we would accomplish anything in our work for the Master—"praying always".

The plan for the follow-up work of the Laymen's Conference was read and considered. In connection with this the plans of our own evangelistic and mission boards were also considered. It was felt that these gave quite a comprehensive program of service and that we must give our hearty support in getting these plans before our meetings and in securing the team work which must carry them out. The delegates from each Quarterly Meeting were made responsible for arranging echo and extension reports in their home and neighboring meetings.

The plan of the Evangelistic Board to secure individual prayer and work to bring at least one to Christ in 1916, is being adopted in many local meetings and the rally gave an impetus to its further development. The neighborhood survey as recommended in our evangelistic program is needed in nearly all our meetings for the purpose of fellowship and for reaching the non-church going class. The Laymen's Movement recommends that a canvass of this kind shall be conducted in March.

The Mission Board presented the need of the work in Jamaica and the necessity of loyal support at this time. There is an obligation of $2,000.00 for this work which should be met at once. Those present felt that they desired to co-operate with the Board in securing a response to their call for a self denial offering on Easter of this year.

BIBLE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

The Field Secretary has just returned from a very pleasant and profitable trip through Salem Quarterly Meeting. He received the most hearty support everywhere and found the schools doing very good work.

Salem. The School here is not large but it is doing efficient work. The School was visited and a special Conference held on the following Thursday evening. On Sabbath afternoon, February 27, a Quarterly Meeting Bible School session was held, it being the time of the regular Quarterly Meeting then in session. An address on Trained Leadership was given by Ora W. Carrell, followed by a very interesting round table discussion.

Cedar Creek. This is a typical rural school and it is a fine illustration of what an efficient rural school may accomplish. It is well organized, having attained all of the points of the Bible School standard save those of Decision Day and the regular worker's Conference. They have both a missionary and a temperance superintendent.

SHARES

In

The Indiana Rural Credit Association

Are offered for investment. They are non-taxable and mortgage loans are made only to shareholders upon farm property.

Loans may run 10, 20 and 30 years. Small annual payments repay principal and interest.

Ask for Booklet.

MORD CARTER, President,
1214 Merchants Bank Building
Indianapolis, Ind.

dent who are doing good work in their respective departments. Four classes are using the graded lessons. Their new church building which was planned with the needs of the Bible School in mind adds much to the life and efficiency of the School.

West Grove. On account of sickness in the neighborhood it was not possible to hold a conference with the workers here.

Chestnut Hill. A very helpful Conference was held with the workers of this School. The School had an enrollment last year of 53 with an average attendance of 40. This School is located near to White's Institute and has wonderful opportunities in relation to the boys and girls of the Institute who attend regularly. Two of the older girls of the Institute are serving as superintendents of the Cradle Roll and Home Departments, while one of the older boys is acting as teacher of the boy's class. Thus the boys and girls are being splendidly trained in Bible Study and in practical Bible School service.

Stockport. An excellent conference was held at the home of the pastors, Fred and Effie Comfort on Saturday evening, and the School was visited on the following day. They have superintendents for their Missionary and Temperance Departments. The Cradle Roll and Home Departments are also doing good work. Special use of the blackboard with chalk-talks every Sabbath adds much to the interest of the school.

Hickory Grove. This is another typical rural school, six miles from Stockport, and another splendid example of what an efficient Bible School may contribute to the life of a community. Their Cradle Roll and Home Departments are reaching many homes while the five classes of the school are reaching many others every Sabbath. A large young people's organized class is doing good work.

FRIENDS MEETINGS.

Stockton Avenue Friends Church, San Jose, California. Take Santa Clara Car to Stockton Ave., walk ½ block west. Visitors always welcome.

Washington, D. C. meeting house, 13th and Irving Streets, N. W. Bible School 9:45, meeting for worship 11 a. m., C. E. 7:30. Mid-week meeting, Fifth-day, 7:45 p. m.

West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., Main and West 7th Street. Bible School, 9:00; meeting for worship, 10:30; vesper service, 5:00; C. E., 2:15. Prayer meeting, Thursday, 7:30.

BIBLE SCHOOL.

MARCH 26.

Review.

Golden Text—Revelation 7:16, 17.

The lessons for this quarter cover for the most part, the history of the church from the ascension of Christ to the conversion of Paul. This period is covered by nine lessons from the Acts of the Apostles. Three lessons have been selected from other New Testament sources evidently to enforce the truths taught in the series.

Historically speaking, this is a brief period but one full of important developments. The death of Jesus had been a bitter disappointment to those followers who were expecting him to restore to the Jews the splendor of the ancient kingdom. Many of these turned back and as a result of the first shock even some of the twelve seem to have given up hope and gone back to Galilee. Very early, however, they were convinced that Jesus was the Christ in spite of the fact of his crucifixion. The evidence was so overwhelming and inspiring that it bore down all opposition and emboldened the twelve to enter upon a vigorous evangelistic campaign in and about Jerusalem.

The marked events of the period—after Jesus' departure—are: The gathering of a band of the faithful which formed the nucleus of the new movement, the first effort at organization culminating in the selecting of Matthias to take Judas' place, the coming of the Holy Spirit, Peter's sermon, which started the evangelistic effort, the communistic program, the expansion of the organization by the selection of the seven deacons, the work and death of Stephen, and the first persecution.

So far this was a Jewish movement. No attempt was made to interest Gentiles until the next period. Indeed it is doubtful whether the Christians at this time thought it possible for any but Jews, including proselytes, to be Christians. As yet, there was no name by which they were known even to their friends, let alone to the outside world. They had no public meeting places, meeting so far as we know, in the homes of the members of the group. They still frequented the Temple and its courts for prayer and religious worship. Those were the days of experimentation, so to speak, and we too frequently fail to appreciate the task of these founders of the church.

The Bible student should re-read these chapters in Acts, and while doing so try to live in his imagination, the life of a Christian of the period. Try to feel the thrill that would come to one who, for the first time, heard of a friend rising from the dead, seeks to know what changes in his life discipleship would mean, how it might sever his old relationships and change his ideas, etc. To do this well, the student should have in mind the life and ideas current at the time, divest himself of modern interpretations whenever these would hinder his appreciations of actual doings of the age.

Read the American Friend ads.

DREER'S 1916 Garden Book

contains 288 pages, four color and four duotone plates, besides numberless photographic true-to-life reproductions. It lists all the standard varieties of Flowers and Vegetables, as well as the best of the season's novelties.

The newest Roses, the best Dahlias, and Dreer's Improved Hardy Perennials are given special prominence.

Sent free to any one mentioning this weekly.

Dreer's Orchid-Flowered Sweet Peas—with immense wavy flowers in sprays of 3 and 4 blossoms each. Our mixture contains a full range of colors, 10 cents per packet, 20 cents per ounce, 60 cents per ¼ pound. Garden Book free with each order.

HENRY A. DREER 714-716 CHESTNUT ST. PHILADELPHIA

GOOD HOME WITH WAGES for Suitable Woman Friend.

A housekeeper is needed in Thomas D. Hubbard's home at Kimball, Kansas, a railroad village 113 miles south of Kansas City. Handy modern home with hot and cold running water; bath room on first floor; toilet on first floor and second floor. A woman not over 40 preferred. The office woman besides yourself and only one man besides Mr. Hubbard to cook for. No children. You don't need to step down or out of the house for fuel or rain-water; all on same level as kitchen. Mention references in your application. As to Friend Hubbard, he is well known in Columbus, Ohio, Richmond, Indiana, Chicago, Oskaloosa, Kansas City, Topeka, Wichita and Whittier. Good Friends Church and three other churches for you to attend.

BORN

Bowman—At Mt. Airy, N. C., November 21, 1915, to J. A. and Chattie Bowman, a son, Andrew Jackson.

Carpenter—At Mt. Airy, N. C., February 11, 1916, to J. W. and Ada Carpenter, a son, Joe.

Poore—At Mt. Airy, N. C., January 22, 1916, to Frank and Dora Poore, a daughter, Ethel Minnie.

Welch—At Mt. Airy, N. C., July 26, 1915, to Walter P. and Lula Welch, a son, Walter McGee.

Butler—At Russiaville, Indiana, February 26, 1916, to Earl and Hazel Butler, a son, Ralph M.

Dorland—At Chicago, Illinois, February 26, 1916, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edwin Dorland, a daughter, Cynthia.

DIED

Chapman—Isaac S. Chapman died at his home in Bloomingdale, Indiana, after several months of failing health, January 18, 1916, aged 64 years. He leaves a son and two daughters. Funeral services were held at the Friends church in charge of George H. Moore, pastor.

Carter—Charles F. Carter, son of Thomas C. and Rachel Carter, died of pneumonia at his home in Yellow Springs, Ohio, January 18, 1916, aged 36 years. He was a birthright Friend. He leaves a wife, three daughters and one son.

Harris—Robert T. Harris died at his home near Franklin, Virginia, January 17, 1916, in his 78th year. "He giveth his beloved sleep."

Gardon—James F. Gardon was born in Westchester, Ohio, April 24, 1836, and died at his home in Buffalo, Kansas, January 2, 1916, aged 79 years, 8 months and 9 days. He was converted fifteen years ago and joined Friends, since which time he has continuously held offices of trust, being treasurer and elder at the time of his death. His illness extended over a period of ten weeks and he suffered intensely. His faith in God, however, was an encouragement to all who visited his room. Two daughters survive him. Funeral services were conducted by Sadie L. Nichols.

King—Maria King was born at Guilford, Surrey, England, and died at her home in Wichita, Kansas, December 12, 1915, after an illness lasting about two years. At various times she lived at Sudbury, Suffolk and Birmingham, England, going later to Ackworth School, where she remained for thirty eight years, holding the respective positions of scholar, apprentice, teacher and governess. About thirty years ago she came to America and has since lived in the vicinity of Wichita. Her life was a quiet one, but it gave evidence of an abiding faith in Jesus. One sister and two brothers survive her. Funeral services were conducted by President Edmund Stanley.

Shepherd—Alice R. Shepherd, daughter of Nathan T. and Ruth A. Shepherd of Pembroke, Massachusetts, was born September 18, 1849, and died July 3, 1915.

Stanley—Fariba W. Stanley, widow of the late Jesse Stanley and daughter of Joseph and Hope Wilson, died at her home in Westfield, Indiana, January 13, 1916. Her life of more than eighty years was one of service and helpfulness. She was a Friends' minister and a life long member of the church, always interested in the various departments of church work. With a mind of unusual vigor she was thoroughly alive to the topics of the day. She had been a devoted student of the Bible and had learned to pillow her head confidently upon the promises of her Lord. The influences of her life will long be felt in the community where she lived.

Teas—Thomas S. Teas, son of Thomas S. and Sarah C. Teas, was born near Spiceland, Indiana, November 14, 1841, and died at his home in Salem, Ohio, November 13, 1915. He was a birthright Friend and lived a blameless Christian life. He was educated at Spiceland Academy and at Earlham College. In 1867 he married Marietta Bogue, who with one son and one brother survive him.

Wood—Teresa P. Wood, daughter of Daniel and Deborah Gidley, was born in Morrow county, Ohio, August 6, 1845, and died at New Providence, Iowa, December 15, 1915, aged 70 years, 4 months and 9 days. She married Joseph J. Wood in 1867. She was a birthright Friend and has been faithful in serving the Sabbath School and meeting. Death came from an attack of paralysis on August 15. Her death means the breaking up of a home that has endured almost fifty years. Her husband and three sons survive her.

Winslow—John H. Winslow was born in Randolph county, North Carolina, May 9, 1836, and died at his home in Greenleaf, Idaho, July 5, 1915, aged 79 years, 2 months and 4 days. When a child he moved to Grant county Indiana, where he grew to manhood. He married Abby Dillon in 1856. He was converted while his children were still young and was very attentive upon all the services of the church. He was a good neighbor, a kind Christian father and a true husband. His widow, nine children, thirty-eight grandchildren and twelve great grandchildren survive him.

PROMOTE PEACE by distributing America's cherished land mark post cards: Macy-Colby House, Golgotha Rock, Friends Meeting House, N. C., Stanton's Statue (Unveiling) four for five cents. Postcards containing essentials of Dick Military Law, five for 5 cents. C. E. Lukens, Marion, Ohio.

POSITION WANTED. Companion-nurse to semi-invalid or elderly lady, or will assist with management of a home. Refined capable woman desires position in Philadelphia or suburbs. Highest reference. Address W. American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½% FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever Investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue. Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books
The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.
Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-sen-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.
Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 12.

THIRD MONTH 16, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 12.

“Preparedness”

God, the Eternal Right, command us now—
Here at the parting of the ways we stand.
Custom and greed cry loud for armament,
And fear makes mock at our defenseless land.
The sons of war may one day cross our sea—
God of the Past, dare we depend on thee?

Lo, it is midnight in a garden black,
And one in grip of hell stands undismayed!
A sword, rejected lying at his feet,
And angel legions keen to give him aid.
He makes his choice in earth's supremest hour,
And journeys forth to Calvary—and power!

Our time has come to choose—God help us now!
“Who takes the sword shall perish by the sword.”
And every land since history began,
Has proved the sure fulfillment of that word.
We arm, and peace turns back a thousand years;
We arm, and die—the victim of our fears!

Throw down thine arms, O Nation of God's hopes!
We will not chain our land to ages dead;
But trusting Love, dare the onslaughts of hell,
Like him who trod for us the wine-press red;
And count it glory, though we shed our blood,
So earth shall reap eternal brotherhood!

—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50. cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Our Washington Letter

Some idea of the intensity of feeling prevailing among Congressmen with regard to international affairs and the military plans of the Administration may be gained from the fact that two of them, Congressman Page of North Carolina and Sherwood of Ohio, have announced that they are so completely out of accord with the policy of the President and his associates in these matters that they will not come back to Congress. General Sherwood went through the entire Civil War and has been in Congress several terms. It was gratifying to find a man of his experience strongly opposed to everything making for war. In a few minutes conversation today he laughed at the idea of the Germans going to war with us or of attempting to invade our shores. He lamented the thought of this country spending more millions for war preparations than now go for that purpose. But he seemed to be hopeless of accomplishing anything by way of blocking the plans of the "preparedness" advocates. Congressman Page believes that this nation has not been honestly and thoroughly neutral in the present war and he is also opposed to the big army and navy program.

Within the last few days a bill was reported to the Senate that will probably be an important factor in the final "preparedness" legislation of Congress. In some respects it is even more extravagant in its provisions than the President's program demanded. This bill has to do with the army. Its main feature is a peace basis of 178,000 men. The introduction of this bill is an indication that before long the whole question of "preparedness" will be under consideration by Congress. It behooves every one who is anxious to see our country keep out of militarism to make his wishes known to the men in Congress, Senators and Representatives. These men attach far more importance to expressed opinions from back home than might be expected. I was told at the office of one of them that Friends in his district have been letting him know what they want him to do as their representative. It is to be hoped that no Friend will fail to write to his Representative and Senators in this time of danger. And the Friend who writes himself and gets another citizen to do the same will perform a double service. It is urged that the Friends Peace Headquarters at 1811 I Street, N. W., Washington, be informed by all who write or telegraph their Congressmen. Many have already done this. There should be no delay in writing.

NATIONAL MISSIONARY CONGRESS

Washington, D. C., April 26-30

The Men's National Missionary Congress to be held in Washington, D. C., April 26 to 30, under the direction of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, will be one of the most momentous religious gatherings since the World's Missionary Conference in Edinburg in 1910. It will be the climax to the series of great conventions of the National Missionary Campaign now being held in the leading cities of the United States.

All the important foreign and home mission agencies are making preparations to participate actively in the Congress. Missionary leaders regard the gathering as a potential event. The assemblage will face new world conditions of opportunity and need and is expected to exert a profound influence on the missionary activities of the next ten years.

The arrangements for the Congress are being made by the Laymen's Missionary Movement. All the sessions will be held in the beautiful Memorial Continental Hall, Washington, opening Wednesday evening, April 26th and closing Sunday evening, April 30th. The Congress will be a deliberative body and the delegates, limited in number, have been allotted to the various Protestant religious denominations upon an equitable basis. Each denomination is selecting its own representatives and delegates are registering from every part of the United States.

Among the outstanding leaders of Christian activity and thought who have accepted invitations to speak at the Congress are John R. Mott, Robert E. Speer, Dr. Shailer Mathews, Dr. W. D. MacKenzie, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, George Sherwood Eddy, Raymond Robins, Silas McBee, Dr. John F. Goucher, Ex-Lieutenant Governor A. J. Wallace of California.

Application for membership in the Congress should be made at once to the missionary agencies of the religious denominations or to the Laymen's Missionary Movement, 1 Madison Avenue, New York. The registration fee is $5.00, and should accompany the application. The Congress will be self-entertaining. Detailed information concerning hotels, rates, etc., will be sent to all registered delegates.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII, No. 12.

THIRD MONTH 23, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV, No. 12.

The Purpose of Being Saved

For what purpose are men and women saved? Upon the answer depends the destiny of the church of Christ in the world. It has been said that "a working faith and a sacrificing love should always accompany a singing hope." If religion means nothing more than ecstasy, then selfish gratification resolves itself into a virtue. The church must get beyond the "flowery beds of ease" experience, else religion becomes a luxury and not a necessity.

The incentives to conversion have been wrapped about with a veneer of self interest to such an extent that the church has lost much of its power and its missionary zeal. He who would save his life will lose it is a bit of practical philosophy that finds exemplification in every sphere of human activity. It happens all too frequently that professing Christians are so busy maintaining their own spiritual thermometers at the proper registration that they never find opportunity to impart spiritual warmth to others. Personal regeneration must find expression in service no less than in the spoken testimony. The bane of the church is its self-centered communicants.

"When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren" was an admonition of Jesus which found its parallel in another command to the same disciple, "Feed my lambs," "Feed my sheep." The direction that remission of sins shall be preached in the name of Jesus to all nations is a command to the church as a whole, from the obligation of which no convert is exempted. We cannot say that certain portions of the church are called to serve and others are free to consume the blessings of God upon their own desires for happiness.

We are saved therefore in order that we may help to save others. "Even so let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven." Genuine Christianity is contagious and a godly example begets a godly desire in others. Christianity is propagated through exercise. What a well ordered system of calisthenics is to the body, service is to discipleship. We are told that action and reaction are equal. They who water will themselves be watered. It is he who loses his life that finds it. Soul satisfaction is found in ministering to others, not in idleness and self-complacency. We appreciate our experiences most when we are telling them to others. We lose the weight of our own burdens by endeavoring to share the burdens of others. We prove our right to enjoy religion by our efforts to lead others into the same experience.

The church must prove itself to be the servant and helper of humanity. At a time when militarism is being glorified, when our youth are taught that the bearing of arms is needed to develop the manly arts, and when the god of war is hailed as the deliverer of the oppressed and tyrannized, it is the business of the church to construct a program that will accomplish for the world and human society all that is supposed to be accomplished for human liberty and justice through the clash of arms. Love is stronger than force as a civilizing power and more abiding. The church must set itself to the task of proving that Christianity can be made to work in this modern world, and that the teachings of Jesus when carried into effect are able to work the miracle of changing world customs and conduct, no less than individual customs and conduct, after the pattern of our Lord and Master.

The business of the gospel is to change human nature, and when the church fulfills its mission of practicing the gospel, new ideals will take the place of the old philosophies and the spirit of Jesus will become the dominating force in the government of the world. Society, commercialism and nationalism must be taught to conform themselves to the mind and program of Jesus Christ, and to this end has the church been set in the world, no less than to work out the miracle of personal regeneration. "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations * * * teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I command of you." The church might quail before the magnitude of such a task, except for the promise "and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Parental Responsibility for the Child's Religious Life

By CHARLES M. WOODMAN.

When Mary found Jesus in the Temple He said to her: "Know ye not that I must be in my Father's house?" It seems to me that this is a universal childhood question. They seem to be trying to say to us that we ought to expect that genuine religion is a normal attitude of their life, which will find expression if we will but give it a chance.

When God was looking for a second Elijah, who could defiantly stand alone for his convictions and herald the way for the Christ, he sought out a man of God, Zacharias, and a woman of God, Elizabeth, who would make the raising of children a divine business. When there was no open vision in Israel, and God would make a prophet equal to the occasion, he found a godly woman who would dedicate her unborn child to Jehovah. Consecrated to God and brought up in the house of God, Samuel became God's messenger to his generation. Whenever God has had a mighty work to accomplish he has sought out a devout family, and in partnership with it has produced the leader he needed.

Preachers, teachers and missionaries are the acknowledged partners of God in the world's redemption. The same fact is equally true of parents. The home is God's favorite place for the cultivation of spiritual leadership. The child is molded by his home more than by any other factors that enter his life. To leave the shaping and training of the child's religious life to the Church or to the Bible School, which at the most can have the child for only two hours a week, is absurd.

The religious life of the child is supremely important. On the very lowest estimate it holds a place commensurate with the body and the mind. We are unwavering in our care that our children should have proper food, suitable clothing and adequate shelter. No price is too dear to pay for their physical health. We pay good money in taxes, or otherwise, that the child's mind may receive its due amount of training. We must recognize with equal emphasis that the child's spiritual growth is of very great importance, and its neglect is a thing of very grave concern. It is this spiritual life from which flows those streams of pure unselfish service, sacrifice and love, which are the crowning beauties of character. It is in the religious sphere where are found the strongest weapons of self-defense against temptation.

Personal religion is the citadel of character. Personal faith is the point of view from which can be seen the most distant horizon. Faith links onto the life where the physique and the mind have reached their limitations. The shores of reason are washed by the ocean of faith. As the earth's surface is three-fourths water, so may we say that the major portion of real life is discoverable only through the exercise of personal religion on the limitless ocean of faith. Or, again, it is religion alone which can lay hold on the future. The mind and the body are but the clothes which the spirit wears. The key on our key-rings lets us into our earthly house. The key of personal faith lets us into our heavenly mansion. The key to that mansion is welded here on earth in the atmosphere and cultivation of the religious life. Hence the supreme importance of recognizing the needs of cultivating the religious life of the child.

As to the methods to be used, just one thing can be said within the limits of this article. The creation of a religious atmosphere is the supreme necessity in the religious development of a child. Experience thrives on atmosphere, not on facts. A child may be versed in all the essential Christian doctrines; he may know all the important creeds; he may be able to answer correctly every question of the catechism, and yet have acquired no religious education whatever. You may comply with all the rules about placing a seed in the soil, watering it and giving it sunlight, but if the atmosphere is below freezing you will never see it bloom as a flower.

Children's growth is regulated by atmospheres. Their appreciation of art is learned either in the atmosphere of the colored prints of the newspapers or the Perry pictures. Their musical sense is developed under the inspiration of ragtime or the symphony. Their sense of what home is is developed in an atmosphere of filth and disorder or in orderliness, cleanliness and beauty. It is really far more essential to have an orderly house for the sake of the children than for the sake of the caller. It makes little difference what the children hear in teaching about these or religious things, but a very great difference what they imbibe in the living process from the atmosphere. The child's religious life, the most sensitive part of his being, is molded and developed by the atmosphere which is made for him by his parents and his home.

Portland, Me.

The Church and Public School

By W. J. REAGAN.

Those who have their ears closest to the ground are beginning to note renewed signs of interest in religious education in the public schools. Strange to say the initiative has been taken, not by the church, but by the school men. Now, if there is this renewal of interest on the part of our teachers and school officials, the church ought to be ready for encouragement and co-operation.

Christ gave His followers the very most difficult task when He asked them to win friends for His cause without compulsion. Our educational problem in America has been hard, just because we have taken Jesus seriously in this respect. We have refused to compel any sort of religious exercise. Our denomination was very prominent in its stand for this freedom. We have no desire to change this policy, but I firmly believe there is in our midst a new and effective alignment of church and school, if we have eyes to see and ears to hear. Note the place given to the rural church in our agricultural schools. Watch the work of the Y. M. C. A. in the high school field. For three years I had the very great privilege of watching at close range the work of the Kansas Y. M. C. A. among its high schools. The secretary had a vital and enthusiastic message for the schools and he was the closest friend of literally hundred of the fellows. Teachers were spending time and energy to help him establish the work in their schools. Every year he must refuse to start associations, simply because one man cannot oversee all the work, and the association has too big a vision to start anything without some efficient and continued oversight.

High school boys are seeing new visions of the kingdom which must be among men as it is in Heaven, and they are finding a place for work in that kingdom. The association continually holds up the need for membership in some church, and points out the need of boys' classes and young people's meetings. I remember a few instances of very close co-operation of ministers. Their churches were open, their time was at the command of the secretary, but too often the boys had to break into the church if they got in. Campaigns carried on in the high schools would reach scores of boys, and those campaigns would close without a single minister coming near the meetings.

Another instance of this co-operation has recently come to my notice. A few weeks ago the teachers of Sherwood Select School invited in the two ministers of the community and suggested an all-day education rally. The school invited all the country teachers nearby, their students and the parents. All the teachers heartily responded and about 175 people gathered for the day at the school building. Each family brought their own lunch, but coffee and chocolate were served to all at the school. It took advertising and planning, but surely no one who helped regretted in the least the effort expended.

The social hour was most worth while. Parents, teachers and pupils talked together, in the presence of some splendid addresses. It must mean more sympathy between teacher and student; it must mean increased interest in the best type of education. Auburn Theological Seminary furnished a pianist and a soloist and one speaker. Another speaker came from Cornell. The superintendent of the district was there for a part in the program. The addresses were inspiring and practical suggestions were given. The beauty of childhood and reverence for personality; life instead of a living; appreciation of the world in which we live and friendship for its Maker; the absolute necessity of good home life. These were the themes, and all these education and Christianity have in common, and several people got the messages there who never attend church.

Almost unanimously those people voted for another program of the same kind this winter and pledged themselves to attend and work for the attendance of others. There is not the slightest doubt that the churches in the community were benefited. Those twelve teachers who attended have a new vision of their work as a result. No laws were passed compelling any sort of worship, but something happened that tended to make a law unnecessary.

A visit from the pastor or Christian worker to the school in the community; a word of encouragement; a desire to help the teacher with his problem; these things will convince any Christian man or woman that the opportunities of mixing his religion with the work of the public schools are not narrow and limited. Our public schools are calling for real, genuine help. Can the church to which we belong, with its rich history of educational work, afford to ignore that call.

Poplar Ridge, N. Y.

A VISIT TO THE FRIENDS' MISSION

By a Member of the Legislative Council of Jamaica.

(Part of an article appearing in the Jamaica Times, a weekly paper published in Kingston, Jamaica.)

The work which is being done by the Friends' Mission has so deeply impressed me that I am compelled to address the public of Jamaica through the press concerning the same.

On the 24th of July, I boarded the Port Antonio train at Spanish Town for the North Side capital. On arriving at the North Side metropolis, we were met by Mrs. Swift and Miss White, two of the leading spirits of this mission. We started for Happy Grove and Sea Side about 7:30 p. m. The moon was full and cast a beautiful splendor over all. Along the coast we sped, passing through many villages crowded with Saturday evening merry-makers, Jamaicans, East Indians and Chinamen all vying with each other to barter, exchange or make some money.

The Sea Side Mission is the chief station of the Friends Society. It is beautiful for situation. The land slopes gently down towards the sea. The property comprises about thirty acres of land, some of which is under cocoanut cultivation. Upon this property there is a substantial concrete church with the manse near at hand. Both buildings are supplied with acetylene gas for lighting purposes. A few chains from the church there stands the Boys' Industrial School. This part of the work is in charge of W. G. Farr, B. A., assisted by M. E. Hoffman, Esq., a Jamaica teacher. Trades, such as cabinet work, tailoring and carpentry, with agriculture, are taught. The Academic instruction is given to the boys and girls together from 8:30 A. M. to 12:30. Trades and agriculture are dealt with in the afternoon. The Agricultural Instructor of the district assists with the experimental plot.

This school is not a reformatory where bad boys are committed. It is a Christian school to train boys and fit them for their life's work or prepare them for a higher education at a moderate cost. Some of our rich men could do nothing better than make it possible for some ambitious boy or girl to get a first class, practical education in this institution. The school for girls is situated along the main road about ten minutes' walk from the church and the boys' school. The buildings are constructed out of the old estate works and improved to meet the requirements of the school. Everything is kept scrupulously clean in all of the buildings. The Girls' School is in charge of Miss A. M. Andrews. She is an American lady and has been in the Island for about 15 years. She is assisted by a Jamaican lady teacher who was trained at the same school. The girls vary from 13 to 15 years of age as well as the boys. The domestic training is under the care of Mrs. W. G. Farr, B. A. Physical culture, sewing, cooking, etc., are taught. It is the aim of both the girls' and boys' school to fit young people for their life's work under Christian leadership and healthy surroundings. The body and soul are brought under control and every part of life and work is dealt with. In the same building with the Girls' School is the Orphanage for East Indians. At the time of my visit there were eleven children. Another was expected to make up the dozen which is the allotted number. The government assists with the Orphanage, but here is a chance for some philanthropist to endow and enlarge the building for such work. The children from 18 months old to eight or nine years looked happy, contented and bright. Some came into the Orphanage in an awful state. Sickness and emaciation were stamped upon the poor, wee things. Now they are healthy and well cared for. Miss M. E. Allen, another American lady of some experience, is in charge of the Orphanage.

The church work is in charge of Chas. Kurtzhals, assisted by his good wife, who can sing the gospel message home to the hearts of the people. Stations are established at Port Antonio in charge of Miss White, Buff Bay, Mrs. Swift, Annotto Bay, Miss Stanley and Miss Hoover. At each station special attention is given to the East Indians and some stations are confined to such work entirely.

Your correspondent did not stay for all of the sessions. However, he came away from the Conference deeply impressed with the work. Here we have a religious society at work in our midst controlled by the spirit of Christ, and carrying out this purpose with a band of consecrated men and women. No blowing of trumpets or press advertisements, only a determined effort to save men and women in order that they may become fit subjects for the Kingdom of God. From the little East Indian orphans up to the young man, the son of a rich savant from India who refused to work upon the estate and was sent to prison, who is now a Catechist and an interpreter of no less than four different dialects and languages including Sanskrit, we have an important work going on, the like of which cannot be equalled in this colony. All honor to those ladies and gentlemen including some Jamaican young men and women who have been born anew and who are following in the footsteps of the risen Christ!

I advise any one who is in want of a spiritual tonic to visit the Friends Mission. They must be impressed and refreshed in spirit. They will come away determined to lift up the standard of Christ as never before and thank God that His Kingdom is coming and that it is being established upon the earth.

Recording of Ministers

Phariba W. Stephens, of Richmond, Indiana, who is a member of the committee appointed by Indiana Yearly Meeting to consider questions pertaining to the preparations of the ministry, reported her views in writing, of which the following is a part:

Recognizing the need of more efficient ministers, coveting for those called an equipment which shall avail in the highest place attainable, worthy to command respect anywhere, let there be better preparation.

Let there be instruction as to the great essentials for the ministry:

1. Above all, there must be heart preparation, spirit equipment.

2. That the call, being of divine origin, must require the best of superlative worth, no shoddy service being meet for such a supreme task.

3. That the gift of the ministry must be exercised by the authority of the Lord Jesus and for His Glory.

4. That the ministry is justly to represent the teaching, character and essence of Jesus Christ.

5. That the discourse must flow from the revelation and impulse of the Holy Spirit.

6. There must be a Scripturally informed ministry. There must be a right dividing of the Word, a speaking in a "known tongue." There must be a discerning in a discreet way, a compelling in an artful manner. There must be a lofty vision, with lowliness of heart, dwelling deep, where only the power can be attached.

7. A ministry that reaches avoids a monotonous holding to A B C methods; it shuns "vain repetitions; it is known by a variety of qualifications; it is an expert in first-hand information; it edifies; it counts; it is a vital force; it is profitable. The minister is himself his most convincing sermon, provided with the proof of the value of his prescriptions.

8. A forceful ministry in a community harmoniously feels its way to acceptable service. Front-line preaching, as front-line fighting, requires other than raw recruits. There must be a long, severe process of perfecting. Like a big, rough piece of steel from which cambric needles are to be constructed, there must be submission to various heatings, filings, polishings, at the start much larger than at the end, but the little skillful instrument smoothly gliding without snagging or catching, is able finally to lead the thread through the fabrics—something of use and beauty resulting—such might the ministry of God's sons and daughters be if they could thus patiently yield to preparation, if they could wait through the thirty years of testing, as did Christ, for three years of service.

9. The man of God discovers those intrusted with gifts, his own endowments not blinding him to others. He sees that such are not rudely shoved aside by the thorns of the self-important. He considers the fledglings, wisely stirs up their nest, and sets them a-wing. He helps to perpetuate the ministry.

A Tribute to Friends

The "Record of Christian Work" for March has the following, which will be of interest to Friends:

A fine tribute to English Quakers is to be found in the French publication, Lectures pour Tous. When the mobilization of war was ordered the Friends began their mobilization of peace. In 1870 they had won the confidence of the French authorities by their admirable philanthropy, their relief of the wounded, their distribution of food and clothing to the needy. The government in 1915 remembered the earlier activities and gave them every authorization for their enterprise of the present day. Great automobiles were bought and transformed into traveling ambulances and pharmacies. Others were loaded with clothing and provisions. In the second week of August these were circulating about the roads of Belgium and Northern France, succoring the fugitives, gathering up the footsore women and children, feeding the hungry. Often their occupants were arrested as spies. One family of Quakers—father, mother, two sons and two daughters, had established at Amiens a depot of provisions and clothing from whence two automobiles driven by the four younger persons, worked for the relief of the departments of the North and the Pas-de-Calais. Between the 25th of August and the 25th of September two of the young people were arrested seven times; those on the other auto trucks twelve times. Yet in these 30 days they distributed 3000 blankets, 8000 shirts, 5000 pairs of stockings, 4000 shoes, many tons of bread, sugar and other provisions. On return journeys this same family in the same month picked up and brought into safety 287 wounded soldiers and a hundred women and children.

Now the Quakers are at work erecting temporary homes in the region ravaged by the German invasion. They are setting these up with their own hands and winning thereby the hearts of the people.

"Go to Lernaize, Maurupt, Revigny," says Lectures pour Tous, "those villages to which our soldiers' valor has given an immortal renown. Speak to the poor people whose love of the village bell has brought them back to their ruined homes and ask what they think of the Quakers."

"They will speak of them with tenderness as of devoted big brothers who bind up their wounds. They will show you, with hands trembling with emotion, carpenters perched on the roof of an unfinished house, masons occupied with replastering a ruined wall."

"And you will salute with a low bow these masons and carpenters in their working garments, these English Quakers who nobly prove that the term, Society of Friends, is no vain theoretical formula."

Advocating the Peace Cause

A large audience was present at a peace service held Sunday evening in the Methodist church, when Professor W. L. Pearson, Principal of the Biblical School of Friends University at Wichita, gave a scholarly and forceful address on the subject, "The Prince of Peace and World Peace." The members of the Congregational, Friends and Methodist churches united in the service and expressed their entire sympathy with the peace movement which has always been one of the strong principles of the Friends church. The address which was given Sunday evening by Professor Pearson was recently given by request of the Association before the Ministerial Association of Wichita and received their hearty endorsement.

Basing his address on Isaiah 9-6, "And His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." Prof. Pearson said that since Christ has come into the world all such subjects must be discussed on the basis of fundamental Christianity. In connection with the matter of peace as a Christian principle there are three great certainties. All of the prophets viewed the coming reign of Christ as a reign of peace. Christ and his apostles proclaimed to the world a gospel of peace. The Christians of the early church so viewed Christianity and scores of them in conformity to the belief met death rather than offer bloody resistance.

The Society of Friends has won for their members and the other non-combatants release from military duty. The world is coming more and more to realize the righteousness of the stand taken by the man who refuses to commit murder no matter under what name it may be disguised.

The speaker touched upon the subject of preparedness as advocated by President Wilson. He stated that he had regarded Wilson as the greatest president since Lincoln and had been very fully in sympathy with every move made by him until his launching of the preparedness program. The President states that the United States has the second greatest navy in the world, and yet he wants the greatest. He says we have no enemy and yet he would spend millions in defense—against what? For the first time in his administration President Wilson gives the people no logical reason for his change of front.

Out of all this horror of war that has engulfed so much of the civilized world must come final victory for the cause of Christ and therefore for the cause of peace. Having learned the frightful lessons of this terrible conflict, the world will as never before turn to the Prince of Peace for the healing of their wounded spirits and will learn from him the true lessons of Christianity, which are the lessons of peace.

While in this city Professor Pearson met with a number of the ministers of the city and urged the forming of a peace department in the various churches. Professor Pearson is chairman of the Peace Committee of the Kansas Yearly Meeting of Friends. In speaking of the growth of the peace sentiment throughout the country he said: "It is wonderful the change that has taken place in the last twenty-five years. Now it is taken for granted that every minister of the gospel is a peace advocate. A few years ago but little thought was given to the matter by the great masses of the people. Now it has grown until throughout the whole country there are thousands of people opposed to war from Christian principle. If the Society of Friends had stood for no other great principle it has been worth while for it to have existed, to have fostered the love of peace, which is now coming to be recognized by all churches as a great fundamental principle of Christianity."—Sterling (Kans.) Bulletin.

Correspondence

Newmarket, Ontario, Canada.

Editor American Friend:

Dear Friend—When in New York on the 10th inst., a Friend placed in my hand a cutting from a newspaper, being the report of an address given by ex-Representative W. W. Cocks before the Republican Club.

In it W. W. Cocks said: "I speak as the representative of the Society of Friends. The Quakers who came to this country fought, they had to fight to protect themselves from the savages. I fear the educated civilized foe more than any savage the old time Quaker ever met; and that is why I believe in military preparedness."

The best I can hope is that W. W. Cocks has been absolutely misrepresented and misreported. It will surely be news to most of the members of our Society that "the Quakers who came to this country had to fight to protect themselves from the savages." Personally I am so deeply interested that I will gladly thank any Friend who will supply me with data of the wonderful occasion. I should also be glad to learn how it is possible for a Friend to avow himself the representative of the Society of Friends and yet be an advocate for preparedness for war.

Have I read Quaker history wrongly? Is it possible Friends advocate preparedness for war? Is there any truth in the statement that early Quakers ever fought the savages, or is W. W. Cocks mistaken? Can any Friend give me information?

Thy friend sincerely,

ALFRED YOUNG.

Expenditures for War

One of the interesting "exhibits" in the pending "anti-preparedness" fight in Congress, is the diagram hanging in the office of the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives. It may be said to sum up Congressman Kitchin's fundamental opposition to any increase to the army and navy budgets at this time. He takes the position that the United States is now paying an excessive proportion of its annual income for war, "past and to come."

"Both relatively and absolutely the proposed increases in our navy and army budgets are enormous," says Congressman Kitchin.

"At the expiration of the five-year period for the program this country will then be expending on its navy and army more than any nation in the world in times of peace ever expended on its army and navy; more than England, with her navalism; more than Russia or Germany, with their huge militarism. At the beginning of the European war Germany was expending for past wars and preparations for wars on its army and navy 55 per cent of the total amount of revenues collected, Japan 45 per cent, Great Britain 37 per cent, the United States over 60 per cent. With the proposed military and naval program enacted into law the United States will be expending over 70 per cent of its total revenue—that is, out of every $100.00 collected from the people over $70.00 will go into militarism and navalism, including $22.00 for pensions, leaving less than $30.00 for all other functions of the government and for all other benefits of the people."

—ANTI-PREPAREDNESS COMMITTEE.

Be Ye Holy

O Christian men and women, do not deceive yourselves! Remember that God sees through shams, remember that God does not care for anything except the heart. He will not in the least value you for your professions or for your observances; but, "as He who hath called you holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation." If you want to make religion lovable, you must make it lovely; if you want men to accept your opinions, enable them, if you can, to respect your character; let men see in you a purer standard than their own, a loftier statue, a kindlier sympathy. The centuries do homage to real goodness: it is fairer than the morning or the evening star; it is the reflection of the life of Christ; it is as "a city set on a hill;" it is as a pillar of fire moving over a wilderness of graves.—Canon Farrar.

Lord Bacon says: "Let not a man trust his victory over his nature too far; for nature will be buried a great time, and yet revive upon the temptation." Furthermore, the mere entertainment of a sound morality in one's thought will not be enough to keep nature dormant. Only a passion for righteousness—a profound spiritual attachment to God can do that.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE

A Beautiful Secret

Visiting a great factory one day, I went through a room where young girls were fastening hooks and eyes upon cardboard. Their fingers fairly flew.

Among them I noticed an old woman busy at the same work. Her fingers were crooked and worn by hard work. I knew she could not keep pace with the nimble young fingers about her; and I wondered why she was there. I think you, too, would like to know.

Months before, she came begging for work. She sadly needed it, for she had a sick husband to support. Seeing the girls at their work, she said she could do what they were doing. The superintendent knew that she would be awkward and slow; and he tried to discourage her. But she begged for a chance; so he gave her a place at the long bench with the girls. It was slow work; and as she was paid by the piece, she could earn but a little. Yet she persevered. And after a while her pile of finished work began to grow strangely fast. There was a beautiful secret about it!

Some of the girls, pitying her, were slipping some of their cards onto her pile; and it was wonderful how they enjoyed seeing it grow. Of course her pay increased. Soon she was receiving almost as much as the others, and she was able to keep her little home in comfort. When Christmas came, the girls gave her a purse with twenty dollars in it. "Is all this mine?" she said, "I never had so much money in my life!"

The story made me think of that verse, "Bear ye one another's burdens."—Frank T. Bayley.

How God Loves

Gypsy Smith tells a story of the way in which he once quieted a riotous meeting. The socialists and agnostics of a town would not give him a hearing, but shouted for a considerable time at the top of their voices. When the din subsided for a moment, the preacher picked out an old man ringleader. "Have you any children?" the missionary asked. "Yes, gov'ner, I have." "How many?" "Three." "How many boys?" "Two and a girl." "What is the oldest?" "A boy." "Is he a good lad?" "No, gov'ner, I can't say that he is; he gives me a lot of trouble. I think sometimes that he will break my heart." "Do you love him?" "Aye, that I do. I sometimes think that I love him most of all." "Well," said the missionary, "don't be surprised if God loves us in this world more than any other beings in the universe, just because we have given him so much trouble."—The Record of Christian Work.

The emancipation from care and sorrow and unrest lies in that going out of ourselves which we call by the name of love.—Dr. Maclaren.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Five Little Foxes

Among my tender vines I spy
A little fox named—By and Bye.

Then set upon him quick, I say,
The swift young hunter—Right Away.

Around each tender vine I plant,
I find the little fox—I Can't.

Then, fast as ever hunter ran,
Chase him with bold and brave—I Can.

No Use in trying—lags and whines
This fox among my tender vines.

Then drive him low, and drive him high
With this good hunter named—I'll Try.

Among the vines in my small lot
Creeps in the young fox—I forgot.

Then hunt him out and to his pen
With—I Will Not Forget Again.

A little fox is hidden there
Among my vines, named—I Dont Care

Then let I'm Sorry—hunter true—
Chase him afar from vines and you.
—Union Gospel News.

Why Mary Was Liked

A queer old man once made a tea party for the little girls in town; and when they had all come and were gathered in his front yard, he offered a doll for the most popular little girl, and asked them to vote which should have the prize. But many of them did not know what "most popular" meant. So he told them it was the best-liked girl.

Then they all voted, and Mary was the one who had the most votes and received the doll, though no one could say that she was either the prettiest or the cleverest of them all.

"Now," said the queer old man, I will give another doll to the one that first tells me why all like Mary the best."

Nobody answered at first. But presently one of them spoke up and said: "It's because Mary always finds out what the rest of us want to play, and then says, 'Let's play that.'"

A Present For Papa

The little maid stood in the parlor doorway, one hand on the door-knob. For a moment she gazed at her father, who was preparing to take his afternoon nap.

"Papa," she said, "do you know what I am going to give you for your birthday when it comes?"

"No, dear," answered the fond father, "but please tell me."

"A nice new china shaving-mug with gold flowers on it all round," said the little maid.

"But, my dear," exclaimed her parent, "papa has a nice one like that already."

"No, he hasn't," his little daughter answered, thoughtfully, "'cause—'cause I've just dropped it!"
—Farmers' Advocate.

LETTER FROM ALASKA.

We have received an interesting letter from Milton L. White, Kotzebue, Alaska, under date of December 31. After speaking of some business matters he says: "I am intensely interested in suggestions brought out and in the articles dealing with them, as they have been discussed during the past year in The American Friend. It would appear that Friends are beginning to awake from the lethargy of self-complacency and are beginning feebly to look toward the future. I only wish that we all could awake and do the needful things at once.

"I am a young Friend and have belonged to Friends all my life, but I seriously pondered going to work for some other denomination before coming here as a missionary, because of the lack of thorough business methods, or the too loose way of doing things as they have been done and largely are yet being done among Friends. I am glad to see that J. J. Mills, Charles E. Tebbetts and others are trying to get the church to work toward more united action and better business methods, that have largely proved a success in other religious bodies."

CLEVELAND CONFERENCE.
FOR PASTORS, EVANGELISTS AND WORKERS.

We are living in tremendous times, in what are truly perilous days, days in which it is needful for all our holiness workers, pastors and evangelists to stand very near each other and understand each other in love "that they all may be one". The devil, our common and powerful adversary as an "angel of light" as well as "a roaring lion" is doing his best, (or shall we say his worst) to destroy us, as the 20th Century New Testament puts it, "prowling about eager to devour you." There seems to be a rather general feeling, for it has been mentioned in our papers more than once, that there is urgent demand that our preachers and teachers of full salvation shall have a Conference on the subjects pertaining to the great need of the hour.

There are also many of our pastors who are not having results they would like to see, as there are not being "added daily to the Church" such as are being saved, while there are many who are being thus blessed who might be a help to the others. Some evangelists and excellent holiness preachers are apt on preaching the truth, but when the sermon or message is finished, are unable to bring people to a decision. There are many other problems confronting those who are sent to preach a full gospel to a gainsaying world; those having such we believe would be greatly helped by such a Conference.

The Faculty of the Cleveland Bible Institute of Cleveland, Ohio, together with the holiness people of our City, have felt it laid upon their hearts, as they believe, from the Lord, to invite pastors, evangelists and workers of the holiness ranks to meet in Conference at the Bible Institute the latter part of April, or the first part of May to have four or five days of prayer and conference together. We want every one interested in such a Conference to come prepared to take part, for each teacher and preacher, pastor and evangelist, has some point on which they can be very helpful. We shall be very glad to hear from our brethren in the movement, and the names and addresses of those who feel they can be present.

HOME FOR CHILDREN.

Lynn, Massachusetts, is to have a home for indigent children, particularly girls, to be established through the beneficence of Nathan Breed, a wealthy old-time shoe manufacturer and a member of the Society of Friends. He died forty-four years ago and decreed in his will that upon the death of the last member of his immediate family the sum of $50,000 was to be set aside for the establishment and maintenance of the Lynn "home for children. The last surviving member of the Breed family having died about two years ago, an act passed by the legislature provides for the establishment of the home.

Incorporators of the home have elected the following officers: Earle J. Harold, pastor of Friends meeting in Lynn, president; Alfred E. Newhall, vice president; Edmund F. Buffinton, treasurer of New England Yearly Meeting, treasurer, and George C. Herbert, a well known Friend, clerk. Of the Board of Managers the following are members of the Society of friends: Sarah H. Hacker, Clara O. Harold, Lucy T. Herbert, M. Alice Buffinton, Daniel R. Jones, Carrie M. Aldrich, Mary S. Paige, John N. Mader, E. Bryant Paige, Cyrus Jones and William E. Neal. The parents of four other members of the Board were Friends.

Who can read that ancient legend of the Apostle John carried into the Christian Church, able only to articulate "Little children, love one another," without feeling that age and death touch not the immortal love?—F. W. Robertson.

Wholesome light and delicious are the cakes and biscuits made with ROYAL
BAKING POWDER

Its purity and effectiveness in home baking recommend it to the discerning housewife.
Made from Cream of Tartar,
derived from Grapes.

THE IOWA PAGE

C. E. DEPARTMENT.

Ora W. Carrell, our Field Secretary, visited recently in Salem Quarter.

Cedar Creek has had no C. E. meetings this winter, but they will be resumed when the young people return from going to school and teaching.

At Hickory Grove, Ora W. Carrell explained the young people's work of Iowa Yearly Meeting and gave an address on "Three Present Day Calls to Young People." Here they have a live Society with nineteen members. Last year they contributed $50.00 to the pastor's salary and also purchased an organ for the church.

Have you any information committee in your Society? Would it not be worth while to read to your Society the C. E. items on the Iowa page of The American Friend?

Our Junior Superintendent reports that we have nine Junior Societies. We are glad for every one of them and wish we had twice as many.

Des Moines reports that the Mission Study Class under the auspices of the Missionary Committee has started with a membership of ten. They feel sure it will be a success.

Pleasant Plain Society has tried a plan which might prove successful in other places. They referred the resolutions adopted by our Union to their Executive Committee. Here the various items were referred to individual members and they report as follows:

New comrades of the Quiet Hour, 4
New members of the Peace Union, 13
New subscribers to C. E. World, 3 or 4

Can your Society report as favorably? They have also started a Mission Study Class which takes a part of each prayer meeting hour. Mrs. C. C. Haworth leads.

The Executive Committee met at Oskaloosa last Friday, March 10. The following members were present: Clyde Coffin, Cassa Conover, Tacy Ratcliff, Ora W. Carrell and Cora Mattison. They have started some interesting things for the future. Watch this space for particulars.

SALEM QUARTERLY MEETING.

Salem Quarterly Meeting was indeed a time of refreshing from the Lord. Each meeting of the quarter was represented by delegates some time during the different sessions. There was blessed spirit of fellowship manifest and the preaching was certainly in the power of the spirit.

Dr. Slack, of Chestnut Hill, had charge of the meeting on Friday afternoon. The discussion on the subject of Modern Evangelism was full of interest.

Effie Arms Comfort preached Saturday morning. The theme of the message was the mingling of the divine and human. On Saturday night we listened to a splendid message from one of our own boys. God has been using Roy Bogue in other fields and we were glad to have him back home and to receive a blessing through his work.

Sunday was a full day. Ora Carrell spoke to the S. S. on our mission work and told us of the imprisonment of one of our missionaries. Just now the British government is holding him as a German spy because he is of German descent and has German name, Kirtsalls.

Mr. McClellan preached one of his inspiring sermons Sunday morning. The Bible School conference was full of interest. Ora Carrell, who is Bible School Superintendent of Iowa Yearly Meeting, gave the address on Trained Leadership and the round table following was full of life. Special music was rendered during this and other services, which was greatly appreciated.

The day ended with a sermon by Ora Carrell, which was received by a tired but interested audience. We had such a good time that we almost wish Quarterly Meeting came to Salem oftener.

Ora Carrell met with our Bible School workers and all those interested on Thursday evening 7:30. On Friday afternoon he held missionary conference at the home of the pastor. His work was very helpful.

FIELD NOTES.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The reading of "In the Vanguard," by Mrs. Jas. G. Swan, on the evening of February 18, was a delight and an inspiration. It was both an entertainment and a strong sermon on peace. The attendance was unusually good. The young ladies of the Sunday School class, under whose auspices the reading was given, have placed the proceeds in the hands of the church treasurer to start the fund for the proposed addition to the meeting house.

At the monthly meeting Thursday, February 10, the new building project was thoroughly discussed. The necessity for more room for the Sunday School, for a larger kitchen, and room for social gatherings was very evident. The matter was referred to the "Efficiency Committee."

The "City-Wide Evangelistic Mission" was opened Tuesday, February 29, and will culminate in the services of Easter Sunday. Mass meetings, street meetings, shop meetings, cottage prayer meetings and training classes have been planned to reach every part of the city and all classes of people. This special Evangelistic effort calls for the prayers and hearty support of all Christian people.

Oskaloosa—On March 5, Oskaloosa had the privilege of the presence of E. W. Peck, State Y. M. C. A. Secretary of Minnesota, and a member of the famous International Y. M. C. A. Quartet. In the afternoon he delivered a stirring address to men on the subject, "A Man on a Dry Goods Box." His theme was the story of the prodigal son. In the evening he gave a stereopticon lecture of his trip around the world in company with Fred B. Smith and five others in the interests of the Men and Religion Forward Movement. His visit in Oskaloosa was much appreciated.

For the last few weeks Edgar H. Stranahan has been speaking in the morning service on the work and presence of the Holy Spirit. His evening sermons have been lessons from the parables. Both series have been instructive and inspiring.

Several members of Oskaloosa meeting attended the Laymen's Missionary Convention in Des Moines, February 20-22. They gave very helpful reports at the last two prayer meetings.

PRESIDENT OF WOMEN'S UNION HONORED.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Union will be interested to know that, at the meeting of The Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America held in New York, January 15th and 16th, our well beloved President, Charlotte E. Vickers, was elected chairman of the committee on Summer Schools and Conferences and thus becomes a member of the Executive Committee of the Federation, and our point of contact with the great missionary interests and influences of the day.

WANTED—At Ramona, San Diego County, Calif., a pastor for a Friends Church of about one hundred members and able to only pay a small salary. Ramona is a mountain town or village 1450 feet above sea level, is 39 miles from San Diego and has as good a climate for all the year around as can be found in California. Address Mrs. S. E. Janeway, Clerk of M. & O. Body.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

INTERCESSION THEIR GREATEST NEED.

The longing expressed in a letter which came recently from one of our workers in Cuba is shared not alone by all our missionaries in Cuba, but by those in the other fields as well. Their letters over and over contain requests for prayer for themselves and for their work and for their native associates and neighbors. The missionaries believe that intercession on the part of Christian people at home is their greatest need. The following paragraph is typical:

"If we have a successful evangelistic campaign this year, as they have had in years past, it will not be because of favorable conditions but because of the faithfulness of a handful of members who are not to be discouraged by outward circumstances and because of the prayer of the church at home. If we can rely upon these two things, I am sure we can have a remarkable outpouring of God's power in our meetings. But we feel that success is dependent upon the earnest and continued intercession of the church at home. If some of God's children at home could be willing to set aside some time each day to pray definitely for this work, who can measure the results that would come from it? The mere fact that they knew that there were people in the U. S. who were remembering them daily in prayer would help much to keep the faith of this people constant and strong. But that would be only a minor result of your prayers."

THE DAY'S WORK IN MEXICO.

Nancy L. Lee, in charge of Hussey Institute at Matamoros, writes under date of March 1st as follows:

"Another month has passed and although I do not seem to have anything of special interest to give in will nevertheless write a few lines. The attendance at school was very poor and irregular through January and the first half of February, but is much better now. But there seems to be a great deal of sickness yet—grippe, fever and I still hear of cases of smallpox. It is exceedingly dry—we have not had sufficient rain to moisten the ground well for several months. Our cisterns are both dry so we have only river water for use. We are hoping that the delegates will soon be back from Panama, but have not been informed as to time of arrival. The work has been heavy during the absence of Genaro Ruiz, for he is not only pastor of the church but also has had charge of a grade in the school and some of the normal classes also. We who have been carrying his work in connection with our own will be ready to fully appreciate him when he returns. The health in our house has been good so far."

THE BUSINESS SIDE OF FRIENDS FOREIGN WORK.

Fifty-six foreign missionaries are now on the staff of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions. In connection with their work, twenty-one native churches have been formed and fifty-one Bible Schools. Working with the missionaries are sixty-four native helpers, including pastors, Bible women and teachers. The foreign work of the Board includes also the maintenance of sixty-one schools where the Bible and the teaching of the Gospel occupy a prominent place.

Week by week and month after month, our workers must receive their support and the necessary expenses of the evangelistic and educational work of the missions must be regularly provided.

To keep all this work going during the first five months of the current year, beginning October 1, 1915, the treasurer of the Mission Board has paid out $20,832.04. The total amount received during this same period from Friends in the United States and Canada came to less than $9000. In order, therefore, to keep up the work on the field during the first half of the year, the Board is obliged to carry a staggering financial burden, a burden which would not be necessary if funds were coming in regularly month by month.

Realizing the magnitude of Friends work abroad and its financial necessities, we trust all meetings may forward at once to their Yearly Meeting treasurer the missionary funds now on hands so that these funds may be sent to the Mission Board treasurer to help meet immediate and pressing needs.

This statement may also serve to remind all our members that the help of every one is necessary in carrying forward this enterprise, and that gifts offered regularly each week or each month will be worth more to the Mission Board than will gifts offered in a lump sum just before Yearly Meeting time.

JOSEFA, THE "ENGLISH" LADY.

The only reason I know for calling Josefa Rivas, the "English" lady was because she spoke English and had learned it in British territory, yet among the missionaries she was generally known by this title until long familiarity brought into use her given name, Josefa.

Born in a cultured Cuban family of considerable wealth, changing fortunes had left her in very moderate circumstances. She never married, and supplemented her slender income by making babies' bonnets, toilet powder from egg shells and other simple occupations in which she had acquired local fame. My acquaintance with her began when, in those early days of language study when my tongue was being driven, slave like, to make sounds not lawful to utter unless you call it a foreign language, a sympathizing Cuban pointed her out to me as "the lady who speaks English."

Some years before the Cuban "Great War" (the revolution of 1868-1878) she found herself, a young girl, away from her native land in Nassau, British Braham Islands. Here she not only learned the English language, but in a Protestant church, of which there were none at that time in her native Cuba, she learned that true religion was something different from empty ceremonials. If any doubt the need of Protestant missions in Latin America they should consider the experience of Josefa. Virtuous, cultured, devoted to the faith of her fathers, yet she broke away from the slavery of Romanism and awoke to a new life when brought into contact with Protestant teaching.

After a time she returned to her native country, a country without a Protestant church in all the seven hundred miles of its length, and for twenty-five years she lived there deprived of the fellowship of a single congenial Christian. Twenty-five years without the blessing of social worship which with us is so common we sometimes forget to thank God for it; twenty-five years without the communion of saints, only her English Bible, that was all. No! that was not all, for God does not forget His own.

When our Mission was established, it was to her a spring of water in the desert. Although past her three-score years and ten, she came regularly to church. Moreover, living some distance from the church with a number of children in her immediate neighborhood, Mrs. Jones carried on a Sunday School at Josefa's house until her last sickness caused it to be closed. Many children heard of the Heavenly Father's love in her home.

Belonging to a well known family, her funeral was attended by the prominent men of the town. The mayor, the judge and the leading business men were there and they could hardly fail to be touched with the simple, heartfelt service, but most of all would they be influenced by the Protestant ideals as shown by this simple, godly life that had been lived among them.

SYLVESTER JONES.

MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.

The following is the program for the Ministers' and Workers' Convention of Western Yearly Meeting to be held at Sheridan, Indiana, April 4, 5 and 6, 1916. Entertainment is free for lodging and breakfast and supper the first evening. The Ladies' Aid will serve other meals at reasonable rates. All ministers and workers are urged to come. Send your name to Frank V. Stafford, Sheridan, Indiana. All Monon trains stop at Sheridan.

PROGRAM.

Tuesday.

7:30—Devotional Message, Lindley M. Reagan.

7:50—Welcome, Frank V. Stafford.

8:00—Response, Frank Ashba.

8:10—Conference Sermon, Gertrude M. Reinier.

Wednesday.

9:15—Devotional Message, Orah A. Thomas.

9:35—Book Review, "Efficiency Points," Noble C. Trueblood.

10:00—Discussion.

10:15—Our Problems and Prospects in Evangelism, Enos Harvey.

10:45—Discussion, William J. Cleaver.

11:00—Equipment and Service, Charles W. Sweet.

1:30—Devotional Message, Arthur Haworth.

1:50—Book Review, "Efficiency Points," Mary A. Cox.

2:20—Discussion.

2:35—The Call to the Church from the Non-Christian Lands," Charles W. Sweet.

7:30—Devotional Message, Carey Jessup.

Duet, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jessup.

8:00—Fidelity—Charles W. Sweet.

Thursday.

9:15—Devotional Message, Mary Hiatt.

9:35—Symposium, Pastoral Work. The Pastor's Tests, Arthur Hammond. The Pastor's Sermons, Ruth E. Brown. The Pastor's Home Visitation, Austin Osborn. (Leaders ten minutes each. General discussion ten minutes.)

10:35—Chalk Talk, L. O. Brown.

11:00—A Quaker Concern—George H. Moore.

1:30—Devotional Message, Lydia Hoath.

1:50—Symposium, Pastoral Work. The Pastor's Library, Charles R. Axton. The Pastor's Relation to Business Meetings, Elizabeth A. Murphy. The Pastor's Relation to Local Social Functions, Rhoda Roberts.

2:50—Chalk Talk, L. O. Brown.

3:15—The Psychology of a Service, Jesse I. Phillips.

7:30—Devotional Message, Jehu Reagan.

7:50—Duet, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas.

8:00—Stereopticon Address, Howard E. Brown. 100 Years' Achievement of the Friends' Church. 100 stereopticon views.

AT MOSES BROWN SCHOOL.

During a brief visit to Moses Brown School in the course of the past month, Rufus M. Jones of Haverford College gave a most inspiring talk to the young Friends of the school. Dr. Jones spoke upon the heroic quality of early Quakerism and told the young people that there are just as many heroes in the ranks of Friends today as there have ever been. He spoke informally seated in an arm chair and in a room lighted only by the glow of an open fire. The intimacy of the scene added greatly to its serious impressiveness and no one of those present could fail to feel in his heart some thrilling of response to the speaker's stirring words.

POSITION WANTED. Companion-nurse to semi-invalid or elderly lady, or will assist with management of a home. Refined capable woman desires position in Philadelphia or suburbs. Highest reference. Address W. American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED in a private home in Washington. Convenient to car line and Union Station. Laura N. Wilson.
46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

SARAH HENLEY MORGAN.

Sarah Henley, daughter of Jesse Henley and Margaret Goss Henley, was born in Randolph County, North Carolina, March 2, 1830. Her parents were members of the Society of Friends, and she has been a life long member of that church.

She early showed a desire to obtain an education and after teaching country school a few terms she was favored to attend Westtown Boarding School at Westtown, Pa., which was then, as it is still, conducted by the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends. Then she was chosen as teacher in the school and here she met her husband, William B. Morgan, who came there as a teacher after his graduation at Haverford College.

They were married October 19, in 1855, and came west to Friends Boarding School at Richmond, Indiana, which afterward became Earlham College. They assisted in the development of that school and also in that of Spiceland Academy at Spiceland, Indiana, and also, in later years, in that of Penn College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Sarah H. Morgan was a teacher in each one of these schools.

In 1882, they built their home at Lowell, and always after they regarded that as their home.

They were much interested in helping to advance the cause of the church and of education, and assisted in the establishment of the church and academy at Lowell. Her husband died March 24, 1904, and age had caused her to gradually become less active. The last few years she had made her home with her elder son, William Earl Morgan, at Columbus, Kansas. Since the death of his wife a few months ago, she had made her home with her younger son, Jesse Henley Morgan, and she passed away at his home in Alva, Oklahoma, on Thursday, February 3, 1916, aged 85 years, 11 months and one day.

She was the middle one of nine children, there being two brothers and two sisters older than herself, and two brothers and two sisters younger. Of these there is only one surviving, her youngest sister, Mrs. Margaret White, of Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Besides her two sons she leaves behind, Ida M. Morgan, wife of J. H. Morgan, and two grand children, Katie Morgan, daughter of W. E. Morgan, and Raymond L. Morgan, son of J. H. Morgan, who is attending Westtown Boarding School and was not able to be present at the funeral.

PEACE DEPARTMENT

ADEQUATE PREPAREDNESS.

An Abridged Report of An Address Given at the Chamber of Commerce, Indianapolis, Indiana, Saturday, March 4, by Robert Lincoln Kelly, President of Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana.

It has been announced that I would present the pacifist's view of preparedness. Like most pacifists I advocate preparedness, but insist on defining it in economic, moral and spiritual terms. If, however, I confined myself to a discussion of these phases of the problem, you would say that I was dodging the issue. I come at once, therefore, to the military phase of the subject.

The Question Stated.

Mr. Roosevelt says we need an army of 9,000,000 men. Major General Wood estimates our need at 4,500,000. John Temple Graves in his Chamber yesterday eloquently advocated for our country a navy larger than that of Great Britain. President Wilson has proposed a continental army of 400,000 men and a naval increase surpassing anything this country or any country has known in an equal time. There are noteworthy discrepancies in the demands of these militarists, but this is the type of preparedness I am here to oppose. In case of naval war we would look to Admiral Fletcher above all other men, for protection, but he says we do not need a navy equal to that of Great Britain. The same testimony is given by Admiral Grant of the submarine fleet. Hobson even does not advocate such a navy. We must not Germanize our army or Britishize our navy. We must avoid American imperialism.

Our Coast Is Now Adequately Defended.

In ten years we have spent over a billion dollars on our military establishments. Do we have nothing to show for this expenditure? Our experts say we have. Admiral Fletcher declared a year ago that "we have a navy superior to that of Germany or any other except Great Britain;" so late as February 9th he testified before the House Committee that "it is better officered than it has ever been," and since that date he has said that three dreadnoughts and four cruisers would make it equal to Germany's navy. General Weaver, Chief of the Coast Artillery, says: "I know of no fortifications in the world that compare favorably in efficiency with ours." Secretary Daniels has testified: "Ship for ship and man for man our navy is equal if not superior to any in the world," and he has also referred to the "navy secrets" as an added source of strength. Secretary Garrison says that "man for man our army is better than any similar military establishment," while Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles declares that the "newspapers are misleading the public in statements regarding our arms and armaments." The House Military Committee which has been studying this question for three months has gone on record as opposed to the Continental Army, and the conscription which would be necessary to make it possible, and is today introducing a bill in each house providing for an increase in our army, of 40,000 men!

If we are not adequately prepared, who knows how to go about the necessary preparation?

This war spirit has been worked up by the armament plants, the military and naval organizations and the subsidized press until many of our people are in a state of incoherent panic. The fact that the militarists do not agree upon a policy is eloquent of their state of muddled thinking. Who knows now the lessons this war has to teach? One Sunday morning fifty years ago the Monitor steamed out from behind some wooden vessels in Hampton Roads and in three hours naval warfare was revolutionized. Jos. H. Choate, less than a year ago made the significant admission, "Perhaps the day of the dreadnought is done." A year ago President Wilson in his message to Congress asked, "Who can tell us now what kind of a navy to build?" Japan has already announced that she will build no battleships this year. What we need now is information. If, in our feverish haste we do something, we shall probably do the wrong thing. Let us not spend millions of money on a random guess. The Navy Board itself has recognized that a careful study of possible needs is the thing of first importance. We should make our appeal from Philip drunk to Philip sober.

Suppose our hypothetical enemy undertakes to land a fleet?

Will the enemy be Germany or will it be one of the allies? Germany and some of the allies are now bleeding to death. The German fleet is bottled up in the Kiel Canal—the ships are deteriorating, the service is deteriorating. Before this war is over it is most probable that there will be an engagement between the English and German fleets, for desperation is writ deep upon the brow of each people. Both fleets will come out from this contest disabled. The Allies are short of munitions and we are now furnishing them hundreds of millions of war materials. Neither the Allies nor Germany will have war supplies at the end of this war. The United States will have war supplies. If Germany attacks us she will do so from a distance of three thousand miles; if Japan, from a distance of 6,000. It is an axiom of naval strategy that no navy can operate effectively at a distance from its base. Before Japan reaches our continent, she must make due settlement with us at the Philippines and at Hawaii. The American navy is far superior, to put it mildly, to that part of an enemy navy, the English navy excepted; which could reach our shores, for the enemy must hold ships in reserve. General Miles is authority for the statement that "a fleet such as would be required to land 300,000 or 500,000 men has never been assembled."

But what has this war already taught us? No battleships will approach an enemy coast defended by mines and submarines. No troops have landed during this war on German soil or Russian soil or Turkish soil. The Allies have complete possession of the Mediterranean; why have they not landed troops in Turkey and approached the enemy from the rear? Within a week a French cruiser has been sunk in the Mediterranean, causing the largest number of fatalities at sea during the war, and yet Turkey has no navy to speak of. Mines and submarines will protect us against the hypothetical enemy that gets past our first line. Fifty percent of the ships struck in this war have been sunk; the rest have been disabled. Our submarine commanders have testified that more has been done in the past year to perfect our submarine fleet than during the five years before. Captain McKeen of the submarine fleet is authority for the statement that one company in this country can turn out twelve submarines per month after five months' notice. In the face of such facts it would be criminal to invest millions of the people's money in the proposed increase of armaments.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

Tentative Program of the Young Friends General Conference,
Which Will be Held at Cedar Lake,
Indiana, August 4-13, 1916.

Each morning except Sunday, there will be Devotional Bible Study, Two Bible Study Classes, Two Mission Study Classes, Class on the Rural Church, on Church History, Young People's Methods, and Christian Endeavor, Bible School, Peace Study, Junior Methods and Story Telling.

The afternoons will be spent in recreation. This feature will do much toward making your vacation a pleasant one.

Some of the leaders are: Susan Mendenhall, Editor of Everyland and Secretary of Missionary Education Movement, New York City; Ozora Davis, President Chicago Theological Seminary; Clarence Pickett, Editor Canadian Friend and pastor of Toronto Meeting; Thomas R. Kelly, Professor Pickering College, New Market, Ontario; Alexander Purdy, Head of Biblical Dept. Earlham College, Wilmington, Ohio; Samuel Haworth, Pastor of Minneapolis Meeting; Herbert L. Huffman, Pastor of Clinton Corners Meeting, New York; Frank Dell, of Nebraska Yearly Meeting; William J. Sayers, Pastor of Muncie, Ind., Meeting; Ora W. Carrell, Field Secretary of Iowa; Ross Hadley, Assistant Secretary of American Friends Board of Foreign Missions; Thomas E. Jones, Field Secretary for the Young Friends Board.

Plan to take your vacation at Cedar Lake. A vacation with a purpose.

Write the Young Friends Board for further information.

The subscription price of the Conference News-Bulletin is only 25 cents a year. The next issue, which goes to press this month, will contain interesting reports of work done among the young people in the Five Years Meeting. Send your subscriptions in soon for this number to The Conference News-Bulletin, Dunreith, Indiana.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR APRIL 2.

Topic—"Consecration of Time." Ps. 90:1-17.

(Consecration Meeting.)

"And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out and departed into a solitary place and there prayed."

We are also told that He spent the night in prayer, before going to the Cross.

The Lord Jesus felt the need of spending much time in prayer. He considered it more refreshing than sleep and more important than any other engagement. He desired to know His Father's will more than to spend this last night with His friends.

Every Christian ought to give at least one-tenth of his income to the Lord, and at least one-seventh of his time. We seldom are so rushed with our many duties that we do not take time to eat and sleep; and people have to take time to be sick and die, and yet how often do we hear the empty excuse, "I haven't time?" If a thing is worth doing at all, it is not only worth doing well, but worth taking time to do it. We should take time for prayer and meditation and service for God. One has well said, that a man should be as frugal of his time as a miser of his money; he should save it with as much care and spend it with as much caution.

Plan how to use the time. What would you do if you had only one day? We should do the best and noblest things, the things that count for most. We should rest, certainly, but not in idleness, or dreaming, but that we might gain fresher power to do our tasks. A Missionary said, "When I was in India I gave half an hour a day to prayer, now I am so busy I have to give an hour and a half." We should live by a schedule then we can do many things for which we may have said, "I haven't time." This will also make our life, our work more effective. Consecration means setting apart. We should have a certain time for our duties and use that time for them. A consecration of time implies the wise use of the minutes, the hours, the days. An architect spends much time on his plans before they are ready to be worked. Let us be architects and deliberate long and prayerfully before we start work on any of our plans. If "time is the stuff life is made of," then if we have consecrated our life, we must consecrate our time, and the consecration of time means the devotion of our life to a purpose; and no life can be great without a great purpose. If this life be such a one as is pictured to us in verse 17, of Ps. 90, then the way seems quite easy.

"Today is mine; Oh glorious thought, Forgotten are failures, yesters brought, Unwasted shall these moments be, That my dear Master's given me; I yet have time, I'll haste to use, Lo! here am I! Come! my work choose."

"Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute,
What you can do, or dream you can,
begin it,

Only engage, and then the mind grows heated—

Begin, and then the work will be completed."

SPRING CAMPAIGN AMONG YOUNG FRIENDS.

A special Campaign among Young Friends is planned for the months of April, May, June and July. Endeavor Societies which are following the Peace Study outlines may not undertake special campaign until they have closed their course of study near the end of April, or they may push this special effort along with their Peace Study.

The plan is this:

1. Friends are going into the Millions Campaign for Christian Endeavor, HARD. The Young People's Board is convinced that the Christian Endeavor Organization with the most recent department of Study Class and Social Service can be very well adapted to the needs of Friends. Several hundred Christian Endeavor Societies should be organized within the next few months. Do not undertake any sporadic movements however; see the needs, lay the plans, organize, maintain, is the plan. Talk up Christian Endeavor, work for Christian Endeavor, begin to prepare for the Campaign NOW.

2. Every Endeavor Society should be interested in the history and ideals of its denomination. Therefore we advocate the starting of Study Classes. Two courses are being prepared, either of which will be most helpful to any Friends Meeting. One is Emmott's "Story of Quakerism" with pamphlet, $1.30. The other is Woodman's "The Present Day Message of Quakerism" with pamphlet, $1.02. All who plan to take up either of these courses send your names to the Young Friends Board at once, that the proper number of copies may be arranged for.

3. Every Young Friend should be enrolled in the Young Friends Directory. Enrollment cards will be sent upon request. We need to keep in touch with you and you need to receive information from us.

Let our aim be to:—Endeavor, Instruct, Enroll.

BIBLE SCHOOL UNION.

The seventh annual conference of the Wilmington Yearly Meeting Bible School Union was held at Wilmington, Ohio, February 25. The following is the program of this very interesting and profitable occasion:

9:45 A. M.—Devotional, Ida M. Allen. Round Table. Impressions of Tennessee Mountain Work, Ethel Hawkins. Roll call of Quarterly Meeting Delegates. Address, "How to Gain Favorable Attention," Wm. J. Sayres, Muncie, Ind.

11:30 A. M.—Adjourn for lunch.

12:15 P. M.—Meeting of Quarterly Meeting Delegates.

1:00 P. M.—Devotional, Clayton Terrell, Supt. of Fairview S. S. Report of Delegates and election of officers. Suggestions from Quarterly Meeting Presidents. Teachers Training Work in Wilmington Y. M.—J. Waldo Woody. Address, "The Teacher Himself," Wm. J. Sayres. Offering.

3:30 P. M.—Adjourn for evening recess.

7:00 P. M.—Devotional, Homer Biddlecum, Xenia, Ohio. Address, "Efficiency for Effectiveness," Wm. J. Sayres. Offering. Closing song and benediction. Music in charge of Austin Jones.

DAISY BARR AT LEBANON.

It is with pleasure that I report the meetings recently held in Lebanon, Indiana, by Daisy Douglas Barr. This consecrated Quaker woman came to a town of Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Christian Churches and Catholics and has united the town in a desire for a personal knowledge and friendship with Christ.

Her helpers were a business manager, who worked with High School and Grade boys; a soloist, who, besides her sweet messages in song, came in touch with young girls; and a pianist, who was also a personal worker. The evangelistic party, the chorus choir, the congregation represented many denominations, but this was forgotten as we listened to the messages, so full of truth and beauty and love.

Night by night, for four weeks, the crowds increased. Reservations were made for all who would come in parties. There were school nights, lodge nights, factory nights, and a business girl's night, when two hundred girls from factory, shop, office and school-room attended in a body, following a supper given in their honor.

Every morning five cottage prayer meetings were held throughout the city, while at the same hour, Mrs. Barr spoke to crowds of business men and women in the stores. So great was the interest shown in these, that over three hundred came to the meeting held in a large garage, while on the last morning, the stores closed and over six hundred came for the half hour meeting in a moving picture theatre.

At noon she and her party went to the factories, where she spoke to the men and women at their places of work, telling them the great dignity of labor, the service they are performing for the world, the value of Christ in their lives to lighten the toil of the day and to brighten the path in the dark night of trouble.

GIRLS' DRESSES.

We accept orders for these Dresses with the understanding that if not satisfactory in every way they can be returned at once and your money will be refunded.

KM 44103—Girls' Dresses of pretty plaid gingham with pink, blue or brown the predominating shade—a serviceable Wash Dress for school and general wear. Made with hemstitched collar and cuffs of white drill; broad button-trimmed panel down the center of the front. Gingham belt; full plaited skirt finished with deep hem. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Price, postpaid. $1.00

KM 44123—Practical and unusually attractive is this Gingham Wash Dress for girls 8, 10, 12 and 14 years old. The waist of plain blue or pink material is a jaunty Russian blouse with collar, cuffs and belt of striped gingham. The full plaited skirt of pink-and-white or blue-and-white striped gingham is attached to the waist and finished with a deep hem. Price, delivered postpaid. $1.50

Mention The American Friend.

Strawbridge & Clothier

Philadelphia.

To all the factory people she taught the comforting text which Christ gave to the laboring man: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

The women were given special lectures pertaining to social welfare work, the social evil, conditions in the home, the purity of the child, and kindred subjects which have been instructive and helpful. One day was dedicated to our mothers, and hundreds of flowers were worn by men, women and children in honor of mother.

The power of the Spirit was manifest at all times, quietly working in the hearts of the people, with the result that over six hundred and fifty made definite decisions for the Christian life, and were received by the churches of their choice.

DELLA DOWNING JONES.

NEWS NOTES.

Prof. Elbert Russell, of Baltimore, has been having a tussle with the grip for the past three weeks.

Franklin Hadley of Richland, Iowa, who has been spending some weeks in North Carolina, spent Sunday, March 12, with friends and relatives at Richmond, Indiana. He attended West Richmond meeting in the morning.

The basket ball team of Whittier College has won title to the secondary college coast championship.

Murray S. Wildman, of Stanford University, recently spoke at Berkeley Friends Church, California, on "The Cost of Disease."

Prof. G. Lewis Dickinson, of Cambridge University, England, lectured at Earlham College on March 11, advocating mildly the policies of the league to Enforce Peace.

On Sunday, March 5, William J. Sayers, pastor of the Friends meeting at Muncie, Indiana, preceding a local option election in that city, preached a strong temperance sermon.

B. B. Hiatt, of Stuart, Iowa, has been granted a minute for a sojourn in limits of Stuart Monthly Meeting, California. His address will be 455 East 31st Street, Los Angeles, California.

For those who may be interested the information is herewith given that he meeting of Ministry and oversight at of Surry Quarter. N. C. Yearly meeting will convene at our new meeting at Pilot Meeting instead of Westfield, the usual meeting place, and the time of meeting has been changed from 10 a. m. on Saturday, March 22, to 2 p. m., Friday, March 21.

Surry Quarterly Meeting will be held at this place at the usual time convening on Saturday at 11 a. m.

On May 5 the third annual inter-scholastic field meet, comprising a number of high schools, will be held at Wilmington, Ohio, under the auspices of Wilmington College.

The second World Court Congress is to be held in Carnegie Hall, New York City, May 2-4 next. The program will be confined to the one topic of promoting a true international Court of Justice.

Baltimore Quarterly Meeting will be held at Baltimore next Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday evening, Henry D. Cox, of Puerta Padre, Cuba, will give an address on "Cuba and the Panama Conference."

Prof. Raymond Burford, of Earlham College, preached at West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., the morning of March 12, and Ross Hadley gave an illustrated mission address at the Vesper service on the same day.

Wilmington College has a "School Masters' Club," including the college faculty, the superintendent and high school teachers and ward principals of Wilmington and the County Superintendent of Clinton county, Ohio.

The Committee on Literature and Peace of Western Yearly Meeting has arranged for an oratorical contest on the subject of peace, at Plainfield, Ind., April 28. There will be speakers from Bloomingdale, Vermillion Grove and Plainfield Academies. The winner of the first prize will receive twenty dollars, and of the second, fifteen dollars.

Ross Hadley, Assistant Secretary of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, was prevented from attending most of the sessions of the Laymen's Missionary Convention at Indianapolis recently by the death at Cleveland, Ohio, of Mrs. Hadley's mother, Mrs. Burrows.

A poll of Earlham College students on preparedness has resulted as follows: Against increase in armament, 198; for President Wilson's plan, 32; for an army of 4,500,000 as advocated by Wood and Roosevelt, 6; for increase in armament, but on smaller scale than Wilson plan, 38; for gradual disarmament without reference to action of other nations, 18; undecided, 16. The vote in the faculty for the various propositions was 9, 3, 0, 3, 1 and 2, respectively.

CHURCH AT WORK

West Milton, Ohio.—West Branch Quarterly Meeting was held at West Milton February 19, 20. We were favored with the acceptable attendance of Truman C. Kenworthy, Yearly Meeting Superintendent, who brought us two strong and helpful messages. The Quarterly Meeting was attended by a spirit of life and of great interest. The interest in the different departments of our local work continues to deepen and we are getting results in the way of new members as well as in the line of greater interest in all the work of the church. Among the encouraging phases is the great interest manifested in the work of the Christian Endeavor Society.

Pleasant Plain, Kansas.—We have erected and dedicated a new church building at this place. The building is a modern, brick veneer structure with a seating capacity of three hundred and fifty. The cost was $5500.00, of which amount $750.00 was raised on the day of dedication, making the building free from debt. The dedicatory sermon was preached by F. Olen Hunt of Fowler, Kansas, to a large and appreciative audience. We feel that we were fortunate in securing his services for the dedication and for the revival following, which closed March 8. Forty-five persons were definitely blessed and the church was strengthened and encouraged by the deep spiritual lessons brought to us. An offering of $150.00 was taken for Brother Hunt in appreciation of his services. Several have united with the church. The Lord is still blessing us at Pleasant Plain and under the leadership of our efficient pastor, Elma Albertson, we are expecting God to open up new avenues of usefulness for the church.

Monrovia, Indiana.—A series of meetings began at West Union near Monrovia on the evening of February 7 conducted by Frank V. Stafford, of Sheridan, Indiana, assisted by the pastor, Elizabeth A. Murphy. Twenty-seven sessions in all were held. The power of God was felt in the very beginning and conviction fell upon the hearts of the people. The gospel was preached in its fullness and power mingled with tenderness and love. The result was a number of renewals and conversions and the strengthening of believers in Christ. The church has received an uplift in spiritual things which will help her to push forward in the work of the Lord.

Ontario, Ohio.—A very remarkable meeting was held in January last at Ontario, where Geo. E. Kent is pastor of a "Community" M. E. Church. Edgar A. Wollam, of Cleveland, Ohio, was called as the evangelist and George A. Dennis, of Cardington, Ohio, as the leader in song. The meeting continued three weeks and the roads were most of the time, humanly speaking, impassible, but the house was crowded at almost all the services. The messages were strong and convincing and much dependence was had upon prayer. As a result 125 persons made definite decisions for Christ, old scores were settled, old debts paid and whole families were swept into the Kingdom.

One marked feature was that old men came to the cross and were saved and in one case a man 75 years old was converted and received into the church. Three generations were received on one day when 120 persons were taken into the church. A hall that had been used for a dance hall was rented the last of the meetings and Evangelist Wollam raised the money for the rent for one year.

Indianapolis, Ind.—A very pleasant church social was held at the First Friends Church, Indianapolis, Ind., Friday evening, March 9. Scenes from the lives of early Friends were given by members of the Quaker Round Table. Refreshments were in charge of Mr. Pearson's Bible Class.

Following the meeting of the Layman's Missionary Movement in Indianapolis week before last, a meeting of the Missionary Department of the Church, and those who attended the sessions of the Layman's Missionary Convention was held to consider plans for stimulating interest, and applying such suggestions as might be worked out to advantage in this particular church.

Centerville, Indiana.—Revival services at Centerville closed March 8. The services were in charge of Marie Cassell of Bluffton, Indiana; Bertha E. Day of Wilmington, Ohio, and the pastor, Mildred B. Allen. There were seventeen conversions and three renewals. Nineteen of this number will join Friends.

Cane Creek, N. C.—Western Quarterly Meeting was held at Cane Creek, one of the very oldest meetings in the State, February 12. Ten monthly meetings constitute the Quarter. Some consideration is being given to a division of the Quarter. Lewis McFarland, Yearly Meeting Superintendent, preached a satisfactory sermon. The proposition to record Addison Branson a minister was concurred in. Reports from the Monthly Meetings were generally quite encouraging. The next meeting will be held at Edwards May 13. A new meeting house is being built at Saxapahaw. F. S. Blair of Guilford College, Chairman of the Yearly Meeting Peace Committee, has spent a month in the limits of this Quarter, addressing schools and the general public, and speaking in the churches of six different denominations in the interests of peace.

Greensboro, N. C.—New Garden Quarterly Meeting was held here March 11. Albert Peele offered prayer and Lewis McFarland, Yearly Meeting Superintendent, preached from Acts 20:28. At the afternoon session the committee appointed at last Quarterly Meeting to hold peace meetings here or elsewhere reported that a large majority of the prominent business men of the city opposed preparedness, and that the time was near at hand for holding the contemplated meeting. Friends were urged to write letters at once to their Congressmen against preparedness. The meeting concurred in the proposition to record Samuel G. Barnes a minister. He is a young Friend and pastor of Spring Garden street meeting. Julia S. White was granted a minute for service in New England Yearly Meeting. Reports from subordinate meetings showed growth in spiritual things and in numbers. The Quarterly Meeting agreed to meet at Kernersville in September. A goodly number of children were in attendance.

Stella, Oklahoma—Stella Quarterly Meeting occurred March 3-5. General Superintendent M. F. Swafford was present and preached three very strong sermons. On Saturday night four were definitely blessed and every session was owned of the Lord. Arrangements were made to hold a tent meeting in the month of July at Cherokee. It was also decided to hold several two day's meetings. There are ten pastors in Stella Quarterly Meeting and all were present excepting one. It is the first charge of three of them, but they are doing well and their work is appreciated. After Quarterly Meeting M. F. Swafford visited Siloam and Stella. At Stella nine came forward in the meeting and were blessed. From there M. F. Swafford and Alvin Coppock were taken by auto to Coldwater and Friends Valley Meetings. At Friends Valley there were four who asked for prayers. Superintendent Swafford then went on to Shawnee Quarter, where J. N. Walker is holding revival meetings. His service in the Quarterly Meeting was felt to be a blessing.

Boulder, Colorado—Lindley A. Wells began a series of revival services at Boulder, Colorado, February 10 and closed February 27. He found a large field and a church ready for business, and as a result, what has been said by many people in the city not Friends to have been the best revival held in Boulder for many years, was witnessed. Conversions, renewals and sanctifications numbered fifty-two. Perhaps the best phase of the work was the large hearing given the evangelist by people of other denominations. The church was entirely inadequate to accommodate the congregations. There will be a large number of additions to the church and the work is now in a more flourishing condition than it has ever been. This series of special meetings has been a great aid in pushing the Friends Church of Boulder to the place of leadership in spiritual things in the city to which it has been aiming for some time. The evangelist was assisted by the pastor, Kirby V. Bowen, and by a singer, Miss Naomi Jester, of Sugar City, Colo.

Columbus, Ohio—Isaac L. Kinsey of Alliance, Ohio, recently closed a series of meetings at the Sullivant Avenue Friends Church of Columbus. These meetings throughout were characterized with the presence of the Lord. More than forty knelt at the altar for pardon or the witness of the Spirit. The meeting has been greatly encouraged and strengthened. Several have applied for membership to the church.

AT ST. PETERSBURG, FLORIDA.

An increasing number of Friends from various sections of the country have discovered the delights of St. Petersburg, the Sunshine City of Florida, and are spending their winters there. Quite a few have located permanently, while others have winter homes. Charles Tebbetts and wife, accompanied by their daughter, are spending some time visiting relatives and friends in St. Petersburg on their return from Panama, Jamaica and Cuba, where they attended missionary conferences.

On the afternoon of March 9th a meeting of the Friends in St. Petersburg was held at the First Methodist Church, upon which occasion Charles Tebbetts gave an illuminating account of the conferences he had attended and forcefully presented the condition and needs of Latin America. He told something of the work of American Friends in Mexico, Cuba, Jamaica and urged a more loyal support of the work. Over fifty persons were present, among the number being members of Indiana, Western, Wilmington, Philadelphia and North Carolina Yearly Meetings. It is to be hoped that at some future time there may at least be a fellowship group of the St. Petersburg Friends.

NOTICE.

People often inquire of the Home Mission Committee in regard to what to do with left-over Sabbath School supplies and other good papers. Surely they should not be destroyed.

The Salvation Army are always glad to distribute them; but there are needy districts among the mountains and other distant parts if we only had the addresses. Any one knowing such addresses are requested to send them to Alice W. Hunt, Fountain City, Ind., and she will have the list published in a future number of this paper.

ERRATUM.

In the list of Yearly Meetings for 1916, printed in these columns recently, there was an erroneous statement as to the time of New York Yearly Meeting. A letter from the Clerk, James Wood, gives the date of opening as May 31. Readers will please take notice.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

The following sentences concerning The American Friend have been culled at random from recent letters received in The American Friend office.

"The American Friend is getting better all the time."

"The editorials are simply fine. I read them the first thing."

"I do not see how any Friend can be satisfied not to take the paper."

"I wish to express my appreciation of The American Friend and my renewed interest in it as it now appears. It is getting quite up to the ideal I spoke to thee about at Plainfield two years ago."

"I like the increased size and the contents very much."

"You are making a good paper."

WANTED.

We will appreciate it if anyone can send us a copy in good condition of The American Friend, issue of December 24, 1914. Please Address The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

Read the American Friend ads.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON.

April 2, 1916.

Subject—"The Conversion of Saul."

Lesson—Acts 9:1-31 (cf. also Gal. 1:11-17, and 1 Tim. 1:12-17).

Golden Text—Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.

Saul was born in Tarsus, a city near the sea coast in southeastern Asia Minor. It is presumed that he learned to speak the Greek language very early in life and that he also acquired some knowledge of Greek literature prior to his leaving that city for Jerusalem, where he completed his Hebrew education. Evidently he was apprenticed to a tent maker and there learned the trade which afterwards afforded him a living while preaching the gospel at Corinth. In Jerusalem he studied under the direction of Gamaliel, one of the most noted of the Hebrew teachers of the time. There are reasons for believing that he was admitted into membership in the Sanhedron, but conclusive evidence is lacking. He accepted the doctrines of the sect known as the Pharisees and became a very devout follower of the practices of that party.

Religion to Saul was a serious matter. Salvation as he understood it was to be obtained only by keeping the law, to him that meant all of the law. Blasphemers were by direction of the law to be punished. Christians came under that condemnation. His salvation depended upon seeing to it that he did his duty in the matter, hence a part at least of his enthusiasm for Christian persecution. The account in our lesson pictures him on the road to Damascus with the proper papers, where he was to arrest possible Christians. According to verse one he was in a determined frame of mind and not a very good subject for quiet persuasion.

It is interesting to note in this connection how widely the Christian church was scattered by this time. How many believers there were in Damascus we have no way of knowing, but evidently a number. They must have made for themselves quite a reputation, else Saul would never have arranged to journey so far on such an errand.

The expanding power of growing seeds is often tremendous. Saul had heard of Christ—possibly others than Stephen had witnessed to the saving power of Christ in his hearing—he had also seen Christians die. The seed sown in his heart was destined to grow in spite of the apparently stony nature of the soil into which it had fallen. It is quite probable that much of his earnestness was the result of an effort to stifle the growing conviction which was daily becoming stronger in his soul. At last he could stand the pressure no longer and in his humility he yielded and was led to the home of one whom he had been hunting and there learned the way more perfectly.

The conversion of Saul marks one of the most eventful hours in the history of the Christian Church. He brought to the Church learning and enthusiasm. Years later he was to give it new direction. His immediate task was to work over his theology and prepare for the great work to which God had in such a remarkable way called him.

YEARLY MEETING 1916.

Philadelphia—Fourth & Arch Streets, Philadelphia. (Other data not at hand).

New York—At Poughkeepsie, May 31. Clerk, James Wood, Mt. Kisco, N. Y.

Nebraska—At Central City, Neb., May 30 to June 4. Clerk, Eli H. Parish, Central City.

Oregon—At Newberg, Oregon, June 7-13. Clerk, Levi T. Pennington, Newberg, Ore.

New England—At Oak Grove Seminary, Vassalboro, Me., June 26-July 2. Clerk, Walter S. Meader, Gonic, N. H.

California—At Whittier, June 26-July 3. Clerk, John Chawner, 765 Summit Avenue, Pasadena, California.

North Carolina—At Guilford College, August 8-14. Clerk, L. L. Hobbs, Guilford College, N. C.

Wilmington—At Wilmington, Ohio, August 6-22. Clerk, Albert J. Brown, Wilmington, Ohio.

Ohio—At Damascus, Ohio, August 22. Clerk, Edward Mott, 58 Coit Avenue, East Cleveland, Ohio.

Iowa—At Oskaloosa, August 28-September 3. Clerk, S. M. Hadley, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Canada—At Pickering College, Newmarket, Ontario, Canada, September 7. Clerk, William Harris, Rockwood, Ont., Canada.

Western—At Plainfield, Indiana, September 12-18. Clerk, W. O. Trueblood, 313 East 13th Street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Indiana—At Richmond, Indiana, September 18-24. Clerk, Robert L. Kelly, Earlham, Indiana.

Kansas—At Wichita, Kansas, October 3-9. Clerk, Edmund Stanley, Wichita, Kansas.

Baltimore—At Baltimore, Md., November 17-22. Clerk, Allen C. Thomas, Haverford, Pa.

FRIENDS MEETINGS

Stockton Avenue Friends Church, San Jose, California. Take Santa Clara Car to Stockton Ave.; walk one-half block west. Visitors always welcome.

Washington, D. C. meeting house, 13th and Irving Streets, N. W. Bible School 9:45; meeting for worship 11 a. m., C. E. 7:30. Mid-week meeting Fifth-day, 7:45 p. m.

West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., Main and West 7th Street. Bible School, 9:00; meeting for worship, 10:30; vesper service, 5:00; C. E., 2:15. Prayer meeting, Thursday, 7:30.

A Valuable Offer

"The Present Day Message of Quakerism," by Charles M. Woodman. $1.00
The American Friend (1 yr.)..... 1 50

Total$2.50

Read This: The above valuable book will be sent together with each NEW subscription to The American Friend for one year for $2.00. Address

THE AMERICAN FRIEND
Richmond, Indiana.

WANTED—A head janitor. Earlham College desires to employ a man who is competent and experienced to have general oversight of the janitor work of the college. A permanent position for the right man. R. L. Kelly, President.

contains 288 pages, four color and four duotone plates, besides numberless photographic true-to-life reproductions. It lists all the standard varieties of Flowers and Vegetables, as well as the best of the season's novelties.

Thenewest Roses, thebest Dahlias, and Dreer's Improved Hardy Perennials are given special prominence.

Sent free to any one mentioning this weekly.

Dreer's Orchid-Flowered Sweet Peas—with immense wavy flowers in sprays of 3 and 4 blossoms each. Our mixture contains a full range of colors, 10 cents per packet, 20 cents per ounce, 60 cents per ¼ pound. Garden Book free with each order.

HENRY A. DREER 714-716 CHESTNUT ST.
PHILADELPHIA

Christian Endeavor Supplies
BOOKS

Bible Chains.....	$0.35
Child's Quiet Hour.....	.35
Christian Endeavor Manual.....	1.00
Clean and Strong.....	1.00
Enjoyable Entertainments.....	1.00
Fifty Missionary Programmes.....	.35
F. E. Clark Year Book.....	.50
Good Times With The Juniors.....	.50
Junior Endeavor.....	1.00
Manual of Physical Training.....	1.00
Prayers for the Quiet Hour.....	1.00
Why We Believe the Bible.....	1.00
Adventures in Tibet.....	1.50
Bible in Lesson and Story.....	1.25
Citizens in Training.....	.35
Continent of Opportunity.....	1.50
Daily Message for Christian Endeavorers.....	1.00
And many others.

HYMN BOOKS

(Purchaser pays shipping charges)
Service Songs (in quantities).....	$0.20
Jubilant Praise (in quantities)....	.20
The Praise Book (in quantities)....	.25
The Endeavor Hymnal (in quantities).....	.25
And others.

PINS AND NOVELTIES

Various Endeavor Pins, ranging in price: Solid gold, from 60c to $1.50; and in silver from 15c to 75c.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

Present Day Message of Quakerism.....	$1.00
Men's Conference Proceedings, paper, 75c; cloth.....	1.00
Monthly Meeting Chronicle.....	.15

Send orders for the above to

THE AMERICAN FRIEND
RICHMOND, INDIANA

PROMOTE PEACE by distributing America's cherished land mark post cards: Macy-Colby House, Golgotha Rock, Friends Meeting House, N. C., Stanton's Statue (Unveiling) four for five cents. Postcards containing essentials of Dick Military Law, five for 5 cents. C. E. Lukens, Marion, Ohio.

BORN

Chance—At Traverse City, Michigan, January 15, 1916, to Ivan L. and Winifred Chance, a son, Donald Ivan.

Fisher—At Traverse City, Michigan, December 6, to Albert and Minerva Fisher, a son, Russell Charles.

DIED

Arms—Roy Elvin Arms was born near Spencer, Iowa, July 2, 1878, and died at the place of his birth October 16, 1915. He was converted in childhood and joined Friends in early manhood. He spent a year in Taylor University and several years in the Edgar P. Ellison Bible Training School at Marshalltown and Penn College at Oskaloosa. His services in the Friends church at Greenville for the last five years have been invaluable in tiding it over a very critical period. He leaves a widow and four little children.

Cass—James Cass, an overseer and active member of Victoria meeting for the past five years, died at Victoria, B. C., February 9, 1916. He was an active worker in the cause of international peace and a charter member and secretary of the Western Canada Peace Association. The widow and six children survive him, two of whom reside in England.

Coffin—Levi Coffin, son of Moses and Margaret Coffin, was born in Wayne County, Indiana, November 2, 1820, and died at the home of his son, Clarkson M. Coffin, near Westfield, Indiana, January 30, 1916, aged 85 years, 2 months and 28 days. He was a life long Friend.

Harold—Lindley W. Harold, son of Jonathan and Rebecca Harold, was born in Wayne County, Indiana, and died at his home in Carmel, Indiana, January 24, 1916, aged 52 years, 9 months and 7 days. His death was the result of an accident several years ago. He was an esteemed member of Carmel meeting. He leaves a widow and two brothers. Funeral services were held in the Friends church at Carmel, conducted by Lewis E. Stout, the pastor.

Haworth—Calvin Haworth, son of Dillon and Sarah Haworth, was born near Walnut Ridge meeting, Indiana, April 26, 1831, and died at his home in Georgetown, Illinois, January 14, 1916, in his 85th year. He married Melissa Lewis in 1861. He was a birth-right Friend and from young manhood he has lived close to his Heavenly Father. During his last days he frequently prayed that God's blessing might rest upon the revival services being held in the Friends church at Georgetown. Albert J. Brown, who was conducting the special meetings, preached the funeral sermon.

Lyon—Clark B. Lyon was born at Naples, N. Y., and died at his home in Wichita, Kansas, January 18, 1916, aged 63 years, after an illness of only eight hours. For a time he resided with his parents at Cassopolis, Michigan, moving to Kansas about forty years ago, soon after which time he joined Friends near Elk City. He leaves a widow and one son. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, J. Arthur Wollam, assisted by President Edmund Stanley. Interment was in Maple Grove cemetery.

Plummer—Mary S. Plummer was born at Richmond, Ohio, May 13, 1818, and died at the home of her daughter in LeGrand, Iowa, February 2, 1916. She was a life long Friend and was converted in early youth. She was one of the oldest members of Iowa Yearly Meeting, being nearly 98 years old. She has been active in the service of the church, having served for a number of years as clerk of Bangor Quarterly Meeting. Her influence as a Christian was elevating to all those with whom she came in contact. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, J. R. Wright.

Walton—Joseph P. Walton died at the home of his son in Dublin, Indiana, January 23, 1916, aged 74 years. He was a consistent member of Dublin meeting since its organization.

Willits—Anna M. Willits, daughter of Jacob and Charity Kinzer, was born near Plainfield, Indiana, and died at Long Beach, California, January 25, 1916, aged 84 years and 18 days. In her girlhood she moved with her parents to Howard County, Indiana, where she married Mahlon H. Willits in 1851. In 1855 they moved to Bangor, Iowa, in 1899 to Ida Grove, Iowa, where they were instrumental in organizing a Friends church. In 1901 they moved to La Harpe, Kansas, again assisting in the organization of a Friends meeting and where their membership remained until death, her husband having preceded her a year ago. After spending the summer in Iowa and Colorado she went to California to make her home with her daughter. Five children survive her. She died a triumphant death. She was always a loyal and faithful Friend and a reader of the Friends paper ever since its publication.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½% FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY

Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books
The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.
Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, Incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Changing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.
Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.
Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.
Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for wills
Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.
Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward
Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary
J. THOMAS MOORE, Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 13.

THIRD MONTH 30, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 13.

Earlham College Library

"God's Man"

By FRANK P. RENO.

He comes! God's Man, across the hills!
With high resolves he fronts the dawns
He swiftly trails the upland lawns,
And, eager, hears the song that thrills.

His heart is warm, and clear his brain;
He scorns to wrong a brother man;
In honor's march he leads the van;
His dreams are sweet as April rain.

When Error's hordes the right invade
And Justice strive to overthrow,
Then God's Man dares to face the foe,
And lightning-quick descends his blade.

The heartless jibe and ridicule,
The swish of Envy's stinging whip,
The firmer make him set his lip,
And stricter draw the Golden Rule.

He brooks no compromise with sin;
His steps are ever Godward bent;
He lives for that divine event
When God shall say—"Well done! Come in!"
—Exchange.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

A Little While in Prayer

(The following verses are sent by Lucinda E. Hill, of Lynn, Mass., having been found in the Bible of a friend of hers after death.)

"A moment, Lord, with Thee in prayer
A moment on the street;
Amid the whirl, the rush, the roar,
My Saviour would I meet.

A moment 'mid my tangling work
Right where the wheels at play
Make dizzy now my tired brain;
Just here I stop to pray.

A moment when my courage fails,
When I am slow to own
That Thou art all, my all on earth,
In heaven just Thou alone.

One moment, Lord, just one in prayer,
Give rest upon Thine arm,
Give strength to speak, give will to do,
And still my soul's alarm."

—Exchange.

What Friends Can Do

Washington, D. C., March 11, 1916.

Editor American Friend:

At the Friends' Peace Headquarters in Washington the committee in charge is continually obtaining fresh bits of information on the situation in Congress and in the country which we wish we could share with Friends generally. We are so enthusiastic over the possibilities of affecting public opinion by the Friendly message if we can but get the Society of Friends in all its branches to write their Congressmen to oppose the increases in the army and navy, and to work in their communities to persuade others so to do, that it is difficult to understand the apparent apathy of some of our most concerned members.

The report that has been published so widely that Germany could, if so inclined, land 400,000 men upon our shores in fourteen days has been met by this startling statement which I had from Mr. James Hay, the chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives. Mr. Hay, at the public hearings, questioned the officers of our general staff as to whether or not they had examined the practical workings of the transport of troops from Canada to England, and they reported that they had not sent any representative to investigate it, nor had they any first-hand knowledge on the subject.

In commenting on this, Mr. Hay said to me, the facts are, that it took Great Britain, with the greatest merchant marine and navy the world has ever seen, with absolutely unchallenged control of the sea, 33 days to transport 30,000 troops from a friendly port in Canada to a friendly port in Great Britain, and they used in so doing 31 transports and 62 war vessels; how much longer it would take our most generally suggested enemies, Germany and Japan, to transport their troops can be imagined.

In our Friendly view point with our basis in the fundamental spiritual iniquity of war, and our belief in the good impulses of every man, it makes little difference how difficult the transport of troops across the sea to our shores may be. For us war is wrong. But in conversation with those who do not share in our principal point of view, such statements are at least reassuring in this time of panic.

May I, on behalf of the Headquarters at Washington, make this further appeal? The committee in charge of the Headquarters, after consultation with Congressmen, inspection of their files of correspondence, and studying the question as carefully as the means at their disposal has permitted, have marked out a plan for influencing Congress with the Quaker thought. This plan is based on every Friend interested writing three letters, one to his representative in Congress and one to each of the Senators from his State. The committee really means this request, and writing on the return post-card that, "months ago I wrote to my Congressman," or writing to one Senator, as indicated by a line drawn through the word "two" Senators on the return post-card, a copy of which is given below, does not fulfill the request.

If Friends have written to their Congressman before, it is good reason for writing again. A business man who does not get your order generally sends a second, sometimes a third, and in special cases a fourth or fifth letter. The essential thing is that the Congressman should know that in his district are people that are in earnest that he should vote and work against the increases in the army and navy.

We hope that Friends will avail themselves of every opportunity to come to Washington and get an experience of the excited condition of the public mind on this question. Visits to the Peace Headquarters and to some of the Congressmen and to the office of the Anti-Preparedness Committee have at this time a real educational value.

Very truly thine
L. HOLLINGSWORTH WOOD.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 13.

THIRD MONTH 30, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 13.

Where Does the Church Stand?

This issue of THE AMERICAN FRIEND may properly be called a peace number, for which the exigencies of the present crisis seem to afford ample justification. We would call special attention to the ringing message from L. Hollingsworth Wood, and the able article by Isaac Sharpless found upon other pages of this number. There is danger that Friends, who have been famed as the apostles of peace for many generations, may fail to ring true in a grave emergency like that which confronts the United States at the present time, either through a mistaken notion of their insignificance as a religious body or because they have been affected by the tidal wave of militarism that is sweeping over the nation.

The preparedness craze has grown to be a tragedy, not so much because its advocates have succeeded in frightening a great people, as that the impotency of the Church as the moral leader of the nation stands distressingly revealed. With holy unction and with prophetic voice the church ought now to be able to speak the word that would quell the raging storm and bring the assurance of protection to a people that dares to "abide under the shadow of the Almighty." The immediate issue is not one of larger armies and navies half so much as it is whether or not America is to be positively Christian. And therein is included a problem of greater significance than the problem of peace or war, but one which when solved will more than all else be the guarantee of our national safety and of our permanent peace. The success or failure of preparedness does not begin to compare in importance with the apparent tendency on the part of a large portion of our American ministry to turn for support to the arm of flesh and rely for protection upon guns and forts and battleships.

We appear to have fallen upon a day when multitudes of professing Christians are willing to disavow the practicability of the Sermon on the Mount. Speaking upon this subject The Christian Work, one of the ablest religious weeklies in this country says in a recent number:

"But never until this year has a disposition manifested itself among Christians, even among ministers, to set aside the words of Jesus as too high for human needs, too impossible to be useful, too far removed from possibility of human attainment, too remote to guide us in times of stress, too idealistic for a practical world, too unworkable to be trusted and therefore to be set aside, for the time being, and the ideals of the Old Testament substituted for them or even more human, more primitive motives than those of the Old Testament."

We should expect quite naturally that the materialistic and un-Christian sentiment of the world would so express itself. Indeed writers in many lands within recent years have so voiced the tenets of that irreligious propaganda that puts its trust in force, adopts the law of the jungle and revives the ancient but un-Christian doctrine that "might makes right." Christianity must suffice to introduce a new governing element into human society, the governing element of a transcendent love, or it is bound to perish at the threshold of its supremest mission. In face of the taunt of other religions that Christianity is a beautiful ideal but too theoretical to be practical for this work-a-day world, a challenge has been spoken that should stir the Christian Church as a whole to the exercise of a mighty faith and to the conscientious defense of its historic beliefs. In the face of a world gone mad on militarism, it is time for the Church to rally in behalf of New Testament ideals as the only practical governing force for the social order of the world.

The Church and its ministry have gone far afield when they advocate any program for society that does not harmonize with the Sermon on the Mount. That is the unit of measurement for all human conduct, personal or corporate, and Christ is wounded afresh in the house of His friends when His standards are lowered to serve the ends of expediency. In justification of the military article of the program of the League to Enforce Peace, William Penn has been quoted in behalf of the use of force as the ultimate authority in his plan of government. But William Penn had predilections to militarism by virtue of his early training, and he was dealing with an experiment of which there were few if any examples. It would be passing strange indeed if amid such uncertain surroundings he was able to realize the full import of the teachings of Jesus. It was marvelous that he understood as well as he did the meaning of the law of love in human government.

It is a far cry, however, from William Penn's concern over a plan of government at a time when all governments were suspicious of one another and were dominated universally by the militaristic spirit, to the needs of a great and independent nation like the United States two centuries and a half later, whose place in the sun thus far has depended upon its program of peace and its practice of the doctrine of world brotherhood, and whose mission is so plainly that of ethical and civilizing world leadership.

The Society of Friends and for that matter the entire Christian Church, will lose immeasurably if it seeks to mitigate or explain away the ideals of the Sermon on the Mount. God help the world if the church is to consent in man's supremest need to the superiority of the material over the spiritual. Whatever nations may continue to do, the Church must not be set adrift by its prophets who make moral values a matter of expediency to be advocated or set aside as outward circumstances demand. The church must set the standards of the world by virtue of its claims for spiritual leadership in the operations of the human family; and the doctrines of the church about militarism and schemes of human government must be dictated by the teachings of Jesus, and not by the philosophies of men. For that which seems impossible from the viewpoint of the judgments of men is after all the mightiest force in determining the destinies of the race. The supreme issue of the American church is to keep the United States upon the highway of faith in Jehovah as an example to the nations of a people whose God is the Lord.

Military Training in Schools and Colleges

By PRESIDENT ISAAC SHARPLESS, HAVERFORD COLLEGE.

If military training simply means camp life, certainly it merits only commendation for its physical effects. I have myself spent too many days and nights under canvas during the last three decades not to appreciate that even a short experience of it makes close air impossible at any time during the twelve months of the year.

It is said that in Continental times John Adams and Benjamin Franklin were doomed to spend a night together in a small room with a little window in a New Jersey hotel. Adams closed the window tight, for he said that night air was dangerous. Franklin thought they could not have better air at that time of day than night air and opened it, but finally compromised with Adams that after telling him a story, the window could be closed. The story was long and monotonous. Adams went to sleep and the window was left open.

An examination of apartment houses in New York on a cold night revealed the fact that practically all windows were closed, presumably not from fear of night air, but from dislike of the cold. If any device could induce the American nation to breathe fresh air every day and night through fifty-two weeks of each year the problem of tuberculosis would be solved in a generation. We cannot get it into our school system too soon.

Again, if military training means only daily regular exercise, an ordered healthy life and simple habits, it deserves well of the country. Luxury, comfort, indulgence are the goals set before them by too many youths, and worry, responsibility and excitement destroy the nerve and heart power of too many men to value lightly any agency which will steady the habits and fortify the inner energies of those who are to do the world's work in this exacting generation.

But though military training does have these salutary effects, it is doubtful if, on the whole, it is the best means of securing them. The Boy Scouts have declared against it in this country, and even their great militant leader and organizer in England does not encourage its introduction. More and more the scientific physical trainers and educators are minimizing the rigid formal exercises of gymnasium drill whenever the free, joyous, spontaneous open-air sports can be procured. The boy needs play, zest and competition, and not simply an uninteresting movement of the muscles.

Again, military instruction has moral values, forced attention to tasks at the time they are due, though in some cases causing a reaction afterwards in many others results in habits which stand well in life. How purposeless are the lives of many students! How in need of discipline and trained methods and steady persistence! How the lack of these qualities shows itself so that we have to meet such jibes as that "The intellectual habits of some students may even be able to stand the strain of college life." The Oxford professors say that our Rhodes scholars have no steady ability to grind out a heavy and, in the process, uninteresting grist of mental sustenance. The West Point and Annapolis examiners throw out some three out of four candidates (coming from all the congressional districts of the United States, often set up as the result of competition) for deficiencies, not of intelligence but of steady drill. The great fault of our whole American system is the superficial attention to the interesting rather than the thorough mastery of the essential. If military drill can cure this, again it deserves well of the country.

But are we not again confronted with the same problem as when we considered the physical side?

Can a system enforced from the outside, demanding unequivocal attention at the expense of degradation and penalty, be all that is needed? Must there not be a training which brings a response from the student?

Is military obedience the sort which our American boys need? In his noted definition of a liberal education, Professor Huxley describes the educated man as "One who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience?" Is either will or conscience educated by the military process? Is it not rather an abnegation of personality, a complete atrophy of individual sense of right or duty? If a superior officer tells you to stab your opponent through the heart with a bayonet, to shoot a noble woman engaged in the relief of suffering, to burn a city in which thousands of non-combatants reside, to ravage a country and leave the inhabitants to die by starvation, to sink a liner and all that it contains, the man obeys as a machine obeys, without hesitation and perhaps without inner protest. Or if the protest comes he smothers it with the thought that the officer and not himself is responsible.

But one is reminded by Hosea Biglow:

"If you take a sword and draw it
And go run a fellow thro:
Government won't answer for it—
God'll send the bill to you."

The unquestioning obedience demanded by the military code is hardly the remedy which America has ever submitted to, nor will she ever submit to it, until the principles of our founders and fathers are forgotten and their spirit deserts us.

The sons of men who came over in privation and peril to find freedom of conscience will hardly submit to a national fettering of individual consciences. The sons of men who in various ways fought for the assertion that "All men are born free," will hardly allow their sons to fall victims to an education which will make them slaves in any degree, in body or spirit, to a cruel system. General military training in the schools with all that this implies, introduces into the life of the American nation an element and a principal antagonistic to those free institutions and to the democracy upon which we have always considered that our claim to a standing among the nations is securely based, and would be the beginning of a set of new national ideals and standards, which the present experience of certain European nations hardly commends to us.

If we lack, as we do, in our education certain methods and impulses which would tend to make it vigorous and efficient, if we sacrifice solid mental training for superficial knowledge of interesting items, let us in the first place recognize the fact, which as yet we hardly do. Let us find the remedy as we can in an education of the people to demand what is worth while rather than what is "practical" (as they often falsely express it), and in the courage of educators to stand for what they know is right, sometimes against the popular voice, not in the overturning of our most valuable and cherished traditions. Prussia has no lack of thorough training and disciplined scholars, and yet with all her militaristic ideas, she excludes military training from her schools as having no place there.

Our free speech and untrammelled thinking gives us wonderful advantages in resisting heresies by popular education. Our history is full of illustrations of governmental, economic, social and moral movements of a disastrous character which have had temporary sway and have seemed to the timid hugely portentous of evil. But before they ripened into serious dangers, education and good sense and a happy conservatism which is ours, cut them out or trimmed them into safe and wholesome instruments of progress. Our history and traditions, like our Constitution, have held us back from revolutionary experiments and have given us safe remedies for evils and safe lines of progress in harmony with our past life. So it will be in the future; there is no need of a radical uprooting of our best inheritance to cure diseases which will yield to other remedies.

If needed one could quote dozens of authorities on this subject. "Military drill seems to me one of the poorest forms of bodily exercise, very inferior to most gymnastic exercises and to all free sports," says ex-President Eliot. "My principal objection to military drill as a physical exercise," says Dr. Sargent, "is that it does not to any extent meet the physiological demands of the body." To see a green playground covered with boys at sport is the ideal of physical exercise. Supplementary to this and, unfortunately in some cases necessarily a substitute for it in large cities, is a well considered scientific system of physical training indoors, a system which takes into consideration individual weaknesses and needs, which embraces all that military training gives and much more, and which better prepares the body to withstand the strain of after life.

It may have been some such arguments as these, though I did not attend the meeting, which so lately as August 27, 1915, induced the N. E. A. at Oakland, California, with unanimity to adopt the resolution:

"The Association deplores any attempt to militarize this country. It again declares against the establishment of compulsory military training in the schools on the ground that this is reactionary and inconsistent with American ideals and standards. The Association expresses its approval of the policy of the Boy Scouts of America in keeping the useful work free from connection with military affairs."

We have also protests from the head of the New York Public School System and the head of the Pennsylvania Public School System, during the current year, against the introduction of military drill in the public schools. The United States Commissioner of Education has declared: "The public schools are not the place to give this training and preparation," and Professor John Dewey, speaking especially of rifle practice, says: "It is undemocratic, barbaric and scholastically wholly unwise."

But there are other reasons for the present agitation of this subject than its fitness for educational purposes and its development of the attributes of American manhood, otherwise girls as well as boys should receive its benefits. It is a part of the general policy of preparedness for actual warfare into which the present suddenly aroused sense of danger has plunged the country. And here I suppose I must part company with some who have been with me thus far. It may be that I am what is called a peace-at-any-price man, though the words do not seem to me exactly descriptive of my attitude. It is possible also that I am a "Molly-coddle," though there again uncertainty as to definition makes me hesitate to appropriate the honor. I confess I cannot see the near danger. There is some risk, as there is of an earthquake in Philadelphia. But it is a balance of small risks against certain large evils, and I am inclined to take the risks. These risks can be greatly reduced by measures which are wholly wholesome. Tell our boys that this nation must ever pride herself on her rigid and even generous enforcement of treaties, on the absence of all aggressive tendencies which seem to covet territory or commercial advantages at the expense of weaker states, on the decent and honorable treatment of foreigners within our borders, that we will not unconsciously prepare for a time when an accident of politics puts into a chair of power a man of aggressive will and militant tendencies, that the moral standards of the nation and of a man in civil society are not widely divergent, that the protection of national honor rests with ourselves, and is independent of what others may do. Can we make the ten million boys feel the full throes of a patriotism abounding in self-sacrifice for the good of humanity, can they believe that the glory of America consists not in the might of her destructive agencies, but in a leadership in good will and beneficence? Create such a national consciousness as this, which will not breed competitive armaments elsewhere which we in turn will have to match, and the dangers of attack are vastly reduced. Take the cost of one battleship and put into the field a few thousand teachers and lecturers, such as boys like to listen to and you have no mean insurance against hostile intent. More than that, you start a movement which will pacify the world.

There is more room for confidence in justice and generosity and righteousness than we usually appreciate. Things come out better than we expect. There is an inherent strength in the right whether for individuals or nations. It is shown in our unprotected northern frontier; in the first three-quarters of a century of the history of this province, in Finland under the heel of a despotism, but which through her schools and churches keeps alive her national spirit and ideals; even in China, which we so often hear spoken of in terms of kindly contempt, but which for 5000 years has measurably preserved her territorial integrity while many warlike nations have risen and perished.

Other considerations which readily occur to any one which reduce the risks are our geographical position, the importance of our commercial relations with all the world, the fact that Europe and Asia are exhausting their resources in men and treasures to the point of a breakdown. One begins to doubt whether our contagion of militancy has a sufficient basis to last, or rather, whether like all emotional movements, there will not follow a reaction, which will make us see a few years hence what foolish things were done in the fervor of our new departure.

It will require a very urgent cause and very large risks to excuse the introduction into our national life, through the schools, of the military ideal, from which we have been free in the past. We may thank the American spirit for the poise of many of the advocates of preparedness, including the major-general of the army. The hundred years of pacific history have permitted the growth of normal and sane views of personal and public morality, and another hundred would so crystallize them that militarism in America would be impossible. Our wars even have not succeeded in creating this military spirit, they have only temporarily strengthened it. Good has come from them, as good comes from every cataclysm. It might have come without them. Independence might have been secured without a war, as I have heard James Bryce surmise. The possession of California and the Southwest might have come by request of the people there, as I believe historical documents prove. Slavery might have been extinguished by purchase or otherwise, and Cuba might have been freed by diplomacy if the patience of the American people had held out a little longer. But all might-have-beens are matters of speculation. Wars have come to us, none, however, as the result of the attack of any other nation to procure something they did not have before. They came at our invitation. I am willing to trust to the same agencies which have operated in the past, if we do our full duty, to care for us in the future, against other attacks from outside.

But if wars may not reach us the spirit of warfare is with us now in some of its most malignant forms. The European nations are baptized in suffering. They are learning its lessons, and John R. Mott, who has just been among them, tells us that never before have the men who occupy the trenches on both sides of the line been so seriously concerned about the things of the spirit. The men will be apostles of peace henceforward. But we are enjoying a triumphant materialism based on the instruments of human destruction that we are sending abroad. Residents of two cities which contain munitions plants have told me within a few days of the wild orgy of speculation in war stocks into which the young men and boys have plunged, and these cases are not alone. Men are openly and gaily hoping that the war will last longer, that their profits may be still further multiplied. The time of reckoning may come, will surely come to some, when the inflation will burst, as did the South Sea bubble and the lottery system of our own country a century ago. Labor troubles, the disarrangement of the old industries, the creation of a number of new millionaires of unsavory reputation, the strain of readjustment, all these are our outlook, and may be our proper chastisement. What schools and colleges should hold most dear, the triumphs of intellect, the quiet quest of truth and right, the exaltation of the spiritual over the material, are pushed aside by the wild scramble for unholy gains.

There is no heroism in this—no example to set before ambitious youths who wish to serve humanity or exalt themselves—no lessons, except those of avoidance, which we, as teachers, can use to stimulate good impulses.

A few days ago a man who came from this city, after decades of quiet work in his laboratory over atomic weights and such other abstract and seemingly unpractical entities without thought of financial reward, received a just recompense in a Nobel prize. I am not a chemist, and do not know through what course the discoveries of Dr. Richards must pass or have passed in order to enter the field of industry which makes for human betterment. Nor does it matter how or when this will show itself. Such labor is the ideal of school and college effort. The triumphs of peace, not of war, are our texts, and the method of peace and justice the ideals for our boys in school.

One cannot but honor the impulse which prompts men to give up the comforts of home, the prospects of business and the satisfaction of an ordered life, and from a sense of duty or patriotism accept the risks of battle and the monotony, or worse, of trench life. It is an impulse which may well be made an inspiration to school and college youth. But these impulses exist outside the martial field. When men get together in military camps, with all the contagion of talk and action, the drill and the uniforms, this wholesome feeling for a life of service involving sacrifice and danger operates to send them into the army on the least excuse. But if the contagion could point in other directions against the enemies of humanity and not fellow beings, if other causes could be advertised and other fields of risk and usefulness pointed out, then young men who really felt the call to dangerous service, and not merely the love of adventure and the lure of glory, would enlist as good soldiers in the employ of beneficent enterprises. For, as the author of Tom Brown says, "There is no good for Quakers or any other body of men to uplift their voices against fighting. Human nature is too strong for them and they don't follow their own precept. Every soul of them is doing his own piece of fighting somehow and somewhere.

Give this incentive to our young men in effective measure, tell them the risks and rewards of unknown efforts for sanitation and liveable conditions in the homes of the poor, of the Red Cross work on the fields of battle into which not a few Englishmen and some Americans have voluntarily gone, of the successful fight against disease of American doctors in Serbia, of the political martyrdom which a combat against corrupt agencies not infrequently brings, of the financial loss often involved in a brave and effective public service, of the life of the missionaries apart from home and friends and physical comforts in lands abroad, and you may arouse and direct energies as potent, take risks as bravely, secure results as permanent, and fill out the measure of life as faithfully as ever soldier did on the battlefield, in a contest against men with the same fidelity to duty as himself.

As Richard Watson Gilder wrote just before his death:

'Twas said: "When roll of drum and battle's roar
Shall cease upon the earth, oh, then no more
The deed, the race, of heroes in the land."
But scarce that word was breathed when one small hand
Lifted victorious o'er a giant wrong
That had its victims crushed through ages long
Some woman set her pale and quivernig face,
Firm as a rock, against a man's disgrace;
A little child suffered in silence lest
His savage pain should wound a mother's breast;
Some quiet scholar flung his gauntlet down
And risked, in Truth's great name, the synod's frown;
A civic hero, in the calm realm of laws,
Did that which suddenly drew a world's applause;
And one to the pest his lithe young body gave
That he a thousand thousand lives might save.

It is true that some men who have preached the doctrine of peace have done it in a purely negative way, shorn of any contagious enthusiasm for active duty. Some of them have seemed to shelter themselves in safety under their consciences while others fought for them. Such an example will not go far in a community of generous youth. But there have been some who have suffered the extremes of bodily injury and ignomy rather than yield their convictions; to whom the far easier path would have been to satisfy the martial demand; who if not "too proud to fight," have been too brave to fight. If the campaign for military instruction shall induce preachers and teachers to proclaim a vigorous propaganda for patriotic and humanitarian service, full of danger and reward, for moral purposes by moral methods, it will not have been in vain.

Prayer is the great practical working agency of the Church. It supplies the condition which makes possible the incoming and outgoing of the divine energy.

Know what your sin is and confess it; but do not imagine that you have approved yourself a penitent by confessing sin in the abstract.—T. L. Cuyler.

Letter From Jamaica

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS.

Creole Work

Of the 831,383 population of Jamaica, 630,181 are black; 163,201 colored; 17,380 East Indians; 15,605 white; 2,111 Chinese; 2,905 not slated. Our first and main mission work was for the predominant black and colored (so-called Creole) population and the first and main centers were Cedar Hurst and Seaside.

The first of these is in a most beautiful mountain-valley 12½ miles above Buff Bay. Mrs. Alma Swift has charge of this district with her home at Buff Bay, about 25 miles west of Fort Antonio. We became guests in her delightful home on the evening of January 28th. The next day (Saturday) we took the wonderfully beautiful drive, ten miles, up to Glen Haven. It follows a rapidly flowing river all the way, the scene constantly changing as we follow the tortuous road, with precipitous mountains on either side the river. Frequent side streams, with a score or more of beautiful falls, come through narrow defiles down the steep mountain sides. Everywhere dense tropical verdure, with trees of various kinds thickly covered with orchids, and clinging vines forming festoons between the tops. Occasional patches of ground far up the mountain sides have been cleared of native growth and set out with bananas and cocoanuts, and set in among them are the cottages of the owners or caretakers.

Glen Haven is a neat cottage on a small piece of land high above the road very high above the river. A steep road, only passable by the horse with the buggy empty, leads up from the roadway, at the nearest corner as you go up. The main road then follows around two sides of the property, cut out of the precipitous rock, and makes a sharp turn, doubling back on the other side of a narrow gorge. At the turn of the gorge is a most beautiful triple fall. The rushing stream breaks out from a dense mass of trees in the upper fall and plunges down many scores of feet in its three leaps over the rocks and then takes its swift course to the river far below. The road crosses on a stone bridge at the foot of the middle fall. This fall is in full view from the cottage, only a few hundred feet away, and the river valley, both above and below, presents a view of rare loveliness. The basement of the cottage is built of stone and is occupied by the Creole worker and his family. He has general care both of the premises and of the congregation. The upper story with its five rooms and two porches, is furnished for the use of our missionaries whenever they need to use it. A more delightful rest spot would be hard to find. The rushing falls seem to cool the air and drive out care and lull to refreshing sleep. On the premises we counted about thirty varieties of fruit and native trees. Among them were cinnamon, allspice, pineapples and all varieties of citrus fruits.

We stayed over Saturday night at this restful spot and on Sunday morning went up the valley two and one-half miles to the chapel and school house at Cedar Hurst. The congregation here numbers above one hundred. The only white attenders are Mr. and Mrs. Francis, owners of a large estate nearby, who seem much interested in the work. They are Congregationalists, but have no church in that region. The school is taught by a native teacher who, I believe, is a graduate of the school at Happy Grove. In the afternoon we returned to Buff Bay and in the evening drove along the beach three miles to the chapel at Orange Bay. Here is a somewhat larger congregation, with a neat chapel and school room combined and a cottage for the teachers. Formerly there were quite extensive barracks for both creoles and Indians; but the storm last August swept them all away and the chapel and cottage are the only buildings left. The congregation was scattered somewhat to other sections and are having a hard time to live until next season's crop matures. But the chapel was filled with a worshiping congregation. These Creole congregations make much use of singing, and are always led by a chorus of good voices. They listen most attentively, and always give their visitors a warm welcome with the handshakes and the women giving that curtsy with the dropping motion peculiar to the blacks. In this district Mrs. Swift is ably assisted by Phulmat, a young Indian woman, and Stella, a young colored woman, both of whom are graduates of Happy Grove and are members of her household.

Through the kind invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, we were to spend a little time resting at their beautiful home at Fairy Hill. Their carriage came for us early on Tuesday morning, February 1st, and we quickly drove the seven miles from Port Antonio over the fine English road beside the sea, with the ever-changing mountain scenery on the other side. This rest was most welcome. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are the owners of a large estate that is now mainly devoted to cocoanuts. Formerly it had been a sugar plantation and the ruins of an old sugar mill are close by the house. Such ruins are frequent along all that part of the coast which we saw, as the sugar cane long ago gave place to fruits.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown are members of the Seaside meeting and have rendered great assistance to our work in that part of the island. They have large influence in all that section, and use it for the best interests of the community.

On Wednesday they sent us on the remaining seventeen miles to our Seaside mission. Here is our largest work. The mission home is a place of restful hospitality, located high above the sea, with many miles of sea coast, indented with small bays, visible from the porch. Mr. and Mrs. Kurtzhals, our missionaries in charge, had arranged everything to make our stay pleasant and profitable. Close by the mission home is the church building, with heavy concrete walls and seating about five hundred people. It is in the form of a cross, and all its features are not only most substantial but also pleasing to the eye. In one angle is the memorial tower with its clock, striking the hours and half-hours and keeping the time for the entire community. This was built by the people in memory of Arthur H. Swift, whose grave, with those of other missionaries, is close by. The basement gives ample accommodations for the school work of advanced grade. The main auditorium is beautifully arranged, with platform and pulpit occupying the recess at the far end, facing the main front entrance. A reading desk stands on a lower platform in front of the pulpit; in the wing at the right is a low platform seating the two dozen or more singers that form the chorus choir. In front of this platform is a large aeolian organ, in part the gift of Mr. Carnegie. In front of this organ is a good piano. These people love music and it is a delight to hear them sing.

Back of the church a little distance is the dormitory building for boys. In this also is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Farr, he being the head master and she the teacher of domestic science. Here also is provision for teaching trades, main attention at present being given to carpentry and tailoring.

On a hill to the east and separated by a rather deep gorge is the Happy Grove Girls' School, under the efficient management of Miss Andrews. Here there are fifteen colored girls, twelve to sixteen years old, and ten small Indian girls, the wards of the government. Miss Andrews comes as near perfection in efficiency of training as it seems possible to attain. It is a delight to watch the older girls in calisthenic drill with dumb-bells; every movement with absolute precision. The same precision is seen in all household arrangements, care of rooms, sewing, cooking, laundry and general service.

In the valley between Seaside and Happy Grove School is a large school house, the property of the mission. Here are the elementary grades for the children of the community, the teachers being paid by the government. Over one hundred children are enrolled here.

On Thursday evening there was the meeting of the Christian Endeavor. The young people of the neighboring Baptist Church met with them. There were probably sixty to eighty present. There was much interest, and several members took part well, though they gave the time largely to the visitors. Sylvester Jones and Clarence McLean, of Cuba, were present, stopping over on their way to Panama.

On Friday evening a literary society was held at Happy Grove, conducted entirely by the boys and girls of the Institute. No college society could have been conducted with greater dignity. The same precision marked every feature that was seen in all the other departments of the work.

Sunday was made a special day. Clarence McLean spoke in the morning at Seaside and in the afternoon at Amity Hall. I went with Mr. Kurtzhaltz in the morning to Amity Hall (five miles distant) and was at Seaside afternoon and evening. Sylvester Jones spent the day with the mission at Annotto Bay. At Amity Hall there is a chapel and school house and a cottage for the teacher. A new, substantial building, of concrete, has been under construction for some years. This also is a memorial to Arthur Swift. There has been considerable discouragement on account of the hard conditions the members have had to face, and especially on account of the August storm that destroyed their crops and made work difficult to obtain. But they are pressing on and soon the roof will be on. When complete it will be a substantial and creditable building. The services at Seaside were large, filling the house in the afternoon and evening. It was a pleasing feature at the opening to see the boys and girls of the two schools march slowly in, singing "Jerusalem, the Golden," keeping perfect time in motion and singing until they reached the seats reserved for them near the front. The chorus choir was well trained, and led the large congregation in the singing with a heartiness rarely heard in white congregations. In the evening, Mr. Brown, who is of English birth, presided in the manner customary in English gatherings. The people gave freely for the missionary offering, notwithstanding the hard times through which they are passing. Several white families attended the meetings. Many of the colored people here hold influential positions in the community. On Monday morning one of the leading men of the community sent his automobile to take us the fifty miles to Kingston, and we bade farewell to our mission and the faithful workers there.

Our Washington Letter

A new complication has been added to the "preparedness" situation by the murderous escapade of Villa and his forces in New Mexico and those who are anxious to have the country maintain a sane and conservative policy in the matter of military establishment have good cause for fresh apprehension lest Congress be frightened into the adoption of an extravagant program for enlargement of the army and navy. In the few days that the war dogs have been barking at poor Mexico some of the leading men in both Houses of Congress have taken advantage of the excitement to attempt to speed up consideration of the "preparedness" bills already reported. The President has also taken occasion to urge quick action. Psychologically conditions are much more favorable to a big program going through Congress than was the case a week ago. There is little doubt that the Administration will be given anything at all it may ask for in the present emergency. This was shown by the manner in which a 20,000 addition was made to the regular army yesterday. Today such men as Congressman Mann, of Illinois, Republican floor leader, and Congressman Fitzgerald, of New York, chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee, and Congressman Mondell, of Wyoming, who is against a big program, voiced the feelings of a large majority of the House members when they said their section of Congress would do anything necessary to further the success of the expedition into Mexico. At the same time Mr. Mann urged that other business be laid aside for an immediate consideration of the whole question of "preparedness." In the Senate the same sort of conditions prevail, with Senators Chamberlain and Borah taking the lead in the demand for quick action. But there are staunch enemies of militarism in Congress who may be trusted to stand by their convictions, men like Bailey, of Pennsylvania; Gordon, of Ohio; Dies, of Texas, and Kitchin, of North Carolina.

It behooves the earnest people over the country who want this nation above all else to stand for right dealing and justice and brotherliness in its relations with other nations to do some hard thinking and prompt, emphatic acting just now. In the correspondence coming to this headquarters there is much evidence that many Friends get little encouragement in their efforts to influence the actions of the Congressmen. It is all too common for the writer of a letter to be politely informed that his supposed representative at Washington is glad to have his views but that he does not agree and will have to vote as he sees fit. But there should be no let-up in the effort to get these men to work and vote on the right side of this question. And it might be well to keep in mind what one Friend writes from a far western state: "I know this opposition (to militarism) will be carried to the polls if Congress goes one step too far in the matter." And another Friend wrote in a most excellent letter to one of the Senators from his state, "I hold, in common with all patriotic citizens, that Lincoln's memorable phrase, 'Government of the people, for the people and by the people,' means a representative and not a monarchical government; that the function of government should be directed by our representatives, from the President down, by the sentiments of the people represented."

If We Start Right

They failed to drive out their enemies. I believe the reason so many Christians have such a stormy passage, and the Christian life is not what they expected it to be when they became Christians, is that they don't drive out every foe and every enemy. In other words, they are not more than half converted, they don't get control of their temper, the god of pleasure seems to have a grip upon them, and lust and covetousness and selfishness come in, and they don't get victory. Nine-tenths of the battle is won, it seems to me, if we start right.—D. L. Moody.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE

"The Stream That Never Dries Up"

I was once stopping at a village on the Welsh coast, where the people had to bring all the water from a well.

"Is this well ever dry?" inquired I of a young girl who came to draw water.

"Dry? Yes, ma'am; very often in hot weather."

"And where do you go for water then?"

"To the spring a little way out of town."

"And if that spring dries up?"

"Why, then we go to the spring higher up, the best water of all."

"But if that spring higher up fails?"

"Why, ma'am, that stream never dries up—never. It is always the same, winter and summer."

I went to this precious brook which "never dries up." It was a clear, sparkling rivulet, coming down the high hill—not with torrent leap and roar, but soft murmur of fulness and freedom. It flowed down to the highway side, it was within reach of every child's pitcher; it was enough for every empty vessel. The small birds came down thither to drink; the sheep and lambs had trodden down a little path to its brink. The thirsty beasts of burden along the dusty road knew the way to the stream that "never dries up."

It reminded me of the waters of life and salvation flowing from the "Rock of Ages," and brought within the reach of all men by the gospel of Jesus Christ. Every other brook may grow dry in the days of drought and adversity, but this heavenly spring never ceases to flow.

"Blest Be The Tie"

Not one in a thousand who sings the old hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," knows its history. It was written by the Rev. John Fawcett, who in the eighteenth Century was the pastor of a poor little church in Yorkshire, England.

In 1772 he accepted a call to a London church. His farewell sermon had been preached, six wagons loaded with furniture and books stood by the door. His congregation, men, women and children, were in any agony of tears.

Looking up, Mrs. Fawcett said: "Oh, John, John, I cannot bear this! I know not where we go."

"Nor I," said he, "nor will we go. Unload the wagons and put everything back."

His letter of acceptance was recalled, and he wrote this hymn to commemorate the episode.—Home Herald.

The time to fulfill a promise to obey made in time of trouble is right now. Any delay tends to cause one to disregard his promise.

Better to think of the days that will come
Than to weep for the days that are gone.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

ADMINISTRATION.

"How much of our missionary money actually gets to the field?" This is a question often asked and one which Friends have a right to ask and to have answered very clearly.

Every Mission Board or Society finds it necessary, of course, to spend some money in America. To supply the needs of the missionaries month after month, to keep necessary records and accounts, to collect and publish reports and other items of news from the field, enabling the church at home to know of the needs and the results of the work abroad, to collect and expend funds—all this is necessary to successful foreign missionary work, and it all costs something.

Last year 92½ cents of every dollar expended by the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions was spent on the mission field. In other words, the expense of administration last year amounted to 7.4 per cent of the total expenditures of the Board. This fact is clearly set forth in the report of the treasurer which appears on pages 51, 52 and 53 of the 21st Annual Report of the Board. As is there shown, the Board spent during the last fiscal year $45,410.24. Of this sum $3,362.67 was spent in America. $42,047.57, or over 92½ per cent of the total amount paid out by the treasurer was sent to the foreign field. The report accounts for every dollar received by the board.

THE EASTER STORY GRAPHICALLY ILLUSTRATED.

A few of our Bible Schools may not yet have made definite plans for their Easter exercises. Less than four weeks remain now until Easter; those who think of using the Easter program, "The Hope of the World," which has already been mentioned in these columns, should send for the programs at once so that the pupils taking part in the exercise may be thoroughly prepared. This program and the splendid picture which is to be used with it may be ordered from the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, Richmond, Indiana. In brown photogravure, eleven by fourteen inches, the picture costs twenty cents, while a larger copy of the picture in colors sells for forty cents.

The program with supplements may be secured for $1.80 per hundred or 25c a dozen in quantities of less than fifty.

The program can be given very effectively without the picture but we hope every school will use the picture and will then have it framed for hanging on the walls of the Bible School room. It is exceptionally beautiful and impressive.

In Schools where a shorter and less elaborate program for Easter is desired, this same program, "The Hope of the World," may be used with some parts omitted in order to give it the desired length. A sample of the program and supplement will be sent upon request. It is requested that three cents in stamps be enclosed with requests for sample.

CHRISTIAN BURIAL OF A NATIVE CHILD.

One of our Christian girls in Africa was enjoying her first little baby, about four months old. One day her husband came and said that the child was very sick. As they lived near Lirhandia, mother and I went to their hut and found the child suffering with a very hard cold. In spite of all we could do it died after four days. The burial was to be at the home of the parents of the young mother. This was where the child had been born and was about two miles away.

Mother and I started to the funeral through the winding native paths of the bush but came to a stream which we could not cross without getting in the water. We sent a little lad back to Lirhandia to call some of our larger native boys to come and carry us across. We waited a long time and began to think they would never come, but at last they arrived.

We showed them how to join their hands and make a seat between themselves, and then I laughed to see mother with one arm around each boy's neck as they carried her across. One good strong boy picked me up and carried me on his shoulder and put me down on the opposite bank, saying (in the vernacular), "You are n't heavy."

It is customary to wail at burials, and those who wail the loudest show the most sympathy. The noise is sometimes almost deafening and the antics of the people are grotesque. Of course the Christian natives are now learning to express their sorrow more moderately.

We went into the hut and tried to comfort the mother who was sitting beside her dead baby and weeping. Presently the grave was ready and all went outside. As we stood around the grave the Christian boys conducted a short song and prayer service instead of leaving all to be the ordinary heathen confusion. Mother spoke briefly about the redemption of the little one through Jesus, and assured the bereaved mother that her child was safely housed in heaven with its Savior, where she would again see it if she continued to follow the Lord.

We had supplied some white cloth to wrap around the baby, and the parents placed a few African cents in the baby's hand which they said had been given to it for its very own.

The dirt was filled into the grave amidst a good deal of wailing and demonstration by the non-Christian relatives and friends. We bade them goodbye and returned home.

LEONA MAY HOLE.

TWENTY-FIVE MILES ON HORSEBACK.

Sylvester Jones and Clarence G. McClean returned to their respective stations in Cuba early in March after more than a month's absence on account of attendance upon the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America in Panama and the regional conference which was held shortly after at Havana.

Sylvester Jones writes of the interest which some of the Cuban people have shown in these conferences: "I feel that in Cuba there is a new awakening to a sense of our united responsibility in evangelizing this country. As an indication of the interest taken in this movement by the people themselves, two of our members rode on horseback about 25 miles for the sole purpose of hearing me give my report in our church last night of the two meetings. They reached here just in time to attend the meeting and the same night rode back to their homes. Another member also came an equal distance on the train for the sole purpose of hearing the report."

What will you do to honor this Christ who hath thus honored you? How should you endeavor to serve him on earth, who indeed serves you in heaven? He provides for your safety and comfort; provide you for his glory. —Thomas Hooker.

THE IOWA PAGE

EVANGELISTIC DEPARTMENT.

The Evangelistic Committee of Iowa Yearly Meeting was called to meet in Des Moines during the time of the Laymen's Missionary Convention. After the transaction of the business for which the committee was called, Harry R. Keates, General Superintendent of Pastoral and Evangelistic Work, in a few brief sentences, expressed his thanks to the committee for their faithful support and the loyal way they had stood by him in all his undertakings, during the years he had filled the place as superintendent, and then tendered his resignation to take effect at Yearly Meeting, at which time he expects to again enter pastoral work as the Lord may see fit to direct.

The Evangelistic Committee feels it due Harry R. Keates that they express their appreciation of the faithful service he has rendered since he was called to this work in September, 1911, at which time after much prayer the committee unanimously believed that it was the mind of God to call him to the superintendency.

With the church he was then serving loath to release him, he entered upon his new duties with the same earnestness and zeal that had characterized his pastoral work and is now closing his fifth year of hard and faithful service rendered to Iowa Yearly Meeting, thinking only of how he might best serve the church in the place to which it had called him.

EVANGELISTIC COMMITTEE.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT.

Five of the Bible Schools of Salem Quarterly Meeting have special Missionary Superintendents who are doing much along the lines of missionary instruction in the regular Bible School periods from time to time. They realize that the place to begin in the creating of missionary interest is with the boys and girls.

Special Missionary Conferences were recently held at Salem, Cedar Creek and Stockport. Ora W. Carrell gave a missionary address at Stockport on Sabbath morning, March 5, taking as his theme: "The Significance of the Present Missionary Situation."

Eighty-five people sat down to lunch at the meeting of Friends present at the denominational rally of the Laymen's Missionary Convention at Des Moines, February 22. All the Quarterly Meetings were represented but two, Minneapolis which place had a similar Convention a short time ago, and Winneshiek with its scattered meetings in Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The enclosed Follow-Up program was adopted with exception of Section 4. In place of that it was resolved in the Missionary Committee meeting held that same afternoon that the week ending with Easter, April 23, be set apart for self-denial and that a united effort be made to raise the amount due American Friends Board. Nine members out of ten were present at this Committee meeting and plans were discussed relative to the work and its adequate support. Ora W. Carrell is doing efficient service in the various meetings he has visited and we trust interest in missions may be increased as well as offerings for the support of the work.

PEACE DEPARTMENT.

Bear Creek Quarterly Meeting has shown some activity of late in Peace work. The subject of letters to Congressmen which had been under way was given impetus at Quarterly Meeting held at Canby in November, by discussion on the subject, and an address on the Kingdom of God and War. Four monthly meetings addressed letters to the two senators and the representative from their district requesting them to use their influence and vote against increase in armaments. Many personal letters were also written, some being sent to President Wilson.

By invitation, Alvin Hoskins, pastor of Friends meeting, Richland, Iowa, and chairman of the Peace Committee of Iowa Yearly Meeting, gave four lectures within the limits of the Quarterly Meeting at Earlham and Bear Creek in the country where Friends meetings are located, and at Dexter and Redfield, where there are no Friends meetings.

The report of the lecture at Earlham, as given by a local paper, will answer for all, as the same subject was used at each meeting.

Alvin Hoskins, of Richland, Iowa, was greeted by an audience numbering about 150 at the Friends church Tuesday evening when he lectured upon the subject of "The European War and International Peace." His lecture and the hundred stereopticon views with which he illustrated it were highly interesting, and even more so was his forceful personality. "Deeply in earnest in his denouncement of war and militarism, he likewise impresses you as a man that is going to make some progress in suppressing these great evils of modern times. Alvin Hoskins challenges the "Preparedness Program" with unmistakable emphasis. He points to the facts that preparedness, which he declares is synonymous with militarism, has always been followed by war in the world's history. He argues that the amiable relations of the United States and Canada in a period of over one hundred years have been made possible by the fact that their 4000 miles of interlying boundaries have not been strewn with bristling fortifications with their consequent moral effect upon the neighboring countries.

The speaker places the responsibility for the Preparedness movement in a three-fold quarter. First the selfishness of the manufacturers directly to be benefited by war, the munition, powder, steel, etc. makers, whose wealth has lately been increased by no less than 700 millions as the result of the European war. Second, the press of the country, whom he asserts have unscrupulously upheld the military program because it would react to their financial advantage in the way of increased circulation, etc. Third, the military party themselves, from the selfish motive of the gain they expect to derive from the establishment of a military policy in the United States.

At the conclusion of his lecture Alvin Hoskins displayed about a hundred photographs with an excellent little electrical projector which he carries with him. These included photos of the European rulers, war lords, battle scenes, reproductions of the suffering and devastation wrought by war, and finally a series of symbolical pictures representing "The Rock of Ages." In the latter influence alone does the speaker hope to find relief from the sanguinary spirit of war which seems to be a fatal heritage of the human race. Not in militarism, nor in a great navy or the muzzles of sixteen-inch guns ranged along our seacoast, but the spirit of humanitarianism found in the pages of the Bible and the teachings of the Savior.

C. E. DEPARTMENT.

Our Field Secretary reports that there are fifty-three societies in our Yearly Meeting Union. As nearly as can be estimated at present there are 1300 members. Since Yearly Meeting two Societies have been reorganized and six new ones have been formed.

Isn't that a pretty good report?

Our treasurer does not tell us such encouraging things. We pledged $1,100 for this year's work. To date we have paid $285.18, leaving $814.82 unpaid. Surely we shall rally to our work better than that. If you have collected money for this work please send it at once to Cassa Conover. If your Society has not yet made any effort to raise its share of our budget, will you not please "get busy"? Our Mission Board is depending on us and we surely will not disappoint them. To send the money in monthly installments is a very satisfactory plan for then our treasurer can make monthly payments to the treasurer of the Mission Board. Let's boost this hard—our year is half gone!

It is not too early to begin to plan for the Young Friends Conference at Cedar Lake, Indiana, August 4-13.

Can't Iowa send at least one delegate from each Quarterly Meeting?

Go to Cedar Lake, Indiana, August 4-13!

FIELD NOTES

Des Moines—The Brotherhood of the Friends Church at Des Moines held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, March 14. The wives, sisters and friends of the members were invited to meet with them. They met at 6:30 o'clock and a bountiful supper was served. Immediately following, the delegates who attended the Laymen's Missionary Convention in Des Moines, gave interesting accounts of what they heard at the Convention. May Comfort gave a splendid address on "A Woman's Impression of the Conference." M. Emma Newby gave an interesting talk on the different phases of Missionary work. Richard R. Newby presented a chart showing different church activities, after which the business session of the Brotherhood was held.

Minneapolis, Minn.—At the March meeting of the "Quaker Round Table," Everet Doherty spoke on "The English Friend in War." This was the second of a series of meetings, dealing with various activities of Friends. In April Howard Stout will discuss "The American Friend in War."

The Christian Endeavor monthly business meeting and social for March was the occasion of an unusual and delightful gathering. A splendid supper was given at the meeting house crowned by a surprise birthday cake for our minister, Samuel Haworth. This was followed by a short program, expressing the meeting's appreciation of Mr. Haworth and his work in Indianapolis. After a pleasant social hour, the remainder of the evening was devoted to a prayer service, as this was the evening for beginning the cottage prayer meetings in connection with the "City Wide Evangelistic Mission." The Endeavorers are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking, as a more pleasant or profitable event could hardly have been planned.

THE INDIANA BIBLE STUDY PLAN.

A few days ago a concerned Friend of Western Yearly Meeting asked me what had become of the Indiana Bible Study Plan and indicated that a good many persons were ignorant on this question and would appreciate a statement in The American Friend regarding it.

In response to this evident demand, I may say that a joint committee of the Association of English Teachers and the High School Section of the State Teachers' Association has prepared a syllabus for Bible study. This syllabus is published by the Echo Press of the Shortridge High School of Indianapolis and may be had for ten cents per copy or for less in quantities. It outlines four courses of study, two in the Old Testament and two in the New Testament, any one or two of which may be taken for high school credit. In case the authorities of the high school wish to adopt this syllabus it may be done by notifying the State Board of Education of their desire. When a high school has complied with this regulation it may then announce that the students may take the work with a view of securing elective credit. Examinations are provided by the committee referred to above and are set at stated times.

It is a pleasure to report that some twenty-five or thirty high schools in the State are already using this plan with satisfactory results. The Richmond High School is leading all others in enrollment, there having been nearly 400 copies of the Syllabus taken out in this city. Evansville is a pretty close second and has classes conducted by representatives of numerous Protestant churches and also one Jewish class and one Catholic class. Jews and Catholics are participating in the work also in Shelbyville. By means of the system the teaching is done by the religious leaders themselves. Classes have been organized in the Friends churches of Richmond and also are organized in some other places, and Friends everywhere should take a lively interest in this work. Full information may be obtained from Supt. E. L. Rickert of the Connersville public schools, who is chairman of the committee in charge.

Very sincerely,
ROBERT L. KELLY.

NEWS NOTES

Charles M. Woodman, of Portland, Me., who with his wife spent March 19 at Richmond, Ind., preached at West Richmond Meeting, morning and evening.

Philadelphia Friends are in a well organized campaign to raise $50,000.00 as an addition to the endowment of their negro mission school at Christiansburg, Virginia.

Harry R. Keates has resigned his position as Superintendent of Evangelistic and Church Extension work of Iowa Yearly Meeting, to take effect the first of September. A communication from the Evangelistic Committee concerning it will be found on the Iowa page.

President Robert L. Kelly of Earlham College has recently been chosen President of the Indiana Branch of the American School Peace League; Director of the Religious Education Association; member of the Executive Committee and Chairman of the Committee on Religious Education in the Public Schools of the Council of Church Boards of Education in the United States of America, and a member of the Executive Committee, and Chairman of the Committee on Academic Freedom and Academic Tenure of the Association of American Colleges, of which he has just served his second term as President.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

The American Bible Society is to celebrate the centennial of its existence in May. Friends having been asked to co-operate in this gathering, the following persons have been named by the Executive Committee of the Five Years Meeting to represent them in this capacity: Joseph John Mills, William C. Taber, Willard, O. Trueblood, Lindley D. Clark and Edmund Stanley.

If Christ taught one thing more clearly than another, it was that man should be brought face to face with God, and that nothing was grand in character except what grew out of the love and fear of God.—W. L. Watkinson.

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

NOTICE.

Study Classes.

Peace study classes should either take up the regular Christian Endeavor meeting with the beginning of this month or change to the Study of Quakerism. The Outline Studies in Quakerism by Charles Woodman have been prepared and are now on sale in the Young Friends office at two cents per copy.

This is an excellent course based upon the book, "Present Day Message of Quakerism," price $1.00. The book contains four chapters of thirty pages each. It is written from the most recent points of view and attempts to answer many questions as to what Friends believe today.

Emmott's Story of Quakerism is a larger book, but is most entertainingly written and will be found to supply great inspiration to any group of young people. It is priced $1.25 per copy. Outlines have been prepared for this book as well. They are priced five cents per copy. If study classes are to be started send us your orders at once. There should be many scores of these classes started throughout the United States and Canada within the next three months.

Christian Endeavor.

Let every Endeavor Society from this time on order all topic cards, C. E. Worlds, efficiency charts and other literature through the Young Friends Board. We have made arrangements with the United Society to get our imprint on these things and receive a commission for the sales. Since the material will suit you as well and will help us out financially, please give us the benefit of your orders.

Every Endeavor Society should have an efficiency chart. Seven new Endeavor Societies have been started within the last month and a number of others have reorganized. Will your Society take on new life as well? Call your executive committee together and go over the whole situation relative to the spring campaign. Perhaps your Society can head the list of revived, reorganized Societies. We wish to publish the leading Societies from time to time. Send us the name of your Society and what you are doing.

Enrollment Campaign.

Every young Friend in the United States and Canada should be enrolled in our directory. Send for cards at once. (Sample enrollment card).

Summer Conference.

Final plans for the Summer Conference at Cedar Lake, Indiana, have been arranged. Have you decided to attend? The dates are August 4-13. If you can't come help send a delegate. There is little question that this will be one of the most successful conferences held for Young Friends. We have more room, more recreation, more speakers, more unity of purpose.

News Bulletin.

Have you seen the News Bulletin? It is just off the press. It contains reports of Christian Endeavor Societies and other Young Friends organizations from all over the country. It has cuts and plans for the summer conferences, personal letters, suggestions for work and detailed outlines for the spring campaign. Send for a copy.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR APRIL 9.

Topic—"What My Denomination Expects from her Young People". Ps. 84:1-12.

The author of the eighty-fourth Psalm was probably a descendant of the Levites and, therefore, was especially fond of the house of God and its services. As he contemplates the beauty, dignity and sanctity of temple worship he grows eloquent, saying that he would rather perform the most menial task in God's house than to ride at the head of a victorious army. He says that it is as natural for one to want a church home as it is for the wandering sparrows and swallows to build nests and inhabit them.

When we consider the value of church affiliation can we say that the Korahite has overestimated the importance of this relationship? What does it mean to be a member of a church? What benefits do you derive from being a Friend? Could not all that the church claims to give be derived by one's own acts apart from church?

These questions have no doubt confronted many young Friends. Each has an answer. Becoming a member of a church means something more than receiving the right hand of fellowship and having one's name written on a church book. It means that one decides to link himself with that institution which endeavors to work out those ideals to which one has given allegiance. Instead of smothering one's ideals under a blanket of monkish selfishness, the church member discards all hindrances to the impact of God's grace upon his life. He plants his Christian aspirations in the seed bed of sympathetic endeavor that they may grow strong and bear fruit. Or to change the figure he becomes an enthusiastic team worker pooling his talents with those of his fellows to bring about the greatest results for God's kingdom. Church membership is both a giving and a taking process.

But what does it mean to be a Friend? First of all it means that one practices ideals. He does not belong to a negative institution whose main doctrine seems to keep aloft from other denominations. The Friend forgets about denominationalism in practicing those ideals for which the Society stands. As he holds up these he cannot but become conscious that he is practicing a code of life that is superficially understood by other communions. He will not, therefore, be critical but solicitous that they see the light whether they adopt the name Friends or not. What does it mean to be a Friend? It means that spirituality, pure, exalted and uncompromising, shall be the rule of life. The conversion experience will be transcended by a life renewed continually under an absolute practice of the presence of God in every act of life. It means that every person in the meeting not only has the privilege, but the obligation to carry the service. No man has more right than another to voice the will of God. The Society of Friends cultivates initiative among its members which makes it of inestimable value in spiritual development. It attempts to carry the Christian ideals into practice in politics, thus abolishing war, and international suspicion. It strives to bring all men regardless of creed or color, to a personal knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, and having done so to order their lives on the highest basis of spiritual practice.

To be a Friend means that one will not only support the local meeting and make its ideals felt in the immediate community, but that the district and national organization will be maintained that the whole world may know of our existence and beliefs. The American Friend, Yearly Meeting and Five Years Meeting officers should be not only encouraged but heartily supported.

ANNOUNCED ENGAGEMENT.

The engagement of William T. Boyce and Vera May Votaw, of Whittier, California, is announced. Mr. Boyce is a graduate of Guilford College and of Haverford and has an M. A. degree from Harvard. He was at the head of the History and Political Science Department of Whittier College last year and is now a member of the faculty of the Junior College of Fullerton High school. Miss Votaw will graduate from Whittier College in June.

Read the American Friend ads,

CHURCH AT WORK

Van Wert, Ohio—The revival campaign that has been in progress for the past seven weeks at the Friends Church in Van Wert closed March 19. The mighty spirit of prayer and the great power of Jehovah that has constantly prevailed during these meetings, did not abate in the least up to the very close. While no accurate account could be kept of the number taking a definite stand for Jesus Christ, at least one hundred or more took this stand. If numbers were counted as is done ordinarily in meetings of this kind, this would almost be doubled. The entire church has been strengthened and built up. The community for miles around has felt the power of this revival and eternity alone will be able to reveal the real results. Many have already given their names for membership in the church and others are planning to come in. Miss Brantingham, who has had charge of the music, has proven herself a very efficient helper and has now a place in the hearts of every one who attended the services. The church has already made arrangements to carry forward this great work and to assist all the new converts. At the present an evangelistic service will be held on Thursday evenings to be held in the auditorium with preaching by the pastor and special music by the choir.

Hesper, Iowa—Chas. E. Newlin delivered a Gospel Temperance sermon here, to a good-sized audience on Sunday morning, March 12. It was splendid and much appreciated. He gave an address at Highland Monthly meeting Sunday evening with apparent effectiveness. On Monday evening, March 13, he gave his regular lecture here at Hesper to a good-sized audience mostly composed of young people. His lecture was so clear, forceful and "understandable" and in every way so commendable that it won the approval of all.

Mullinville, Kansas—A two weeks' meeting has just closed at this place. Clyde W. Likes was the evangelist, assisted by the pastor, R. S. Burnette. Brother Likes' messages were clear and strong, were delivered with power and were sustained by the eternal Word. People came from miles around to hear his sermons. Definite results were obtained, with the church much strengthened and a serious religious sentiment prevailing generally throughout the community.

Denver, Colo.—The gift of the twentieth century to the Sunday School is the organized class. Denver is having an awakening along this line, and a campaign is on to install at least three organized classes in a hundred different Schools before Easter. Friends are not behind in this movement, and four classes have been organized and chartered—two of the teen age, and two adult classes, a men's class and a women's class. The latter class has an average attendance of eighteen, and is known as the "Friendly Workers," the motto being "A Stranger But Once." Mrs. Kenworthy is president of the class, Mrs. Lewis secretary, and Mrs. DeLong teacher.

Another department in our Sunday School which may be of interest is the "Mother's Department," which was organized for the mothers of the children of the Sunday School, to enable them to better understand and co-operate with the Sunday School in what it is trying to do. There are thirty-six members, and interesting meetings are held each month at the homes of the members. At these meetings the many and perplexing home problems connected with the moral and spiritual development and training of children, are considered.

Hadley, Indiana—Danville Quarterly Meeting was held at Hadley, Indiana, March 4, 5. We were favored with the attendance of the Yearly Meeting Superintendent, Enos Harvey, of Noblesville, Indiana. His messages on Saturday morning and evening were indicative of divine leadership and were greatly blessed of the Lord. He preached most helpfully at Danville on Sunday morning. John T. Hadley of Plainfield, Indiana, gave a very helpful message to us at that time. The interests of the kingdom we believe, are growing in our Quarterly Meeting, especially along missionary lines. Some of our people from each Monthly Meeting attended the Laymen's Missionary Conference at Indianapolis and will give reports of this great gathering at our local meetings. The interests of The American Friend were presented at the Sabbath School hour during the Quarterly Meeting and we believe it ought to be in many more homes than it is now.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

No Alum—No Phosphate

THE HORROR OF WAR.

Sarah M. Hadley, who is spending the winter with her daughter in Fargo, N. D., sends us the following from a North Dakota paper, which quotes Governor L. B. Hanna of that state concerning his experiences with the Ford party:

Questioned relative to the Ford peace party, the governor said, "I have no apologies to make for being a member of the Ford party. After two months in Europe, I am more than ever convinced that every effort should be made to restore peace in Europe. Conditions are indescribable in the warring countries. A visit to the hospitals in Germany is a horror never to be forgotten. There you see young men in the prime of life, the bone and sinew of the country, maimed and crippled for life. Some with jaws shot away, others groping about in blindness, hundreds without limbs, thousands with nose, or ears shot away. As I look back at it, it's a hideous nightmare, and I can't help but feel that our efforts were directed to the good of humanity and toward saving a continent, now in the throes and agony of the most horrible war the world will probably ever know.

"In Germany there is no such thing as crepe for a widow, there are no funerals, soldiers and officers being buried on the field. In less time than it takes to tell the story, as many men as there are people in our state have been killed, in one engagement.

"I saw one hospital in Berlin where 200 women gather every day to nurse babies, in an effort to stem the infant mortality rate."

In conclusion, the governor said, "If I was never an advocate of peace before, I most certainly am now."

RESOLUTIONS

By the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America.

The members of the Panama Congress on Christian Work in Latin America recommend:

I. That the Committee on Cooperation in Latin America be enlarged and reconstituted so as to consist of the following:

1. An American and Canadian Section composed of one representative of each mission agency of the United States and Canada which is sending and maintaining missionaries in Latin America, and of a number of coopted members not exceeding one-half of the number appointed as representatives of the various American and Canadian mission agencies of which coopted members at least one-half shall be delegates in attendance upon this Congress.

2. A European Section composed of one representative of each mission agency of Great Britain and of the Continent of Europe which is sending and maintaining missionaries in Latin America, and of a number of coopted members not exceeding one half of the number appointed as representatives of the various British and Continental mission agencies.

3. Ex officio members consisting of the Chairman and the Secretary of the committee or council representing the missions and churches of each country or group of countries in Latin America.

(Note: It is understood that the functions of the Committee are consultative and advisory, not legislative and mandatory.)

II. That there be an annual meeting of the American and Canadian Section, and also of the European Section.

III. That the American and European Sections of the Committee shall each have an Executive Committee numbering approximately one-third of the total membership of the Section.

IV. That the Executive Committee of each Section shall, as a rule, meet once each quarter to carry out the general policy and instructions of the Section.

V. Owing to the fact that the European missionary societies with work in Latin America have been unable to be as fully represented at the Panama Congress as would have been the case under normal circumstances, the perfecting of their part of the organization will obviously have to be deferred until such time as the conditions are, in the judgment of the European missionary leaders, favorable for such action. The Congress would, however, express the earnest hope that this indispensable cooperation on the part of the European mission agencies may be developed as rapidly as possible.

VI. That the American and Canadian Section should, as may be desired by the cooperating bodies, take steps promptly to give effect to the findings of the various Commissions in the light of the discussions of the Congress, so far as the cooperation of the missionary agencies of the United States and Canada is concerned.

VII. That the matter of ways and means of common action between the American and European Sections shall be worked out after the European Section shall have been organized.

VIII. That the ex-officio members representing the Latin American committees be regarded as eligible to attend the meetings of both the American and European Sections.

A PRAYER WEEK.

A Week of Prayer, preceding Easter, has been arranged by the Federal Council of Churches, with a comprehensive and elaborate program. All local meetings in all denominations are asked to observe this ar-

GIRLS' DRESSES.

We accept orders for these Dresses with the understanding that if not satisfactory in every way they can be returned at once and your money will be refunded.

KM 44103—Girls' Dresses of pretty plaid gingham with pink, blue or brown the predominating shade—a serviceable Wash Dress for school and general wear. Made with hemstitched collar and cuffs of white drill; broad button-trimmed panel down the center of the front. Gingham belt; full plaited skirt finished with deep hem. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Price, postpaid. $1.00

KM 44123—Practical and unusually attractive is this Gingham Wash Dress for girls 8, 10, 12 and 14 years old. The waist of plain blue or pink material is a jaunty Russian blouse with collar, cuffs and belt of striped gingham. The full plaited skirt of pink-and-white or blue-and-white striped gingham is attached to the waist and finished with a deep hem. Price, delivered postpaid $1.50

Mention The American Friend.

Strawbridge & Clothier

Philadelphia.

rangement in memory of "His last week." On April 16, pastors are asked to preach on the "King of Kings and His Kingdom in Its Growth and Glory"; April 17, "Thanksgiving and Cleansing"; 18th, "Authority and Courage"; 19th, "Loyalty and Unity"; 20th, "Heart Searching and Consecration"; 21st, "Sacrifice and Service"; 22d, "The Kingdom and Its Triumph"; 23rd, "Sermons on the Resurrection."

Pastors can obtain these programs in full in quantities at 50 cents per one hundred copies, by addressing Charles S. McFarland, 105 East 22d Street, New York.

Southland College

— WANTED —

TWO YOUNG MEN TEACHERS,
Principal and Manual Training
At Southland, Arkansas.

—:—

A SCHOOL CONDUCTED BY
INDIANA YEARLY MEETING.
OF FRIENDS.

For information write H. C. WOLFORD, President, Southland, Phillips Co., Arkansas, or EDWARD BELLIS, Cor. Sec., Richmond, Ind.

THE CHRISTIANSBURG INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE.

The Christiansburg Industrial Institute, a school for training negroes, located in Southwest Virginia, is the last of a system of schools formerly maintained by the Friends Freedmen's Association of Philadelphia. It was founded in 1866 by Captain Chas. S. Schaeffer, a consecrated Christian white man who was placed in charge of the Freedmen's Bureau for the western section of Virginia.

The Friends' Freedmen's Association made its first contribution to the school in 1869, finally taking over the entire management and maintenance, under whose efficient guidance it has developed from a little one-room shanty to an institution having 185 acres of land, ten buildings, which with equipment, etc., is now worth over $75,000. During its existence the school has trained thousands of negroes and as a result the colored people of the entire southwest section of the state have a generally good reputation for good character and habits of industry.

The school is in two sections—one a primary and intermediate, which is the only public school of the district, to which the county and state contribute, and the industrial school, located on a farm about a mile from the town, where the advanced English branches are taught and the following industries: Farming, Carpentering, Printing, Blacksmithing, Shoemending, Sewing, Cooking, Millinery and Laundering.

Thirteen teachers are employed, six men and seven women, and there is an enrollment each year of between 260 and 280 scholars, all of whom receive some hand training.

The institution is maintained largely by voluntary contributions, and unlike most schools for negroes in the south, the funds are collected by a Philadelphia business man, a member of the Society of Friends, who gives this much time free, so that the Principal can give his whole time to work at the school. There have been only two principals since 1896, both Tuskegee graduates—one is buried at the school and the other was a teacher under him for eight years prior to his death in 1906, and has been principal since that date. The faculty of thirteen has been employed an average of seven years.

In order to lighten the burden of the treasurer and to give that degree of permanence to Christiansburg which the character of its work deserves, a campaign is being waged in Philadelphia for an endowment of $50,000 in celebration of the 50th anniversary of the school which is in May of the present year. Solicitation is being made by ten committees of six persons each. While the storm-center of the campaign is in Philadelphia and vicinity, it is not confined to that section alone. Efforts are being made to reach a wide circle of Friends and to renew their interest in negro education, directing it along those practical lines which are being carried out so successfully at Hampton and Tuskegee.

The first in the field to render needed assistance to the emancipated slaves and for years following the close of the conflict, offering the only means which the freedmen had of securing any schooling in many sections of the south, it is but natural that the present generation of Friends should want to perpetuate in some substantial way the interest which their fathers and grandfathers took in colored people. It seems especially fitting that this interest should take the form of an endowment for the Christiansburg Industrial Institute, which is the only institution in the South devoted to negro education that is maintained and managed wholly by Friends.

The officers of the Board of Managers are: Isaac Sharpless, L.L. D., Haverford College, Pa., Morris E. Leeds, secretary, 4901 Stenton Ave., Philadelphia, and J. Henry Scattergood, treasurer, 648 Bourse Bldg., any one of whom will be glad to answer questions about Christiansburg and about the campaign that is now being waged in its behalf.

A Valuable Offer

"The Present Day Message of Quakerism," by Charles M. Woodman..$1.00
The American Friend (1 yr)..... 1 50

Total$2.50

Read This: The above valuable book will be sent together with each NEW subscription to The American Friend for one year for $2.00. Address

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

Richmond, Indiana.

PROMOTE PEACE by distributing America's cherished land mark post cards: Macy-Colby House, Golgotha Rock, Friends Meeting House, N. C., Stanton's Statue (Unveiling) four for five cents. Postcards containing essentials of Dick Military Law, five for 5 cents. C. E. Lukens, Marion, Ohio.

WANTED—A head janitor. Earlham College desires to employ a man who is competent and experienced to have general oversight of the janitor work of the college. A permanent position for the right man. R. L. Kelly, President.

Boosters for the Bible School

SUPPLY OUTFITS FOR FRIENDS CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS

The Bible School Board of the Five Years Meeting is organized to study and meet the needs of Friends Bible School work. Therefore we have a full line of exceptionally good school supplies. Tell us what you want for your school and we will promptly get it to you.

THE PENN QUARTERLIES

TEACHERS QUARTERLY, 56 pages, newly prepared. Single copy, 10 cents; in Clubs, 7½ cents per copy.

ADULT QUARTERLY, 40 pages; for all Adult Grades; all newly prepared. Single copy, 5 cents; Club rates, 4 cents.

INTERMEDIATE QUARTERLY, 48 pages. 5 cents per copy.

LESSON SHEETS. Same material as Adults. For Visitors and to replace lost Quarterlies. 2½ cents per copy.

CHILD'S LESSON LEAF, for Primary Classes. 5 cents per copy.

YOUTH'S FRIEND. An eight-page weekly for Young People. Single copy, 50 cents per year; club rates, 10 cents per quarter.

GRADED LESSONS. As prepared by the International Committee and adopted by the Five Years Meeting.

BOOST YOUR CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

Here's for a Greater Church, cards, 40 cents per 100.

Here's for a Greater Prayer Meeting, cards, 40 cents per 100.

Complete Monthly Meeting Record, as prepared by the Five Years Meeting, $2.00.

Booster Cards, 10 cents per dozen, 75 cents per 100.

Here's for a Greater Bible Class, cards, 40 cents per 100.

Birthday Cards, $1.00 per 100.

Cradle Roll Birthday Cards, $2.00 per 100.

Complete Home Department Outfit, $1.00.

Complete Cradle Roll Outfit, $1.00.

Friends Secretary Book for Sunday Schools, 50 cents.

Sunday School Collection Envelopes, 50 cents per dozen.

Sunday School Class Books; No. 1, for 14 names, 5 cents each; No. 2, for 20 names, 10 cents; No. 3, from 25 to 200 names, 15 cents each.

Address all orders to FRIENDS BIBLE SCHOOL BOARD, Fairmount, Ind.

LATEST FROM WASHINGTON.

Congress is now in the midst, at last, of consideration of "preparedness" measures, and at the Capitol every other interest has been set aside in order that legislation having to do with the military and naval establishments of the country may have right of way. The House of Representatives has for four days been wrestling with the formidable bill presented by the Committee on Military Affairs. As will have been learned from the daily papers by many Friends, this measure provides for an increase of 40,000, including the 20,000 already specially authorized on account of the Mexican trouble, in the standing army, bringing the total up to 140,000 in time of peace. Another of the bill's most important features is the section providing for federalization of the National Guard, as a substitute for the so-called continental army project recommended by ex-Secretary Garrison.

Before this is read the vote on the bill may have been taken. There seems to be every indication that it will pass. Many Congressmen were given opportunity in the general debate to express their views on "preparedness" in general and the House bill in particular. All shades of opinion were voiced from the straight-out disapproval of all militarism of Meyer London, the Socialist from New York, to the extreme demand of Congressman Gardner, of Massachusetts, for an army of 500,000 men and compulsory service. But the general feeling is that the Military Affairs Committee has successfully steered a middle course between the demand for no increase and the extreme "preparedness" programme. This was the statement made today by Congressman Warren Worth Bailey, of Johnstown, Pa., one of the most consistent and constructive opponents of any increase whatever in the military establishment.

While the House of Representatives is giving its attention to the army bill, the Senate is today considering a feature of the Administration naval programme. This measure has for its object the elimination of private profit in the manufacture of armor plate by the establishment of a government plant for this purpose. It was known that this bone of contention was to be transferred from the Naval Affairs Committee to the floor of the Senate today and there was an unusually full attendance of Senators. Senators Lodge, of Massachusetts, and Penrose, of Pennsylvania, were both back from political fence-fixing trips to their home states, and they did valiant work in opposition to the project for Uncle Sam to go into the business of making his own war materials, and incidentally put out of the armor making business the big steel plants.

The struggle over the big and most serious problem of "preparedness" has just begun in Congress. While the people of the country have been frightened by the very persistent and well organized propaganda of the militarists, it is quite plain here in Washington that the efforts of the "anti-preparedness" forces have not been fruitless. Every member of Congress has heard from his constituents in greater or less number and the fact that an extravagant army bill was not reported to the House by its Military Affairs Committee is evidence that an anti-military voice from "back home" has been plainly heard.

But the work is not finished and no Friend who really values his cherished principle of brotherhood and fair dealing can afford to put off another day the duty of communicating in a personal way, by letter or telegram or visit to Washington, with his representatives here. So far only one of the actual "preparedness" bills has been taken up. The Friends of the country still have time in which to help greatly in moulding the opinions of their neighbors and through them the national legislators on this matter that has such a vital bearing upon the future of our nation.

Friends Peace Headquarters, Washington, D. C.

POSITION WANTED. Companion-nurse to semi-invalid or elderly lady, or will assist with management of a home. Refined capable woman desires position in Philadelphia or suburbs. Highest reference. Address W, American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

WANTED—At Ramona, San Diego County, Calif., a pastor for a Friends Church of about one hundred members and able to only pay a small salary. Ramona is a mountain town or village 1450 feet above sea level, is 39 miles from San Diego and has as good a climate for all the year around as can be found in California. Address Mrs. S. E. Janeway, Clerk of M. & O. Body.

Patronize the American Friend advertisers.

The American Friend Book Department

The American Friend is arranging to handle books, booklets and pamphlets which will be of general interest to Friends in America. Arrangements have already been made with the John C. Winston Company of Philadelphia, Friends Book and Tract Committee of New York City and the United Society of Christian Endeavor to receive orders for their publications. We hope soon to make similar arrangements with other houses, so that in the near future orders can be sent to us for practically any book that will be of general interest to our membership.

Some Suggestions in Books

The following books together with many others can be secured by sending your orders to this office. In this way you will be helping The American Friend.

Barclay's Apology, by Robert Barclay.....	$0.70
Beginnings of Quakerism, by William C. Braithwaite.....	3.20
Bright, John, The Life of, by G. M. Trevylan.....	4.70
Christ and War, by William E. Wilson, cloth, $0.70; limp.....	.50
Christian's Secret of a Happy Life, by Hannah Whitall Smith.....	.35
Decisive Hour of Christian Missions, by John R. Mott.....	.60
Dymond on War, Introductory Words by John Bright.....	.25
Dynamic Faith, by Rufus M. Jones.....	1.00
Fox, George, by Henry Stanley Newman.....	1.50
Fox, George, by R. M. Jones, two-volume edition.....	4.25
Student edition (same author), one volume.....	1.65
Friends and the War, Proceedings of Llandudno Conference, 1914....	.55
Fry, Elizabeth, Life of, by Georgina King Lewis.....	1.20
Gurney, J. J., Life of, by J. Bevan Braithwaite.....	1.50
Grellet, Stephen, Life of, by William Guest.....	.75
History of Friends in America (Revised edition), by Allen C. Thomas	1.15
No Cross, No Crown, by William Penn.....	.70
Quaker Apostle, (In Memoriam of John T. Dorland), by W. K. Baker	.85
Quaker Diary in the Orient, by William C. Allen.....	1.00
Quaker Experiment in Government, by Isaac Sharpless (illustrations)	2.25
(Without illustrations).....	1.50
Quakers, The Rise of, by T. Edmund Harvey.....	.75

The above are only a few of a long list of publications which can be ordered at any time. Send your order with remittance to

THE AMERICAN FRIEND,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON.

APRIL 9.

Subject—Aeneas and Dorcas.

Lesson—Acts 9:22-43.

Golden Text—In all things show thyself an ensample of good works—Titus 2:7.

The advance of the Christian Church into the territory around Jerusalem seems to have been quite rapid. Verse 31 of the lesson chapter asserts that groups of Christians were to be found throughout the three divisions of Palestine, Judaea, Samaria and Galilee. Jesus' ministry had prepared this soil and now the active service of the first Christians was accomplishing definite results. We have no records from which we can glean figures indicating the number of believers, but they must have been numerous. It seems that Peter had been for some time on a tour of ministry among these groups when he at last arrived at Lydda, a village in the former Philistine kingdom.

Aeneas, whom he met there, is "a certain man", evidently just a man of the common people. One of the most significant facts of Christian missions is that the church has been most successful when it has carried the message to the people. The accomplishments of Jesuit and Protestant missions in the East offer us a striking contrast in methods. The Jesuits were recruited at that time very largely from the nobility of Europe, and when they entered the eastern field as missionaries they sought first to win the ruling class, and for a time succeeded, but sooner or later largely failed. The Protestants on the other hand, under such leaders as Carey went to the people and the results are in marked contrast with the Jesuits.

We have here two incidents in which Peter figures as the instrument by which two people are restored to health. The early Christians firmly believed in the miraculous influence of the name of Jesus in just such cases as these. The pages of early Christian literature record large numbers of them, some of which it must be said, are very unbelievable, for instance a chariot race is won not far from Joppa, because it was blessed by a saint in the church. The author of Acts however sought to include only those incidents which he considered genuine, but these accounts show us how firm was the belief in the wonder working power of the new faith. In our age we do well to hold the remaking of character more to be desired than any such demonstrations in the physical world.

Dorcas had a reputation to be emulated. She proved her faith by the things which she did. When she was gone her friends had about them the evidences of her good will. Her life was not one of empty platitudes and pretty sayings. The more one studies modern Christian living the more one is likely to be convinced that much of our present Christian profession is as sounding brass and clanging cymbal. Those who enjoy their Christianity do so because they know the rewards of service. Those who are held by the

WANTED 50,000 FARM HANDS

of experience at once on the farms of
Western Canada

To replace the young farmers who have enlisted for the war. Good wages and full season's work assured.

There is no danger or possibility of Conscription in Canada

References required from all applicants For special railway rates and other information apply to community in which they live to be worth while are those who are rendering actual service—they are making real contributions to the community welfare.

G. W. Aird, 215 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

BOOKS RECEIVED

Students of Asia, The. By Sherwood Eddy. New York: Student Volunteer Movement; pp. 223, 12 mo.; fully indexed; 16 illustrations; Cloth, 50c., prepaid.

There is an oft-repeated dictum that "as its students go, so goes the nation." If this is true of ordinary times, how startling is the truth in extraordinary times when the nation is at the parting of the ways. Fletcher Brockman cabled to a recent student gathering in North America: "God has melted the Old China; who will mould the new?" Not China alone, but all the nations of Asia are now ready for the hands of moulders. A continent is in the melting pot. It is the student classes of the Orient who tomorrow and the day after tomorrow will settle great issues on which the fate of Occident and Orient alike is waiting.

What kind of young men and young women are these students? What are their capacities? How are they conditioned? How do they live? What are their social enjoyments and their athletics? How are they related to the present-day social reforms and political reconstructions of the East? What is their curricula and of what quality are their institutions? What are their moral problems and their religious beliefs? Are they accessible to the message of Christianity? What agencies are working for their betterment? How may Western Christians help?

These questions are immensely interesting and are of vast significance. And perhaps there is no one in East or West who can answer them with greater intelligence or more sympathetic insight than Sherwood Eddy. Out of a rich experience and with fine discrimination he has prepared the material for this volume. He has written it immediately on his return from the remarkable evangelistic tour through Eastern Asia which has aroused the enthusiastic attention of Christian leaders throughout the world.

NOTICE.

Semi-invalid desires correspondence with some other women Friends. Address M. B., Lock Box 523, Danville, Indiana.

GOOD HOME WITH WAGES for Suitable Woman Friend.

A housekeeper is needed in Thomas D. Hubbard's home at Kimball, Kansas, a railroad village 113 miles south of Kansas City. Handy modern home with hot and cold running water; bath room on first floor; toilet on first floor and second floor. A woman not over 40 preferred. The office woman besides yourself and only one man besides Mr. Hubbard to cook for. No children. You don't need to step down or out of the house for fuel or rain-water; all on same level as kitchen. Mention references in your application. As to Friend Hubbard, he is well known in Columbus, Ohio, Richmond, Indiana, Chicago, Oskaloosa, Kansas City, Topeka, Wichita and Whittier. Good Friends Church and three other churches for you to attend.

DIED

Cook—Ella C. Cook, wife of Willis R. Cook, was born in Erie County, Ohio, May 22, 1874, and died at her home near Adrian, Michigan, February 2, 1916, aged 41 years, 8 months and 10 days. She was converted in early childhood and united with the Friends' church, later she consecrated herself to God and obtained the baptism of the Holy Ghost. In 1894 she married Willis R. Cook, a minister of the gospel, with whom she faithfully labored in pastoral work for nearly fourteen years in Indiana and Western Yearly Meetings. For a little more than a year she has suffered with a cancer, during which time she twice had it removed and then fell asleep in Jesus, leaving her husband, two sons and brothers and sisters.

Ferguson—Carver Ferguson was born in Tippecanoe County, Indiana, January 1, 1843, and died at his home near Marshalltown, Iowa, February 3, 1916, aged 73 years, 1 month and 2 days. He was converted in young manhood and joined Friends more than thirty-five years ago. Funeral services were conducted at the LeGrand Friends Church in charge of the pastor, J. R. Wright.

Gooding—Josephine Gooding, daughter of Stanley and Esther Gooding, died Feb. 18, 1916, aged 18 years. She was a consistent Friend, giving clear testimony of an abiding peace in God. She was so unselfish, so capable, so faithful at home, church and school. Funeral services were conducted at the Orange Church, Ohio, by John Pennington.

Hobson—George W. Hobson, son of Stephen and Edna Hobson, was born in Yadkin County, N. C., September 7, 1850, and died at San Jose, California, January 6, 1916, aged 65 years, 3 months and 30 days. He was a birthright Friend and converted in early life. He married Martha S. Williams in 1869. In 1870 he moved with his family to Santa Clara County. He had made his peace with God. He leaves a widow, three children, two grandchildren, five brothers and one sister. Funeral services were conducted by Levi Gregory, who was his pastor for years.

Jenkins—Silas Newton Jenkins was born at Wilmington, Ohio, January 24, 1842, and died at Hot Springs, Arkansas, February 3, 1916. As a boy he lived with an uncle near Lewisville, Indiana, and also with his grandfather near Dayton, Ohio. At the age of nineteen he enlisted with the Federal forces and participated in General Sherman's historic march to the sea. He married Sophia A. Hall in 1868. He was a birthright Friend and a member of South Eighth meeting, Richmond, Indiana. For almost fifty years he had been engaged in the jewelry business in Richmond. He leaves the widow and one son, who is chief librarian at the Indiana State Library, Bloomington.

Jonathan—Edward Marshall Jonathan, infant son of Harry L. and Clara Simms Jonathan, died at Berwyn, Illinois, January 27, 1916, aged nearly two months. (Mrs. Jonathan will be remembered by many as Clara A. Simms, daughter of Richard and Florence Simms of Chicago.)

Note—Kirk Mote died near Laura, Ohio, January 31, 1916. He was a member of West Milton meeting, Ohio. He was ripe not only in age but in Christian faith. Funeral services were held at the Friends Church, West Milton, conducted by the pastor, John Kittrell.

Stewart—Mathew Stewart, colored, died at New Burlington, Ohio, February 16, 1916, aged 71 years. About 1872 he was married to Ellen Simpson. He was converted a number of years ago in a meeting conducted at Caesar's Creek by Esther Frame. A sister survives him.

Webb—After a brief illness, Elizabeth A. Webb, the beloved wife of William Webb of Sunbury, Ontario, Canada, died January 23, 1916, in her 71st year. She was a birthright Friend and for many years a faithful elder. Her faith in Christ and her exemplary life give abundant assurance to her many friends that she enjoys the presence of her Savior within the realms of the blessed. She was the mother of John R. Webb, well known to Friends both in Canada and in the United States.

FRIENDS MEETINGS

Stockton Avenue Friends Church, San Jose, California. Take Santa Clara Car to Stockton Ave., walk one-half block west. Visitors always welcome.

Washington, D. C. meeting house, 13th and Irving Streets, N. W. Bible School 9:45; meeting for worship 11 a. m., C. E. 7:30. Mid-week meeting Fifth-day, 7:45 p. m.

West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., Main and West 7th Street. Bible School, 9:00; meeting for worship, 10:30; vesper service, 5:00; C. E., 2:15. Prayer meeting, Thursday, 7:30.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½% FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books
The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.
Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, Incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ching China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.
Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.
Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.
Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for Wills
Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.
Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward
Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary

MATTHEW WALKER, Acting Mgr.
Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor
WILLIAM S. ASHBROOK, Agency Secretary

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 14.

FOURTH MONTH 6, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 14.

True Ministers

Have ye looked for the sheep in the desert,
For those who have missed their way?
Have ye been in the wild waste places,
Where the lost and wandering stray?
Have ye trodden the lonely highway,
The foul and the darksome street?
It may be ye'd see in the gloaming
The print of my wounded feet.

Have ye folded home to your bosom
The trembling, neglected lamb?
And taught to the little lost one
The sound of the Shepherd's name?
Have ye searched for the poor and needy,
With no clothing, no home, no bread?
The Son of Man was among them—
He had nowhere to lay his head.

Have ye carried the living water
To the parched and thirsty soul?
Have ye said to the sick and wounded,
"Christ Jesus makes thee whole"?
Have ye told my fainting children
Of the strength of the Father's hand?
Have ye guided the tottering footsteps
To the shore of the "golden land"?

Have ye wept with the broken-hearted
In the agony of woe?
Ye might hear me whispering beside you.
" 'Tis the pathway I often go "
My brethren, my friends, my disciples,
Can ye dare to follow me?
Then wherever the Master dwelleth,
There shall the servant be.—Exchange.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Didst Thou Know?

O Lord, when thou didst call me, didst thou know
My heart disheartened thro' and thro',
Still hankering after Egypt full in view
Where cucumbers and melons grow?

Yes, I-knew.

But, Lord, when thou didst choose, didst thou know
How marred I was and withered too,
Nor rose for sweetness nor virtue rue,
Timid and rash, hasty and slow?

Yes, I knew.

My Lord, when thou didst love me, didst thou know
How weak my efforts were, how few,
Tepid to love, and impotent to do,
Envious to reap, while slack to sow?

Yes, I knew.

Good Lord, who knowest what I cannot know,
And dare not know, my false, my true,
My new, my old; good Lord, arise and do,
If loving, thou hast known me so.

Yes, I knew.

—Christina Rosetti.

Every Family Should Have a Copy

The printed proceedings of the Men's Conference of Friends, held at Richmond, Indiana, last October, is a book containing a rare compilation of messages of peculiar value to all who are interested in the growth and welfare of the Society of Friends. It has been frequently remarked by many persons that this book ought to be in every Friend's library, and it certainly also should be in every local meeting, college and Bible School library. These addresses are not a series of discourses on methods or plans, but for the most part are real messages of power upon vital questions of particular importance to the welfare and upbuilding of the church of Christ in the world.

It is a book of 160 large pages, and can be secured by addressing THE AMERICAN FRIEND, Richmond, Indiana. Price, paper cover, 75 cents; cloth, $1.00, postpaid within the United States and Canada; add five cents for points elsewhere.

The Panama Congress

In connection with the account of the Congress on Christian Work held at Panama in February, which appears on a later page of this issue, we wish to draw the attention of readers of THE AMERICAN FRIEND to the fact that the three-volume report of this important Congress will be published within a few weeks, the regular price of which will be $2.50. All orders placed before the report is published will, however, be filled at the special rate of $2.00.

We feel sure that a large number of Friends will want to have a copy of this report, which will contain the full report of each of the Commissions appointed by the Congress and all of the addresses which were delivered. These three volumes will, therefore, be a most important contribution to the science of missions and will contain a wealth of information concerning the Latin countries of America. Orders may be sent to the office of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions at Richmond, Indiana, or may be sent direct to S. G. Inman, 25 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Protecting the Quaker Name

In face of the active opposition of the Quaker Oats Company and the Quaker Lace Company of Philadelphia to the bills designed to afford protection from commercial use to the Quaker name, it appears important that there shall be an additional expression of sentiment in behalf of these measures. The main point at issue is that the Quaker name, which has been bequeathed as a religious heritage, should be permitted to have a religious significance and not a commercial significance. Congress is being asked to choose between protecting a sincere body of religious believers in the use of a name by which Friends are commonly known among other people, and which in large degree they use themselves, and corporations which have no relationship to a religious propaganda and which are piling up profits, trading upon a name which has been stolen from a religious body without its consent.

The principal bill is H. R. 435, which intends to forbid shipments in interstate commerce of any article bearing the name of a religious denomination or Society or the name by which it is commonly known. This is now pending before the Judiciary Committee of the House as well as of the Senate. The time is at hand when Friends generally should address their Congressman as well as their Senators in behalf of this measure and also members of the sub-committee having it in charge, as follows. C. C. Carlin of Virginia, chairman; Joseph Taggart of Kansas; Warren Gard of Ohio; Richard S. Whaley of South Carolina; Andrew J. Volstead of Minnesota; John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, and Dick T. Morgan of Oklahoma.

The man who neglects his calling does not prosper. Therefore we should keenly feel the importance of knowing God's plan in our lives.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 14.

FOURTH MONTH 6, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 14.

The Gospel and Social Beneficence

There is a tendency in certain religious and even Friendly quarters, so amazing as to be well nigh unbelievable, to condemn movements designed to bring about moral reform and to promote civic and social betterment, as being works of the devil and out of harmony with the gospel plan of human redemption. To the extent that any propaganda of reform is sponsored by un-Christian advocates as a substitute for redemption through Jesus Christ, there may properly be occasion for concern on the part of defenders of the faith, but even here the dangers are minified by reason of the fact that when un-Christian men bear witness to the commanding value of righteousness as a vital element of human life, righteousness is doubly enthroned and its claims upon society and government are emphasized beyond dispute.

The facts of history, however, fully justify the claim that Christianity is the inspiration, the impelling incentive, the source of all modern movements for individual, social and world betterment, and neither non-Christian religion nor infidelity is entitled to credit in this direction. From the days of the early church, when the apostles, following the example of our Lord, had regard to the bodies as well as the souls of men, until now, social betterment has been the handmaid of the gospel and oft-times the forerunner of the messengers of truth to prepare the way of salvation, and they do violence to the teachings of Jesus and the evident purposes of the gospel, who confine them to dogmas of belief and chain them to the chariot wheels of credal philosophies and doctrinal pronouncements.

The forgiveness of sins finds its logical fruition in the transformation of character and outward deportment, but not infrequently the church and the allied forces working for human betterment must cut through a net work of evil influences and practices, and destroy the contamination of the saloon and vice and social and political oppression, before any adequate chance is afforded to reach multitudes of men and women with the saving truth of the gospel. Jesus, by his ministrations of human sympathy and compassion, through healing the sick, and opening the eyes of the blind, and making the lame to walk, and feeding the multitudes, and cleansing the temple, and pronouncing woe upon social and industrial oppression, showed how inseparably connected with the operations of the gospel is all work directed to human betterment and social and industrial regeneration. To what extent the appeals of the gospel ministry fall upon deaf ears in the labor world is known only too well, because the church has not been conspicuous in its efforts to remedy the wrongs and to palliate the sufferings of the working man. What will it avail to preach the gospel of salvation to the multitudes who are starving for bread and freezing from the cold because of the curse of the saloon, if the saloon is allowed to go on with its devastating blight, unrebuked and undestroyed through the inaction of Christian men and women? Is it of no concern to the church that multitudes are dying annually from want and misery and unwholesome and unsanitary living, without even a chance, because of their misery, to hear and practice the gospel?

The philanthropies and beneficence of Friends have always gone side by side with their proclamation of the gospel of salvation, the one as an aid and complement of the other, and we have not been able to understand the protests that have come, when in these columns we have endeavored to urge the claims of a gospel that was applicable "to every life and to all of life," nor can we understand the opposition to the work of social service and the classification of various works of beneficence and moral reform as being of the devil's authorship. God's exhortations are for cleanliness of life as well as cleanliness of soul, and the problem is changed in no essential respect when applied to the social, industrial and governmental forms of collective or corporate life. In more senses than one man is his brother's keeper—and helper. Ian Maclaren has said: "Be pitiful; every man you meet is fighting a hard battle." What would have been the estimate of Jesus upon the work of the Good Samaritan, if when he found the wayfarer wounded and half dead by the wayside, he had substituted a sermon for the good deeds actually performed in relieving the distress of the unfortunate victim? The act of mercy became a sermon in itself.

Religion is neither an article of cold storage to be kept under cover from Sunday to Sunday, nor is it a copyright possession to be enjoyed by a chosen few. If it is worth having, it must be exercised for the good of others, and God will not hold its possessor guiltless who withholds from others the measure of blessing which it is its characteristic to bestow. "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep oneself unspotted from the world." "Verily, I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me."

The Relation of the Society of Friends to Forms of Worship

By W. CARLETON WOOD

(About a year ago the Quaker Club of Hartford Seminary Foundation took for a study topic "The Spiritual Value of Water Baptism and the Lord's Supper for Christians not Friends." The study was made upon the basis of a Questionnaire, sent to about 400 non-Friends, replies being received from 116 of these. Out of this study has come the following paper from Mr. Wood.)

I. Why the Subject Is a Vital One

The writer grew up under the careful nurture of the Society of Friends, with practically no knowledge of other churches or of the ideals which shaped their historical development. What knowledge filtered through the natural and artificial barriers separating me from the great extra-Quaker, religious world, was naturally colored to harmonize with the ideals and conceptions of my Quaker environment. In the church of my birthright we kept no ordinances as the Christians of other churches did. "Why was this difference?" was the question which came to my young mind. The answers that were given me are too well known to Friends to be mentioned here; but let me say, however, that I accepted the Friends' position on the ordinance question, firmly believing that this was the only right one to accept. I never had a fair chance to hear the other side so as to get the point of view of the sacramentarian. In brief, I had no sympathy with the use of these forms in worship, and naturally looked upon Christians of other denominations than Friends as belonging to an inferior order. How unfortunate they were to be born outside of the Quaker fold, and with a bias to believe in such meaningless, dead forms! Such was the atmosphere of my boyhood and adolescent days.

I have given this picture of my early religious environment because I believe it to be identical with thousands of other Friends who have been brought up with almost no knowledge of religious thought outside of the Quaker clan.

After leaving college I found myself in a religious environment which was decidedly non-Quaker, since it was saturated with sacramentarian conceptions. At first my attitude toward the practise of the ordinances in the churches was one of tolerance, but gradually I came to see a value in using symbols in worship. I observed many a baptismal service, and sat in meditation through many a communion service, reflecting on what those forms meant to the participants. Contrary to my early-formed belief, I came gradually to see that Christians of other churches than Friends manifested the same sincerity and reverence in keeping these ordinances as ever my fellow Quakers manifested in the holiest moments of worship. Indeed, when I saw, at times, tear-stained faces rise from seat-backs after moments of prayerful meditation, I almost verged on the belief that the partaking of the elements in the communion service conveyed a mystical meaning to the worshipper which the Friends knew nothing about. I never for a moment imagined when I was following out of sympathy the road of religious symbolism, that there was any divine efficacy inherent in the elements themselves, nor do the majority of Protestants today so imagine; but I did wonder if these forms, which the Friends early tabooed, did not convey the truth of Christ's presence to the common, untutored mind better than merely abstract conceptions such as I had had presented to me all my life. The same question will arise in young Friends' minds whenever they come to breathe the air of the great religious world.

The question, "What shall be the attitude of the Society of Friends toward forms of worship?" is a momentous one, one which involves the stability of the very corner-stone of Quakerism. Shall the Society of Friends radically revise its ancient chart in accordance with the present-day maps of religious worship? From the facts tabulated from the questionnaire, from logical inferences drawn from them, and from a careful observation of the trend of thought in the religious world, we may, on the contrary, conclude that the old chart, like the constitution of our republic, is still the best to trust under all conditions; and that the unvarying needle, the Holy Spirit, ever perfectly supplements the chart to guide the Quaker church to its destined haven. The considerations which point to such a conclusion will herewith follow.

II. The Origin, Development, and Value of Ritual

Religious forms and ceremonies are the results and not the sources of spiritual life. This is a fundamental fact in spiritual religion, and particularly in the manner of worship for which the Friends have stood. It is a truth which most modern Christians will admit, but it is not likely to take form in a movement which, if it produced its legitimate fruitage, would lead to rational revision in the forms of worship of most modern churches. It is, however, a truth which the Society of Friends must jealously guard, if it fulfils its sacred mission in the world.

To bring this vital principle into clear relief, let me use an allegory. On the outer margin of the world of visible things in which man finds himself, is, as it were, a dense forest of mysterious reality—the spiritual world. This realm of mystery has ever challenged man's instincts to explore, for he has ever believed that beyond this screen lies the great Power, whom he has personified as God, who created and maintains life. For his own welfare, man has ever felt himself irresistibly driven to penetrate this mystery to make peace with his God.

It has been the blessed lot of a few select souls of the past to pass through the forest of mystery to the distant mountain summit of communion with God. These heroes of faith and men of vision have rendered a glorious service in pointing humanity on to God. Back from these explorations into divine mystery, these enraptured souls have come to persuade their fellows by the glow of their own personalities that the things which satisfy the soul in a changing world lie only beyond the confronting screen. They have thus for their fellows blazed the trails to the mountain of divine fellowship. These trails, at first blazed by the few exploring souls, gradually became well beaten paths as they continued to be trodden by the pioneers, by their fellows whom they persuaded to take them, by their children, and by subsequent generations—all seeking, some without success, others with success, the terminal vision. However, instead of these paths to vision remaining only as means to an end, the outward forms of religion became, to a large extent, the things of importance, even the ends in themselves. This tendency, throughout the course of Christian Church history, as well as that of other religious systems, to glorify the paths to divine communion, the means of worship, well accounts for the multifarious liturgies and forms of worship which are found today in the Christian Church.

Applying the allegory more specifically, the original trails blazed by pioneers who had a simple faith in Christ, have, in the liturgical churches, been multiplied almost to infinity; lengthened to extraordinary lengths; paved with marble mosaics; arched with domes and clear stories; studded with altars, fonts, pictures, statues, memorial windows, bronze tablets, and tombs; clouded with incense; made to resound with chants and traditional collects; and jealously guarded by a specially robed priesthood which pretends to guide seeking souls on to the now far-removed place of divine communion. Theoretically speaking, none of these forms exist for any other purpose than as means of worship, as paths to communion; but in the practical working out of the liturgical system, these paths to worship have become, for the large majority of people, the sole objects of worship.

This glorification of the ways that the souls have taken to find God is fully comparable, if not equal, to the elaborate system of the Mosaic ritual. This system Jesus declared to be passing to give place to the new order now coming with the establishment of the impending kingdom. Observe the words of Jesus: "Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when neither in this mountain (Gerizim, where you Samaritans worship God by rites and ceremonies prescribed in your sacred Pentateuch), nor in Jerusalem (where we Jews worship God by means of the pascal lamb, the altar, and all the elaborate ritual of the law) shall ye worship the Father. * * * But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipper shall worship the Father in spirit (as opposed to form, seasons, and priesthood) and in truth (as opposed to type); for such doth the Father seek to be his worshippers. God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship in spirit and in truth."

Jesus discloses a new conception in worship: namely, that God draws near to man. Hitherto the human side of worship was all that was known, which conception, alone, bears a luxurious fruitage of ceremonialism in any age and any clime. On the other hand, placing true emphasis upon the divine side of worship, the conception which Jesus disclosed, bears fruit in Pentecosts, reformations, and revivals. Both aspects of worship are needed to make the divine-human dialogue complete.

The new conception of worship which Jesus disclosed to the little group of disciples—that he in the Holy Spirit would be with them always—began to produce results on the day of Pentecost. After a prayerful waiting, undoubtedly without the use of forms of worship, they grasped the truth that their Master, now a discarnate spirit, was to be with them forever to empower them in all their undertakings for the kingdom. Here the soul-seeking God and the God-seeking soul met by faith in a profound, yet simple, fellowship without the use of ceremonial religion. By thus coming into vital experimental relations with Christ, their Lord, the early disciples blazed the trails for all subsequent Christians; but neither they, nor any other pioneer, God-seeking souls, intended that the trails, the means, should be glorified to a degree which is out of all proportion to the end of worship, the communion of the soul with God. The result has been quite the contrary from that which these trail-blazers intended, for as the centuries have rolled on the trails have been lengthened, multiplied, made more intricately winding; yet at the same time increasingly illuminated by the mystic glamor of tradition till the means have, for the majority of people, been too often substituted for the end, the form for real worship. In this way many souls, conscientiously following the roads to vision, have confused the glories of the paths with the terminal glory of fellowship with God. For example, the experience of spiritual enduement came to be formally expressed in water-baptism—a relic of Judaism; the old informal daily communal meal, in a ceremonial periodic sacramental imitation—the present-day Lord's Supper; inward repentance in outward penance; spontaneous outbursts of praise in formal chants and collects. Efforts have been made time and again, in the Protestant Reformation, and later, to clear the old trail to divine communion of traditional debris so as to make the way plainer and simpler for wayfaring souls; but these reforms have not always been thoroughgoing nor lasting—so fascinating has been the glow of the old path.

It cannot be successfully denied that the ritual of worship is of some value to a large number of people. The lure of tradition, the relics of the past, always possess in themselves a certain conserving value which tends to hold in check rash modern radicalism in any line. This is especially true in religion. Then, too these means of worship are indeed valuable to many earnest souls who succeed in getting through the intricacies of ritual to communion with God. The Questionnaire gives it as the experience of 76 per cent of those consulted that the Lord's Supper is a help to spiritual communion. It must be conceded, therefore, that all forms, whether in the extreme liturgical or the non-liturgical churches, possess a varying degree of value for the worshipper. The value which the worshipper finds in the forms of worship accounts, to a certain extent, for their rapid and extended development, and, at any rate, for their persistence in spite of reforming movements.

While the liturgical churches—and this will include most of them—have emphasized the value of the means of worship, nevertheless, it must be conceded that the more multitudinous the forms and intricate the means of worship the less are the chances for seeking souls to get through to divine communion. And, conversely, the more the soul refuses to take the paths of ritual with their too often bewildering turns, and goes directly, unaided by the commonly recognized means of grace, by the path of faith into the presence of the Eternal, the surer he will find the satisfying object of his yearning soul. To realize the truth of this assertion, one need only refer, on the one hand, to the Roman Catholic Church for the most extreme type of liturgical religion, and, on the other hand, to the Friends and similar sects, for the opposite, or non-liturgical religion. In the former the average worshipper is too often merely overawed and mystified by the form without getting any soul-vision to take with him into daily life; in the latter, the average worshipper, thrown upon his own resources, usually perseveres by force of will and power of faith to penetrate the veil into the holy of holies of divine presence. In the former, it is the wont of the worshipper to conceive of his religion in terms of a system of ceremonies, and to confine its hallowing influence merely to a certain place, namely, the church, and to a certain time, namely, the time of worship. In the latter it is the cherished ideal that hearts, wherever they are, whether in or out of meeting, are the sanctuaries of the Lord: with the practical result that religion is a dynamic of the soul and that all of life is sanctified. Religion thus is not confined to times and seasons: it finds expression in the whole life of man.

To appreciate fairly the good of the liturgical system, as opposed to the non-liturgical, it must be admitted that the former makes the most winning appeal to the large majority of humanity, or, in reality, to people in the lower levels of spiritual development. The conclusion to which this naturally leads, then, is that both types—with all the intermediate stages—are needed to subserve the spiritual needs of a humanity, varied in racial and individual temperaments, environed by different degrees of progress, and characterized by ascending scales of intelligence. And the final conclusion, in which we Friends are vitally concerned, is that the Society of Friends, in its inception and traditions, has stood, and, in its present polity, does stand for the non-liturgical, apostolic type of Christianity. On this as a fundamental truth we stand firm, believing that we stand for a truth which the world needs.

III.. The Opportunity for Quakerism

The next subject for consideration is: Is this a tenable position for the Society of Friends to take in this, the twentieth century? Do the Friends have a distinctively vital message to give to the world today?—a message which no other church can bear, or is at present bearing? This question has been admirably answered of late in the affirmative by Charles M. Woodman in his recent book, "The Present Day Message of Quakerism." I cannot presume to enlarge upon that splendid interpretation of the Quaker message. I can only add a few facts, relating particularly to the ordinances, which have been tabulated from the Questionnaire. The position that there is today an opportunity for the Society of Friends has, for our present purpose, strong support for the two following reasons:

1. The first reason is a recognition on the part of a majority of those responding to our Questionnaire, that lack of forms in public worship is not in the least going to affect the status of the Society of Friends. Only five per cent of the answers given attribute our decline of membership, or loss of former prestige, to a lack of form in worship; while only eleven per cent are bold enough to assert that our spiritual and moral standards have not been kept in their pristine purity. On the other hand, 22 per cent of the answers express the belief that some people, as the Friends, are, beside their early training, temperamentally opposed to forms of worship; and 40 per cent of the answers find grounds to account for Quaker prosperity in their type of formless, mystical worship. This nearly unanimous testimony of non-Quaker Christians should banish forever from the minds of Friends the insidious suggestion that our Society has suffered a spiritual loss in not observing these symbolic institutions. This percentage is, after all, very small as compared with the many doubts that have probably crept unobserved and unuttered into the minds of some of our Quaker ministers. On the other hand, it is reassuring to observe that 24 per cent of those answering recognize that these ceremonies, baptizing with water and administering the Lord's Supper, are non-essential, even detrimental, in helping the Christian to obtain the experience which these symbols are supposed to symbolize.

The fact was brought out by some of the prominent religious leaders consulted that the Quakers will prove their right to exist only on the basis of their giving a positive message of vital religion to the world. If the average Friend could only be inoculated with this important truth—which is already in the blood of some of our leaders—no one inside or outside of our Society would suggest any other remedy for vitalizing our Quakerism. A church faithfully giving forth a positive message must grow as sure as God and truth are eternal.

2. The second reason why there is an opportunity in the world for the Society of Friends is that there are at present, more than for centuries, visible signs of a movement away from ritualism toward less formal mystical religion. This fact is so clearly brought out by the answers received. And let it be recognized that these answers come from members of churches which have been from their inception strongly attached at least to these two ordinances in question. So strong has been the attachment for these now-recognized non-essentials of worship that not only the Society of Friends was born as a protest, but also sects were divided over what they conceived to be the true apostolic tradition relative to their proper observance. Observe too that the majority of Protestant Christians have long since ceased to hold the medieval notion that a divine efficacy is inherent in the elements; that a great many are seeing less significance than formerly in the idea that these ordinances should be kept to preserve the continuity of the historical church; and that a large majority are coming more and more to recognize that baptism and the Lord's Supper are merely optional means of grace of symbolic value. This is a big leap in the progress of thought among Christians from that of the age when the Society of Friends was born. Consider, in this regard, the testimony of many of those that responded to our request. The Lord's Supper for personal religion is regarded as having little value by 13 per cent, and as having no value at all by 11 per cent—24 per cent in all, of which 32 per cent (9 persons) are Christian workers. Finally 25½ per cent are indifferent to and 5½ per cent are opposed to the use of water in christening infants.

A Congregational minister of no small renown in New England confessed to me, that at times the communion service is repulsive to him, that he has sometimes felt like throwing over the whole symbolism and immersing his soul in a symbol-less fellowship with the Master.

Finally, to reveal more clearly the fact that Christianity is gradually drifting away from formal religion, it is worthy of note, as I am informed by an intelligent native Christian Hindu belonging to the St. Thomas Church, that the intelligent upper classes of India are leaning toward less formalism and ritualism in worship. My friend, a sacramentarian, deploras this movement, not willing to concede that possibly this is, as a Friend would interpret it, an expression in humanity of the voice of God.

IV. Conclusion

These facts and the obvious deductions from them all point to the one conclusion that "the field of the Quaker message" is white unto the harvest. They amply justify the vision that some have of a rejuvenated Society of Friends. "Air castles," some may say. Very well, then, let Friends respond to the task of putting foundations under them and connect them up with actual life. It is not enough that the Friends' Church glory in its past. Surely we will Honor the prophets whose mantles are left us!

Honor their memory dear to us so!
Honor the work wrought by spirits courageous!
Honor the Quakers of long time ago!

but let the glorying be in those essentials for which the Society has stood and can stand in the future. Let the Society of Friends declare through its prophets that a personal relation of the soul with its God through Christ is the one simple and essential condition of true worship. Let this message permeate the whole of our Society's life so that the worthless husks of religion will fall uncherished from the vital seed; that new meeting houses will be built before the old ones have been decorated with memorial windows, bronze tablets, and pipe organs; that choirs will be renewed before they have been vested and salaried; and that some lifeless local meetings be respectably interred before they have been doped with endowments. Such a message must necessarily come from flaming personalities, and being such, it will kindle flames of truth in other personalities. It will be a message which will emphasize first-hand, experimental religion, as opposed to a religion of second-hand realities, or of crystallized forms which so often prolong the road and obscure the way for the vision-seeking soul.

Congress On Christian Work In Latin America

Held at Panama, February 10-20, 1916.

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS

Representation

Forty-eight different organizations doing mission work in Latin America were represented. Two of these were British—all others American. There would have been a far greater European representation but for the war. Of those present, 230 were delegates, and 74 visitors; a total of 304. Of these again, 145 were from Latin America, 159 from other lands; 105 were women. Besides delegates, 177 visitors from Panama attended.

Personnel

Of the delegates, sixty or more were persons of national and international prominence. Of these, twelve were bishops of various Episcopal bodies.

There were many others equally prominent, representing non-Episcopal bodies. There was a group of laymen of prominence in the business world. These gladly provided most of the $10,000 budget of the Standing Committee on Co-operation for the coming year. Dr. Robert E. Speer presided. Dr. John R. Mott was chairman of the business committee.

Public Addresses

On Thursday afternoon, February 10th, a preliminary session was held at which Dr. Robert E. Speer gave an introductory address on the "Attitude and Spirit of the Congress," which proved to be the "Key-note" of the Congress. He said in part:

"As we come together in this Congress, it is with the assurance, resting on sufficient evidence, that we gather in unity of heart and with one single controlling purpose and aim. There is not one of us who has any other desire in his life than to do the will of God, and our one great longing is to see the Kingdom of God come in all of our American nations and throughout the world.

"The attitude and spirit which should characterize us in relation to this common purpose and the ideals of our gathering here, so long as we do not attempt to describe them, are, I presume, in their fundamental principles the same. Only when we attempt to describe them do we have misgivings and fears. And yet, after all, why should we have misgivings and fears? We are here simply as Christian brothers, who have the one desire to meet here with our Lord and with one another, and to confer together with regard to other brothers of our Lord and ours whom in His name we would desire to help. What could be simpler than such a purpose as this? And what more could it require of us than just that we should be true disciples of this Lord of ours?

"I shall never forget a speech made by a high school teacher in a city of Elloilo in the Philippines in a little gathering last July, in welcoming a company of us who had come to see mission work in those islands. He expressed the hope that those friends who had come should bring 'some sweet word from our dear Lord.' That ought to signify to us the abiding longing of our hearts always and in every place to hear again 'some sweet word from our dear Lord.' And I imagine there are many of us who would not have thought it worth while to come to this Congress at Panama, if we had not been assured that here from our Lord we should hear some one, at least, of His sweet words.

"Our attitude would be an imperfect one, and so far not a truly Christian one, unless in all the days of this Congress we abide in Jesus Christ—here in our discussion, alone, wheresoever we may go. In our social fellowship we have an opportunity and we may be sure of the summons from our Lord to pass forward into a really deeper and more vital experience of what life in Christ is meant to be.

"Our attitude and spirit, like the attitude and spirit of Christ, must be not only one of clear discerning of realities, but it must also be an attitude of love that many waters cannot quench, that nothing can defeat, that is stronger than death. By what else can we hope to do the work that waits to be done? Not only must our attitude be one of clear discernment and compassionate love; it must also be stripped of that selfishness which can only see from our angle of vision, which can only include our own particular brotherhood, which can only live by the light of our own tradition and experience. From these selfishnesses we must be liberated if we would pass out into the greatness of Christ, and be fitted to do His work in all these Latin American lands.

"I have no thought of evading the difficult question of our attitude and spirit toward what we believe to be error and falsehood. We would not be faithful disciples of Christ if we did not honestly try to see our whole task and all of its difficulties, and to lean upon Christ's help to enable us to cope with these in their darkest and hardest forms. Unless we are able to hate the thing that is false, how can we love the thing that is true? And yet, I have been wondering whether there is one of us that dare play with this fire? Is there one whose hand is so clean, and whose heart so pure, and whose whole life so fused with love that he dare take up in his hand the sword? Is there one who dares to do this in His presence who is perfect truth and love and lowliness? Is it too much to expect that the spirit of Christ can bring to us a clear, true mind during all the days of this Congress?

"If our faith is equal to it, we shall begin in the days of this Congress a new era for all the nations of North and South America. Dare we limit what God stands ready to do in these days and in the years that lie ahead? If only, as little children, we can have faith enough to make room for Him in our lives, and can lay aside the preconceptions with which we came, and the narrowing and hardening judgments, and approach our task and its problems with absolute openness and yielding throughout the days of this conference, who can fix boundaries to what Christ will do?"

At the opening session on Thursday evening, a most cordial address of welcome was given by His Excellency Senor Ernesto Lefevre, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Panama. Confessing himself a sincere and devout Catholic, he yet cordially recognized the high purpose of the Congress. He spoke in Spanish and it was repeated in English. Dr. Mott replied, expressing appreciation of the welcome and outlining something of the purpose of the Congress. Dr. Mott said in part:

"I am aware that this is a most representative gathering. We have delegates from virtually every one of the republics on the Western Hemisphere. Before this, there have been notable gatherings to promote political ideals and ambitions and hopes of the Western Hemisphere, to promote commercial relations, and scientific congresses that have done much to cement these peoples and to prepare for a better day. But not before this have we had such a representative company of Christian workers—men and women of wide vision, who have met together for this altruistic purpose in the realization of great hopes.

I persist in saying great hopes. The world has a right to expect something truly great of this Panama Congress. The world has a right to expect that there shall issue from our coming together here a larger plan for helpfulness for all the nations of this hemisphere, both Latin and Anglo-Saxon. The time has come to take this whole hemisphere into our view. Believe me, Jesus Christ sees nothing less, as He looks up and down this hemisphere, than all it needs, all its possibilities. Nothing less will satisfy Him than for us to plan for the touching most helpfully of every nation and every man of these republics and the other nations of the Western Hemisphere.

"There will also come out of this Congress a truer strategy. Anyone who has had even a casual touch with the Latin American countries must have been impressed by this fact. What we want in this day is what the French speak of in this present world war as 'grand strategy,' that is, strategy which takes in the whole map. Now there are individual bodies or societies working in this sphere which have commendable strategy; but I think we would have to confess with humiliation that we have been and are painfully lacking in united strategy. I mean the sort of strategy that seeks to make the most of our comparatively meager forms as we face a claimant and urgent need.

"Something must come forth from this Congress that will make Panama a name with which the world will associate another thing that is truly great; that will transcend anything that lies behind us or that stands before us. Surely it must be so, and therefore our hope includes a larger unity. There is something strangely moving about a Congress like this, when we all come together out of our comparatively separate compartments and fuse our spirits. There is generated in a place like this an atmosphere which I might characterize in that splendid phrase of the Bishop of Oxford at Edinburgh, when he said, "we have come into an atmosphere in which men come to loathe to differ, and determine to understand." That is precisely what will take place here these days. We will come to loathe misunderstandings each other and differing from one another in anything that is vital. And we will do something more important than that. We will pass out into that clear zone where we are determined to understand one another in order to co-operate.

"And our hopes would be in vain to this end if we did not expect that this Congress will issue in greater power. We do not need up and down the Western Hemisphere, any more than we do in Europe, new machinery. But what we do need is more driving power, especially of the forces of righteousness and unselfishness—and that is only tantamount to saying, a larger releasing of the irresistible energies of the living Christ among us. This is our great need. Beside it, everything else seems to be and is insignificant. And we will not disappoint our Lord, or the deepest hope in every one of us, by not seeking to enter into that heritage.

"I love to think that there is around us now, that there will be around us during all these coming sessions, an atmosphere of super-human resource; that there are powers ready to break out in us and through us into every nation into which we shall return, that will make the coming age truly glorious. To this end let the note of reality be struck deep and strong in every session of this Congress.

"How incongruous it would be at a solemn and tragic moment like this when whole nations are stretched on a Calvary cross, for us to meet in this peaceful zone of the world, welcomed by this friendly republic in a time of peace, and be characterized by lightness or lacking in earnestness and reality! Rather may there beat within us tonight, and during every meeting throughout this Congress, the spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ who said 'I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day; for the night cometh when no man can work.'"

Prof. Eduardo Monteverde, of Uruguay, Honorary President of the Congress, gave a brilliant and earnest address in Spanish on "The Contribution of Latin America to the Higher Life of America." Bishop Wm. C. Brown, for many years a missionary in Brazil, followed in an address on "The Common Ideals of the Anglo-Saxons and the Latins."

On Friday evening, three remarkable addresses were given. President King of Oberlin, presiding, told how Science and Christian work lie along parallel lines. He was followed by Prof. Erasmo Braga, Dean of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Brazil, who spoke in Portuguese on "The Claims of Christ on Thinking Men." He is a fine example of the high type of leadership being produced in Latin America.

The closing address was by Bishop Francis J. McConnell of Denver on "Christian Faith in An Age of Science." He gave a large vision of the possibilities of the future that was most inspiring.

On Saturday evening, two addresses were given—one by Dr. John Fox of the American Bible Society on "The Care and Custody of the Scriptures," and the other by the Rev. A. R. Stark of the British and Foreign Bible Society on "The Power of the Bible in the Life of Individuals and of Nations." This session was held at Balboa Union Church, and I was not able to attend on account of committee work.

(To be continued.)

A creeping, insignificant snail can spoil the loveliest rose; so a "little" sin will mar and impoverish the purest heart.

Wrought Through Prayer

When I went to my first American pastorate a good many years ago now, in a western city, I think I never felt such a discouraging situation. It was a wealthy, fashionable church, but without spiritual tone. I found the churches of the city were torn and separated by the dreadful war which had just closed a little before. My church was the only one in the city out of scores, that had not been divided by the war into North and South. Through a former pastor, who had a wide influence, they kept together. But they were at swords' points. There were ministers in town who had not spoken to each other for ten years, and it was generally said there would be no revival there until there had been two or three funerals. Just at that time God poured out His Spirit upon my own heart. It was then that I received for the first time the new light of the indwelling Christ and the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and it became a fire in my bones, and so possessed me that nights long I waited before God, crying to Him for a great revival. There never seemed any place on earth so difficult to have a revival. After a little while God let me get into some of these pulpits by exchange. He led me to beseech them to pray for the coming of the Holy Ghost, and before long I had the great joy of seeing all the pastors of that city united for a whole week long, beseeching God to heal their grievances and to send them a mighty revival.

Many years ago now, there were two women in the city of London. One was a cripple who never left her room. The other was her sister, who brought her all the religious news. One day in a package that came to the house, the invalid got a piece of an old newspaper in which the parcel was wrapped. Reading it over she saw a little address which Mr. Moody had just given in Chicago. It was the first time she had heard his name, but she was so moved by the article that she began to pray. For five years every day she prayed that God would send this man Moody to her church, and that He would also send a revival. Yet it was one of the most difficult things for God to do. Her church was an exclusive Episcopal church in London, and quite apart from the other denominations there. But this dear soul kept praying for five years that God would send that man and melt that wall of ice.

One morning her sister came home from church and said, "Would you believe it, but that man of yours, Moody, preached in our church this morning?"

"Why," she said, "I expected it. I have been waiting to hear it all along. Thank the Lord; now the revival is coming."

Her sister told her how it happened. There had been a fire in Chicago; his work had been burned out, and he resolved to go to England to learn some lessons from the big preachers there, on how to save souls. He had come on to London, attended a noon-day prayer meeting of the Y. M. C. A., and while there gave a short testimony. This Episcopal minister heard him, went to him, and said, "I think it would be a blessing to my people if you would come and talk to them next Sunday."

"I am not a preacher," Moody had replied, "and I came to hear Mr. Spurgeon."

"We don't want you to preach; just come and talk to our people."

"Well," said Moody, "if you will take me as I am, I will go."

And the sister told Phoebe, the invalid: "Do you know that after the service this morning the people were so broken up they would not go home. They went into the chapel and I left them there praying, and Moody is to preach again tonight."

There followed a glorious revival with scores saved that night. Moody went on the next day to Dublin, where he had an appointment, but before he had been ten minutes in his hotel there came a telegram, "Moody, come back immediately. There is a revival on and we don't know what to do with it." That was the beginning of Moody's work in Great Britain. From that church he went to others. Again and again he visited England, and Oxford and Cambridge were shaken to their foundations, and men like Studd went out to the mission field. Back of all this Phoebe, the invalid, was the instrument that brought it all about.

Prayer brings blessing to the cause of Christ. It is the secret of all success in the Church and the missionary movement, and all our campaigns. I wonder if we have as much of it as in the early days when we marched forward on our knees. How can we ever forget how we marched round this city of New York for years before we got settled, holding meetings in tents, and dance halls, and on the street corners, and in the big hippodrome, and in the theaters and music halls, until at last God located us here. I could write or tell the story if I had time of many and many a marvelous deliverance. I remember so well when we were trying to get our first sanctuary, the old Gospel Tabernacle on Twenty-third Street. After we thought we had secured the property from the owner of the building, there came along a theater company and stole it from us by offering an enormous rental. They spent nearly one hundred thousand dollars in fitting up that old armory in Twenty-third Street. We waited, and prayed, and did not understand. One dear saint said to me, "Pastor, God sent these people to fix up the place because they have lots of money. When they get it all fixed then we will get it." And so it came to pass. The company was turned out before they were able to use it for the blasphemous play they were planning to produce, the Passion Play, and the owner gave it to us on the same terms as before a single improvement was made. There we had our first convention. There the Alliance was born. From there the first missionary parties went out, all because God taught a few of His humble people to pray, pray, pray.—A. B. Simpson.

To love is to be obedient to the best.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

LARGER GIFTS FROM KANSAS YEARLY MEETING.

A letter from one of the Yearly Meeting officers in Kansas tells how missionary offerings have been increased. "I think that the thing that has done the most to increase missionary support in our Yearly Meeting has been the every-member canvass which was recommended by our last Yearly Meeting, and most of all our large meetings have put this in force and report a good increase in all missionary donations. I am a strong supporter of the every-member canvass. I believe that will do more to increase missionary support than any other one thing that we can do."

THEIR FOREIGN PASTOR.

The secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions received this morning a letter which interested and encouraged him more than any other he has received for a long time. It is from a Christian Endeavor Society in a certain Friends meeting. "We are feeling anxious and burdened," the writer says, "to help the missionaries in some way, and would be glad to know if there is someone whom we could support on a foreign missionary field."

A number of our meetings are providing the entire support of one or more missionaries. Are there not others which could thus undertake the support of their own "foreign pastor" on one of our mission fields? The secretaries of the Board will gladly explain how this may be done and will furnish information as to the workers and their work, and suggest ways of raising the funds necessary for supporting a worker.

INCIDENTS IN THE DAY'S WORK OF A MISSIONARY.

There are so many little things which do much to make up the atmosphere of our life here in Jamaica, and yet are seldom mentioned in our reports.

Not long ago I went to call on one of the old members of our Amity Hall Meeting; an old colored man who with his good-natured wife, lives near the chapel and cares for it. Their little thatch and wattle cottage is very, very humble. The floor is patched in some places and since the sickness of the old man, holes appear in other places. There are only two rooms in the house. The first serves as a living room and is simply furnished with a chair or two, two small tables and a rude board couch. The second is a bed room. As I saw no one in the living room, the doors of which were wide open, I called out "good morning" and was answered from the bedroom by the old man, who has been sick most of the time for the past year. At his invitation I passed on into the bedroom, where I found the old man lying on a quaint old "four-poster" bed, too sick to move about. We talked together over his condition and the events of the day and then before I left we had prayer together. Kneeling there by the bedside with the withered hand of the old colored man in mine, I prayed for him and for the faithful wife who had cared for him so tenderly through the long months of his illness. The old man lay quiet with his eyes closed until I had finished, and then he lifted his weak, quavering voice in one of the most beautiful prayers that I have ever heard. I have often heard him pray, but never as he did that day. Whether it was the peculiar earnestness of the prayer,—whether it was that God had been especially near to the old man that day or what it was that so deeply impressed me, I do not know. Only I am sure of this, that having gone to carry cheer and comfort to the poor sick old man I came away feeling that I had received the greater blessing and that he, and not I had that day been the more greatly used of the Lord.

Among the peasant class, where the greater part of our work is done, one sees much of the tragedy of life. Early in the morning a few weeks ago, there came to the mission house a man who is said to be very poor even among those of his own class. He came to ask me to loan him five shillings, $1.25, to pay the funeral expenses of his little daughter, who had died during the night. With that poor sum, a few cedar boards were bought, a little grave was dug and the few simple things needed for the burial were secured. The next day I went over for the simple funeral. There were five men of us. The poor man with his own hands helped us place the little cedar coffin in the grave. There was a short scripture lesson, a word of prayer, and the usual words of the Christian burial, "dust to dust," "ashes to ashes." "In the sure and certain hope that the dead in Christ shall arise," and the benediction. Then while we stood with bowed heads the grave was filled in. The toil-hardened hands of the father trembled as he helped to place the rough unhewn stones over the grave and tears stood in his eyes as he said as though the dear dead body of his child could understand, "Well, Celia, so this is the end." What a wealth of love, mingled with grief, was in those words, and we who had one day stood in his stead around a tiny open grave in a land far away, gave of our sympathy and felt that we stood that day on holy ground.

But not all of our experiences are sad. There are joyful moments, too, in such work as we find about us. You would have rejoiced if you could have been with me the other day at the wedding of one of our young men. He was a son of one of the officers of Seaside Church. This son had been away from home and had been successful in his work in other lands. He had carefully saved his earnings and came back with the hope of buying a piece of land and settling down upon it. He was unable to secure suitable land, unfortunately, but still the thought was with him that the time had come for him to change from the kind of life he had been leading. The result was that he decided to marry and unite with the church at Seaside. The aged father was overjoyed. He realized that the prayers of many years were being answered and when he signed the marriage papers as a witness, his hand so trembled that he could scarcely write his own name. A few days later the son came to my study and definitely gave himself to the Lord. He is now in our candidates class along with about a dozen other young people and will be received as a full member of the church in a few weeks. Broad-shouldered, clean cut, free of the habits of drink or tobacco, energetic and thrifty, he seems every inch a man and we rejoice that in the strength of his manhood he has come to be a follower of our Lord and Savior.

CHARLES KURTZHOFF.

PEACE DEPARTMENT

NOTE—It is hoped that this page may present in brief form a record of activities typical of the work Friends are doing for peace. News items, short, pointed arguments, suggested plans, all will be welcome, and will be used subject to the limitations of space and the proper distribution and arrangement of the matter received. All communications intended for this page should be addressed to Allen D. Hole, President, 615 National Road, West, Richmond, Indiana.

New York Yearly Meeting.

New York Quarterly Meeting.

The Peace Committee of New York Quarterly Meeting presented a proposition to New York Monthly Meeting at its meeting in Second month, the most important paragraphs of which are given below. The question raised is commended to the attention of Friends generally.

We believe that a large part of the present demand for greatly increased military and naval expenditures is due to the fact that many people feel that they ought to be up and doing something in this world crisis, and yet they fail to realize that they have duties in the paths of peace to their own state, their own nation, and their own neighbors.

We believe that the Book of Discipline does not at present adequately express Friends' principles as evidenced by the lives of their members, because Friends have throughout their history been the pioneers and leaders in the philanthropic works of their home neighborhoods and of the world.

We therefore feel that the present sixth query is inadequate and we would suggest its revision by adding the following clauses:

Do Friends constantly bear in mind that they are citizens of a Christian state, and do they constantly endeavor to fulfill the duties of such citizens? Are they alive to the needs of their neighborhoods, and are they always ready to aid and encourage by example and assistance every well directed effort to uplift the social, moral, economic, and spiritual environments of the communities in which their lot is cast?

For the committee,

EDWARD THOMAS,

Chairman.

ELIZABETH WALTON,

Secretary.

The Monthly Meeting discussed the proposition submitted by the Quarterly Meeting's Peace Committee and referred the matter to a special committee.

North Carolina Yearly Meeting.

Franklin S. Blair has been visiting the meetings of North Carolina Yearly Meeting systematically and in addition to giving addresses in Friends' churches, has spoken in churches of other denominations and has also visited all schools, both small and large, which are within reach of the route which he takes. Since Yearly Meeting in August last, he has spoken to between fourteen thousand and fifteen thousand pupils and teachers in their schools and to the general public in fifty or more churches of six different denominations.

In California.

William C. Allen has recently been active in contributions to various periodicals, the most important of which are as follows: in the Advocate of Peace, an article on Military Training for Boys; in the Record of Christian Work for January an article on Oriental Missions and the War; in the California Christian Advocate on January 20th, a presentation of important facts under the general title of Militarism and the Poor, and in the issue of February 17th a discussion of certain phases of the preparedness situation under the title of The Call of the Pacifist.

Indiana Yearly Meeting.

Moses Votaw, Superintendent of the peace work in Puget Sound Quarterly Meeting, recently published in the Tacoma (Washington) Tribune an open letter to the Honorable Albert Johnson, member of Congress from that district, setting forth some of the fundamental principles which should control in the enactment of legislation just at this time. One paragraph from this letter is especially worth quoting, as follows:

"All the world is watching the sixty-fourth Congress of the United States, now in session. The destiny of nations is in its hands. If it moves for peace by peace methods, the other powers will be constrained to follow, but if it chooses to adopt a military policy, the other nations must do likewise, and the whole world will be upon the same war basis which Europe adopted prior to this great conflict."

Fannie Elliott, pastor of the Friends church at Rockford, Ohio, recently gave a talk on peace and arbitration at a meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in that city. In addition to giving the address she distributed a considerable amount of peace literature furnished by the Peace Association of Friends in America.

Western Yearly Meeting.

The Committee on literature and peace appointed by Western Yearly Meeting has arranged for an oratorical contest on the subject of peace, which will be held at Plainfield, Indiana, on April 28th. They offer a first prize of $20.00 and a second prize of $15.00. The contestants represent the following Friends' Academies, namely, Bloomingdale and Plainfield, Indiana, and Vermillion Grove, Ill.

IN JAPAN.

United States Preparedness As Viewed By American Friends In Japan.

NOTE—The following resolution was adopted by the Friends' Foreign Mission Committee at its Quarterly Meeting held in Tokyo, Japan, February 18th, 1916.

As American citizens resident in Japan, we have learned with deep regret of the efforts now being made to put the United States among the nations which depend for their peace and security upon military preparedness.

We believe that the position of leadership which the United States has held in the promotion of world peace for the past hundred years would be partially lost with the entrance of our nation upon an era of international fear and competitive armaments.

While the Japanese recognize the right of the United States to increase armaments, and while the European situation gives to them a partial explanation for such action, there is little room for doubt that a response to the present appeal for military preparedness in America would exert an unfavorable influence upon the Japanese nation.

We believe, further, that the representatives of the Christian churches of the United States would find their task in Japan and other Oriental countries grow more difficult if their own country should get further away from the ideal of a non-military nation, resting its cause upon justice and the spirit of conciliation.

On behalf of the Friends' Mission in Japan,

GURNEY BINFORD,

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

THE NEW EFFICIENCY CHART.

Is your Young Peoples Society sick? Send for the Diagnostician. This has been gotten out in the form of the New Efficiency Chart. It serves as a Mirror to show a society how it actually appears to the outsider. It points out exactly the weaknesses of any Endeavor organization and tells how to remedy them. With the addition of the third department in the New Chart the Endeavor organization has been made the most comprehensive and efficient Young Peoples Society.

The three divisions of a Society as depicted by the chart are Organizations, individual training, and Missionary Endeavor. The first tells how many committees each Meeting should have and what are the duties of each. The second points out various lines of expressional work that a Society should undertake to produce the best results for future church membership. And the third outlines the kinds of Study Classes, recreational groups, special programs and socials that a Society should undertake. Each of these divisions is sub-divided into ten parts which, when adequately worked count ten points, thus making a perfect Society register three hundred points.

Such a Society wins a gold star from the United Society. If it can register but two hundred points it receives a silver star, while one hundred marks will entitle the Society to a red star. A thermometer in the center of the chart registers the effort of the Society to become perfect. These charts sell for $1.00 each and can be procured at the Young Friends office. Organize a Society or reorganize your old one, and send for a chart that you may total the greatest gain for your young people.

STUDY CLASSES.

The new chart gives credit for the Study Classes formed. Every young person should know something of the tenets of his denomination. Friends are no exception to this rule. If we have a heritage as many tell us should we not know what that is? This can be found through a Study class in denominational history and polity. We have arranged outlines and procured books that this may be done. Woodman's "The Present Day Message of Quakerism" and Emmott's "Story of Quakerism" are the texts. The former contains about one hundred pages and is divided into four chapters. It is priced $1.00 with outlines at 2 cents. The latter is a longer work containing two hundred forty pages with twenty chapters. It is priced $1.25 with outlines at 5 cents each. Send for books at once.

ENROLLMENT CAMPAIGN.

Our slogan is Enrollments from Every Young peoples Society in the United States and Canada within the next three months. Don't let your Society be the last to enroll. We need your names. You need to keep in touch with the general work of Young Friends throughout the country. We want to follow you up. You need friends and introductions. We want to be your servants. Help us make this important undertaking a success.

SOCIALS.

Have you held any Spring Socials yet? Send to us for our handsome book on Social plans. Any society that is succeeding already can succeed better with a live social committee. Obtain the most up-to-date entertainments from us.

C. E. LITERATURE.

Obtain all Christian Endeavor supplies from the Young Friends Board and give us the benefit of the commission. We can supply you as well as the United Society. Get the Friends new topic cards.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR APRIL 16.

Topic—Good Prayer Meetings and how to have them. Acts 12:1-17.

In this story of Peter's miraculous escape from death we find some points of striking interest. The author accounts for the miracle on the ground that Peter was innocent. Herod was unjust, and the Christians were faithful. The secret of the whole thing, however, was that Peter's friends and associates were diligent in prayer. When one considers that these people prayed all night, he must conclude that they believed in prayer, even if they were surprised that God heard them.

One cannot pray in real earnest until he believes in it. Insincerity crushes the life of all prayer. It is a slow working poison that saps the vigor of all prayer meetings. In the next place this prayer meeting had a definite object. Something was to be accomplished; a life was at stake.

The hour of execution was near at hand. How purposeless are many prayer meetings? Meeting together once a week, or at any other set time may become a custom, which soon becomes an irksome duty. In the same old way the scripture lesson is read, number "123" is sung; clippings from the Christian Endeavor World read; a few sentence prayers rattled off in careless manner and the meeting breaks.

Should such a meeting be called a PRAYER meeting? It impresses one more as a literary society. Such a Society has no vital, challenging purpose. Every meeting should have some gripping aim. Let the prayer meeting committee confer with the pastor or head of the Meeting and choose some theme. Plan well in advance for these meetings, still leave the plans flexible enough to fit the immediate problem of the Society. Instead of music in some meeting devote the time to prayer for a definite object. Such subjects as a missionary on the field, the slum quarter of the city, some sick or neglected individual or family, the officers of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, the Young Friends Board, and the pastor of the Meeting could be considered.

Devote a whole meeting to silent prayer some time. The leader may name subjects for consideration. Each topic should claim the attention of the whole meeting for two or three minutes. These meetings should be preceded by the leader and two or three officers asking God's guidance in the following service. The great secret to a good prayer meeting is to pray. Pray earnestly, with objective and deepest devotion.

INDIANAPOLIS NOTICE.

The Quaker Round Table, an organization of young Friends of the First Friends Church, Indianapolis, will hold an open meeting on Monday evening, April 10, at the home of Miss Katherine Cox, 2003 North Meridian Street. Tom Jones, of Earlham College, will be the principal speaker of the evening and promises to bring a message of special benefit to all young Friends. The members of all young peoples' organizations of Western and Indiana Yearly Meetings are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

THE SIMKINS IN CHINA.

To fill a temporary vacancy, Robert L. and Margaret L. Simkin have been appointed to take charge of the Friends' boys' high school at Chungking, China. Their address will be Friends Mission, Chungking, West China. In the near future The American Friend will contain an extended account of their experiences on the river while going to their new field of work.

CHURCH AT WORK

Denair, Calif.—Wallace Gill, of Bell, California, began revival meetings here on March 5. The gospel was preached in the power and with the unction of the Holy Spirit. Many souls were saved and sanctified. The meeting was generally helped by the services.

Amos Kenworthy, an old veteran of the Cross, has moved here with his son, Oliver. They will make this their home for a while. His presence in our services adds weight and power, for he truly walks with God. He has been in poor health for the past few months.

Friends coming west this year for business or pleasure will find a thriving Quaker meeting at Denair. We are on the main line of the Santa Fe about 120 miles south of San Francisco. Zimri Stubbs is pastor and has accepted a call to remain another year.

Newmarket, Ontario, Canada—The work in this meeting is growing splendidly under the energetic ministry of Alfred Young and his wife, Annie I. Young. The morning meetings for worship are times of deep spiritual uplift and blessing. The evangelistic meetings on Sabbath evenings are greatly appreciated by a large and increasing congregation. It is difficult to speak of the high value of this feature of the work. Special subjects are preached upon what have been highly beneficial to many, and the six months' work our Friends have put in the meeting has had a marked effect. On March 12 our pastor introduced to the congregation the youngest preacher in Canada. Expectation and curiosity ran high and although there was a very bad snow storm a large crowd gathered in the meeting house. On the platform five small children were seated and when the time came for the sermon Alfred Young introduced a little girl three years of age. It was a wonderful meeting and one that will live long in the memory of all present. The tender, sweet-faced little girl reached the hearts of all and brought tears into many eyes.

On March 19 the usual service gave place to a song service, "Eva," from Uncle Tom's Cabin. Our pastor and wife had been training a choir for several weeks and the whole service reflects the greatest credit upon conductor and choir. There was a very large congregation and unstinted praise for the service was given by many. The story of the death of Eva, interspersed with songs, was beautifully rendered, many in the audience being visibly affected. A special collection for Foreign Missions resulted in $10.00 being handed over to the treasurer.

Chester, Indiana—Richard and Florence Simms have returned from Chicago, having spent the winter with their children. Friends are glad to have them back again in the meeting.

Lynn, Indiana—A revival meeting which closed at Friends church here was a great success. Under the presentation of the truth of the gospel seventy-five persons sought and found peace with God. Edgar Wollam, of Cleveland, Ohio, the evangelist, is a man of God and stands faithfully for what he preaches, presenting it in a manner which commands the attention of even the smallest hearer. He was ably assisted by L. L. Otley, a singer, of Fairmount, Indiana. Not only was the church itself given a deeper vision of the work before it, but the community showed its great interest by an increasing attendance nightly.

Richsquare, Indiana—A most successful week-end conference, conducted by Milo S. Hinckle, of Richmond, Indiana, closed here on the evening of March 19. The work was planned early in February and the regular committees were given charge of advertising and other details. A basket dinner was announced for Sabbath and special music was provided, consisting of congregational singing, quartettes, vocal and instrumental solos. There was a good attendance at the first session on the evening of the 17th, when the leader discussed, "The Church and the Temperance Problem." On the following evening the subject was, "Can Christians Fight?" The stirring address on this subject was timely and invoked the closest attention of both young and old.

Sabbath was warm and bright and the house was filled, not fewer than seven different denominations being represented. The message of the morning, "Saving the World," appealed to the hearts of all, and some who had not previously believed in the work of foreign missions openly admitted the truth of what was presented. After a bountiful dinner and social hour the afternoon session was called to order to hear a discussion on the question, "Why Be a Quaker?" Many indisputable scriptural reasons were given in support of the Friends' viewpoint on baptism and the outward communion. Following the Christian Endeavor meeting an evangelistic service closed the series. This special time of seed sowing was arranged as a sequence to a twelve days' revival conducted by Milo Hinckle in December, during which backsliders were reclaimed, sinners converted and the church strengthened. Later five persons were received into active membership and six associate members became active members.

Haviland, Kansas—On March 5 Haviland meeting was favored with the presence of two members of the gospel team of Wichita, Judge Claud Stanley and A. B. Moore. They attended the men's prayer meeting at three o'clock and addressed the Sabbath School class taught by Mrs. E. E. Hadley in the evening. Following this they told the history of their conversion. Their services were highly appreciated and there were several conversions.

Elcombingdale, Indiana—The Friends at this place were favored in having a most convincing discourse against military preparedness given by the pastor, George H. Moore, on March 26. We are convinced that Friends everywhere should use every opportunity to oppose the progress of militarism in our country.

Coloma, Indiana—The Sabbath School and meeting at Coloma are increasing in interest and attendance under the leadership of the pastors, Riley and Mary Hubbard. An agricultural meeting is announced for March 31, which is to be held in the auditorium of the school building. An address will be given by H. J. Reed, the County Agriculture Agent, and the community and pastors will participate in the discussions. Other commendable activities are being planned for building up the moral and mental standards as well as the spiritual uplift of this rural church.

Tangier, Indiana—The Friends' meeting house at Tangier was totally destroyed by fire on Sabbath evening, March 26. The fire is supposed to have originated from a defective flue. There was no insurance.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED
in a private home in Washington. Convenient to car line and Union Station.
Laura N. Wilson,
46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

NEWS NOTES

A gospel team of young men from Pacific College has been rendering good service in neighboring meetings.

Benjamin H. Albertson, of Haviland, Kansas, has been called to the pastorate at Liberal, Kansas.

Fred E. Smith, pastor at Greensboro, N. C., recently preached a series of sermons on "Discipleship."

S. J. and Blanche Ford Pickering have resigned their pastorate at Ramona, Cal., to take effect April 1.

Friends University has arranged for a six weeks' summer school to be opened on June 12.

Dorothy N. Cammack, after more than six years of service in Guatemala and Honduras, will leave soon on a furlough.

Dr. George DeVol, of Luh Hoh, China, writes that they have had a gracious revival, with more than 80 persons definitely blessed.

Prof. M. D. Hawkins, of Pacific College, Newberg, Oregon, is serving as pastor in the West Chehalem community church, with good satisfaction.

Charles E. Tebetts, who has spent three months in Cuba, Jamaica, Panama and Florida, has returned to his home at Richmond, Indiana.

Arthur and Eliza Dann recently concluded some special religious work within the limits of Devon and Cornwall Quarterly Meetings, England.

Prof. Henry C. Fellow has recently added to his department at Friends University a collection of pedagogical books at a cost to himself of more than $150.00.

The editor of The American Friend acknowledges with appreciation the receipt of a delegate's credential to the National Missionary Congress at Washington, April 26-30.

Robert W. Douglas, of Versailles, Ohio, has been spending several weeks in California visiting relatives and a number of Friends meetings. Among the meetings visited have been Whittier, Berkeley, San Jose, Oakland, San Diego and Ramona.

Ross A. Hadley, Assistant Secretary of Friends Board of Foreign Missions, preached at West Richmond Friends meeting on the morning of March 26. Prof. Harlow Lindley, of Earlham College, gave an address in the evening.

The management of Friends University is planning a campaign for funds in the near future, having in mind the building of a gymnasium, the larger equipment of library and

England, Germany and France Agree on one thing, if on no other. They all prohibit the sale of alum baking powders.

There must be a good reason for this. It is because alum was found to be unhealthy.

Royal Baking Powder is made of cream of tartar, derived from grapes, a natural food product, and contains no alum nor other questionable ingredients.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

laboratories, and the addition of something to the maintenance fund.

Charles M. Woodman, pastor of Friends meeting at Portland Maine, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the West Richmond meeting, at Richmond, Indiana, to take effect in September.

Tilman Hobson, a former Friends' minister, but now a Methodist, is holding a revival at Edmond, Oklahoma. His wife and son are assisting. About fifty persons have professed conversion thus far.

J. Lindley Spicer is Secretary of the International Christian Police Association, New York Branch, with headquarters at 226 East 58th St., N. Y. City. The 24th anniversary of the Association was recently observed with appropriate exercises extending through a week.

A number of young Friends are going before the Tribunals in England, claiming exemption from military service, and stating their conscientious objections to such service. The London Friend is publishing a list of Friends and others claiming exemption.

Anna B. Thomas, of Baltimore, who has been in England for the past three years, has resigned her position as Hon. Secretary of the Emergency Committee for Helping Aliens, in order to be free to devote herself to other matters. She retains her position on the Executive Committee. The committee has given expression to an appreciative testimonial in behalf of her work. She expects to visit Scandinavia shortly, and upon her return to England will visit various Quarterly Meetings and speak in behalf of the work of the Emergency Committee.

John Henry Douglas and wife, of Whittier, California, are looking forward to the observance of their sixtieth marriage anniversary on April 23. They will be glad to hear from any of their many friends. The American Friend extends congratulations and best wishes.

WITH THE INDIANS.

The February reports of Clark and Elma T. Brown, superintendents of the Indian mission field, indicate that the Iowa mission has been rented for a year to a man in the community. The Mardocks, who were in charge of the Ottawa mission, have resigned and moved to Kansas. Considering the bad weather the missionaries at the various stations have made a good showing.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

With the passage of the Hay bill by the House of Representatives, Congress is enjoying a short breathing spell in the agitation for military preparedness. The Society of Friends knows by this time, as does our entire nation, how nearly the full membership of the House voted on the above measure, providing for a standing army of 140,000 men in time of peace, federalization of the National Guard and other items of enlargement in the country's military establishment, and how all excepting two members voted favorably on the bill.

Of course it is not believed by people who have knowledge of the real situation in Congress that the vote on the Hay bill was an accurate registering of the opinion of all the Congressmen who voted. Quite a group of men voted favorably who are known to be opposed to any increase in the size of the army, while others helped pass the bill who have been very strenuous in their demands for an enormous increase. But they all knew that the passage of this bill would settle nothing and that there would still be plenty of opportunity to express their opinions and register votes on the "preparedness" question.

Some encouragement has been given the forces that are fighting militarism by the passage in the Senate of a bill authorizing the Government to establish its own armor plate plant, thereby taking out of the hands of private manufacturers one of the most important elements of war preparations.

The next move in the "preparedness" program is expected to be the taking up of the Chamberlain army reorganization bill in the Senate. This is far more extravagant in its provisions than the Hay bill and no effort will be spared by the big army advocates to get it through. The bill that the Senate passes must go with the House bill to a conference committee, then the compromise bill coming from this committee must get the approval of the two houses. "They will have a hard time," said Clyde H. Tavenner, a Representative from Illinois, "getting any big increase through both Houses."

While Friends' interest in national legislation is now centered mainly in military legislation, they will be glad to know that effort is being made to get favorable action by Congress on the two bills intended to stop the use of names of religious bodies, particularly the name Quaker, in trade marks, advertisements, etc. Two bills bearing upon this question, House Bills 435 and 380, have been introduced and are now in the hands of a sub-committee of the House Judiciary. Congressman C. C. Carlin is chairman of the sub-committee and is considered friendly to the passage of Bill 435, which would prohibit interstate shipment of goods bearing the name "Quaker" or that of any other religious society. S. Edgar Nicholson, of Richmond, Ind., editor of The American Friend, was in Washington last week in the interest of these bills. It is his advice that Friends do all they can to influence their Congressmen in favor of Bill 435. Congressman Carlin should be urged to report the bill favorably as quickly as possible.

It seems more and more clear every day to those active in the work of the Friends' Peace Headquarters that if some members of our Society do not join in this campaign we are waging against military "preparedness" it is because they have not been able to see the thing in its professional aspect and in its inconsistency and official cloak as is possible here.

It is a light task to write three letters, but the task assumes vast importance when in writing the letters you are helping form the opinion of a great nation on a problem involving its own and other nations' welfare. We would again express the hope that every Friend who has not written his representatives in Congress within the last two weeks will do so at once. And letters should be sent to those known to be unfavorable to our position as well as to those who are with us.

Friends' Peace Headquarters,
Washington, D. C., March 27, 1916.

FRIENDS' BULLETIN.

Central Bureau Bulletin Number Three, published by J. J. Mills, General Secretary, and issued by authority of the Executive Committee of Five Years Meeting, is off the press and ready for distribution. It is a pamphlet of twenty pages and contains much valuable information concerning the work of the various Boards. Considerable attention is given to the financial question; a page is devoted to the officiating of the Boards and a roster of the Yearly Meetings together with the clerk of each is also given. It is a valuable document which ought to be in the hands of Friends generally.

This Skirt $3.75

K18109—Serviceable Walking Skirts of navy blue or black serge. Made with a plait on each side and with panel back; girdle top; stitched scallops buttoned with bone buttons at each side of the front. Fastened on one hip; finished with a deep hem. Waist-band sizes 25, 27, 29, 31 and 33 inches. Front lengths, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41 and 42 inches. Order this Skirt with the understanding that if not satisfactory in every way it can be returned at once and your money will be refunded. Price—$3.75, postpaid.

Our Spring and Summer Catalogue will be sent free, on request.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
PHILADELPHIA

THE CHRISTIAN FORUM.

The Christian Forum is a department of the Friends' Bible School at Haverford, Pa., organized with its own officers and committees for the discussion of matters of vital Christian interest. Discussions are had at the meeting house every Sabbath morning at 9:45 o'clock. Subjects are as follows: April 9, "The Miracles of the Bible;" 16, "The Infallibility of the Bible;" 23, "Personal Immortality;" 30, "Conference Sunday;" May 7, "Our Duty Toward Mexico;" 14, "Local Option;" 21, "Pacifism, Preparedness and Morality;" 28, "Neutrality and Morality."

ERRATUM.

In the roster of Yearly Meetings for 1916 the opening of Wilmington Yearly Meeting should be August 16 instead of 6, as given in The American Friend two weeks ago.

THE IOWA PAGE

DEDICATION AT WEST BRANCH.

The Downey Street Friends church was formally dedicated on Sunday, March 12. The visiting ministers were Harry R. Keates, Yearly Meeting Superintendent; President David M. Edwards, of Penn College, and Zeno H. Doan, of Lynnvile, Iowa.

In the morning at 10:30, David M. Edwards preached from Ephesians 2:19 and 20. At the close of the sermon, Dr. Edwards introduced the financial needs of the church by showing the need of $3,000 before the building could be dedicated free from debt, the entire cost being a little over $11,000. Before the day was over more than the amount asked for had been received in cash or pledges.

At 2:30 in the afternoon the people again gathered together for worship. The Girls' Glee Club of the high school sang a beautiful anthem. The pastor of the Danish Lutheran Church, N. P. Clemmensen, gave a helpful talk expressing his unity with the undertaking.

Zeno H. Doan preached the sermon of the afternoon, using as his text, the words of Jesus found in Matt. 16:18. His theme was, "The Church, Its Mission, Its Message, Its Method."

The formal dedication of the church was conducted by Harry R. Keates, who offered the prayer of dedication.

The evening service was a union meeting. Wm. H. Mitchell, pastor of the Methodist Church, gave a friendly expression of good will and congratulations to the Friends upon the success of the building. The architect, Eugene Taylor, of Cedar Rapids, was introduced and spoke a few words.

Harry R. Keates preached the sermon of the evening, Matt. 11:28-30 being the text. At the close a large per cent of those present stood together as a special act of re-dedication of their lives to the service of the Master.

The dimensions of the new church are—length 58 feet, width 46 feet. The architectural design is of simple colonial type. The building is constructed of hard face brick and hollow tile blocks for the back wall. The plan is simple and plain throughout, yet with such good taste as to make a very attractive and pleasing effect. The basement, which extends under the entire structure, is finished in yellow pine with floor of the same material. The ceiling is ten feet in the clear.

The auditorium on the main floor is 31x43 feet in size. In addition there is a choir loft and pulpit platform. The pastor's study, 8x14 feet at the right of the pulpit, is arranged with folding doors and a rolling partition in such a way that it can be used as a part of the auditorium. The two Christian Endeavor rooms are divided by a rolling partition so that both may be used as one room; they also connect with the auditorium by rolling partitions.

The lighting is semi-indirect electric in all parts of the building. Plain or chipped glass is used in all windows and fitted with Whitney casement windows. There is a modern steam heating plant with good system of sanitary plumbing.

The membership of the meeting is now 180, of whom 25 are non-residents. The enrollment of the Bible School exceeds 150 and is increasing. The mid-week prayer meeting is well attended, and there exists a good feeling of unity among the members. The C. E., the W. F. M. S. and the Ladies Auxiliary are well organized. Charles W. Mesner is pastor.

BIBLE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

The Bible School at Center is making careful and prayerful preparation to observe Easter Sunday as Decision Day. No season in the year is more favorable than this when the whole world is awakening to new life. Do not let this year pass without observing Decision Day in YOUR School.

Seventeen books have been ordered for the Teachers' Training class at Le Grand. The first meeting was held at the house of the pastor, John R. Wright, on Friday evening, March 17. Fifteen persons were present. A number have taken up the work for the purpose of a broader and deeper Bible study. A splendid degree of interest is manifest in the work.

The Departmental Graded Lessons have been ordered for use in the Salem Bible School. A constantly increasing number of our schools are introducing the Graded Lessons. Viola Smith, the pastor at Salem, also reports that they are taking up Teacher Training in connection with their mid-week prayer meeting. Her Young People's Class has been recently organized.

The West Branch Bible School now occupies their splendid new church home. They met in their new rooms for the first time on March 19 and had a record breaking attendance of 129. Their new church building has been especially constructed with the needs of the Bible School in mind. Any meeting which may be contemplating building in the near future will do well to investigate the plans of the West Branch meeting house.

An excellent degree of interest is manifest in the Bible School at Springdale. The school has made a substantial growth during this church year. This meeting has some special plans under consideration, which will mean much for the school and community. Watch Springdale!

C. E. DEPARTMENT.

Earlham—The young people observed Endeavor Week by uniting with the other societies in town in a union C. E. meeting on Sunday evening with a special program. On Monday evening a union social was held and on the following Sunday evening the church service also was given to the young people, who rendered an excellent program on the Spiritual Influence of One's Life. Dr. D. W. Edwards gave a short address on the topic for the evening.

The C. E. Society has been studying the Peace Lessons prepared by the Federation of Churches, finishing them the middle of March. They have arranged for the Penn College Glee Club to give a concert at Earlham during its spring vacation tour. The committees of the Society meet the first Monday evening of each month to plan their work and make out their reports. The business meeting and social follow immediately the same evening. The plan draws a large attendance for the committee and business meetings.

FIELD NOTES.

Stuart—On the evening of March 21 the young people's organized class of Stuart Friends Bible School gave a reception at the Friends parsonage for Benjamin Hiatt, who is leaving for an extended visit to the coast. Nearly all the members of the Bible School were present. The evening was spent in visiting, interspersed with music. Brother Hiatt gave the young people a very earnest and helpful talk upon the necessity of thorough Bible study and the importance of a close attendance of the Bible school. Refreshments were served. After bidding Mr. Hiatt good-by, the company left, feeling they had spent a profitable and pleasant evening. All regret to see him leave.

PASTORS, ATTENTION!

We cull the following sentences from a letter received recently from a Friends' pastor. What he says is so important that it needs to be passed on to others. Concerning an effort to get subscriptions for The American Friend, he says:

"I thought I would only see a few people this year and wait until I was better acquainted next year, but as I asked a few of those who did not manifest much interest in the church, I found the subscriptions came so easy that I launched out and devoted all the time I could spare for a little over two weeks. The result is that I am sending twenty-four subscriptions from this congregation and two from another, twenty-six in all. I am convinced that the pastors can put this paper on its feet if they would do it. This makes my third attempt in as many different congregations, and every time I am surprised with the results I get. The pastors can do it, provided they hold the confidence of their people, where a field agent can not, for I have taken subscriptions in several places where the agent has failed. The trouble is that pastors, if they call any attention to it at all, will just announce it from the pulpit, and we all know that there are few people who will act upon their own initiative in these matters. I preached on denominational loyalty on March 5 and told the people I would be around to see them that week about The American Friend."

JONATHAN B. WRIGHT.

"A much beloved man gone," said one of the local papers in announcing the death of Jonathan B. Wright. "Professor Wright was a good man; a good scholar, a good teacher and a good Christian gentleman," said another paper. He was the fifth child of Joseph and Lydia Cowgill Wright and was born near Hillsboro, Ohio, April 14, 1850, and died at Wilmington, Ohio, March 1, 1916. He graduated from Wilmington College with the class of 1878, his college course having been interrupted for two years while he taught at Whittier Academy, Iowa.

He was for twenty years a professor in Wilmington College and for seven years principal of Wilmington High School, teaching in all, forty years. He was recorded a minister by Wilmington Monthly Meeting in 1883, and served a number of meetings as their pastor. He was for seventeen years clerk of Center Quarterly Meeting, and for five years clerk of Wilmington Yearly Meeting.

Jonathan Wright was an attractive and stimulating teacher, an ardent and intense student, and a tireless worker. Though he died at 68 he lived more than sixty-eight years, drawing out his whole capital for the next twenty years. He seemed to have a passion for usefulness. In scholarship he was abreast of the times, and his religious teaching, though exceedingly simple, would correlate with the assured facts of science. His pupils could not say that he shut the door of knowledge to safeguard his religion, nor that he was swept by the flood of things, wonderful things, away from their Creator. He seemed to live in the consciousness of the Divine Presence. This was manifest in the beautiful simplicity of his public prayers.

He was deeply interested in the cause of Peace and served on the Peace Committee from the founding of Wilmington Yearly Meeting. He often spoke on prohibition, and the last time he left his home was to

The American Friend Book Department

The American Friend is arranging to handle books, booklets and pamphlets which will be of general interest to Friends in America. Arrangements have already been made with the John C. Winston Company of Philadelphia, Friends Book and Tract Committee of New York City and the United Society of Christian Endeavor to receive orders for their publications. We hope soon to make similar arrangements with other houses, so that in the near future orders can be sent to us for practically any book that will be of general interest to our membership.

Some Suggestions in Books

The following books together with many others can be secured by sending your orders to this office. In this way you will be helping The American Friend.

Barclay's Apology, by Robert Barclay.....	$0.70
Beginnings of Quakerism, by William C. Braithwaite.....	3.20
Bright, John, The Life of, by G. M. Trevylan.....	4.70
Christ and War, by William E. Wilson, cloth, $0.70; limp.....	.50
Christian's Secret of a Happy Life, by Hannah Whitall Smith.....	.35
Decisive Hour of Christian Missions, by John R. Mott.....	.60
Dymond on War, Introductory Words by John Bright.....	.25
Dynamic Faith, by Rufus M. Jones.....	1.00
Fox, George, by Henry Stanley Newman.....	1.50
Fox, George, by R. M. Jones, two-volume edition.....	4.25
Student edition (same author), one volume.....	1.65
Friends and the War, Proceedings of Llandudno Conference, 1914....	.55
Fry, Elizabeth, Life of, by Georgina King Lewis.....	1.20
Gurney, J. J., Life of, by J. Bevan Braithwaite.....	1.50
Grellet, Stephen, Life of, by William Guest.....	.75
History of Friends in America (Revised edition), by Allen C. Thomas	1.15
No Cross, No Crown, by William Penn.....	.70
Quaker Apostle, (In Memoriam of John T. Dorland), by W. K. Baker	.85
Quaker Diary in the Orient, by William C. Allen.....	1.00
Quaker Experiment in Government, by Isaac Sharpless (illustrations)	2.25
(Without illustrations).....	1.50
Quakers, The Rise of, by T. Edmund Harvey.....	.75

The above are only a few of a long list of publications which can be ordered at any time. Send your order with remittance to vote for a "Dry Ohio."

THE AMERICAN FRIEND,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

He leaves a son, Paul Howard, of Mount Pleasant, Ohio, and a daughter, Grace Lillian Bond, of Massillon, Ohio. His sister, "Teacher" Ellen Wright, has been for forty years a professor in Wilmington College, and his brother, David Sands Wright, has been for forty years a member of the faculty of Iowa State Teachers' College. Another sister, Emma W. Hale, lives in Wilmington. A friend writes for the paper:

"Mr. Wright was my Superintendent, my pastor and trusted friend. In thinking over the years that we worked together, I do not remember that he ever made me feel that I held a subordinate position. Always a co-worker."

Nicholson & Bro., Richmond, Ind.

Friends' Marriage Certificates:

On Parchment, postpaid$3.00
On Bond Paper, postpaid$1.10
Books at publishers' prices, postpaid.
Remit by P. O. order.

FOR SALE—A good general store. Feed and Flour. Invoice about $5,000. Yearly sales high. Also farmers' restaurant and hotel. In Friends' community. Both good propositions. Write to L. T. Hill, West Branch, Iowa.

NATIONAL PRISON SUNDAY.

The National Committee on Prisons is calling for a nation-wide observance of Prison Sunday on April 9th.

The Committee has come to feel that further advance in prison reform calls for action on the part of all religious bodies. A Committee on Religious Work has been organized under the chairmanship of Prof. James C. Egbert of Columbia University, including representatives of every faith. Homer Morris, of Columbia University, is representing Friends on this Committee and its work has received the endorsement of Rufus M. Jones, Chairman of the Social Service Committee of the Five Years Meeting.

Co-operation from the Friends, as from those of other faiths, is asked along three definite lines: Ministration inside the prison; after-care of the ex-prisoner in helping to keep him in a right environment; the moulding of public opinion to a right attitude towards the prisoner and the prison. To the Friends this is no new call. Elizabeth Fry carried the first message of hope and love into the prison. William Penn wrote into the Charter of Pennsylvania the doctrine that imprisonment should make for reformation, not punishment. The Society of Friends from earliest days has fathered every movement for prison reform.

Today the opportunity is greater than ever before. Thomas Mott Osborne has inaugurated a new prison system in Sing Sing and Auburn Prisons, New York, under which responsibility is placed on the prisoners to fit them to meet responsibility to the outside community. The basis of this reform is the spirit of brotherhood.

Herein is opportunity for the church to make itself effective in furthering the cause of him who is the least amongst us. The public consideration on April 9th of our obligation to the prisoner may well lead the way for constructive effort on his behalf.

ARTICLES TO INDIA.

Will any friends who may have sent letters, parcels or money to Nowgong, India, between December 1st and 18th, kindly inform me, as anything posted in America at that time has probably been lost in the sinking of the S.S. "Persia," that was bringing mail to India.

ESTHER E. BAIRD,
Nowgong, India.

Patronize the American Friends' advertisers.

MOSES BROWN SCHOOL

Calls the attention of Friends who are seeking a school for their sons and daughters, to its strong moral and religious influence, its complete equipment, its unusually able faculty, and its unique record as a college preparatory school.

For catalogue with full information address
SETH K. GIFFORD, Ph. D., Prin.
Moses Brown School, Providence, R. I.

GOOD HOME WITH WAGES for Suitable Woman Friend.

A housekeeper is needed in Thomas D. Hubbard's home at Kimball, Kansas, a railroad village 113 miles south of Kansas City. Handy modern home with hot and cold running water; bath room on first floor; toilet on first floor and second floor. A woman not over 40 preferred. The office woman besides yourself and only one man besides Mr. Hubbard to cook for. No children. You don't need to step down or out of the house for fuel or rain-water; all on same level as kitchen. Mention references in your application. As to Friend Hubbard, he is well known in Columbus, Ohio, Richmond, Indiana, Chicago, Oskaloosa, Kansas City, Topeka, Wichita and Whittier. Good Friends Church and three other churches for you to attend.

MARRIED

Stanbrough-Smith—At the home of the bride in Peabody, Kansas, March 12, 1916, Gilbert Stanbrough to Nannie Smith, C. C. Haines, officiating.

BORN

Baldwin—At Bear Creek, near Earlham, Iowa, February 6, 1916, to John A. and Mildred J. Baldwin, a son, John.

Coffin—At Richmond Indiana, January 30, 1916, to J. Herschel and Pearl Dean Coffin, a son, Thomas Erwin.

Moore—At Indianola, Iowa, March 15, 1916, to Charles T. and Carrie Moore, a son, James Forester.

Stevens—At Gasport, N. Y., March 15, 1916, to Elbert A. and Myrtle E. Stevens, a daughter, Florence Myrtle.

Thompson—At Ft. Collins, Colorado, March 23, 1916, to Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Thompson, a daughter.

Walter—At New Castle, Indiana, to John R. and Pearl Williams Walter, March 7, 1916, a daughter, Vera Vivian.

DIED

Adair—Amy Jane Adair, wife of Charles M. Adair, died at Stafford, Kansas, December 18, 1915, aged 67 years, 3 months and 5 days. She married C. M. Adair in 1867. She was converted and joined Friends in 1880. She was an invalid for a number of years, but bore all her sufferings with Christian fortitude. She leaves the husband, five sons and one daughter. Funeral services were conducted by A. J. Bond.

Haworth—Calvin Haworth, son of Moorman and Elizabeth Haworth, was born in Vermillion county, Illinois, June 2, 1830, and died January 31, 1916, aged 85 years, 7 months and 29 days. He married Rachel Haworth in 1855, having moved to Iowa with his parents when but a child. He was a birthright Friend and contributed toward the building of the meeting house and academy at Ackworth, Iowa, in which he was greatly interested. About 40 years ago, he made a religious visit in company with John Coffin into Arkansas. He leaves six sons, two daughters, eighteen grandchildren and twenty-two great grandchildren, three sisters and two brothers. Funeral services were held at Ackworth, conducted by Minnie Bassett.

Stuart—Jared P. Stuart, son of Simon and Eunice Stuart, was born December 31, 1839, and died January 21, 1916, aged 76 years and 20 days. He was a devoted member of Millcreek Monthly Meeting, Danville, Indiana. He married Martha Nichols in 1861 with whom he lived almost 50 years, she having died in 1910. He was sincere and loyal in his Christian life and very faithful in his obligations to the church.

Swift—Henry D. Swift, a minister and member of Worcester, Massachusetts, Monthly Meeting, died at his summer home at West Falmouth, Massachusetts, February 29, 1916, in his 82nd year. His conscientious loyalty to his belief that war was not right, was tested in the summer of 1863, when he was drafted into the army. When he refused to take part in military drill, he was tried and sentenced to be shot. Friends visited President Lincoln on his behalf, who directed that an honorable parole be granted. He was thus spared for a highly useful life as a Christian citizen of exemplary walk and conversation. The widow and one son survive him. His son, Arthur H. Swift passed away in 1909 in Jamaica where he was a devoted and successful missionary for 20 years.

WANTED a middle aged Christian woman that wants a good home and small wages, no hard work, but will help to be a companion to afflicted wife, David Hammar, Box 382, Jefferson, Iowa.

WANTED—A head janitor. Earlham College desires to employ a man who is competent and experienced to have general oversight of the janitor work of the college. A permanent position for the right man. R. L. Kelly, President.

NOTICE

The Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of Philadelphia desires to hear of a suitably qualified young woman Friend to assist in the Friends' Girls' School in Tokyo, Japan, and to take part in the general work of the mission as occasion requires. One who feels divinely called to devote her life to Christian service is desired, preferably a college graduate. For further information, address Margaret W. Haines, Cor. Sec., Cheltenham, Pa.

Southland College

— WANTED —

TWO YOUNG MEN TEACHERS,
Principal and Manual Training
At Southland, Arkansas.

A SCHOOL CONDUCTED BY
INDIANA YEARLY MEETING.
OF FRIENDS.

For information write H. C. WOLFORD, President, Southland, Phillips Co., Arkansas, or EDWARD BELLIS, Cor. Sec., Richmond, Ind.

BIBLE SCHOOL APRIL 16.

Subject—Peter and Cornelius.
Lesson—Acts 10:1-23.

Golden Text—For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek; for the same Lord is Lord of all, and is rich unto all that call upon him. Rom. 10:12.

In point of time this lesson is closely associated with that of one week ago. In material it is also of one piece. Peter has remained in Joppa for "many days" with one Simon a tanner. Peter was thus living under circumstances which would be considered compromising by the orthodox Jew. Simon was a tanner and any man handling the material of that trade would be considered unclean. To associate with one who was unclean was in itself an act compromising the ceremonial law.

It seems that Peter must have had doubts about his behavior for it entered as a problem into his dream vision. Peter was also hungry and the vision takes the form of an incident in which he is directed to prepare food from flesh considered by the Hebrew law as unclean. A third element enters into the situation to further the solution of the vexing problem—the coming of the messengers inviting him to go to the home of a man outside the pale of the ceremonial law. As a result of these incidents and experiences Peter made the journey to the home of Cornelius and ministered to his spiritual wants.

This decision had far reaching consequences. Some years later Paul was making his defense before the Jerusalem conference pleading for a liberal attitude towards the gentile converts. The results of that effort seemed uncertain until this experience was cited to prove that Paul was not alone in his attitude for one of the most influential of the Apostolic group had himself set the example.

Cornelius was an officer in the Roman army. He had been favorably impressed with the religious (ethical) ideals of the Jews as had many other Romans of official rank. Like many others he had not as yet been initiated but continued to associate with the Jews, caring little for the peculiar ceremonial laws. He was not a proselyte but among those whom the Jews called the devout. The Christians of Paul's time drew scores of these people into the Christian Church and they formed the basis of the churches which he founded.

The new wine of the gospel was severely straining the old wine skin. As hinted above, Peter severely compromised the ceremonial law, first, by lodging with a tanner, second, by going to the home of Cornelius the gentile. Old customs die hard. Fortunate for the Church it was Peter, one of the twelve who followed this new leading and gave the right hand of fellowship to those outside the "better than thou" circle. Many a missionary worker in recent years knows how hard it is to break through the customs of caste, especially in India. Nor do we have to go so far afield to find striking parallels. It may be that within our own environments there are those for whom God has to do special things before a successor of Peter is found.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.
Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½% FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

FRIENDS MEETINGS

Stockton Avenue Friends Church, San Jose, California. Take Santa Clara Car to Stockton Ave., walk one-half block west. Visitors always welcome.

Washington, D. C. meeting house, 13th and Irving Streets, N. W. Bible School 9:45, meeting for worship 11 a. m., C. E. 7:30. Mid-week meeting Fifth-day, 7:45 p. m.

West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., Main and West 7th Street. Bible School, 9:00; meeting for worship, 10:30; vesper service, 5:00; C. E., 2:15. Prayer meeting, Thursday, 7:30.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books
The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.
Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.
Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingstone, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.
Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.
Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.
All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.
Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.
Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.
Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for Wills
Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.
Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward
Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary

MATTHEW WALKER, Acting Mgr. Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor
WILLIAM S. ASHBROOK, Agency Secretary

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 15.

FOURTH MONTH 13, 1916.

New Series
Vol IV. No. 15.

Worth While

By RUTH LEES OLSON

It was only a hearty handclasp,
But it gripped the soul of a man
With the courage for fresh endeavor,
And started him out again.
Face to face with the same old problems
Of weakness and failure and loss,—
But the strength of that hearty handclasp
Made certain the victor's cross.

It was only a smile in passing,
But it flooded a gloomy heart
With the sunshine of hope for the future
Wherein he had a happy part;
And the clouds had a rosy lining,
And the gray was turned all to gold;
For the smile gave a glimpse of heaven,
And its wonders and joys untold.

It was only a word of greeting
In the press of the throng one day,
But it brought to a soul despairing
Strength and hope for the weary way.
It was only a cup of cold water,
Held to the lips that were parched with pain,
But by means of that Christlike service,
A lost soul found sweet peace again.

"It was only," we say, forgetting
That high in the courts above,
The friendly word and the cooling draft
Are our ministry of love.
And the Master will say to the faithful,
Who meet on the crystal sea,
"Inasmuch as ye did to the children of earth, Ye have done it unto me."

—Exchange.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.
For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Books, Books

THE AMERICAN FRIEND is arranging to handle orders for any and all Friends' books or books of particular interest to Friends. Already these arrangements have been completed for the bulk of such publications, and orders are already being received and filled. From time to time advertisements of some of these books will appear in our advertisement columns, but inquiries about others will be answered with as little delay as possible. Address all orders and inquiries to THE AMERICAN FRIEND, Richmond, Indiana. In no case should these be addressed to the Urbana, Ohio, office, which only has to do with American Friend subscriptions.

Why I am Interested in the Young Friends Movement

By ROBERT DANN.

First, Why am I a Friend? The principle reasons are that I was born and raised a Friend, and that my parents prayed that I might see the Light as they saw it. Now that I am grown and see the light I must be a Friend.

There are two principal reasons why I am interested in the Young Friends Movement. The first is, that I am hoping that it will arouse a more vital interest among the young people in the church.

It is no uncommon thing to find young people that have never been to monthly meeting, and who have only been to Quarterly Meeting for the dinner. When I was young, I had to sit through many long sessions, and now there is no need to urge me to go to the business meetings, as I realize that the business of the church is no mean part of my Christian duty; and I also realize that some one must take the places of those who are now in office. I can see that one cannot get too much experience if one would be useful in that work.

The second reason why I am interested in the young Friends' work is, that I am hoping that we will be able to find within ourselves the answer to the question: "How can we hold the active interest of the young people in the meetings for worship?" I know that out here in the west we have come to the place where we have put too much of the responsibility for the worship in our meetings on the pastors. I am glad that the pastors have been men and women that have been able to carry the load, but I am convinced that this is not the most healthy kind of meeting. What a time we have if the pastor has to be away for a few weeks. Who can we get to take the work? How the attendance does drop off! In our meeting there are a few that can do the work, but they will not be with us long, as they will soon go home to their reward; and we have one or two who are studying for the ministry, but they will soon go to their field, and where will we be?

I am hoping and praying that the Young Friends' Movement will help the young and old alike to get a little more of the spirit of the early Friends, and that we will have a little more waiting on the Lord, giving the Spirit a little more of a chance to work amongst us in our meetings, and that our meeting will show this Spirit to be at work by the frequent messages and prayers from others than the pastors.

I was raised amongst English Friends, but I have had some experience with Friends in Canada and the United States, and I am hoping that this work will produce a type of Friend that will embody the best from the two systems of worship, still keeping our pastors, but having several that will feel the responsibility. And I am also hoping that we will have a Friend that will be truly interested in the business of the church, seeing that it is the business of the kingdom, as well as having some very deep and settled convictions on matters of right and wrong, and one that will be living a true and consistent life.

Newberg, Oregon.

The Way to Blessing

A Christian woman tells of her experience in making a fuller consecration to Christ. "Did you ever have a person in your home," she asks, "who acted as a perpetual rasp on the feelings of your household? I had. One day when I had nearly lost my faith and was sinking in the black waters of despair, I called on Christ to help me, or I would perish. And what do you think he asked me to do? To love this woman. This was the only ladder He offered me out of the black depths. Then I grew uglier than ever, and almost hated my Saviour. The struggle continued until I could stand it no longer. In agony I rushed to my closet and besought Jesus to help me. It seemed then as though in a most tender voice He asked, 'Can't you love her for my sake?' I said, 'Yes, Lord, I will.' At once peace filled my heart. My feelings toward her changed entirely. I had yielded my will to Christ."

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 15.

FOURTH MONTH 13, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 15.

What Does the Gospel Mean to You?

What the gospel means to a man is the measure of his religious experience. Judaism produced its crop of formalists who were loyal to the ceremonial law, because Judaistic religion dealt with the externals of life. On the other hand the early church stressed the spirituality of life and the divine relationship of man's existence, because to its adherents the coming of the Spirit was both the revelation of Christ as the author of man's salvation, and the guarantee of His abiding presence as the controlling element in the conduct of His obedient followers. To the apostles, the gospel was a life-bringing message of good tidings, the literal and unquestioning acceptance of which was binding upon all disciples. In this modern world it appears to be more easy to idealize the gospel than to practice it. Between these extremes runs the entire graded scale of man's religious experience.

To some the gospel is a creed, a doctrine, a statement of belief, to be accepted as the certain badge of discipleship. All persons will agree that what men believe has much to do with what they are and do, and to that extent belief is an essential factor in the redemption plan. Unfortunately a mental assent to the reality of truth is not a sure guarantee of its practice. The old prophets found their greatest difficulty in getting the descendants of Israel to harmonize their living with their creed. The people were slow to learn that "obedience is better than sacrifice." Men may believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and yet fail to practice His precepts. We are not herein endeavoring to contrast belief and practice. While withholding no emphasis that should be maintained upon the essential doctrines of the gospel, there is commanding need that upon the church there shall come a fresh and mighty baptism of the spirit of Christian living and practice.

There are many who idealize the gospel, but are not willing to face the risks which obedience to its precepts involves. There lies before us a prominent religious journal, which, in attempting to interpret the composite opinion of the American people, says, "They want no other nation's territory, but do want safety. They are not anxious for a fight, but know that they may have to defend themselves against nations that are."

But the gospel program leads in quite another direction. Hear the words of Jesus, "Behold, I send you forth as lambs in the midst of wolves." These were not even to be equipped with purse or wallet or shoes. They were guaranteed no protection, only the assurance that His lot was to become their lot, for "He that heareth you heareth me; and he that rejecteth you rejecteth me." "I came not to send peace, but a sword." And then Jesus gave a lesson on preparedness by saying, "He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for My sake shall find it." The gospel command so clearly set forth is "Love your enemies," not prepare to shoot them down to save your own life.

These are hard sayings, but what will it avail the church to "say of Jehovah, He is my refuge and my fortress; my God, in whom I trust;" "His truth is a shield and a buckler," and then belie its own trust in the divine arm by consenting to armaments of guns and battleships as the essential elements of safety? While the world relies upon the arm of flesh, shall the church withhold its reliance upon the arm of Jehovah? There is little wonder that the church is impotent to set the standards for the world, when in grave crises it forsakes its own banner.

The time is at hand when the church must deal in something more fundamental than platitudes upon vital questions of human interest. The world needs the example of a mighty faith that dares to take all the risks involved in a literal obedience to a gospel program of love and Christian brotherhood. But are not the risks inconsequential compared with the dangers of disobedience on the one hand and the assurances of divine protection on the other?

By what authority shall the church elect to obey certain precepts of our Lord and to disown the binding obligations of others? Obedience to Christ is the cornerstone of the Christian faith, and the Sermon on the Mount is the charter of our religious liberties. The gospel must be potent to change human nature and transform human characteristics, or else the church is nothing better than the world. How often does the church find itself only half victorious or wholly beaten for no other reason than that it has turned its back in part at least upon the program of Jesus, and has attempted to build a spiritual kingdom according to the pattern of worldly blue prints!

In its chaos and amid the tumbling ruins of its civilization, the world must be led to look to the author of the Beatitudes as its only hope. When the men return from the European trenches to take up again the tangled threads of ordinary domestic life, will there be any solace, or any appeal, in a religion that has lowered itself to the dead level of the materialistic philosophies that bred the war in the beginning and has fostered it through so many heart-breaking months? Christians, of all men, must take the gospel seriously, and the church can have no permanent standing except as it strives to interpret to others what it believes to be the Master's will. The world needs a type of Christianity that is unwilling under any circumstances to tolerate in itself any semblance of treason to our Lord.

The Finding of Young People for God and the Church

By ORA W. CARRELL.

(A paper read before the Pastor's Association of Iowa Yearly Meeting and published at their request.)

I have been asked to speak to you upon this theme: "The preparation of Young People for the Life Work." In the request which I had on behalf of the committee, the President of our Association asked this very pertinent question: "Ought the Church to be on the lookout for young people of talent and ability and make them feel that they have a work to do—a work of great importance—and that the Church is going to provide a way for them to fit themselves for the work of the Church?" Then he used also this very expressive phrase: "The finding of young people for God and the Church."

Because I believe these words express very accurately the thought of the committee in asking me to present this subject, and because these words also express the thought which has been constantly with me, I am going to take the liberty of changing my subject as printed to this statement of it: "The Finding of Young People for God and the Church." I am glad for the opportunity of speaking upon this subject. I am glad to be able to come before you, not as a pastor, but simply as a young man who, during the past few months, has had the opportunity of coming into close contact with a large number of the young men and women of our Yearly Meeting.

Before I continue, I want to say just here that I am proud of the young people of our Yearly Meeting. Few can fully appreciate the potential strength which is ours. Thirteen hundred of our young men and women are members of our Christian Endeavor Societies alone. They are a splendid lot of young people, with untold possibilities for the future. They are being trained in our high schools and college as no former generation has been trained. They are entering into various forms of activity—agriculture, business and professional life—and are proving to be almost uniformly successful. They are also filling positions of great responsibility and influence in their Church and various communities.

I approach my subject, therefore, with the utmost confidence in our young people, for I am not afraid to trust the future welfare of our denomination, either spiritually or materially, to their leadership; under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. The young men and women of this generation are not less brave or heroic than those of a past generation. They are thinking of community service and of great world problems as but few in the past have considered them. They will be true to the call of God in this unprecedented time of world need; they will not be found wanting. The young people of our day will be true and will serve IF—IF parents and pastors are true in fulfilling their part of the obligation. For I believe that the larger part of the responsibility in "The Finding of Young People for God and the Church" rests with those whom I have just named. And I believe furthermore that the largest responsibility of all rests with the pastors. Therefore, I count it a great opportunity to speak to you upon this subject.

There are certain facts which I believe will be assumed by us all at the outset. First, that the Church, in the midst of present-day conditions, NEEDS young people. No one questions that. Second, that the Church is CALLING for young people as never before. The opportunities for service which are being afforded our young people were never so great as now. This is pre-eminently the age of young men and women. This is just as true of our denomination as of any other, as may be seen throughout all our Yearly Meetings and particularly in the case of the Young Friends' Movement. Furthermore, I believe we will also grant that our Church recognizes the need of young people who are FITTED, prepared, to take up the work of the Church, especially in the light of present national and world problems.

All these principles may be assumed, but the question still remains: "How Shall We Find Young People for God and the Church?" How shall we make them feel what we feel? How shall the obligation for service be laid upon them? In answering these questions I trust that you will keep in mind that I assume as the principle, fundamental to everything else, that it is God Himself who must speak to the conscience of the young man or woman. The Quaker principle of the divine call is the most fundamental principle of my Quaker faith. But I have found in my personal experience that God speaks through many agencies—by His Spirit, through His Word, through human need, through personal ideals and lofty purposes—but also through human instrumentalities—His ministers and servants. I believe there are certain things which you as pastors may do which will greatly assist in the finding of young people for God and the Church.

First of all, you may do much to create within them the consciousness of their own personal responsibility toward God. This is fundamental to everything else. There will be no true or unselfish service for man which does not spring forth from the fountain of divine love. Daniel Webster was once asked, "What is the most profound thought which has ever passed through your mind?" He replied, "The thought of my personal responsibility to God." Every young man and woman needs to have something of that same feeling. We need a revival in the basic principles of Christianity. We need to have more sermons preached concerning the debt which men owe to God.

Now, if the young men and women of our Church are ever to be "found" for service, they must first of all some way be made to feel their personal responsibility toward God. In this the pastor may have a large part. The young man and woman must be led to realize this responsibility toward God as a perfectly natural and normal attitude of their lives. The whole worship of the Church—all its services—should be such as to lead to this consciousness.

There is one fact which we have not realized in the past. It is this: If ever young men and women are to be "found" for God and the Church, the first steps must be taken with our boys and girls. Too often we allow our boys and girls to go on without making any definite effort in their behalf. We allow meeting after meeting to pass without any special sermon or talks for them. We speak clear over the heads of our boys and girls to the "grown-ups," letting them slip out of the Bible School and the Church unnoticed, and then make desperate but vain efforts to "find" the few young men and women who remain, for the work of the Church. More of our elders and overseers would be kept awake and more boys and girls held to the church if you would preach to the children sometimes.

In simple and natural ways the boys and girls may be led to see their obligation to their Heavenly Father who has so wonderfully provided for their every need. So also, through normal (not abnormal) means you may, with the aid of the Spirit, literally create within the consciousness of our young people a sense of their responsibility toward God. Having helped to create this consciousness of responsibility, we must go further. We must provide opportunity for the natural expression of their sense of responsibility. It is not enough to say "You ought." We must also show them how and provide the opportunity for this self-expression.

Our denomination has given the opportunity for Christian service to our young people in a much larger way than has any other denomination. From the first we have maintained that women should share equally with men in their public exercise of divine gifts. Our whole theory of worship is based upon the principle of individual and equal responsibility to our heavenly Father. But with all kindness, I must say to you that I fear that we are not holding to these fundamental principles of our Quaker faith as we ought. It is my observation that there are many tendencies toward our building up a ministerial body, a priestly class with priestly functions somewhat as have other denominations. Too many of our services are participated in by but one individual. The opportunity for common worship, especially in our morning meetings, is not given as largely as it should be. Perhaps you may say, "Yes, but the people will not respond when the opportunity is given." May I ask you one very direct question in reply? "Why do they not respond?" Have you given them frequent opportunity to do so? Have you trained them in the exercise of public worship? It is my feeling that people must be encouraged and trained in worship, and I believe there is no more effective way of doing this than with the younger people and in the mid-week prayer meeting. The primary object of every meeting is to worship—not to preach, nor to listen to a sermon. To really provide your young people with the proper opportunity for this expression of responsibility may mean that you will often have to put yourself in the background, but that will be true leadership.

Not only in our meetings for worship must our young people have this opportunity for self-expression, but pastors especially must study to provide opportunities for service in the work of the Church. Something more is needed than our Christian Endeavor Societies and Bible Schools as they are often conducted. These organizations may be very effectively used but there need to be more opportunities provided for the expression of spiritual life. Both the Christian Endeavor and the Bible School need to be developed along this line. Not only this, but every pastor should definitely use his young people in the public service and work of the Church. Oftentimes many of them can be used in Mission Sunday Schools, neighborhood prayer meetings, Gospel teams, literary and social clubs and as leaders of boys' and girls' sports and activities.

One thing that is needed by every pastor who would use his young people in the largest way is a broader conception of the meaning of the Christian ministry than is usually given to it. We have practically defined it as "spiritual" in the past—and that in a very narrow sense. We have made "the ministry" to include only preachers, evangelists and missionaries. In doing so we have lost our grip upon some of the strongest of our young men and women. That type of "the ministry" did not appeal to them. Today we are coming nearer to the conception of Jesus Christ as we see that life cannot be separated into the watertight compartments of the "spiritual" and the "secular." We are seeing that Jesus ministered to the spiritual when he unstopped deaf ears and made whole the lepers. We see that Jesus ministered to the spiritual directly through these natural means. We are beginning to see that the Church which would really minister to the life of its community must minister to its whole life—physical, social, intellectual, and spiritual. In such a blessed and broad ministry as this, every young man and woman is needed. Ample opportunity can be afforded to every one for spiritual self-expression by the Church which effectively serves the community.

But you must never say to your young people that the Church needs you, unless you are prepared to show them in a concrete way how and where they may serve. (How many of you read the article by George Innes in the December number of the Ladies' Home Journal entitled "How I Tried to Break Into the Church"? It will do you good and stir your blood to read it.) Mr. Innes is now serving as secretary for the Mission Board of one of our prominent denominations. Mr. Innes had heard repeatedly that what the Church needed more than anything else was men. The cry was for men—men—constantly, with no suggestion as to where they were needed. Finally, feeling that he must answer the call of the church, he gave up a splendid business position in the Northwest and came and offered himself to the Church. His pastor was amazed when he came, and said, "Why, you mustn't take us so literally as that!" Mr. Innes went to a number of ministers and all the satisfaction he received was, "Just go to work—anywhere!" He was given nothing definite to do. Only through great persistence did he succeed in finding a place of service.

Now we must not make this mistake with our young people. One of the most appealing things I ever saw was a booklet issued by the American Friends' Board of Foreign Missions, which listed nothing else save the places of opportunity which were awaiting trained young men and women for Christian service in various mission lands. There was something definite—it challenged with a mighty appeal. It seems to me that it would be exceedingly valuable (for the pastor himself) for the pastor to prepare and keep a definite list of places of service which are open in the Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, Brotherhood, and various organizations of his church, including all the possible opportunities for young people to serve in their community.

Now, if you have sought to provide every possible means of service and expression for your young people, you will already have begun to realize the necessity of discovering the latent talents and possibilities within their lives. This is the third point of which I wish to speak. You ought to make a definite study of the life of every boy and girl, of every young man and woman in your Meeting. This, I recognize, is a still more difficult task than the one just described. But it is one which ought to be undertaken. It is the business of the pastor to know his people, not merely to preach to or at his people. We all feel the need of young people in the active service of the church, but they will never be "found" until our pastors seek to discover the latent talents and possibilities of their lives.

These will be studied in the light of the broad conception of the Christian ministry which has already been described. Too often we have selected only the young men of pleasing personality or of fluent speech for the service of the church. I know a young man who today is one of the most efficient Bible School Superintendents that we have in the Yearly Meeting who has had great difficulty in being able to speak at all in public. Suppose his pastor had cast him aside and said, "There's no place for you; you are not able to speak." If he had, a most valuable and efficient life would have been lost to the church. The seemingly unpromising as well as the most promising young person should be studied. God hides His diamonds oftentimes in unlikely looking places. The wise and patient pastor looks far into the future as he studies the lives of his young people.

But having come to know their possibilities, there is something more that this efficient pastor will do. It is the fourth point of my address. It seems a simple thing, a very natural thing. But it is one that is frequently forgotten or neglected. It may be stated in two words: "Encourage them." It is one of the biggest things you can do. I believe the Gospel of encouragement is one that needs to be preached a great deal more than it is. For the simple lack of encouragement many young men and women who have honestly faced the question of Christian service have turned sadly away from it. A cordial "God bless you" might have saved them to a life of active service. But they had no encouragement at home, and they received but little from the church. Why should they thrust themselves in where they were not wanted? Why should they try to serve when they felt so poorly equipped for it? A big, brotherly pastor would have saved that life for Christ and the church.

I know from my own experience what some very simple words of encouragement have meant to me—what they mean to me even now. There is not one of you who does not remember with deep gratitude some word spoken by a sainted mother, a true Christian pastor, or a godly soul in the church. There may be young men and women in your community who are starving for a word of encouragement from you. Go back to your Meeting, invite that person to your home or in some way express to him your very deep interest in his life and encourage him in his plans for the future. Tell him that God has a great many places in His Kingdom where He can make men and women very useful. Tell him, "God needs you!"

There is one other word that I would speak concerning the Finding of Young People for God and the Church. It is this: "Train them." It is not enough to encourage them or to find places where they can serve. We must also train our young men and women for Christian service. We have failed in the past because we did not take this final step.

We demand that our public school teachers shall be well trained for their work; we require the most rigid form of training for our doctors and lawyers; we are coming to demand special training for our farmers and business men. We must also demand that the future leaders of our church have a training which will enable them to reach and touch the lives of all types of people in their congregation. The work of the Christian church is the greatest work in the world; it deserves the most efficient leadership. A common school or even a high school education is no longer enough as the foundation for the great work of the church. A new day of opportunity and need has been brought about and the young man or woman who looks forward to service in God's kingdom must be thoroughly trained for the work.

But there are young people who feel the call to Christian service and who want to secure an adequate preparation who are not financially able to do so. That raises the very practical question, "Should the church provide funds or scholarships for such as these?" In the case of some of our theological seminaries this has been done and it is true to some degree with our colleges. Our denomination has not yet dared to face this problem in any adequate way. We have no theological seminary, and perhaps this is not advisable at present, but we do have colleges with special Biblical departments. Why not provide scholarships that will enable deserving young men and women to receive aid in their college work—not as charity, but simply as a good business proposition, providing for an adequate leadership of the church for the future? What would be the wisest course to take in this matter?

In what I have said, I have given five answers to the question, "How to Find Young People for God and the Church." First, create within them the consciousness of their own personal responsibility toward God. Second, provide opportunity for the expression of this sense of responsibility.

Third, seek to discover the latent talents and possibilities of their lives.

Fourth, encourage them.

Fifth, train them.

If we, as the ministers of Christ, faithfully do our part, committing the lives of our boys and girls and of our young men and women unto Him, we may confidently trust God to speak to their inmost souls and to call them forth into His blessed service.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Congress On Christian Work In Latin America Held at Panama, Feb. 10-20, 1916.

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS.

(Continued from last week)

Sunday, Feb. 13th, was a great day in the canal zone. The day opened with a devotional service for delegates at 9:00 A. M. led by Bishop Oldham. At the Union Church at Balboa, President King spoke on "Facing the Facts of Life." In an impressive sermon, he dwelt on (1) the fact of our double nature; (2) the fact of the fateful gift of will that can choose for or against God; (3) the fact of responsibility; (4) the fact of our capacity for indefinite growth; (5) the fact of sin; (6) the fact of human love; (7) the fact of death; (8) the fact of accountability and final judgment; (9) the fact of future life; (10) the fact of the need of help for others; (11) the fact of Christ.

Probably the most impressive address of the Congress was that given Sunday evening by John R. Mott on "The Religious Significance of the War." It was given by invitation of the Rector of the National Institute of Panama in the beautiful auditorium of that institution. It was largely attended by leading men of Panama and the canal zone, as well as by the delegates of the Congress. Senor G. Andreve, Secretary of Public Instruction for Panama, in introducing Mr. Mott said that since the founding of the Instituto Nacional, its platform had not been occupied by a more distinguished speaker than Dr. Mott. The report in the Panama Star and Herald next day said: "In an address that throbbed with Christian passion, Dr. Mott threw the search light of Christian sympathy into the hospital wards, the trenches, the camps, the prisoners' stockades, the homes of the nations and made his hearers almost see the divine figure of the living Christ moving among the wounded, the bereaved, the imprisoned. Over the whole map of Europe he wrote the word 'Opportunity.' The appeal that went farthest home to his distinguished audience was that in which he presented the opportunity for a great union movement of the Christian forces of the republics of North and South America, for the helping of Europe in these days of her anguish. The suggestion of a vast concrete task like this, uniting the Latins and Anglo-Saxons of the two Americas in doing human service for their brothers across the sea, gripped and fired the imagination of the audience, and started waves of emotion."

Besides these addresses, there was preaching in more than three score centers of the canal zone.

The theme of Monday evening was "Leadership." Edurado Carlos Persira of Sao Paulo, Brazil, discussed in a masterly way "True Leaders the Fundamental Need." In an impressive passage, he said: "Little or no help can be given to progress in South America by a Protestantism divided, intolerant, weak and torn by the spirit of sectarianism—a perpetual stumbling stone to Latin peoples. The Saxon race—individualistic, strong and self-sufficient in its exclusivism—may be able to accommodate itself to the individualism of its historic and religious organizations, even when this organization is divided into sectarian groups. But the Latin race, social, genial, with its collective tendencies, will with difficulty adapt itself to this sectarian individualism. That which in the divers denominations appears to the analytic Saxon spirit a manifestation of strength and loyalty to principle, seems rather to the synthetic Latin spirit an expression of weakness, of egotism, of inability to rise to the broad understanding of Christian unity.”

Bishop Stuntz followed on “The Price of Leadership.” He emphasized the importance of not judging the people of Latin America by our Anglo-Saxon standards and ideals. We need to appreciate the centuries of formative influences coming from the Moslem conceptions imprinted by the Moors on Spain leading up to the Spanish inquisition, and crushing out for centuries all freedom of thought and aspiration in these southern peoples. Unless we pay the price of getting into a sympathetic relationship with their dwarfed, starved natures, we can do them little good.

Tuesday evening was the “Women’s Session.” There were four addresses by women, and a closing address by Bishop Kinsolving, of Brazil. Women took a large place in the program of the Congress. Some of its strongest addresses were given by them. The pitiful condition of womanhood in Latin America, and the key position they occupy, being at the same time under the complete domination of the priests, and in turn being a dominating influence in social life and largely influencing political life, were themes demanding earnest consideration.

On Wednesday evening, Judge Emilio del Toro, of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico, made a profound impression on the Congress in a strong address, given in “beautiful Spanish,” emphasizing his belief that in the spreading of the evangelical faith lies the salvation and uplifting of the Latin-American republics. President Charles T. Paul, of the College of Missions, Indianapolis, followed on “The Principles and Spirit of Jesus Essential to Meet the Social Needs of Our Times.” He showed from the poetry of Latin-America how abject is their hopelessness without the knowledge of the living Christ.

Thursday evening, Dr. Goucher spoke on “The Triumph of Christianity.” The first part was largely philosophical, but the latter part gave out of his personal observation in the great fields of Asia, the mighty transformations that are taking place under the influence of the Gospel of Christ.

Bishop Kinsolving, of the Episcopal Church in Brazil, spoke in a very enthusiastic way of the power of the Gospel to redeem the desperate condition of Latin-America, down-trodden for centuries under the power of a form of Christianity without the open Bible and the Living Christ. He said: “Shall Latin-America be left a spiritual waste—arid, barren, desolate—along the pathway of Christianity? Shall these vast regions, Cuba, Brazil, Argentina, Mexico, Bolivia, Peru, remain to stare the future church historian in the face, as witnesses to the non-catholicity of Christianity? For my part, I cannot allow that Christianity’s utmost power has been tested there, nor can we reasonably expect to witness in those lands today the normal fruitage of the religion of Christ. In the spiritual poverty of Latin people, let the Church read her call; in the open door inviting entrance, her opportunity.”

Friday evening, Alvaro Reis, of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, spoke on “The Vital and Conquering Power of Christianity.” In this enlightening address, he said: “The evangelical work in all Latin-America is the most difficult in the world, because these people, religiously speaking, are neither cold nor hot, but lukewarm. The Latin peoples drifted into this listless attitude toward religion, owing to the nefarious Jesuitical training which has caused them to become strangers to the simple evangelical faith. Due to the commercial worship, and the licentious living of the priesthood, the people have become indifferent or frankly atheistic. Is it not because the Roman Church has never founded its propaganda on the Bible? The Roman Church sows rosaries, veronics, amulets, relics, images and scapulars, and reaps the natural harvest of ignorance and superstition. These people, living in complete ignorance of, and contradiction to, the Gospel, regard themselves as Christians.

“What is necessary, brethren, is that, inspired by the Holy Spirit, possessed of a faith that expects great things from God, hearts overflowing with love for our fellowmen, we shall not weary in doing good, but be always ready to bear forward with conquering tread the glorious cross of Jesus Christ. I speak from an experience of 30 years of struggle; there is only one way to conquer and preserve souls for Christ—that is the preaching of the Gospel in its sublime and divine simplicity! Let us preach this Gospel, at whatever cost, and the result will inevitably be the conquest, not only of Latin-America, but of the entire world, for Christ.”

Dr. James I. Vance, of Nashville, Tenn., followed on the same theme. The daily report says, “his message was an analysis and interpretation of the Christian Gospel, than which there has been no more satisfying utterance in all the sessions of the Congress. His speech was a rare combination of scholarly thought and human appeal, of the most modern intellectual vision, and the old but ever true evangelical message.” In closing, he said, “These are the four great lines along which Christianity moves to victory—an open Bible in the language of the people; an open altar where every man may come immediately into God's presence and, unhindered, boldly make known his requests and find grace to help in every time of need; Calvary and the saving power of Him who hung there on the cross, and lifted a nail-scarred hand to tear away the veil which human fears had woven across the face of God; and the Kingdom, society redeemed, all kinds of slaveries, industrial, political, social and religious ended, and the age of fraternity ushered in, when 'Man to man the world o'er shall brothers be.' The Bible, the mercy seat, the cross, and human brotherhood—these are the dynamic forces by which Christianity operates in the world, and their progress can no more be checked than a sunrise; and where they are in control we see the resurrection and the life.

"Let me mention in closing two other things which must characterize the spirit and activities of the church, if Christianity is to vitalize and conquer. The first is unity and co-operation. Perhaps some of us may have come to this Congress still somewhat enamored, not with sectarianism—for we have long since torn the mask from its hideous visage—but of denominationalism. We have, however, I imagine, seen and heard enough here to disillusion us. We shall never get far toward victory for Christ until we get together. If the speedy evangelization of Latin-America summons us to sink our denominational differences, and unify our forces, and co-operate in our plans, shall we hesitate? We are meeting amid activities which are suggestive, if not prophetic. The Canal Zone has united two oceans and unified two continents. It is my country's splendid contribution to Pan-Americanism. It is more than that: It is my country's unmistakable proclamation of her creed of internationalism. What we need for Christian work in North no less than in South America is an ecclesiastical canal zone, that shall end our denominational isolations and unify our plans and forces, and unite us in our supreme mastering, conquering purpose for the Kingdom.

"The other thing that is needed is the spirit of sacrificial service. More than once from this platform some one has told us that the demand for sacrifice on the mission fields of Latin-America no longer exists. This is probably true if the reference is to sacrifice forced in conditions of living. But Christian sacrifice is a bigger, a holier thing. It is laying down your life for the brethren. It is the spirit of Calvary. It is the only thing anywhere that can ever interpret Christ to a lost world. If Christianity is to vitalize and conquer, Christ's followers must catch his spirit of sacrificial service. Europe today is aflame with a sacrificial devotion to country that should shame and stir the church of God. While men are pouring out their lives in heroic elation on these bloody battlefields, shall the church be empty of that passionate devotion which goes to the gates of death to save a life, and in whose glorious abandon Paul exclaimed, 'I could wish that myself were accursed for my brethren.'

"In the beauty of the lillies, Christ was born across the sea,

With a glory in his bosom which transfigures you and me.

As He died to make men holy, let us live to make men free,

While God is marching on.'

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me;' the cross! the cross! the CROSS! the blood red cross of Calvary on the blue field of Christian love, for the great white hope of bringing the lost world back to God."

Devotional Half Hours

The last half hour of the forenoon was set apart for devotion. This was the heart of the day's work. The following topics were considered:

1. Preserving a Realizing Sense of Christ—led by Bishop Oldham.
2. The Ministry of Intercession—led by Dr. A. McLean.
3. Lessons From the Early Christians—led by Prof. Wm. Adams Brown.
4. Reality and Religion—led by President Henry Churchill King.
5. Christ's Vision of the Unity of All Believers—led by Bishop Paul de Sweinitz, of the Moravian Church.
6. Recovery of the Apostolic Conception of God—led by Dr. L. C. Barnes.
7. Secret of a Mighty Work of God—led by Bishop W. R. Lambuth.

These were all noteworthy for deep devotional spirit and messages full of inspiration.

The last hour and a half of the closing session on the afternoon of Saturday, February 19th, was given to worship. Dr. George Alexander, of New York, preached the Congress Sermon on "Jesus Christ, the Same Yesterday, Today and Forever." He said: "The time when the epistle to the Hebrews was written was a time of transition. Ancient faith and forms ceased to satisfy. Things were being 'shaken.' Jesus Christ was the unchangeable base. He is the immutable Christ—not in form; for he emptied himself; not unvarying in form of message; the phenomena of Christianity are changeable. He is the same as the revealer of God; he gave a new conception of God as Father. He is God's prophet to all races and generations. His words are vital. He was and is a divine-human personality. Great advance has been made in astronomy and science; but there is no new answer to the great question of life and death; no other answer can be given. He is the source of the life-giving stream flowing down through the ages. He is the same as the healer of the hurt of humanity. Jesus is the reconciliation for an alienated race. No other remedy for sin has been discovered. He is changeless as High Priest of our profession, and as Master, Lord and King. Proud Saul of Tarsus prayed that every thought might be subjected to Him. What he stands for is the demand of all the race. Carry this truth everywhere.

"The old order is gone forever. We go forth into a new age. But His word is still good: 'Lo, I am with you.' 'The world seeth him no more.' He dropped out as a factor in the world's history. He lived in a literary age, yet no allusion to him is found in profane history. There is no scrap from his pen. 'But ye are in the world.' The disciples are to take his place. While he is in the world he is the light of the world. Pentecost is Christ in Peter and the other disciples. Paul says, 'Christ liveth in ME.' Christ lives in all apostles and missionaries. Christ is the same in all ages."

Following the sermon, fifteen minutes were devoted to thanksgiving in prayer, and the last fifteen minutes to silent prayer.

(To be continued)

In the Yangtse Gorges

By ROBERT L. SIMKIN.

Here we are in the gorges of the mighty Yangtse. Our party has been augmented by the addition of a lady physician of the Methodist Mission and of Miss Marrs and Miss Naish, of our own mission. It was therefore necessary at Ichang to secure two boats for the journey to Chungking. This, however, has not proved so easy a matter as one might imagine, for the Peking Government is mobilizing thousands of troops for use against the rebels in Yunnan, and every available boat has been commandeered by the military authorities to transport these through the gorges. We did learn of two houseboats which had escaped the vigilance of the soldiers, and we even went to inspect them and see if they would be suitable.

But here a new difficulty arose. It is usually the custom in China to deal not directly with a boatman whom one wishes to engage, but to carry on negotiations through a middleman, and in this case we found that the middleman was in collusion with a friend of his who was desirous of renting us a boat much smaller than we needed for our cargo. He was therefore acting as a fence to keep us from engaging the boats that we wanted, in order to force us to engage others which would bring him a greater profit or "squeeze." After several days of unsuccessful efforts to secure boats, during which time the soldiers seized those which we had hoped to secure, I decided to deal directly with the boat captains and at least be sure that they were correctly informed of the sum which we were willing to offer.

I found the boatmen much more willing to rent their boats to us than to the military authorities, because the soldiers frequently cause them much trouble by their arrogance, and at best the price fixed by the Government for carrying troops is not munificent. Houseboats were not obtainable, but we finally secured two boats with wooden sides in which were cut windows a foot square to admit light. Air need not be provided for, because it enters unbidden through the cracks and knotholes of the rude doors at the ends of the portion we occupy, as well as through the crevices of the bamboo matting which serves as a roof.

Our compartments are twenty feet long and eleven feet wide, located near the center of the boat and extending the entire width, so that the boatmen must pass over the entire roof when they wish to go from the bow to the stern. This space is divided as follows: The first section of about seven feet is occupied by Miss Naish and Miss Balderston, and separated from this is our own compartment, of equal size. This is separated from the rear room of six feet by a curtain which may be removed during the day, so that the two rooms may be used together as a living room. In the back corner we have set up our cookstove, with the pipe projecting through the mat roof, and opposite stands the crate in which the stove came, which now serves both as our larder and as our dining table. The hold, about six feet deep, beneath the floor, is filled with all sorts of supplies, foodstuffs, medicines, clothing, books, stationery, lawnmower, engine repairs, stove repairs, beds, typewriter, etc., for ourselves and nineteen other families.

The fifteen feet just behind our quarters is occupied by the captain and several of his men, one of whom always stands with his hand guiding the helm, while others manage the sail if there is sufficient wind to aid the trackers on whom the boat chiefly depends for its motive power. These trackers, or coolies, put up a temporary shelter of mats over that portion of the boat which lies in front of our quarters, about thirty-five feet long, and sleep on this deck, rolled up in their cotton-wadded quilts. During the daytime this deck is cleared for action, as it is needed for navigating the boat. There is always a portion of the crew on our boat, nine men,—which remains on the boat while the others go on shore with their bamboo ropes to pull. We have also a small boat, with a crew of seven men, to carry ropes and to ferry the trackers to the shore and back, or to take them across the river when impassable walls of rock or the changing of the current renders it necessary.

The cooking for the entire crew of forty-two men is done in a hole five by ten feet in the forward deck, and after a hard morning's pulling and scrambling over huge rocks piled in confusion along the river bank there ensues a lively fifteen minutes when they all come aboard the boat and sit on their haunches, each with his bowl of rice, which is several times refilled before all are satisfied. When at work the boatmen have three meals a day, or four in summer when the daylight is of longer duration. They are stirring at the first approach of dawn, and they work almost without resting until darkness overtakes them.

The journey has thus far been full of excitement. About noon on January 31st, as we were going along peacefully in apparently deep water, a great lurch to one side indicated that we had run upon a submerged rock. There we hung for about a quarter of an hour, the boat listing to starboard, while the men pulled and pulled on the ropes, trying to get us off. Had the rock been sharp it would have bored its way through the bottom, but we managed to get off before much damage was done. For one or two nights the men came into our rooms to bail out the water at midnight, but they later found and calked the leak, and we have had no more trouble.

The rock where we so nearly came to grief is the very place where we nearly had a wreck six years ago. On that occasion we had pulled up into a small rapid just above when the tracking line fouled with a small boat ahead of us and had to be cast off. This left us at the mercy of the current, which was carrying us down at a terrific pace, and our servant came in with blanched face with the news that we were likely to dash against a rock at any moment. We helped the boatmen man the oars, and after passing safely through the danger zone, the boat was brought into a small bay where it could be controlled. With that heavy cargo boat going at such a speed, had we struck upon the rock upon which this boat struck, it would certainly have torn a great hole in her.

On February 1st we arrived at the Chin Rapid, which is one of the worst in the river. This is staged in a most wonderfully beautiful setting. On each side rise very high mountains in impressive grandeur. An eagle circling far above us seems only a third up the beetling crags, and the roar of the rapid is intensified by the stillness of the granite walls. Just above the rapid the water is comparatively peaceful, as if gathering strength for the great plunge. Below, the river is a mass of seething waters, with a strong back current on each side, and a very respectable auxiliary rapid a third of a mile below.

On arrival at this lower rapid the backwash carried us up stream with such force that the men hastened to put out a heavy beam to ward us off the rocks. As we struck, the cable by which the beam engages the boat snapped, and the beam lifted one of the boatmen and neatly dropped him into the water. As he came up he grasped a rope and was pulled on board, none the worse for his cold ducking. That same afternoon we saw another boat swept upward toward the shore by the back current in the same manner, and when the crew lowered the beam of strong oak timber it splintered like matchwood at the impact, but it saved the boat.

We pulled through the first rapid and came into position to lay out ropes for the main rapid. Here we had to wait for five large junks carrying soldiers which had arrived before us. As the last one pulled through the swift water below the rapid the bow swung out a little too far and the current, catching it broadside, dragged the rope out of the grasp of the trackers. Down, down it swept, and although the sail was set in a stiff breeze the boatmen could not prevent its going away below the lower rapid.

Our two boats were now at the head of the line, all ready to go up, when the soldiers came and forbade our men to stir until this runaway boat had been recaptured, drawn through the lower rapid and then through the big rapid. It was very shabby treatment compared with the courteous treatment we usually receive in China. I remonstrated mildly, but one does not argue with men with fixed bayonets. Besides, we feared they would steal our trackers whom they were commanding to come and help pull the boat over the rapid, so most of our men and myself went and helped them through the rapid. When they saw me pulling on the rope their attitude changed and they became very friendly. It was now too late for us to attempt to go up, however, so we moored in a little cove and slept with the roar of the rapid in our ears.

(To be continued)

Tom Thumb

Yes, there was a real Tom Thumb, not as small as the dwarf told in old fairy tales and ballads, however. He was about three feet high, and was just as famous as he was small. Your father and mother may have seen him and talked to him.

One of his best friends was Mr. Barnum, whose wonderful circus delighted little folks years ago. He and Mr. Barnum are buried in the same churchyard in a little town in Connecticut. It was Mr. Barnum who made him famous, for the little dwarf became part of his circus. Children in every big city in the country and in many small towns and villages learned to love "General Tom Thumb" and to watch for his coming. He could sing the national airs of any country he visited. Kings and queens sent for him to come to their palaces, and he made friends among the most powerful people, as well as among those in more humble circumstances. In fact, he had a wonderful life and was a great favorite.—Picture Story Paper.

Sewing Without Thread

"I like to sew when there is no thread in the machine, it runs so easily," said a little girl one day.

A good many people, I think, are pretty fond of running their machine without thread.

When I hear a boy talking largely of the grand things he would do, if only he could, and if only things and circumstances were different, and then neglecting every daily duty, and avoiding work and lessons, I think he is running his machine without any thread.

When I see a girl very sweet and pleasant abroad, ready to do anything for a stranger, and cross and disagreeable in her home, she, too, is running her machine without any thread.

Ah! This sewing without a thread is very easy indeed, and the life machine will make a great buzzing, but labor, time and force will, in the end, be far worse than lost.—Friend of Boys and Girls.

PHILADELPHIA YEARLY MEETING

It is not an easy task to express the spirit of a great occasion. One may readily recite the matters of popular interest—the sensational features—such as are caught up quickly by the newspapers, and displayed in conspicuous headlines. But the sessions of the Yearly Meeting at Fourth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, from the twenty-fifth to the thirty-first of the past month, were pervaded by a spirit more significant than mere news is likely to convey. It was the spirit of renewed consecration, embodied in a broader vision and a fuller love.

Naturally the subject of peace, as opposed to all war and preparation for war, was the prevailing exercise of spirit, finding expression in many ways and listened to with never failing interest. The desire to be in no respect lacking individually or as a religious body led the meeting many times into close search and earnest prayer that nothing may separate us from manifesting the pure unselfishness of Jesus Christ.

Accordingly our attitude toward others bearing the name of Friends was impressively referred to again and again, with the earnest hope that we might fulfill the injunction of the apostle to "love as brethren; be pitiful, be courteous; having compassion one of another; not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing, but contrariwise, blessing."

In the Select Meeting, the religious concern of a minister was presented, with minutes of approval and encouragement from subordinate meetings, "to labor as the way may seem clear amongst those bearing the name of Friends throughout the United States, endeavoring to strengthen them in the gospel of the Saviour, Jesus Christ, with reference particularly to peace and sobriety," encouraging a closer fellowship in all points wherein we agree. This brought the meeting under deep and earnest exercise into much sympathy and tenderness of spirit, but the way did not seem entirely clear at this time to grant the minute asked for.

William B. Harvey returned the minute granted him two years ago to travel with William C. Allen and wife in the Orient. The minute of William C. Allen was sent back to him by the meeting in response to his own concern to complete the service originally contemplated, by visiting the British Isles. He was left to his own judgment as to time, but was encouraged to continued faithfulness.

On the same day in the general meeting, but altogether independent of the select meeting or of its judgment (not known to many others), an exercise spread over the meeting to send a message of love, with reference particularly to our testimony against war, to all Friends in America, and a committee was appointed to prepare such a communication. The Women's Meeting also prepared a statement on the subject of peace, addressed to the women of the United States, and which they hope may be brought to the attention of all organizations of women in this country. (This appears in the American Friend this week.—Editor.)

Certain changes in the Book of Discipline, recommended by the Representative Meeting, were adopted with but little dissent. Foremost of these is the omission of that portion of the query which refers to a "ministry exercised at stated times or for pay." The query now reads: "Do you uphold and cherish a waiting, spiritual worship, and a free gospel ministry, dependent upon the Head of the Church and exercised in the fresh life and power of His Holy Spirit?" Other changes were to allow marriages in meeting houses, whether of members or non-members who may marry non-members, provided only that the marriage be conducted by Friends' ceremony, and that the laws of the State in which the marriage takes place do not conflict with the exercise of this privilege.

Accessions to membership during the past year have included one hundred by "convincement." The total membership is now 4,479, an increase of about two percent. The reports on education, on abstinence from the use of intoxicants, on Westtown Boarding School, on the Indian School at Tunesassa, N. Y., and the consideration of the state of society as evidenced by the answers to the queries, all and each awakened much interesting expression. The reading of a memorial of the late Jonathan E. Rhoads, a much beloved minister and a man of prominence in business, deepened the feeling of reverence and renewed devotion in which the series of meetings closed.

Any report of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting would be incomplete, however, that made no mention of the afternoon and evening meetings held at the Twelfth Street meeting house. These represent philanthropic interests not reporting to the Yearly Meeting as a body, but quite in harmony therewith in spirit, and participated in by the membership generally, but especially by the younger and middle-aged Friends, many of whom cannot attend the day sessions regularly because of business obligations. A list of these meetings must suffice for this limited report. Taking them in the order of their occurrence, we note "The Challenge of the Home Field in Relation to the Foreign," by Katherine Duffield (Wellesley, 1913); "Christianity and Internationalism," by Dr. Shailer Mathews, of Chicago.

Other addresses were on "Negro Education," by Dr. James H. Dillard and by Edgar A. Long, principal of the school at Christiansburg, Va. There was an address by Clara H. P. Stillwell, who is School Visitor for Friends Temperance Association, and is conducting a splendid work in the schools of Philadelphia. Also an address by Elizabeth H. Goodwin on "Is Total Abstinence all that is Required of the Society of Friends?" There were addresses by Bertha M. T. Webster on the Howard Institution, Philadelphia; by J. Herbert Cope regarding his work among the Hill Tribes of Burma; by Edith Sharpless on her observations of Christian Thought in Japan; by Elbert Russell, now of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, on "Gospels and The Gospel;" by Arthur C. Parker, a Seneca Indian, editor and archaeologist of distinction.

Do you wonder that "Quaker Meeting Week" in Philadelphia is still enough of a sensation to command a column each day in the great newspapers of the city? One thing more should at least have mention—The Arch Street Center. This is a handsome, fire-proof building at 304 Arch street, adjacent to the meeting house property, with its square old building and fine shade trees enclosed by a high brick wall. The Center is well equipped as a house of entertainment for regular guests and other Friends who may be passing this way. Call and see us.

BENJAMIN F. WHITSON.
Moylan, Pa.

A LETTER TO WOMEN.

To The Women of the United States.
Dear Friends:

On the occasion of the 231st annual assembly of the Religious Society of Friends of Philadelphia and vicinity, held in the spring of 1916, the ancient Quaker testimony against war naturally claimed long and serious attention.

In the large separate gathering of women Friends the present critical situation of our beloved country, the difficulties with which her statesmen are beset, and the confusion of ideas and ideals engendered in the minds of her people by the world-wide strife of nations were sympathetically discussed.

But most deeply of all ran the thought and sympathy of the assembly toward women everywhere—toward those who are suffering and sacrificing in the midst of actual warfare, and not less toward those of our own land who are overshadowed by the dread of future calamity.

During the solemn pauses which interspersed these deliberations the desire found place in the hearts of the assembly to frame a message of love and Christian fellowship for all the women of our land.

We know that voluntarily or involuntarily women have always borne their full share of the weight of war. Endowed with instincts which make them the natural conservators of life, guardians of hearthstones and nourishers of the character and ideals of the race, they yet have borne heroically through their capacity to sacrifice and endure the destruction by war of these objects of their affection and devotion.

But we also know that today from thousands of women's hearts in the war-swept nations and in our own has gone up the cry, "Is there no better way? Is this waste and desolation, this horror and anguish, essential to the settlement of differences among nations?"

To this we women of the Society of Friends reply with unwavering conviction, "There is a better way."

We believe the world is recognizing as never before the paradox of Christian nations at war; that such phrases as a "Christian sword" and a "righteous war" contain their own refutation; that the voice which spoke through Jesus of Nazareth twenty centuries ago still sounds in the hearts of men the injunctions, "Resist not evil," "Love your enemies," "Do good to them that hate you."

We believe that war, no matter how seemingly just its cause, or lofty its motive, is nevertheless nourished on falsehood, contempt for the gentler virtues, hate, lust, treachery and cruelty; that in spite of much that is noble and self-sacrificing in its outward aspects it nevertheless violates and retards the realization in human society of those principles for which women should ever stand—the integrity of the home, the Christian nurture and education of the young, the abolition of social and economic evils, the establishment of justice and humanity.

We believe that it is women's highest mission to train the young in family and school to recognize that jealousy, rivalry, covetousness, contempt and exploitation bear the fruits of wrath as surely in international as in domestic relations, and that the true foundations of nations as of families are laid in mutual generosity, helpfulness, sympathy and justice.

We, therefore, plead with you to work with us and with all men and women the world over who have seen this vision—not for a peace which means the mere cessation of war,—the undisturbed opportunity to pursue wealth and ease, but for a peace charged with a positive, vital, energizing will to infuse into human society the spirit of Jesus Christ.

We entreat that in our present national crisis you bend the energies of mind and spirit against the forces that would fasten upon our country the blighting effects of militarism.

That you study with open minds the causes and results of war, the progress that has already been made in international law and arbitration, the probable influence on the future of war of the increasing number of "conscientious objectors" in warring nations, and the reasons why our own country is peculiarly fitted by geographical position, traditions and ideals to be the leader and example in a world movement toward a peaceful solution of international problems.

That you especially exert your influence against the subjection of school boys to military training, whereby the present would bind upon the future the burden of an outgrown system.

And last of all we beg you to consider what may be for the future the surest defences of our life, liberty and sacred honor, what peaceful methods of protection, education and enlightenment our country may apply to free her irritated and harrassed neighbor on the South from exploitation, ignorance and passion; what sacrifices she may make when the European war is over for the healing and rehabilitation of the stricken nations; what firmer principles of justice she may establish and practice in her relations with the Orient; what greater earnest of good will she may extend to alien races and peoples within her own limits.

Let these problems become her serious preoccupation and there will be no need of armament to defend her borders. Rather shall she be called "The repairer of the Breach, the restorer of paths to dwell in." And the prophecy shall be fulfilled "The nations shall see thy righteousness and all the kings thy glory; and thou shalt be called by a new name which the mouth of Jehovah shall name."

May these things be.

Yours in the bonds of Christian love.

Signed on behalf of Philadelphia

Yearly Meeting of Women Friends,

JANE W. BARTLETT,

Clerk.

304 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HIGH POINT NORMAL.

More than twenty-five years ago Friends began work at High Point, N. C., for the education of the colored people. From a small cost the expenditures of the High Point Normal and Industrial School for Colored Students have increased to more than $12,000 annually. The total enrollment last autumn was 591. An investigation shows that graduates from the school become teachers, artisans, ministers, dressmakers, carpenters, blacksmiths, bricklayers and farmers.

There is a farm which produced last year 282 bushels of wheat, 275 bushels of corn, 1,075 pounds of pork, 1,773 gallons of milk and 150 bushels of potatoes. The management canned 150 gallons of peaches and tomatoes. This farm not only serves to supply the table, but it teaches lessons in agriculture. A. J. Griffin, an intelligent, cultured colored man, is principal. The school is directed by New York Yearly Meeting through the Southern Committee of the Board of Home and Foreign Missions. John R. Taber is chairman of the committee. It is announced that the school will need $1,300.00 over and above the probable resources. Contributions can be sent to the treasurer, William T. Ferris, 149 Broadway, New York City.

We may carry God with us wherever we go if only we remember that where we can not carry him with us we ought not to go. We may always bear our own sunshine with us.—Alexander MacLaren.

FOR SALE—A good general store. Feed and Flour. Invoice about $5,000. Yearly sales high. Also farmers' restaurant and hotel. In Friends' community. Both good propositions. Write to L. T. Hill, West Branch, Iowa.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

TELEGRAM FROM SOLOMON TICE

On April 3d the following message from R. Solomon Tice, at C. Victoria, Mexico, was received at the Board of Missions office: "All well, no danger, work progressing." A letter written on March 27 was received the same day. There is no telling what a day may bring forth in Mexico. Evidently there is, however, no immediate cause for alarm for Mr. Tice's safety or for interruption of the work at Victoria.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.

As this issue of the paper comes to its readers, Easter is only ten days off. If the Easter program, "The Hope of the World," is ordered immediately, it may be possible for many more Bible Schools to give this inspiring Easter service on that day. The Board of Missions has twice had to replenish its stock of these programs—the earlier supply having been entirely sold out. We hope now to be able to fill all future orders for the program and the picture the same day they are received. A description of the program and statement of prices appear on page 235 of The American Friend for Third Month, 30th. We have received numerous letters telling how delighted Bible School workers have been with "The Hope of the World." It is being used this year from one end of the country to the other. Since the time is so short, Friends will not want to wait until seeing a sample of the program, but will make no mistake in ordering at once as many programs as there are members in the Bible School. Orders should be sent to the address given at the top of this page. Some schools may wish to postpone giving the program until the Sunday following Easter in order that more time may be taken for preparing it.

THE LYNNVILLE MEETING AND ITS FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVE.

No person can study the statistics showing the missionary giving of the average Friends meeting, and not feel that as meetings and as individuals we are falling far short of what we ought to be doing in the matter of missionary giving, the average being a mere pittance when the vastness of the undertaking is taken into consideration.

For a number of years I have been sure that this thing is true—that it would be easier to get people to give to a specific activity in the foreign field than to get them to give to missions in a general way, and that there is that about the definite object that seems to link them to the work in a way not possible otherwise.

With this thought in view, we suggested to the Friends at Lynnville that we undertake the support of a missionary in Jamaica. About the time this was under consideration, Mary White, who had lived here in her childhood, came for a visit, and an all day meeting was planned by the W. F. M. S., with her as the guest of the occasion. It was a splendid day and before it was over the company voted unanimously to take Mary White as our representative on the foreign field.

The interest spread, and the offering for missions practically doubled and has been maintained at that place since that time. Every month some one, or ones, here writes Mary White a letter, and about once a quarter a letter comes from her to us, these letters frequently being read in our Sabbath morning meeting, helping to keep alive the interest already awakened.

In my pastoral experience I have found two things to be absolutely essential—interest, and information. We are usually interested in that with which we come personally in contact and call our own. Again, that in which we are interested begets a desire for information. While the regular missionary sermon must still hold its place, the touch of a personal letter creates an interest and gives information of such a character as is seldom gotten in a sermon.

I am more and more satisfied that much of our missionary inefficiency is due to the failure of pastors to lay the burden of world evangelization on the membership of the church. May this new department in The American Friend be a useful agency in awakening pastors to enlarged missionary activity.

ZENO H. DOAN.

Patronize the American Friend advertisers.

LATEST NEWS FROM OUR FOREIGN STATIONS.

Africa—Three girls and four boys have asked to become church members at Maragoli and have been placed on probation. Later, if they have made proper development in knowledge and in Christian character, they will be taken into full membership. A boy, named Chahali, and two women, Shigehi and Avala, have asked to be placed on probation at Kaimosi. Six new members have recently been added to the Christian Endeavor Society at Kaimosi.

Jamaica—Last October a shipload of East Indians were returned to their native land after serving out the five years of their indenture in Jamaica. Six of this company were members of our mission churches. Two of them were the first Indians to have a Christian marriage at Annotto Bay. Their older son attended the mission school at Fellowship until he reached the age limit. He accepted Christ and asked to join the church. Before leaving Jamaica, the father asked for letters to present to the church in India. This desire to confess Christ in their native country before their own people is most encouraging. For their discipleship will probably be severely tested when they return. In India, to confess Christ openly usually means being disowned by family and friends. These Christian Indians ought to have our prayers that they may be able to stand true to their profession.

Mexico—After returning from Panama, Solomon Tice paid a brief visit to our mission at Matehuala in the state of San Luis Potosi. "The work at Matehuala," he says, "is progressing very well under the circumstances. The Sunday School and C. E. have been kept up during all this trying time, though the attendance is not large at either one. The church services have been held whenever a minister could be present to conduct them, which is comparatively seldom. I held a service on the Sunday night that I was there, with an attendance of about 35. The day school has been kept up without interruption except when a battle was on. The attendance is larger than in normal times, as so many people come in from the surrounding country for safety."

Cuba—A conference of representatives of all missionary agencies working in Cuba was held in Havana, February 26-29. The purpose of the conference was to secure better co-operation between the various missions in Cuba and to lay plans for more aggressive work in the island. Seven Friends were in attendance. Clarence G. McClean, principal of our mission school at Holguin, was the chairman of the Commission on Christian Education for Cuba and presented an excellent report. The conference appointed a "Committee on Conference in Cuba" to carry out its recommendations. Two of our members are on this committee—Lena Hadley, of Puerto Padre, and Sylvester Jones, of Gibara. Sylvester Jones is a member of the small executive committee of the larger one. A full account of this important conference at Havana and its significance for Friends' work will appear later in The American Friend.

CHURCH AT WORK

Baltimore, Md.—Baltimore Quarterly Meeting was held here on March 25. The evening conference was addressed by Henry D. Cox, of Puerto Padre, Cuba. He gave an account of the work there and of the aim and spirit of the Panama Congress on Christian Work. Though not privileged to attend the Congress, he was able from his knowledge of facts and conditions to give a clear and interesting account of this gathering and its probable results.

Washington, D. C.—On the evening of March 23, S. E. Nicholson, of Richmond, Indiana, and Elisha Bye and companion, of Iowa, attended the Washington prayer meeting and rendered acceptable service. The latter Friends are of the conservative body and were in Washington in an effort to present Friends' views on peace to our national officers.

Rich Square, Indiana—Rich Square is a fair example of what a determined membership can do with a country church. A few years ago many felt that the future of this old place of worship was dark, but the Holy Spirit had better things in store for it. Believing in God's promises, the members reorganized the business machinery of the church and Sunday School, adopting up-to-date methods in all the departments. The duplex idea of raising funds with its accompanying budget plan for expenditures was adopted as the financial system. The Sunday School was placed under the graded system in the Intermediate and Junior sections. Social interests have been cared for by an efficient social committee. A mission study class has met regularly and has held the interest of its membership. The congregation is usually represented at the various conferences held in the interest of the church's work. In December Milo Hinckle, of Richmond, held a two weeks' series of special meetings. As a result of the renewed interest ten young people became active members of the Society and many others reconsecrated their lives to the Savior. A Christian Endeavor Society was organized, filling a long felt need among the young people. Recently Milo Hinckle returned and held a three days' conference dealing with Friends' beliefs. The teaching was direct, forceful and convincing. These meetings were well attended both by members and non-members.

Winchester, Indiana—For some months the Friends Christian Endeavor Society has been considering "International Peace," a study in Christian fraternity by Norman E. Richardson as provided for by the United Societies of Christian Endeavor. On March 26 "The Friendship of Nations," "American School Peace League," "The Christian Students' Federation," "The Development of the Peace Movement," "The Peace Movement in the United States and in the Churches" were considered. On the evening of April 2 "The Spirit of Christ Permeating the Nations" was the topic, with Miss Irene Robinson as leader.

Burr Oak, Kansas—Since our last report we have, by the help of the Lord, completed a comfortable, modern parsonage, built a barn and cave and put down a well with good pump. Best of all, it is all paid for. The prayer meeting is taking on renewed interest, seventy-five persons being present at our last meeting. Ora Winslow, our efficient pastor, and his wife are doing good work here at Oak Creek, Walnut Monthly Meeting.

Hopewell, Kansas—Hopewell Friends Meeting near White City, Kansas, is a new meeting, having been organized in 1912 by Friends from Iowa and others who had settled in this county. Since then a new church building has been erected. A basement and furnace were added last fall. In January Calvin R. Choate, an evangelist from Wichita, held a series of meetings here. His preaching was clear and to the point. The church was revived and a number were sanctified and we believe lasting good has been done. Estella Hammond is serving Hopewell meeting as pastor.

Denver, Colorado—Lindley A. Wells of Oregon Yearly Meeting, held special meetings at the Denver Friends Church, March 2d to the 19th. Sickness prevented several of our members from attending. At best, our membership is not large, and owing to the lack of a general community interest, the attendance was small throughout. The afternoon meetings were especially helpful, and many were strengthened in their Christian life, and given broader visions for work. On the afternoon and evening of March 17 a number of Boulder Friends attended the meetings, and their Christian fellowship was most acceptable. Lindley Wells preached the gospel of full salvation, and we are glad he came our way.

Cleveland, Ohio—Homer C. Phillips began a series of revival services at Clark Avenue Friends Church in Cleveland on March 5, lasting three weeks. These services were a great blessing to the church and community. God witnessed to the truth by the saving of sinners and cleansing of believers. Fifty-four persons knelt at the altar for conversion and renewal and twelve for sanctification. Thirteen have made application for membership. We thank God for answering prayer.

A Daily Prayer.—O Lord, so by thy Holy Spirit guide us through the day that, at its close, if it please thee we can look back over its course and see that where thou didst lead we followed in all life's affairs!—C. O'N. Martindale.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

Made from Cream of Tartar

NO ALUM—NO PHOSPHATE

YOUNG PEOPLES BOARD

MISS LILLIAN E. HAYES

Secretary of Young People's Office and Summer Conference.

Miss Lillian E. Hayes has been intimately connected with state and international Christian Endeavor work for a number of years. She founded the Young Friends General Conference, and perhaps had as much to do with the organization of the Board of Young Friends Activities of the Five Years Meeting as any other person. She founded the Winona Conference News three years ago and has edited the paper since that date. She has recently been made the office secretary of the Young Friends Board.

Direct all questions on Christian Endeavor or other Young People's work to the Young Friends Board, Dunreith, Ind. They will receive immediate attention. Buy Endeavor supplies from us. They bear the imprint of the Society of Friends, and contain certain comments that will be especially helpful to Friends. Any literature on Young People's work can be supplied by us as cheaply as by any publishing house. Give us the benefit of the profit.

CONFERENCE OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S AND SABBATH SCHOOL FIELD SECRETARIES.

On March 13 and 14 fifty national young people's secretaries and Bible School workers met in the Walton Hotel at Philadelphia to discuss plans for affecting a closer relation between our respective departments. The first day was given over to a discussion of the Sabbath School and its connection with the Young People's Society. After much debate it was decided that both the Sabbath School and the young people's organizations fill a very important place in the life of the church as they now exist. It appeared that the Sunday School can not be reorganized to include the work of the endeavor without materially injuring its present work.

On the other hand, the Young People's Society can not possibly do the work of the Sunday School without a complete reorganization with a loss to its present efficiency. The Sabbath School exists primarily for instruction in the Bible. The Christian Endeavor and other similar organizations are interested in expression and propaganda. There was a strong feeling manifest that much of the activity of the organized Sunday School class for young people should be supervised by the young people's organization. A committee was appointed to investigate this whole matter and report some plan for a better correlation of the Sunday School and Young People's work.

(Continued in next issue)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR APRIL 23.

Topic—Lessons of our Immortality. Romans 6:1-23.

Verse 22. "But now being made free from sin, and become servants of God, ye have fruit unto holiness and the end everlasting life."

This is a "FOREVER" meeting. How does one know that he is to live forever? What does the word forever suggest in magnitude, wonder, comfort, inspiration, warning and joy? What causes physical death? Spiritual death? How are the two related? What is the relation between life and growth; death and destruction?

What vastness comes before us when we think of the word "forever"! We stand on the lonesome beach and look off across the unexplored ocean of future events. What lies ahead none of us can quite tell, but that something does actually await us beyond the "flood" few doubt. What reason have we for such a belief? Is it because there must be something to supply the universal human demand for a future life? This is no doubt a minor reason for our belief? Is it because we cannot think of a time when there will be no life at all? Perhaps. Is it because we cannot understand why nature should have gone through such an infinite process of integration, selection and multiplication to produce a human being if, suddenly, everything is to be cut off? Nature does not seem so wasteful. Is it because out of our own experience we feel that by faith we have laid hold of some eternal principle that has taken us up into itself until we have become one with it? No doubt all of these reasons enter in to our belief in a life that never dies.

But how can one attain that everlasting life? By permitting the eternal principles of growth, renewal, and multiplication to become one with us. When one has been baptized into this life through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, the disintegrating forces of a diseased mind and soul no longer have dominion over him. He becomes emancipated more and more from the trammels of the flesh. One's spiritual condition effects his physical state. Even life insurance companies recognize the difference between a dissipated and a moral man. Any one may begin the enjoyment of this life when he wills to do the will of the father and to incarnate Christ in his life. Oh, spirit immortal, raise me up and sustain me that I may really live thy life again among men!

FELLOWSHIP OF RECONCILIATION.

A Fellowship of Reconciliation Conference has been announced for the North End Hotel, Ocean Grove, N. J., April 13-16. Richard Roberts, of London, England, General Secretary of the Fellowship in Great Britain, will be present at the Conference. Such fundamental topics as "The Need of a Fundamental Spiritual Outlook," "Love As a Practical Constructive Power in the World," "The Uses and Limitations of Force for Accomplishing Moral and Spiritual Purposes" and "The Meaning and Value of Fellowship" will be under consideration.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

On March 28 the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives at Washington postponed without date consideration of the resolution for national prohibition and suffrage for women. It is announced, however, that this leaves these questions in position to be brought up at any time. National prohibition, therefore, has not necessarily been sidetracked for this session of Congress.

THE ALIEN FUND.

The American Friend acknowledges receipt of two contributions of $25.00 each and one of $5.00 to aid the Emergency Committee of English Friends in caring for distressed aliens. This amount has been forwarded to the treasurer of the Emergency Committee in England.

God is good, the sky is saying;
God is great, the hills declare;
God is love, the flowers are telling;
God is round us everywhere.

THE IOWA PAGE

BIBLE SCHOOL NOTES.

Our Field Secretary reports the schools of Scranton Quarter as doing very good work. There are three schools in the Quarter, each one being a rural school with a large surrounding territory. The Meetings of Scranton Quarterly Meeting have unusual possibilities and opportunities for service.

Paton—This is a School with an average attendance last year of 45. There are six classes, very well graded as to age. Besides these they have the Cradle Roll Department, through which they are getting into touch with a number of other homes. They have not yet taken up the work of the Home Department. Melvin Wilson is Superintendent of the School.

Pleasant Ridge—This School has five regular classes with an attendance of nearly 40. Through the Cradle Roll and Home Departments they might get into close touch with a large number of homes in their community. This matter is being considered by them. Guy Kidney, Glidden, Iowa, is Superintendent of their School.

Scranton—This is also a rural school, some miles out from Scranton. In fact, the Meeting is better known by the name of Kendrick. During the past three months the School had an average attendance of almost 53. This is a splendid record for a rural school during these winter months. There are seven classes besides the Cradle Roll Department with a large membership. The School is well organized and is doing effective work. The matter of teacher training was definitely taken up in the Conference. Mrs. J. P. Miller, Ralston, Iowa, is their efficient Superintendent.

FIELD NOTES.

Des Moines—Charles E. Newlin gave his lecture to a large audience in the First Friends Church at Des Moines on Sunday evening, April 2. His lecture was listened to attentively and was very much appreciated and approved.

Earlham—The new Manse recently completed is occupied by the pastor and family. Shortly after moving in they kept open house during an afternoon and evening to the membership and their friends. About one hundred attended. In the evening a short program was rendered and light refreshments served. The house is completely modern, two story, finished in oak and yellow pine with polished floors throughout and stands on the church lot near where the former house stood.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

In the Senate the business now claiming the daily attention of the members is the Chamberlain army re-organization bill.

It is one of the major features of the "preparedness" program of Congress. If it were to become a law as it was reported to the Senate, it would increase the standing army to more than 200,000 men; it would federalize the National Guard of the country; it would add a large body of short-term volunteers to military forces of the nation; it would place upon the country annual expenditures for the land forces of the military establishment of many more millions than we have ever before expended in this way, and it would help to make us one of the most heavily armed nations of the world. There is an almost constant flow of oratory going on in the Senate on this bill, but there is little to indicate the seriousness of the situation. Only a few members are in their seats at any one time.

When introducing his bill, however, Senator Chamberlain was honored with a fairly good attendance. He once more warned of the unnamed boogy-boo that may come down upon this helpless nation in the next twenty-four hours. He went back to Revolutionary days for arguments against the nation depending upon volunteer forces in time of need, and he did not hesitate to advocate compulsory military training. This latter fact is one that may well be remembered by those Friends who cherish the belief that this nation is in no danger of suffering the evils of compulsory military service. Senator Chamberlain is only one of the numerous influential men in different branches of the Government service who have no hesitation in openly favoring compulsory service and who are working constantly to get their ideas put into practice.

The expectation among Congressmen is that the Chamberlain bill will be passed without important change. In the meantime every Friend who is opposed to increasing the military establishment of the country should take this opportunity to call upon his Senators to work against the Chamberlain bill. Its passage will not settle the size of the country's standing army any more than did the Hay bill by the House of Representatives, but the larger the increase provided for by the Senate the more room there will be for compromising on a large increase when the two bills go to the conference committee.

On the House side military interest has been centered for some days mainly in the hearings before the Naval Affairs Committee. These hearings ended today after having been in progress for weeks. Secretary Daniels was the last man to be heard. One of the members of the committee said today that he would not be surprised if it mapped out a program that would involve the expenditure of $300,000,000 in the next year.

One could not help wishing while listening to the questioning of Secretary Daniels today, and his assistant Mr. Roosevelt, on a previous day, that some of those among Friends who favor "preparedness" might have been present. Secretary Daniels and his assistant were men with all the influence of the National Administration behind them. Both of them were there to do their best to persuade the committee to approve a program of increase for the navy that would cost $500,000,000 in the next five years. What may be decided by the committee on the question of changing from a one-year to a five-year program does not seem to be clear as yet to committee members, but there is no question that a big increase will be recommended to Congress by this committee.

FRIENDS RESCUE HOME.

Friends Rescue Home at 278-282 East 13 Avenue, Columbus, Ohio, observed its eleventh anniversary last week. John Pennington, pastor of the Ohio Avenue Friends Church, presided. Mrs. E. M. Whittemore, of New York, organizer for the Doors of Hope, gave the address. This home has cared for more than five hundred unfortunate women during the eleven years of its history and has at present an enrollment of sixteen persons. Evangeline Reams is the field secretary. A letter suggests that if any Friends wish to help this home they might send the Easter offering of food, clothing or money. William G. McGrew, Commercial Bank Building, Columbus, Ohio, is treasurer.

Patronize our advertisers.

NEWS NOTES.

Gurney Binford goes to the Boys' High School in Mito, Japan, every Monday to teach English to two classes of 120 boys each.

William Trueblood returned to his home in Kokomo, Indiana, this week after having spent the winter pleasantly at St. Petersburg, Florida.

The regular monthly missionary meeting at Pickering College was held on the evening of March 19, lantern pictures being presented illustrating life in Japan.

Clarence E. Pickett, pastor of the Friends meeting at Toronto, Canada, spoke to the students of Pickering College on March 14, his topic being "Choose a Life Work."

The annual oyster supper of Newmarket meeting, Canada, was held on the evening of March 10. Half the proceeds were given for the work of the Friends Ambulance Unit.

Myra Fry, a Kickapoo Indian girl, won the grand gold medal prize in the prohibition contest at the Kickapoo mission on the evening of March 11 being one of seven contestants.

Ground was broken for the erection of the new church building of the West Richmond Meeting at Richmond, Indiana, on April 4. The contract calls for the completion of the building by October 1.

Susan B. Sisson for health reasons went to California in December, 1915, and immediately took pastoral work with the Alamo Monthly Meeting at Holtville, the only Friends' meeting in the Imperial Valley. March 26 was observed as "Every-One-Go-To-Meeting" Sabbath with fine results. The work is being owned and blessed of God.

The twenty-third annual report of the Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of Philadelphia has been printed in booklet form and is an elaborate work full of information. The treasurer's report shows receipts during the year of $12,154.79. Their chief field of operations is in Japan.

Since publishing the notice in these columns concerning the approaching sixtieth marriage anniversary of John Henry Douglas and wife, of Whittier, California, we have received the following more definite information from John Henry Douglas: "At a Friends meeting in Clinton County, Ohio, on April 23, 1856, John Henry Douglas and Miriam Carter were united in marriage. During this sixty years we have labored in the gospel and lived in the following Yearly Meetings: New England, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Oregon, California, and have twice attended London and Dublin Yearly Meetings." These Friends will be glad to receive visits and messages from Friends generally on April 23.

KANSAS CITY NEWS.

Friends Bible School at Kansas City, Missouri, is in a campaign during April for an increased attendance.

Carl D. Byrd, of Haviland, Kansas, Field Secretary of the Kansas Yearly Meeting C. E. Union, gave an address on Christian Endeavor here on March 22. A C. E. Society was organized with Harold Finch as President and Corrinne Clark as Secretary.

The Women's Bible Class entertained the Men's Bible Class on the evening of March 17. Old-fashioned games were played, refreshments served and the ladies read original poems on how each had earned a dollar for the treasury.

L. A. Brown, one of the teachers of the Mens' Bible Class, has gone to Washington City to accept appointment as special investigator for the Federal Trade Commission.

A. T. Finnell, President of the Men's Bible Class, was a candidate for city alderman from his ward in the recent election.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Arthur Jones, the pastor of this meeting, to Miss Florence M. Davis, of Aurora, Illinois. The wedding will take place the last week in June.

CHARITIES AND CORRECTION.

The National Conference of Charities and Correction will be held at Indianapolis, Indiana, May 10-17. Treatment of individual defects contributory to careers of vice, poverty and crime will be an important feature of the program. In sections on health, on feeble-mindedness and insanity, and on inebriety, twenty-five hundred social workers from all sections of the country will go far into the causes of breakdowns in our social and economic life.

The program on inebriety will bring to light new factors in the temperance question. Charles Stelzle, of New York City, will present the relation of the workingman to the alcohol problem. The section on corrections will direct its discussions toward modern methods of treatment of crime. Almost every phase of human delinquencies will be considered, questions in which Friends have always been intensely interested.

Subscribe for The American Friend.

This Skirt $3.75

KI8109—Serviceable Walking Skirts of navy blue or black serge. Made with a plait on each side and with panel back; girder top; stitched scallops buttoned with bone buttons at each side of the front. Fastened on one hip; finished with a deep hem. Waist-band sizes 25, 27, 29, 31 and 33 inches. Front lengths, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41 and 42 inches. Order this Skirt with the understanding that if not satisfactory in every way it can be returned at once and your money will be refunded. Price—$3.75, postpaid.

Our Spring and Summer Catalogue will be sent free, on request.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
PHILADELPHIA

NATIONAL MISSIONARY CONGRESS.

The program has been issued for the National Missionary Congress of the Laymen's Missionary Movement to be held at Washington City April 28-30. Such well known religious workers as Robert E. Speer, John R. Mott, Dr. Shailer Mathews, Sherwood Eddy, J. Campbell White, Colonel E. W. Halford and Dr. John F. Goucher will be among the speakers on the program.

"Do not blame yourself cruelly, nor think of escaping from yourself; but pardon your failures, and quietly keep trying till you succeed in gaining that full self-possession in equilibrium which is at once happiness and religion."

We sin against our dearest not because we do not love, but because we do not imagine.—John Watson.

A CHINESE FUNERAL.

One section of a large cemetery in Brooklyn, New York, is owned by an association of Chinamen. Burials in this place are often made according to Pagan customs. The body of the deceased is clothed with four or five suits and money placed in his hands. Chicken, pork, boiled rice and fruits are left on the grave. These provisions are for use on the long journey. As the funeral passes to the burying ground, friends of the departed cast bits of counterfeit money along the way to attract the attention of the devil so the soul will catch an opportunity to escape.

In marked contrast to Pagan funerals are the funerals of Christian Chinamen in this country. A strictly Christian funeral was held from the Lafayette Avenue Friends Church, Brooklyn, on March 26. Li Bow came to the Friends' Chinese mission sixteen years ago. Two years later he was converted to Christ. The memory of that experience was never forgotten. As the end drew near his faith brightened. Lucy E. Beck, the superintendent of the mission, visited him faithfully during the last days. He spoke much of the school, of Jesus and of heaven. He saw Christ. The end came in great peace. How wonderful are the works of our God!

A Valuable Offer

"The Present Day Message of Quakerism," by Charles M. Woodman...$1.00
The American Friend (1 yr)..... 1 50

Total$2.50

Read This: The above valuable book will be sent together with each NEW subscription to The American Friend for one year for $2.00. Address

THE AMERICAN FRIEND
Richmond, Indiana.

Southland College

— WANTED —

TWO YOUNG MEN TEACHERS,
Principal and Manual Training
At Southland, Arkansas.

A SCHOOL CONDUCTED BY
INDIANA YEARLY MEETING.
OF FRIENDS.

For information write H. C. WOLFORD, President, Southland, Phillips Co., Arkansas, or EDWARD BELLIS, Cor. Sec., Richmond, Ind.

Patronize our Advertisers.

WANTED 50,000 FARM HANDS

of experience at once on the farms of
Western Canada

To replace the young farmers who have enlisted for the war. Good wages and full season's work assured.

There is no danger or possibility of Conscription in Canada

References required from all applicants For special railway rates and other information apply to

G. W. Aird, 215 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Authorized Canadian Government Agent.

DIED

Coate—Esther Coate, wife of Benjamin C. Coate, was born August 10, 1850, and died at West Milton, Ohio, February 26, 1916, aged 65 years. She was a birthright Friend. Her life was one of Christian faith and love, and has left a deep impression upon the community. Funeral service were conducted at West Milton by the pastor, John L. Kittrell.

Cook—Daniel H. Cook, son of Daniel and Hannah Cook, was born near Vermilion Grove, Illinois, February 27, 1855, and died at his home in Strathmore, California, January 6, 1916. He was a birthright Friend and was recorded a minister in 1895. He married Electa Powell, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, and for some years they lived in Illinois, later moving to Oskaloosa and still later to Strathmore. He leaves the widow, a daughter and two brothers. Funeral services were held at Lindsay, California, where he was a member.

Cox—Clayton, only and beloved child of Chester and Pearl Cox, and grandchild of Reuben and Eliza J. Cox, all members of Rose Hill Monthly Meeting, Kansas, died March 2, 1916, aged two and one-half years, lacking two days.

Edgerton—James Edgerton was born in North Carolina July 23, 1843, and died at Dennison, Texas, February 29, 1916, after a week's illness. He was a birthright Friend and a reader of The American Friend. His life was so filled with divine love that he scattered sunshine wherever he went.

Hawkes—Mary E., wife of Moses N. Hawkes, and daughter of Calvin S. and Lucy R. Goddard, died at her home in Portland, Maine, March 8, 1916, after an illness of six weeks. For many years she held the position of elder in Falmouth Monthly Meeting, where her noble life, her Christ-like character and her sweet, motherly influence was of inestimable value. Her quiet life was a positive force for righteousness and spirituality.

Hiatt—Phoebe Hiatt was born in the limits of Pleasant Plain Quarterly Meeting, Jefferson County, Iowa, in 1848 and died at Newberg, Oregon, January 28, 1916, aged 68 years. She was a faithful Friend and gave testimony to her abiding faith in Christ.

Ludlum—Mary B. Ludlum was born at Wantage, N. J., October 10, 1850, and died at Traverse City, Michigan, January 24, 1916. She married James Ludlum at Port Jervis, N. Y., in 1871 and moved to Traverse City, Michigan, in 1894. At the age of eighteen she joined the M. E. Church, but after moving to Traverse City united with Friends. She was an earnest woman and for several years a trustee in the Friends'

Church. She leaves one son, three grandchildren and one sister. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, O. H. Folger.

Redding—Fannie Redding, daughter of Daniel and Rebecca M. Kain, was born in Wells County, Indiana, June 15, 1861, and died at Traverse City, Michigan, February 12, 1916, aged 54 years, 7 months and 27 days. She was converted at an early age and joined Friends in 1893. She married T. P. Redding, of Huntington County, Indiana, in 1884, moving to Michigan in 1905 and to Traverse City in 1912. Her faithfulness and interest in the church work were well known and she was especially interested in the welfare of the young people. She leaves the husband, a daughter, her mother, a grandson, one brother and four sisters.

Seltzer—Susan Dickinson Seltzer, daughter of George and Sarah Pool Dickinson, was born in Logan County, Ohio, December 24, 1850, and died at the home of her daughter in Los Angeles, California, February 10, 1916. The family moved to Indiana when she was four years old, and later to Kansas, then to Denver, where she spent the greater part of her life. She was a birthright Friend, a noble woman and a devoted mother. She leaves seven children.

Smith—Malinda Newby Smith, daughter of Axum and Hannah Newby, was born near Marshalltown, Iowa, October 15, 1873, and died at her home in Newberg, Oregon, January 16, 1916. With her husband, Harlan Smith, she served as a missionary to the Indians in Kake, Alaska for some time. Her life was one of blessing, and amid great suffering she found her faith in Christ sufficient.

Thomas—Amos Thomas, son of Lewis and Lydia Thomas, was born in Orange County, Indiana, January 10, 1832, and died at his home near Fairmount, Indiana, January 10, 1916, aged 84 years. He first married Anna Beeson, who died a few months later. In 1860 he married Nancy Newby. He was an elder and active member of Fairmount Monthly meeting. He is survived by three children.

NOTICE

The Foreign Missionary Association of Friends of Philadelphia desires to hear of a suitably qualified young woman Friend to assist in the Friends' Girls' School in Tokyo, Japan, and to take part in the general work of the mission as occasion requires. One who feels divinely called to devote her life to Christian service is desired, preferably a college graduate. For further information, address Margaret W. Haines, Cor. Sec., Cheltenham, Pa.

FRIENDS MEETINGS

Stockton Avenue Friends Church, San Jose, California. Take Santa Clara Car to Stockton Ave., walk one-half block west. Visitors always welcome.

Washington, D. C. meeting house, 13th and Irving Streets, N. W. Bible School 9:45, meeting for worship 11 a. m., C. E. 7:30. Mid-week meeting Fifth-day, 7:45 p. m.

West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., Main and West 7th Street. Bible School, 9:00; meeting for worship, 10:30; vesper service, 5:00; C. E., 2:15. Prayer meeting, Thursday, 7:30.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON
APRIL 23.

Subject—The Gospel for the Gentiles.

Lesson—Acts 10:24—48.

Golden Text—Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to Him. Acts, 10:34, 35.

It had taken some time and a special vision for Peter to arrive at the mental conclusion that it would be proper for him to carry the Christian message to the Gentiles. But it is often easier to decide to do a thing than it is to go out and do it. After arriving in the home of Cornelius he seems to have felt it necessary for him to explain to those assembled that he was breaking the Jewish custom only after God had shown him that it was the proper thing to do. As I have shown before, this was a most important event in the history of the Early Church. It meant that an unpreselyted Gentile had been visited by a devout Christian Jew, by one too who was of the inner circle of the Apostolic group. It meant that thereafter any Gentile accepting this precedent had the privilege of coming directly into the Christian circle. The full significance of this event can only be appreciated by those who realize how careful the devout Jew was to keep himself free from Gentile pollution.

Cornelius was earnestly searching for the truth. Thousands of his peers in the empire had been lost to the old Roman religion. The attacks of the skeptical philosophers had destroyed the old faith of the thinkers of the day and had too seldom given anything constructive in its place. Many like Cornelius failed to find in the religious philosophy of the day that which satisfied them. In the Christian teaching he believed he had found that for which his soul was craving. That he might know the way more perfectly he had sent for Peter. That his friends might also hear the message they too had been invited into his home for the occasion. Blessed are they that hunger.

The salutations and preliminary explanations over Peter began to tell the gathered group of the character and mission of Jesus. His message found a ready response, the soil was already prepared and immediate results were assured, in fact the witness from God was so little anticipated at that moment that they were all surprised at the coming of the Spirit. God had clearly shown that Peter's decision and message was acceptable to him. The history of the church shows that God has blessed all efforts to save men regardless of their standing in society. Modern missions prove too that God is no respecter of races. The martyrs of Uganda and China died just as gloriously and triumphantly as those of the early church.

WESTTOWN
SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½%

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y. Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue. Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
 Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books

1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.

OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits.

Receipts without charge for Wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary

MATTHEW WALKER, Acting Mgr.
 Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor
WILLIAM S. ASHBROOK, Agency Secretary

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 16.

FOURTH MONTH 20, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 16.

"I Have Seen the Lord"

Once again as years are passing,
Joyfully we greet the day,
When our Lord cast off His fetters,
Left the grave wherein He lay;
Rose triumphant!
While the darkness fled away.

His disciples, dazed, dejected,
Scarce can find a safe retreat.
They have heard the words of Mary:
Can they hope their Lord to meet?
Has He risen?
Glad would they their Master greet.

He has risen! While assembled
With closed doors, because of fear
In their midst they see Him standing
And He brings them words of cheer,
Peace He brings them,
Shows them marks of nails and spear.

Grand in His Divine perfection,
Naught could hold Him in the grave.
Glorious His resurrection!
It reveals His power to save.
Jesus saves us,
Saves us by the life He gave!

Glorious resurrection morning,
Which fulfils the Master's word.
Life, not death, the world's adorning,
Hope to mortals is restored.
Life eternal,
Gift of Him!—our risen Lord.

—John M. Morse in "The Presbyterian."

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.

For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Easter Morning

Oh, the anguish of Mary, the depth of despair,
When she came to the tomb and the Lord was not there!
As she desolate stood with her balm and her myrrh,
And His winding sheet only was waiting for her!

Oh, the blackness of death, oh, life's utter despair,
Had she come to the tomb and the Lord had been there,
Lying wrapped in the sheet with the balm and the myrrh,
And no risen Redeemer had waited for her!

—Marion Douglas.

Regional Conferences in Latin America

One of the most unique plans in the history of mission work is that of the holding of Regional Conferences in the important centers of Latin America to carry direct to them the message of the Panama Congress. Immediately following the Congress, deputations left Panama to hold such conferences in the following cities: Lima, Santiago, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, Barranquilla, Havana and San Juan. These Regional Conferences are a very important part of the movement. They will endeavor to put into practice on particular fields the results of the general discussions at Panama.

A great advance was outlined by the Porto Rico conference. The smallness of the island and the large number of organizations working there have already thrown the workers close together. For some time they have been co-operating in a number of ways and they were ready for a marked advance.

The most significant move was the formation of "The Evangelical Union of Porto Rico," into which practically all the denominations of the island entered; they will hereafter be known as churches of the Evangelical Union, with such additional designation as they choose. Many churches will use no other additional name, taking this opportunity to discard nomenclature, which they have realized for some time had nothing to do with their situation in Porto Rico and served only to confuse the people who are ignorant of the historical divisions of Protestantism. A Central Conference Committee of twenty-four was formed, representing the various churches, with sub-committees on Education, Literature, Evangelism, and a "Central Missions Committee," which is to represent both the Evangelical Union and the Mission Boards in their mutual interests.

General Miles On The Danger of Invasion

(Extract from the hearings before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, Monday, January 31, 1916.)

Senator Fletcher: General, perhaps you would not want to express any opinion about it, but, frankly, it seemed to me rather far-fetched and absurd that it was a feasible thing for an army to be transported across the ocean and landed on Rockaway Beach, or Block Island, in such way that it could take that portion of the country and then come on down and string a four-hundred-mile line from Chesapeake Bay to Lake Ontario. That is one of the important dangers, apparently, in the minds of some people. I would like to get your views about that, if you care to express them.

General Miles: I dislike to give my views on that, as I consider it an unreasonable and impossible proposition. The placing of an army on American soil is the last thing any European government would attempt; it could never be re-embarked. It would dissolve like snow beneath the mid-day sun. Whenever it has been attempted it has resulted in disaster.

Senator Fletcher: It would be impossible for the enemy's ships to carry coal enough to bring them over here and take them back, would it not?

General Miles: If the enemy could not be destroyed by the patriotism and valor of the American people before they could send their ships back and get another load, then I would want to live in some other country.

Through Other Eyes

A Chinese Christian writes in China's Young Men:

"We do not believe that in real civilization we are far behind other nations. If by Western civilization is meant only the increase of battleships and armies, the sharpening of weapons of destruction, and the inability of the nations to live together except by trying to wipe each other out of existence, then I would rather not be civilized according to the Western standard of civilization, and rest contented with our own civilization, which gives me at least more peace of mind, and a greater chance of living at peace with mankind."

The forty-third Annual Chautauqua Assembly will be held at Chautauqua, N. Y., June 19th to August 27th. This institution is the pioneer in summer assemblies and maintains its leadership in popular education by a rare combination of intellectual training, stimulating platform events and healthful recreation. The usual elaborate program has been arranged. For further information, address Chautauqua Institution, Chautauqua, N. Y.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 16.

FOURTH MONTH 20, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 16.

Our Risen, Living Lord

The most important fact about the resurrection was that it brought hope to a troubled world. Without it the disciples would have felt themselves defeated, and in the grip of despair would have ended their lives in hopeless night. "If Christ hath not been raised, then is our preaching vain, your faith also is vain." The risen Lord meant to the apostles, and He means to us today, a living Christ, for it is "Christ in you" who is the only hope of glory.

To the traveler trudging wearily over the desert, the bursting of an oasis upon the vision is not more refreshing than is the revelation of the living, abiding, indwelling Christ to the sin-burdened, questioning soul. And therein lies the prophecy of victory for the Christian Church. The suffering, sacrificing Jesus has become the triumphant Christ whose Presence floods every willing, obedient soul with the divine energy of a purposeful life.

A recent writer confesses: "Long ago Christ came within the horizon of my little life as the Bright Morning Star, heralding the approach of day. In his prophetic light my soul rejoiced. Since then he has been growing, growing, until he has become the Sun of my soul, filling and flooding my entire life with the brightness of his glory." To such a man, with such an experience, Christianity has not been a failure. Jesus built no hedges about his truth, nor did he fix artificial limitations to the exercise of divine grace in human personality. If Christianity has failed anywhere it is because Christ has been chained to some dogma of sectarianism, some cloister, some fellowship of exclusiveness and has not been permitted to extend his grace as a free gift to all men.

The world and even the Church have been slow to see and understand the risen Lord as he really is. He has not always been taken seriously by his professed followers. They stop at the Cross, and, marvelling at its tragedy, read the story of its sacrifice, but they fail to go on to the empty tomb to read the story of a Christ who is alive forevermore. That is the supreme message of the resurrection. The great hunger of erring and groping humanity will only be appeased by the sight of an abiding, living Christ, who stands ready to reveal himself in blessing and in power to every needy life.

This modern world has need to know that its Redeemer liveth. Men are vainly trying to pattern their lives after Jesus of Nazareth, but it is an historic man who fills their vision, and not a life-giving, divine personality who has been promised an abiding place with them forever. As a man he was touched with our infirmities and faced the temptations to which humanity is heir, but as God he liveth to make intercession for every soul that is struggling toward the light. There are men who profess faith in the resurrected Lord, and then belie their faith by denying the practicality of his program and the binding obligation of his teachings. There is no redemption for a man or a world that pulls the gospel down to the dead level of human expediency.

The religion of Jesus means something more than a well-arranged system of pious phrases or the cultured creed of materialistic philosophers. It is more even than a code of morals which is to find expression in devout personality, or an assemblage of doctrinal pronouncements which call for the exercise of a believing mentality. The gospel may be inclusive of all these, but unless men and women find it the power of God unto salvation, lifting them into kinship and fellowship with the divine, where they have the consciousness of the ever-abiding presence of Christ as a satisfying element in all the daily experiences of life, they have failed to comprehend the meaning of the risen Lord or the urgency of his appeal for the surrender of the whole life to his protecting care.

The revelations of God in Christ Jesus are continuous and progressive. Every experience of the sincere, consecrated life is a foregleam of something better on before. Faith grows by exercise, and we go from strength to strength as we follow obediently the footsteps of our Lord. No one is fitted to face the struggles in his own life, or the great conflicts of the world, until his soul has been possessed with the optimism of the triumphant Christ. "I can do all things in him that strengtheneth me" was the joyous outburst of a man who had faithfully practiced the religion he professed. In Christ Jesus can be found the finality of hope and attainments which the world cannot give, neither can it take it away. Because Christ has risen, then neither is our preaching nor our faith void.

Congress on Christian Work in Latin-America

Held at Panama, February 10-20, 1916

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS

(Continued from last week)

The Day Sessions

The Congress session began each day at 8:30, closing at 5:30 p. m., with a recess from 11:30 to 3:30. One day is given to the report of each Commission. Delegates were asked to take their places at 8:20 and 3:20 and give ten minutes to silent prayer. Ten minutes were then devoted to a scripture lesson and prayer. This was followed by the adoption of minutes of the preceding day. The chairman of the Commission for the day took twenty minutes to present his report and was given ten minutes at the close for completing the discussion. The rest of the day was given to general discussion, each speaker being limited to seven minutes. Delegates who desired to take part were requested to send in their cards the evening before, stating the special phase they wished to discuss. An agenda outlining the topics for discussion was printed in the Bulletin the day before. The discussion was very lively, and most speakers had something worth the seven minutes allowed them. Usually there were more requests to speak than could be heard. Speakers in Spanish and Portuguese had an interpreter to summarize in English. Most of them understood English sufficiently to be able to follow the English speakers without an interpreter. The discussion was well distributed between Latin-Americans and northern delegates. Women also freely participated. No speaker spoke twice the same day, except the chairman of the Commission. A buzzer sounded at the end of six minutes and again at seven; the speaker immediately ceased speaking at the second ring.

Commission on Survey and Occupation

The report of this Commission was given first, and took the Friday sessions. It required 100 pages with 70 lines to the page, and about ten words to each line. The report covered the 21 Latin-American nations and the three Guianas. The total area of these lands is 8,459,081 square miles as over against 6,557,700 of Anglo-Saxon America. Their respective populations are 80,203,902 and 108,679,000.

The population of Latin-America is classed as follows: Whites, 18,000,000; Indians, 17,000,000; Negroes, 6,000,000; Mixed White and Indian, 30,000,000; Mixed White and Negro, 8,000,000; Mixed Negro and Indian, 700,000; East Indian, Chinese and Japanese, 300,000.

The totals of evangelistic work are: 2,010 missionaries; 4,161 native staff; 575 stations; 1,963 out-stations; 1,982 church organizations; 257,103 church members; 421,937 adherents; 2,198 Sunday Schools with 182,125 enrollment; 35 theological normal and schools with 106,354 pupils.

and high schools with 6,090 pupils; 1,000 village schools with 106,054 pupils.

These lands have produced many men of high culture who have been leaders in Science, Literature, Medicine, Law and Engineering. The universities of Santo Domingo (1538), Peru (1551), and Mexico (1553) were the first established in the Western Hemisphere. These lands are rich in material resources of all kinds. Millions of square miles of the richest soils in the world still undeveloped. These are open to the future migrations from the densely populated nations, giving a tremendous significance to their future. They have three of the greatest river systems of the world with their valleys of inexhaustible wealth. The Amazon system alone has 2,200 miles navigable by ocean steamers, 30,000 by river steamers. Calderon predicts a population of 250,000,000 by the end of this century. It is estimated that these countries can feed over 2,000,000,000 people.

In government, all these nations have thrown off foreign control and are republics in form. Many of them are well-established. The races mingle freely. There is no race discrimination. Some of the noblest leaders have come from the Indians. It is well known that the Indian races formerly had a high civilization before the Spanish Conquest. The social groups are three: Indians; lower or peon class; and the aristocratic or landed class. There is no middle class as in other countries.

The future of these lands, without the open Bible and the free Gospel is dark indeed. The frontier of new lands is always characterized by lawlessness and loose living, and with the millions pouring into these lands in the near future, bringing the worst elements and views of the older countries, there is no help can be expected from the older religion. The Catholicism of these lands came from Spain during the times of the Inquisition and has never been touched by any reformation. At the present time it is repudiated by the thoughtful people. At the same time all the educational institutions adopted the ideals of France a hundred years ago when French infidelity was at the height of its influence, and as a result all schools are thoroughly atheistic. Moreover, the church has usually allied itself with the despotic forces in government and is entirely out of favor in the transition to republican forms. The only hope of redemption for these lands is the coming in of the evangelical forces. Moreover, millions of the native Indian races have never heard any gospel message. Some are still cannibals.

Education is almost entirely confined to the aristocracy. From 50 to 95 per cent of the people can neither read nor write. The ruling church has kept them in ignorance. The ruling classes do not care to have the common people educated. They think they are safer and better for their own purposes as they are.

Moral conditions are deplorable. Intemperance and crime abound. Popular estimates regard most of the priests as impure. Concubinage is common even among more prominent citizens. A very large percentage of births are illegitimate; in some cases as high as 60 per cent.

Some of the Findings Are as Follows:

"The place of Latin-America in the life of the world, already well established, is rapidly increasing in importance. The development of both material and human resources has but begun. The future accordingly holds in them issues, not alone for great industry and commerce, but pertaining also to the highest interest of humanity. Undoubtedly the chief impact now being made from abroad upon that civilization is commercial and industrial—an influence that will be highly accentuated during the period immediately ahead. At its best this movement frankly represents materialism. It is accompanied by other grave perils to moral and spiritual life.

"Unbelief and indifference to personal religion characterize almost the entire male educated class which, with few exceptions, coincides with the ruling cultivated class. The decline of faith is proceeding coextensively with modern education among men and women of every social rank. The resident forces able to check infidelity are negligible. Several millions of savage or semi-civilized Indians are without any contact with vital Christianity or its representatives. Thus far, the church, outside the limited evangelical circles, maintains indifference towards movements for moral reform, and openly or secretly opposes those calculated to further social justice.

"The gospel for the modern world is the same that won the scholarly Saul of Tarsus and the slave Onesimus. The educated upper class have been ignored until the quite recent past. The counsel of wisdom is believed to be the adoption and maintenance of policies by the churches and interdenominational societies for dealing comprehensively with this part of the whole task.

"The processes are not those of mechanics, but of life of which only Christ is the source. Mounting above every other consideration is the purity and dynamic of the faith to be communicated. Therefore, however hard the quests for gifts and laborers press at the bases, may these never fail to be subordinated to prayer and the other means to the supremacy of the spirit. The issue is locked up in the singleness of this purpose."

Commission II.—Message and Method

Saturday, the day for the discussion of this report, was a day of intense interest. I may say here that the Congress was most fortunate in securing as reporter of each day's proceedings Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison, editor of "The Christian Century,"

Chicago. These reports were published in the "Panama Star and Herald." I have already quoted freely from this report, and shall still do so, only indicating such by quotation marks.

"The discussion of Saturday had to do with one of the most vital and delicate problems that the Congress will consider—that of the message which the evangelical movement in Latin-America ought particularly to emphasize, together with the most effective methods for getting its work done. These are questions upon which there is naturally a division of sentiment among the delegates. Every man has his own ideas, both as to what the Gospel is and as to how it ought to be preached. And beside, there is the much more delicate question of the attitude which evangelical workers ought to take toward the prevailing religious institutions and customs of the Latin-American people. On this latter point there exist roughly two opinions. One is the opinion that the evangelical movement ought drastically to attack and expose the established religious system and practice. The other opinion is that the way to overcome error is by letting in the light. One method is destructive; the other, constructive. There has hitherto been serious lack of unity among evangelical workers in regard to this point. It had been predicted by some that the Congress would split wide open when it came to consider a question like this, upon which most of its members have deep convictions on one side or the other.

"But all the sessions of the day were passed in a spirit of increasing harmony and unity of mind, and when the evening came there had settled upon the souls of the delegates a profound sense that the deliberations of the day had been indeed guided from above. The prevailing view of those in the Congress was epitomized in a short address by Bishop W. F. Oldham, of New York City, who expressed plainly his belief that the prevailing church in Latin-America has been too much a political institution, and that it has often been an instrument of persecution in direct and also subtle ways. (Bishop Oldham was of Roman Catholic parentage.) Yet the Bishop said that in doing Christian work in Latin-American countries, he would make for himself a clear distinction between religious error and political encroachment. He would leave the latter to be dealt with by others. The church that meddles in politics, he said, loses five times as much as it gains. He would also distinguish between minor matters and fundamental error, and would search for the underlying reasons for the error, so that he might show how that need to which the error seeks to minister can be better met by a true understanding of Gospel teaching. He said that the worship of the Virgin Mary is due to the longing of frail humanity for that in God which feels the weaknesses and sympathizes with the struggles of poor, failing men and women. How shall I preach, he asked, in the presence of this human fact? Shall I not bring to my hearers a Christ who is not only 'very God of very God'—begotten, not made—but also very man, touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and tempted in all points as we are? In a word, he added, I would seek to be evangelical rather than protestant. I would trust the clear light of my positive, constructive Biblical statement to supplant wrong ideas, for it is the very function of light to shut away the darkness.

"Asked what he would do when the people themselves inquired concerning the doctrines of the prevailing church, he said he would lay these doctrines down alongside the plain teachings of God's Word, and gently but faithfully deal with each case; but this would be at the request of sincere inquirers, and after the inquirers had begun to understand the evangelical positions. Concluding his statement, the Bishop told of his work in the United States, in Singapore, and in the Philippines, and said that the most important thing in the work of the evangelical teacher was to pray earnestly to God to be kept sympathetic and gentle in the approaches to the people, and to have created in his soul a passion for the souls of others. Faithfulness shot through with sympathy and tenderness; confidence in a positive, constructive, evangelical message; and a heart most prayerful and loving where forced squarely to face fundamental error—these are the qualities needed by the Christian messenger in his relation to religious views and practices which he regards as erroneous.

"This address of Bishop Oldham, coming near the beginning of the day, made a profound impression, and greatly tempered the character of the discussion. As the day wore on, it became evident that this Congress had confidence enough in the Christian Gospel to plant it in the social soil of Latin-America, and leave to its own inherent strength and light the task of destroying whatever error exists in other religious institutions which are neighbor to it."

(To be continued)

In the Yangtze Gorges

By ROBERT L. SIMKIN

(Concluded)

We rose early, as we hoped to get breakfast before leaving the boat to walk around the rapid, but the men were also up at dawn, so that by the time we were dressed we had arrived at the rapid and had to leave at once. As we were leaving our boat Miss Marrs of the other boat signaled from the shore that her boat was in trouble. In coming upstream in the back current it had struck a rock and was rapidly filling with water. Drawing in to shore at the very last sheltered spot under the rapid, it was made fast with cables and we set to work to save as much as possible from her. A line was formed across a small boat as a bridge, and suitcases, umbrellas, camp beds, bedding, clothing, typewriter, boxes of food, and even some of the smaller cases of goods were passed along from hand to hand and deposited on the rocks. The heavier cases presented more difficulty, but by working quickly we saved a good many of these from getting wet.

Meanwhile part of the trackers had formed a double line and were passing out buckets of water as fast as they could dip them up. In spite of all their efforts, however, the water soon rose to their loins in the hold and nearly half the cases were swimming. Washing soda, soap and sugar vanished under the action of the water and joined hands with other ingredients in no one knows what chemical compounds. We continued our work of salvage until nearly everything had been fished up out of the water, and then I stopped long enough to eat a few hurried mouthfuls of breakfast. On returning to the boat I found that the men had stopped bailing and were removing some of the equipment of the boat and their cotton, which formed part of the cargo. She was settling rapidly, and we feared she would sink, so I hustled off the remainder of our cases as quickly as possible.

Thus lightened she settled less rapidly, so the men returned to their bailing, and bringing a cotton quilt they pressed it down over the hole, first by standing on it until their teeth chattered with the cold, and then by pressing a millstone down on it. At last their bailing began to gain so much on the inflow that there was no longer any question of the boat's sinking, and a board nailed over the hole made it possible to pull the boat over the rapid into the quiet water above, where she could be more thoroughly repaired and calked at leisure.

Meanwhile the ladies were opening boxes and trunks and spreading soaked clothing in the sun to dry, fortunately there was a sun that day. It was a sad array of green and red and pink running together and making beautiful streaks in fabrics which were never intended to receive any dye at all. Most of the cases, of course, we were unable to open at all, and the extent of the damage will be revealed only when they reach their destination. Such things as tinned butter, tinned meats, or tinned milk will hardly be damaged at all, and part of the cargo consisted of kerosene oil in tins, which will suffer no damage if the oil is used before the tins rust through. The ladies on the wrecked boat will be the worst losers. Fortunately for us, all our goods were on our own boat, so we have thus far escaped loss.

We made arrangements, for a small consideration, to store the cargo in a mat house until the boat could be made seaworthy once more. Not having been wrecked ourselves, we were able to provide meals and a place to sleep for our unfortunate fellow travelers, and on the following afternoon we reloaded the boat and proceeded on our way. We have been especially thankful for a number of reasons: That the wreck occurred in the morning instead of at nightfall, that it was not a rainy day, that the soldiers had gone on and were no longer troubling us by their insolent curiosity, that so many things were saved dry, and that neither any of the goods nor the boat itself was entirely lost, as might so easily have been the case.

The boat has been leaking rather badly, but by rigging a bamboo pump from the back compartment up through the roof, and by bailing the front compartment every few hours, we have been able to keep the water down below the level of our cargo. At Kweifu we were delayed nearly half a day by the customs administration, which seems to lose no opportunity of squeezing these junk masters.

The delay was all the more trying because there was a magnificent up-river wind. At last, however, we got away, just as the boats carrying soldiers were arriving.

A Narrow Escape

On February 10th we arrived at the New Dragon Rapid. This was formed about twenty years ago by a huge landslide, and although a broad and deep passage has been blasted on the south side, the rapid still remains a terror to navigators. By careful management our boat ascended without mishap; but not so the other. The lower part was negotiated satisfactorily, and then, both crews and a force of additional trackers pulling with all their might, the boat started up the main rapid. Almost immediately the terrific force of the current tore the rudder post from its fastenings and rendered it useless for steering or steadying the craft. Thus disabled, the boat swung back and forth, rolling fearfully from side to side, until it seemed that she must capsize.

To prevent this, one of the crew seized a hatchet and chopped off the towing lines, and the boat, turning half about, swept downward through the seething whirlpools. The crew first raised the sail and then rowed with all their might on the big side oars, and narrowly escaping a ledge of rocks came down into the less swift water below the lower rapid. Here a small boat came to their assistance and carried a rope to the shore, where it was quickly wound about a rock. It checked the boat only partially and then snapped, and again the boat started on its vagabond way, though in much quieter waters. Just below lay a reef of large stones, and there was the boat drifting slowly but surely down upon it. The wind helped a little, however, and the crew put out poles and pushed, so that when the stern grounded it struck with so little force as to do no damage. The boat was soon pulled off and made fast to the shore, where we could examine her and learn the extent of the damage.

To our great relief we found her leaking no more than before the accident, so the only repairs necessary were to put in new timbers to hold the rudder-post in place. To accomplish this some of the men worked until about midnight, and early in the morning they were ready for a fresh start. As we came through the lower rapid, however, a fresh danger arose. Just as we were swinging far out into the river a big cargo boat which had come through the upper rapid got caught in a huge whirlpool and came swinging in in front of us. Our trackers feared to go forward, and yet not to go forward seemed to be equally dangerous. They slackened their pace slightly, and the cargo boat, making a complete circle in the whirlpool, swept out again toward the middle of the river and down past us.

As our boat reached the island of rock below the main rapid it came up with such force as to break the cable by which the fender beam is attached, as we saw happen at a former rapid, but the device had saved the boat itself from receiving the impact. The trackers were soon ready with their strongest ropes to pull through the rapid which had caused so much danger the day previous, when a new difficulty arose. The special pilot who is engaged for this rapid had come but could not get on the boat, because there was no way to cross to the little island of rock to which it was moored. Usually there is a small boat moored in the stream to serve as a bridge, but so early in the morning it had not come, so there seemed no way but to wait until one could be secured. Haste, however, was necessary, as the boats carrying the soldiers had appeared about half an hour before, and we feared that if they arrived before we could get over they might prevent our going over before them or they might steal our trackers to use on their boats.

The captain and I started to look for a small boat when we found that the crew of my boat had quarreled among themselves and were engaging in a general fight. The trouble had started in a quarrel the preceding evening over a small sum of money which one of the men had won from another in gambling. I had disentangled their hands from each other's hair then, and they had fallen to fighting again in the early morning after I left our boat. In the early morning after I left our boat. Mrs. Simkin, rushing in between them, had separated them and sent them on shore, where they had begun to fight again. We separated them again and by forbidding the chief trouble maker to return to the boat we have had no recurrence of this quarrel.

Meanwhile the men on the other boat had resorted to an ingenious method of getting the pilot on board. They had stretched a rope from the rocks on shore to the mast, on which the pilot had first sent his clothes across and had then followed hand over hand, dangling over the swift current until he had reached the island and the boat. This time we had no special difficulty in pulling through the rapid, and we got away a few minutes after the first of the soldiers began to come over the rocks.

Friends' Mission, Chungking, West China.

Most fault-finders are those who do nothing themselves, but are continually finding fault with those who do something.

Men on earth praise the one who rescues the life of another; but the angels in heaven praise the humble servant of God who rescues the soul of one sinner.

Earlham College

By HENRY J. CADBURY

(The following article is taken from The Westonian for March, and is reproduced here at the request of friends of Earlham College.)

About a century ago a large number of Friends from the East and Southeast settled in Indiana and Western Ohio. Carrying with them their characteristic ambition for education they started as early as 1832 the movement towards the establishment of a boarding school for Indiana Yearly Meeting by purchasing a site along the "great road" that led out to the unexplored prairies. The funds for building came in slowly,—only $154.50 in the first four years, $59.85 3/4 in 1837. Not until 1847 was the first wing of the building erected and the school opened in it "with no small inconvenience" until the whole was completed, in 1854-55. English Friends several times contributed to the school's needs, especially Joseph John Gurney. And it was from his old home, Earlham Hall, in Norfolk, that the original building and later the whole institution received its name. This building served all purposes until 1887, when a small chemical laboratory was built and Lindley Hall was erected, containing the other laboratories, offices, class rooms, museum, auditorium and library. In 1907, with the assistance of Andrew Carnegie, an attractive library building was erected. In the same year were built also a central heating plant and a boys' dormitory. Except in the dining room and parlors the girls now hold undisputed sway in Earlham Hall.

The life of the boarding school exemplified the moral restrictions of a "guarded religious education." Among the things forbidden in the early rules were "the use of ardent spirits, fighting, profanity," "cards, chess and checkers," "ear rings, finger rings," "gaudy clothing," "articles of vanity and display." Students were not allowed to visit their homes during the terms nor to receive "boxes" from home, "the quantity of rich food sent to some students by their parents and friends having produced much inconvenience, particularly in a sanitary view." The discipline of the college today is an altogether different matter—the men have few restrictions, while the girls have a sensible but strict self-government. The old Quaker objections to music and art have completely disappeared, the former, and for a time the latter, having been included in the official program of studies. From the first others than Friends were admitted to the institution. Today about half the students, most of the faculty and all the trustees are Friends. Of the trustees, six are elected by Western Yearly Meeting, six by Indiana Yearly Meeting and three by the Alumni Association.

The story of Earlham's academic development is typical of the evolutions of educational ideals in America. In 1859 the college department was chartered—open like the school to women as well as to men. Earlham was thus the first Friends' college and one of the first colleges in America to offer the degree to women. For many years the preparatory department far outnumbered the collegiate, and was not entirely abolished until the nineties. "To adapt the routine of instruction more nearly to the practical needs of the West" the conventional classical course of studies was quite early supplemented by a scientific course, which offered German and science in place of Greek and Latin. In its chemical laboratory, its observatory and its museum Earlham was a pioneer in science. This emphasis is still partly maintained. The museum and the full department of instruction in geology are unusual for a small college. The present curriculum is almost entirely elective, with a system of majors and minors that prevents either too scattered or too narrow selection of subjects. More than in Eastern cultural colleges Earlham adjusts itself to the requirements for professional and vocational preparation, especially to the state requirements for teachers. And more of its graduates engage in teaching than in any other profession. It prepares, however, no less suitably for business and domestic life, and for graduate work in science, medicine and theology.

It is hazardous for a temporary resident to speak with assurance of the more intimate and personal phases of Earlham life today, and it is difficult to describe them without assuming the tone of either an advertisement or a criticism. Wholesomeness seems to be the word which characterizes its physical, social and religious atmosphere. There is no dancing or smoking and little card playing. There is a good deal of out-door life. The athletic grounds and the lure of a beautiful and interesting farm country seem far preferable to dusty gymnasiums and crowded parlors or recreation halls. Though the "movies" have their patrons, the favorite diversion in milder weather is camp suppers and even camp breakfasts. Nearly all the social and recreational life is confined to the college circle, though the faculty through meeting and community committees keeps in touch with outsiders. Fully a third of the students live in Richmond and miss thereby the intimate and absorbing life of the dormitory. Intellectually they are at no disadvantage on this account, but can sometimes apply themselves to their studies with less distraction in their own homes. But the gain does not entirely compensate for their practical exclusion from much else that college can give. Furthermore, it would benefit the dormitory students to come into closer touch with the "day-dodgers," for they need more home life and broader interests. There is a good deal of democracy among the students. The wealthier ones are few and inconspicuous. There are some scholarships, and several of the men and women earn a large part of their expenses by working on the campus and in the halls, the dining room and kitchen. Others earn money by working in the stores of the city, by summer work, or by a year or two of teaching before or in the middle of their college course. There are no secret societies and little if any cliquishness. Of course classmates naturally are more intimate and a smaller intimate group grows up from the eight or ten persons who sit at the same table for two months at a time. There is much natural good fellowship between the men and women, but more intimate acquaintance between them tends to become exclusive. The limitation of such friendships is generally recognized as an unfortunate tradition.

The religious life of Earlham is better felt than described. The college itself is a monument to the persevering and unselfish devotion of many consecrated friends of the college. The students come from homes of simple piety. The atmosphere of the college is therefore one of earnestness and freedom, rather than of indifference or revolt. Under the gentle guidance of sympathetic teachers many a student has weathered safely the transition from a childhood religion of tradition to a manhood religion of conviction adapted to the broadened intellectual horizon that college gives. Earlham has contributed to the breadth of Quaker thought in its constituent communities and beyond. It has also acquainted its students with such wide religious movements as the Christian Association and the Student Volunteer Movement, it has taught them the history of Friends, and has trained them in a relatively simple and spontaneous method of worship.

Minor problems at Earlham are the need for more intimate relations between students and faculty, for more continuous residence on the part of the students (there is a tremendous leakage, perhaps sixty or seventy per cent during the four years of a class's life, due to lack of funds or lack of enthusiasm for education), and for more loyal backing on the part of the town of Richmond, the alumni and the Society of Friends. But the great need of Earlham is more money. Its small resources have been used most efficiently; little is spent on display. It would be difficult to find an institution using more fully the resources of its funds and its faculty. Except for a gymnasium it needs no buildings urgently, but it does need an endowment for salaries and for pensions. In the present circumstances the trustees must economize and temporize instead of building up a comprehensive and statesmanlike policy for the future.

In spite of all these difficulties Earlham is doing a great service and enjoys a still greater opportunity. Even to those who stay for but few terms the college gives a touch of culture and refinement that exceeds the average in their homes. Many good habits and good friendships are formed. And the stronger students and graduates go out into positions of real though often inconspicuous leadership. Several Earlhamites have achieved distinct prominence in various fields of life. Especially for Quakerism in America is Earlham of strategic importance. Geographically and religiously it lies between the Friends of the East and of the farther West. One-third of the Friends in America are said to reside within 200 miles of Richmond. Only a very small part of these go to any college but Earlham. So far the leaders in these meetings are mostly without college training. The meetings, however, need the skill in leadership and the breadth and sanity of religion which Earlham is qualified to give. With Earlham lies the intellectual and religious future of the heart of Quakerism. If Friends are to be the spiritual leaders of the future as of the past, and even if Quakerism in the middle West is to be saved at all from an ignorant and unwholesome type of evangelism, the faculty, students, and friends of Earlham must recognize the duty that lies upon them. Even without more financial backing this is possible. A series of beloved though humble teachers in the past shows how great an opportunity for quiet, permanent, spiritual influence is offered to a devoted and unselfish teacher today who will give himself personally as well as professionally for the lives of his students.

Little Blue-Eyed Edwin

By A FRIEND

Little blue-eyed Edwin and I are friends. And although he is only a little over three years old and I am over three score years old, yet we are chums. And whatever comes to him that he thinks is of much importance is soon conveyed to me for my sympathy, surprise or approval. It was a sad day, near a year ago, when "Buster," his favorite dog, was bitten by another dog that had rabies, and had to be killed.

But last summer he reached that important period in life that every boy reaches, when he made that wonderful bound towards manhood by laying aside his petticoats and donning the much-coveted pants. His father had bought him some blue overalls, the smallest he could find, and little Edwin soon had them on. They proved to be some three or more inches too long, but he was equal to the emergency and quickly had them rolled up in full modern fashion, and immediately made for my house, which was only a little ways off, to show them to me. And a prouder boy than he was is seldom seen. Again, this winter, he became the owner of some valuable property, from his standpoint, that was also brought to my attention promptly. One of his boy friends had outgrown a pair of rubber boots and had made him a present of them, although the weather was too cold to wear them, yet he thought it would be of great interest to me to see them—and I must confess under the circumstances it was. So, after wrapping and bundling himself up to keep warm, he tucked those wonderful boots under his arm and toddled to my home to show them.

And as he stood before me, still holding his precious treasure and telling me how soon he would be a man and help his papa drive the cows into their stalls when the mud should come, I could see his bright blue eyes fairly sparkle with delight. As he stood there with such great aspirations, suddenly there stood between us, as it were, a dark apparition and I could no more see my little blue-eyed friend.

I could see the dim outlines of this grim figure and read on his helmet the word "Preparedness," and on the scabbard of his sword, "Militarism, War and Destruction." I also seemed to see his fiendish arm and vicious fingers reaching out for my blue-eyed Edwin.

In a moment of time a panorama of the future life of my little friend under the control of this hideous monster passed before me. I could see my boy as he made rapid advancement in his school work, for he is already a lover of books. And as he was making such advancement and becoming more interested in lines of education, I see him join the "Boy Scouts"—an open switch to divert the mind of the boy into the line of militarism—and take those short "hikes" with his companions with practically no hardships, no responsibility, and lots of fun; just the thing to divert the mind.

Later on I could see him while attending high school, marching, learning to keep step, stand erect, and a number of other primary lessons in the drills of a soldier, all tending to create a desire for something more real.

Still farther on I could see him as he was finishing his high school work and getting ready for higher educational work or for some useful work of life, called by the decree of the land to spend from two to six months each year—or, if you please, his vacations—in actual military training.

And then, after this, just as he was preparing himself to enter some college or university for the purpose of making himself a strong-minded citizen for usefulness, he was compelled to serve at least three years more in the regular army of the country as a national guard, doing the actual duties of a soldier, but in no way developing his mental endowments and being continually subjected to a multitude of temptations and sins.

Again, after these years of faithful service for his country, I could see him return to his old home full of expectations. But, alas! everything has so changed that its attractions no longer have any charms for him. Militarism was so drilled into him that the aspirations for education were gone; there was nothing inspiring about the business of the old community of his boyhood; there was but little use for him to try to be a civilian now, for should there come the call to arms, he must leave it all and go and fight and, perhaps, die for his country, that some one who would share but little of the hardships might show to the world that he "was born to rule."

The apparition faded away and I could again see my little friend still standing with those much-prized rubber boots still tucked under his arm, and I could see the mischievous twinkle in his eyes, showing the energy and vim that would make a noble character for his country, church, and his God, if it could only be trained and directed aright.

Immediately I thought of the thousands of other little blue-eyed Edwins of America, who are just as bright, just as lovable, and just as much the image of their Creator as my little friend. And I wondered what the peace-loving, Christian people of this country can do to drive away this darkening cloud of military preparedness that is hovering over us, ready to swallow up our little blue-eyed Edwins.

National Missionary Congress

Announcement is made that President Wilson will be present at the opening session of the National Missionary Congress in Washington, Wednesday evening, April 26th. It is probable that practically every state in the Union will have delegates to this Congress. There will be perhaps the most attractive motion picture demonstration of missionary work attempted up to date. A sketch of the program of missions, both at home and abroad, will be thrown upon the screen, giving the occupations of the non-Christian world for Christ during the last 100 years, and showing the remarkable increase in missionary interest in North America.

For further information about the Congress, address The Laymen's Missionary Movement, No. 1 Madison Avenue, New York City.

"Ain't I Worth More Than Your Taxes "

"Daddy, ain't I worth more to you than your taxes? If I vote 'wet,' maybe I'll be a drunkard some day."

Returning from a recent local option meeting in Cheboygan County, Michigan, a lad climbed upon his father's lap and asked:

"What way will you vote, pa—'wet' or 'dry'?"

"'Wet,' of course," replied the man.

"Pa, why will you vote 'wet'?" the child continued.

"Because," returned the parent, "the saloons help to pay my taxes."

The little fellow had been deeply impressed by the lecture at the schoolhouse around the corner that evening, and he failed to comprehend how his own father could not understand as he did.

Innocently he then asked the foregoing question, and made the awful prediction that some day the saloons that "help to pay" the taxes, as that father had explained, might drag down that same boy to the grave of a drunkard!

The small son wanted to know which is the most vital, a human life or a mere tax levy! Should a father value a few paltry dollars, paid in just taxes, above the very life of his own flesh and blood? That's what the Cheboygan laddie wanted to know.

It was a sleepless night for that father, for those dreadful words kept ringing in his ears: "If you vote 'wet,' maybe I'll be a drunkard some day."

Today there isn't a stronger advocate of local option in all of Michigan.

"That boy is worth more to me than all the property I could ever own," he declares, emphatically.

Other fathers—how about you?—Selected.

Every church that is a "beehive" is invariably exemplary. Each member is too busy to neglect his duty.

WITH THE CHILDREN

How Peace Came

The Easter flower-market was wonderful that year. Justine Torbert unconsciously caught something of its joy even through the ache that throbbed in her heart at the thought—"How mother would have loved it!"

She was looking for flowers for her mother now—the most perfect that the market could offer. It was not always easy for her to make ends meet, but in the sixteen months since her mother had died there had not been a day when there was not at least a single rose beneath her mother's picture. And now at Easter—what flowers could ever tell half the Easter message to one who has walked that road.

The narcissuses were expensive, but Justine did not hesitate. No matter at what cost of future sacrifice, she must have them. As the florist handed them to her, Justine heard a little quick-drawn breath beside her, and turned to see a thin girl in shabby black with her eyes fixed hungrily upon the blossoms. The look hurt—Justine knew its meaning too well.

"Oh, I wish I could buy her some!" she thought. She even hesitated and made a swift mental calculation, but it was no use; she would have to live carefully the next two weeks to make up for the flowers she had already bought. She turned sorrowfully away. Once, in spite of herself, she looked back, but the girl was gone.

The street-car, like the market, was crowded. Justine found a seat beside a crippled boy. He was not an attractive boy; the small, sharp face was sullen as well as drawn with pain; but once Justine glancing down at him, thought he was sniffing the fragrance of her flowers. She rejected the idea instantly—as if a dirty street boy would care about flowers; yet something made her uncomfortable, and she was very glad to leave the car. She drew a breath of relief as she opened the door of her room, and met the sweet glance of her mother's pictured face. Here, at least, was quiet—and peace.

She put the flowers in her mother's vase under the picture, and dropped into her mother's chair. Yet the peace did not come; instead she felt a passion of loneliness like that of those first awful days. It bewildered and frightened her. "Oh, mother, mother!" she sobbed, chokingly.

A knock at the door startled her; it was her landlady, looking more tired than usual. There was a telephone message for Justine, she explained, and as she was going up stairs anyhow, she had stopped to give it herself; but even as she spoke her sad eyes discovered the flowers. "Seems as if they ought to help, don't it?" she said slowly, as she turned away.

"Wait a minute, Mrs. Gebhard!" Justine cried. She ran across to her flowers, and, taking half of them, she put them in the work-worn hand.

"They do help," she said, softly. And as she closed the door and came back into the room, she found that peace was there at last.—Youth's Companion.

The Story of the Resurrection

Little children, will you listen,
To the Resurrection story.
How the Lord, who died to save you,
Rose in brightest Easter glory:
How the cross and grave He vanquished
That each little child might know,
He, though Son of God Almighty,
Was the Lord who loved them so.

Very early in the morning
Came the holy women three,
To the tomb within the garden
Which they sought, yet feared to see:
For with sad hearts they remembered,
That their love might powerless prove,
As before the dark grave's entrance,
Stood a stone they could not move.
Little children, can you say
How that stone was rolled away?

Reverently those loving women
Entered in the silent cave;
But the body of our Saviour
Lay not now within the grave;
As perplexed they gaze around them,
Lo! before their wondering sight,
Stand two beauteous, holy Angels,
In their robes of shining white.
Little children, do you know
Who had sent them here below?

See the woman kneeling, trembling,
Listen to the Angel's word!
"How is it among the lifeless
Seek ye now your living Lord?
He no longer dead but risen
Goes before you in the way;
Haste to tell the Ten, and Peter.
Ye shall meet your Lord today."
Little children, can you say
Who met Jesus in the way?

Mary Magdalene, and Peter,
Other women with the rest,
Two friends, as they talked and journeyed,
Met their Lord, by Him were blest:
Peace to troubled hearts He offered
Gracious, living proofs, to doubt,
From the midst of those who loved Him,
No barred doors could keep Him out.
Little children, do you know
Why we honor Easter so?

Why we sing our alleluias,
Gladly Echo, "Christ is risen:"
Is it merely that our Saviour
Died and rose, and went to heaven?
Nay! but rather, He has conquered
Death and Satan in that strife,
Won for every faithful follower
Joy and everlasting life.
Little children, kneel and say,
"Lord, we thank Thee, risen today!"

But can little children thank Him?
Yes! they can by being good;
Thank Him for His loving-kindness,
Home, and friends, and daily food.
Tell Him simply how they love Him,
Trust their sins by Him forgiven,
Thus they too may meet their Master,
Rise in heart, as He is risen.
Little children, now you know,
Why we keep glad Eastertide,
May the Lord who loves you so,
Evermore with you abide.—Gretchen.

EASTER MORN

He is risen from the dead,
Holy anthems fill the air,
Shadows from the tomb have fled,
Heavenly light is everywhere.

Joy-bells on this Easter Morn
Ring their paeans far and wide,
Cheer the wretched and forlorn,
Jesus lives,—the Crucified.

Deathless life and hope are born,
Let all tears be wiped away;
On Christ's resurrection morn,
Angels rolled the stone away.
—Z. Irene Davis in "Herald and Presbyter."

PLANS OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

At the men's conference announcement was made that the Board of Education had decided to secure a secretary and enter upon some aggressive work in behalf of Friends' education. A committee consisting of Pres. D. M. Edwards of Penn College, Pres. Thomas Newlin of Guilford College and the Chairman of the Board of Education was authorized to make arrangements for securing the secretary and for financing the work.

It was also announced at the men's meeting that the Board had decided to enter upon a million-dollar campaign with a view of ultimately securing such an amount to be placed in the hands of the Board of Trustees of the Board of Education for the use of Friends' education throughout the entire country. No time limit was set for this campaign but the need of the funds is very profoundly felt.

Since that time the continuation committee of the men's conference has opened up the entire question of the re-organization of the various boards of the Five Years' Meeting with possible combinations and it has also called attention to the desirability of attempting to raise a considerable sum of money for the work of all of the boards of the Five Years' Meeting. The Board of Education has no disposition to make plans independently of the other boards and in view of the suggestions now being considered for the re-organization of the work of the Five Years' Meeting, the Committee on the Secretaryship of the Board of Education has seen fit to make the following temporary arrangements:

President Isaac Sharpless of Haverford College has accepted an appointment to have entire supervision of a partial survey of the Friends' schools and colleges and of the Friends' field. As a result of his work upon which he is to enter at once, we hope very much that more real information concerning the whole field of Friends' education in America may be secured than has ever been secured before. We trust also that his work may result in increased loyalty to Friends' institutions and educational ideals.

The work which President Sharpless is planning to do will require a great deal of correspondence and he will be greatly handicapped if Friends whom he addresses do not respond promptly and accurately to his questions. The Committee of the Board of Education desires earnestly to request Friends to render all possible assistance in this work. We believe that we are entering upon a great forward movement for Friends' education in this country and the Committee hopes to have information available for the next Five Years' Meeting which will demonstrate that a secretary for this work with possible combinations, if the Five Years' Meeting sees fit to make them, should be placed in the field permanently.

Very sincerely,

R. L. KELLY,

D. M. EDWARDS,

THOMAS NEWLIN.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

There have been some striking examples in the last few days of the alertness with which "preparedness" advocates watch their interests in Washington, and of the promptness with which Congress hears from them when some feature of their program of increase is threatened. We are also getting a little further insight just now into the far-reaching plans of the big navy people, at least. If any Friends have doubt as to the value of letting their national representative know what they would like done on any particular piece of legislation, they might have seen late last week how highly this sort of effort is valued by those on the other side of this "preparedness" question.

For some ten days the Senate has had almost constantly before it the Chamberlain army reorganization bill. Two of the most important sections of this bill provide for federalizing the National Guard and the establishment of a large body of volunteer reserves in connection with the army. Most of the interest of the Senators seemed to center in these two sections and there has been struggle to determine which element should get the upper hand, the advocates of a federalized National Guard or those who want to add the reserves to the military establishment of the country. Friends of the latter section, which practically embodies the so-called continental army plan proposed by Ex-Secretary Garrison, won when an effort was made to amend the section out of the bill.

A little later the National Guard people became fearful that their pet section of the bill was in danger. On the following morning Senators received hundreds of telegrams from different parts of the country calling upon them to stand by the Guard. And there was no doubt that these messages from "back-home" got attention. A good part of one session was consumed discussing them.

There rests upon all those who wish better thing for this nation than to see it plunged into the dangers of militarism the obligation to urge their views upon Congress with all possible earnestness and persistence. Right now, Friends in every State should write to their Senators to oppose the Chamberlain bill and to ask that no increase in the standing army be authorized. If letters were sent some time ago others should be sent now. At the office of Senator LaFollette I was told today that the indications were that this bill would pass the Senate. It should not pass without every Friend who stands for no increase in our war preparations making his voice heard, so far as that may be done through letters.

MINISTERS' AND WORKERS' CONFERENCE.

The Ministers' and Workers' Conference of Western Yearly Meeting met at Sheridan, Indiana, April 4, 5 and 6, 1916. The spirit of prayer and devotion permeated all sessions; after one special time of refreshing it was remarked by one that it seemed like the vestibule of heaven.

The main feature of the opening session was the conference sermon given by Gertrude M. Reiner, in which the keynote of the Conference was struck. Her theme was the Church viewed in its broad sense as composing both ministry and laity. The proper relation of pastor and people was shown to be one of co-operation in promulgating the interests of the kingdom. The office of the minister was presented as that of a watchman, husbandman, captain, overseer and shepherd. As such he must warn, nurture, direct, guide and feed the flock intrusted to him.

A strong appeal was made for lay members to give the Church first place in their lives. The Church of Jesus Christ and not the ministry and missionaries are to carry out the great commission. Both minister and laity have failed. The summary of it all was that there must be a united effort in Christ. "Without Jesus we can do nothing. Through Him we can do all things."

Interesting and helpful Book Reviews on "Efficiency Points" were given by Noble C. Trueblood and Mary A. Cox. Efficiency was shown to be the cry of today and that the Church must progress and become missionary. It was stated that more than 60 per cent of the missionary work has been done by laymen. Strong emphasis was again laid on inspiring the lay members to witness for Christ in their various avenues of service, also to make them feel the responsibility of Christian stewardship. To best accomplish this financial end, George H. Moore recommended that the pastor be considered an ex-officio member of the finance committee and co-operate with his people to make the Church the model institution of the community in financial affairs.

Three very helpful and inspiring messages were given by Charles W. Sweet. Out of a loving and sympathetic heart came the appeal for consecration and faithful service, both as individuals and as a Church.

"Our Problems and Prospects in Evangelism" was discussed in a very able manner by Enos Harvey. The three factors to be considered in any evangelistic campaign were stated to be the evangelist, the Church itself and the unsaved community. Some of the problems mentioned were indifference on the part of the Church members, lack of prayer, finance and ministerial supply. The one solution offered was a united effort on the part of the Church to bring about a widespread revival.

A symposium on "Pastoral Work" proved very helpful and practical. The subject was approached from six different angles. "The Pastor's Tests," by Arthur Hammond, touched the experience of every pastor. Such tests as yielding to popular ideas at the expense of spiritual ideals, the test of preparing and delivering the sermon, which was the test of tests to the preacher, the test of the right relation of pastor to other ministers and churches. The final appeal was that all these things be endured bravely, counting it a privilege to suffer for Christ.

"The Pastor's Home Visitation" was given by Austin Osborn. The definition given of a pastoral visit was any call made in the interest of the kingdom of God, and might be religious, social-religious or social. Grace and gumption were recommended as very necessary factors in successful home visitation.

"The Pastor's Library," given by Charles R. Axton was convincing proof that every minister needs a good library. It was strongly urged that books be wisely chosen according to the needs and that every pastor keep in touch with our own denominational books and literature, as well as books of other religious bodies. "The Pastor's Relation to Business Meetings," by Elizabeth A. Murphy, urged all pastors to know the discipline and be a helper rather than a leader in all business meetings.

"The Pastor's Relation to Local Social Functions," prepared by Rhoda Roberts, was read, in her absence, by Lewis E. Stout. Christ was shown to be an ideal guest, ever seeking to save the lost. He taught the people to be courteous. The great need of pastor and people mingling together in social affairs was clearly brought out. Also that church socials should play an important part in moulding the social atmosphere of the community. Two very inspiring features of the conference were the duets by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and "Chalk Talks" by L. O. Brown.

"The Psychology of a Service," by Jesse I. Phillips, dealt with the psychic side of religious service. It was clearly shown that there is a psychology of worship, certain mental conditions that influence the service favorably or unfavorably. He stated that the preliminary service should prepare the minds of the people for the sermon, which was the psychological moment of moments, when men should be moved to action. It was suggested that a short silence follow the message when the truth might be sealed by the Holy Spirit.

In the closing session, E. Howard Brown gave some very interesting stereopticon views of Friends' work from the time of Fox to the present day, which we believe inspired every true Friend to a deeper sense of devotion and loyalty to our own beloved denomination.

FRANK V. STAFFORD,
President.
LENNA WATSON,
Secretary.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Fairbury, Nebraska, April 1, 1916.
Editor The American Friend:

It will interest some Friends to know that I am in Nebraska in pursuit of my work as General Agent of the National Christian Association, and that a convention will be held at Superior on April 6 and 7. In the course of my travels I am quite frequently in the neighborhood of Friends' meetings, and I make it a point always where possible to visit such. In this way I have had the pleasure on this trip of being with Friends at Central City. I was deeply impressed with the great work Nebraska Central College is doing for the young men and women of these prairies, of whom not more than one in ten probably would ever get such training were it not for this institution. And North Branch Academy in Jewell County, Kansas, is doing an equally good work to the extent of an academic training for the young people of those parts.

Referring to my own work in defense of the church against the encroachments of the modern secret lodge system, while in line with the ancient testimony of Friends, many do not appreciate the importance of it. Possibly one citation will help some to a vision of at least one point in this irrefragable conflict. In the official Quarterly Bulletin of the Iowa Grand Lodge, A. F. and A. M., for the first quarter of the present year, there is a review of a sermon preached by Rev. A. E. Coil, of Marietta, Ohio, who is Worshipful Master of the Lodge of which he is a member. The passage I have selected is as follows:

"Masonry accords to a man the right to get his inspiration to a noble life from Moses, Buddha, Confucius, Krishna, Jesus or any other one or more of the great religious masters. If there are developed in his life those qualities that make him a worthy man and helpful citizen, no matter what the source of his inspiration, Masonry gladly welcomes him into the imperfect lodge here below, helps him and receives help from him, assuring him that at the close of the life on earth he will, if found worthy, be admitted into that all perfect, glorious and celestial Lodge above, where the Supreme Architect of the Universe, and Father of all mankind, presides."

It possibly should be stated that Mr. Coil is a Unitarian minister, but his interpretation is in full accord with all authoritative teachers of the system of whom I have knowledge. Besides, the official organ in which the sermon appears puts the following at the head of this review: "Sentiments in full accord with our views." If such statements do not give just cause for alarm and protest, then I do not understand the genius of Christianity, and am mistaken in my contention. I ask Friends to judge.

After the convention in this State, I go to Illinois for some weeks' service in the promotion of an anti-secrecy convention, probably at Cerro Gordo.

MEAD A. KELSEY.

In the Senate the business now claiming the daily attention of the members is the Chamberlain army reorganization bill.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA
Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

ANOTHER MEETING SUPPORTING ITS WORKER ABROAD.

The support of Sada F. Stanley in Jamaica comes from the Earlham meeting in Iowa. Earlham Friends keep in close touch with Sada Stanley and the entire amount required by the Board of Missions to maintain Miss Stanley's work has been provided through free will offerings by members of this meeting. "Our church," writes one of the members of the Earlham meeting, "of course feels an interest in the missionary work in Jamaica which we would not feel if our money was not paying for a part of it. Beside Miss Stanley's salary, we, each year, send a box, a large one filled with the things she needs, for we ask her to write us the things she most wishes to help her in her work. By securing this list, we are able to know the things that will be the most real service and avoid sending useless articles. Each lady of the church is solicited for this box and thus each one is more interested in Miss Stanley's every-day life, her home and her work."

DAILY ROUTINE AT LIRHANDA.

When Edgar and Adelaide Hole left the Lirhandia Station in Africa last August, there places were taken by Dr. A. B. Estock and his wife. A recent report from Dr. Estock tells as follows about their daily program:

"The daily routine is as follows: Boys begin work a little after 6 A. M. and continue until 2:30 P. M. We have from 5 to 20 boys working part of the month. The teachers of the out-schools begin their sessions at about 7 and close 8:30 A. M. The daily attendance of these schools ranges from 300 to 500. Many of the boys have gone to the settlers to work and others have been influenced to leave school because of recent trouble in the district.

"Mrs. Estock meets with the girls from 7:30 to 9 A. M. Their daily attendance ranges from 10 to 30, according to harvest season and digging of gardens. At 10 A. M. the teachers return for advanced studies on the station. This session lasts until 12 M. We then have a gospel service for the work boys, primary and advanced classes. About 1 P. M. the primary school session begins, lasting until 2:30 P. M.

"The Sabbath is begun in prayer with the teachers, then we scatter to the different out-school posts, holding gospel services, at which the total attendances average between 200 to 300. By 9:30 A. M. we return to the station for Bible study at which the attendance ranges from 50 to 200. At 11 A. M. we have the main service, at which part of the out-schools and outsiders are in attendance, the number ranging from 200 to over 500 according to seasons and weather. In the afternoon Mrs. Estock meets with the girls while I aid the boys in a C. E. service. Attendance at these is between 20 to 40. Sabbath and week-day evenings, the few believers gather for prayer and song service."

RELIGIOUS WORK AT LARGEST SUGAR MILL IN WORLD.

By arrangement with Mr. R. B. Hawley, president of the Chaparra Sugar Company, way has been opened for the extension of the work of Friends at Chaparra. Jose Reyes, the native pastor at Velasco, now goes to Chaparra every week, holding a public gospel meeting on Thursday night and a religious school for children on Friday morning. Converts of Friends, and of other denominations, that have moved to Chaparra are joining heartily in the work.

One very hopeful feature is that the Sugar Company which has been heretofore quite indifferent to religious matters is now showing very great kindness in facilitating religious work among their people at the mill and on the estate.

SOLOMON TICE AT HIS POST IN C. VICTORIA, MEXICO.

"Unless something urgent calls me away, I shall not leave Victoria before June. I feel that I don't want to be traveling while the relations between the two countries appear so strained. I feel safer right here than on the border even." This sentence in a letter dated April 6th, will indicate the sense of security which Solomon Tice feels at Victoria.

The same letter contains a request which many Friends will surely want to know about, and will be glad to remember. "I have started a Bible Class for men only, that meets on Sunday morning after Sunday School. There is a membership of eleven at present with more who have indicated a desire to attend. The work is to read the Bible through from beginning to end in such readings as I indicate from week to week. The members do the reading during the week and we meet on Sundays to talk over what has been read. There is a spiritist among the number whom I have a great longing to lead into the light. I trust you will make him an object of special prayer and get others to do so too. I feel that we are at a crisis here for spiritism is making inroads upon our work and even upon our membership.

PLAIN WORDS FROM A COLLEGE PROFESSOR.

The professor of philosophy in Williams' College has written a book on India. The title of this book is "India and Its Faiths;" the name of the author is James Bissett Pratt. Dr. Pratt travelled widely in India, with his interest, as he himself says in his preface, "centered on existing conditions, on present-day ideas and their significance, and on the methods used by the different communities of India for religious education and religious reform."

What does Dr. Pratt think of foreign missions, and does he find the non-Christian religions good enough for the people of India, or not? In his chapter on "Christian Missions in India," he says: "Perhaps the greatest reproach of the non-Christian religions is their lack of missionary zeal; and the greatest argument for the superiority of Christianity is the fact that it is supremely the missionary religion. For the missionary spirit is the spirit of loving service; it is the incarnation of Christianity. Hence, it is astounding to find 'Christians,' as one so often does, who 'do not believe in missions.' For wherever 'Christianity' ceases to be a missionary religion, it ceases to be Christian. And if Christianity be taken in the large sense, if, in short it be identified with the spirit of Christ, whoever loves humanity must wish well to Christian missions, and whoever believes in humanity must have good hopes of the missionary's ultimate success. For Christianity has a message which the non-Christian world cannot do without. And the delivery of this message is the greatest debt that the West owes to the East."

PEACE DEPARTMENT

NOTE—It is hoped that this page may present in brief form a record of activities typical of the work Friends are doing for peace. News items, short, pointed arguments, suggested plans, all will be welcome, and will be used subject to the limitations of space and the proper distribution and arrangement of the matter received. All communications intended for this page should be addressed to Allen D. Hole, President, 615 National Road, West, Richmond, Indiana.

THE PROSPECT FOR PEACE.

(Note. Dr. Henrietta M. Thomas of Baltimore, Maryland, has been in England since the beginning of the war, and has been active in the relief work which Friends have had so prominent a part in organizing and managing, for the assistance of Germans, Austrians and Hungarians in distress. A special task which was assigned to Dr. Thomas was that of conducting parties of German women from England to Germany. In this service she has made six different trips with as many different parties, and has sometimes brought back English girls and women. In the Westmoreland Mercury and Times, for February 18 and February 25, Dr. Thomas gives a somewhat detailed account of her work, including also some discussion of the attitude of the people to the questions of the war. In closing her second article she discusses the prospect for peace in a manner so clear and forcible that we feel sure all our readers will be interested in knowing just what she has to say. Following is this part of the article in full.—A.D.H.)

But what, you will be asking, are the prospects of peace? In February, 1915, the prevalent idea seemed to be that were either side to gain a substantial advantage, that side could propose a conference of the belligerent powers to discuss terms of peace.

But in September the feeling was different. Germany had gained at that time almost all she claimed to desire in Russia. Why did she not propose such a conference? "Oh, we cannot call such a conference; the Allies would simply say that we were asking for peace because our funds had given out, or because we were starving or had not enough men, so we cannot propose such a thing!"

"Well!" I said, "if when a nation is more or less victorious she cannot propose a conference to discuss terms of peace; and when she is being beaten she cannot ask for peace (for she would confess her really beaten) can we hope for peace before we arrive at a stalemate with utter exhaustion of all the belligerent powers?"

"The only hope of peace," they told me, "was for the neutral powers to call a conference to draw up possible peace terms which they can present to each belligerent country." If the powers all agree that they could consider such terms of peace a conference of the belligerent nations would be the automatic outcome; if on the other hand such a basis was not considered satisfactory by any one of the powers, then the neutral nations would reconsider their first proposals, and amend them or make others, this would go on until terms were arrived at which were satisfactory to all nations. In short the 'Continuous mediation scheme' proposed by the Women's Hague Congress does really seem the most hopeful plan for ending this terrible struggle. But you ask, with Germany still in France and Belgium? True Germany does still occupy territory in France and most of Belgium, but how do you know until you have tried whether or not she intends keeping them? There are in Germany at this time a large number of people (Social Democrats and peace people of whom there are quite a number) moderate thinkers who do not believe in annexation of territory; who do not believe that Germany ought keep any territory in France or Belgium, and who believe Russian Poland should have autonomy. Were peace proposals made, stipulating for the evacuation of these territories the hands of this party would be greatly strengthened, as would also the hands of the Government, if, as many people think, they really favour some such policy. Is it fair for English people to say so decidedly as they often do, what Germany would or would not do? Proposals made by a council of neutral powers would be binding on no one; if not acceptable to England or to the other Allies, they would of course be rejected; we have no responsibility as to how Germany would receive such proposals. Only it must be remembered that no proposal will be lastingly satisfactory which concedes everything to one side. Such a peace would leave an open wound, as did the treaty which ended the Franco-Prussian war.

Peace Tomorrow to Kill Militarism.

Such a state of affairs, would not be likely to work for a permanent peace. Indeed as a prominent German said to me the last time I was over, "If you want to kill militarism in Europe make peace tomorrow; and let no nation gain anything as a result of this war. Then the people would begin to say "Look, we have given our husbands, our sweethearts, our brothers, our sons to be killed and maimed, we have spent all our money and what have we gained by it? Nothing, what good is there in a militarism which demands so great a sacrifice, and secures us nothing?" and they would rise up and demand that other methods be tried than war. That, he said, would destroy militarism. "But," I asked, "is such a peace possible?" He was optimistic enough to believe that such a peace was possible, certainly it is only possible if you and I do our share to make it so and the question comes very forcibly home to us all, do we care more for the glory of our country or for the well being of mankind? For if the spirit of militarism, great armies, navies, air craft, could be completely abolished, then these other reforms, which we all desire,—lasting peace, justice, the integrity of smaller nations, etc., etc., would become an actual living fact.

There are men in Germany today who desire these things as sincerely as does anyone in England. Let us then take hope and believe that in the end a right way may be found out of this hideous tangle, and let us work that that day may not be long delayed.

THE IOWA PAGE

CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelistic, etc.—H. R. Keates, 1314 Lyon Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

Missionary—H. D. Lane, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Educational—D. M. Edwards, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Bible School—Golda R. Carroll, Beacon, Iowa.

Christian Endeavor—Cora M. Mattison, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Peace—Alvin Hoskins, Richland, Iowa.

Temperance—Robert Lincoln, Grinnell, Iowa.

Items of information should be sent to the above promptly so that they may appear in the "Iowa page."

PENN COLLEGE.

The Haverford Scholarship, awarded by the Haverford College to the honor man of each graduating class, has been won by Aaron Downs, of Dana, Ind. The Bryn Mawr Scholarship, awarded by Bryn Mawr College to the honor young woman of each graduating class, has been won by Miss Eula Mitchell, of Jefferson, Ia.

Almost every large city in the country has a number of graduates and old students of Penn College resident in it. On a recent visit to Kansas City, a number of these were met. Among these were Mr. and Mrs. James M. Davis, students of the early days of Penn College; Dr. John H. Outland, who has attained great renown as a surgeon in the Southwest; B. C. Winslow, government inspector for the Kansas City district; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kenworthy, Mr. Kenworthy being a member of the class of 1900 and being now engaged as foreman in a large baking industry. It is very gratifying to find old students and graduates of the college universally loyal and enthusiastic for the institution.

By rooting out our selfish desires, even when they appear to touch no one but ourselves, we are preparing a chamber of the soul where the Divine Presence may dwell.—Ellen Watson.

YOUNG FRIENDS BOARD

PHILADELPHIA CONFERENCE. (Continued from last week.)

During the second day, plans for a closer union of all denominational and inter-denominational young people's activities were discussed. Each denomination was asked to nominate both a member of the continuation committee of the Conference and a member for the International Christian Endeavor Topic Card Committee. This committee is to study the matter of topics from every angle, that the present standard may be considerably raised. Each denomination was granted the privilege of using the major part of the United Society's topics, changing them to suit its own needs and placing its imprint upon them.

The Young Friends Secretary made arrangements to use the Christian Endeavor World in connection with Young Friends Propaganda.

THE STUDY CLASS LEADER.

Have you ever seen our little Study Class Manual? It is a compilation of the best suggestions on Study Class organization. You will need this 14-page booklet. It is priced 3 cents.

Enrollment cards are free only upon the guarantee that they will be filled out and returned.

Our slogan is to Organize a Christian Endeavor Society, Study Class, Young Friends Committee, or select a key young Friend in every Monthly Meeting within the United States and Canada during the coming spring and summer. How nearly can we realize it? Begin now!

YOUNG FRIENDS CONFERENCES AT CARMEL AND INDIAN- APOLIS, IND.

The Young Friends Secretary addressed the young Friends of Carmel Quarterly Meeting on April 9. He spoke on the "Challenge of the Society of Friends to Her Young People." There was a large attendance and much enthusiasm was expressed.

At Indianapolis on the following evening, the Field Secretary spoke to 75 young Friends on the "Special Opportunities for Work in Western Yearly Meeting." Several pilgrimages are being planned for this summer.

SUGGESTIONS.

The Christian Endeavor President. He is an everlasting agitator; makes life miserable for the lazy member; uses the telephone often; isn't afraid to remind people of their duties; sees to it that each leader is notified at least two weeks ahead of time; looks after leaders and committee chairmen, and gets out new plans for the general uplift of the Society. The committee chairman follows up members of the Society.

Buy an expert Endeavor book, price 50 cents, if you desire to know more about the duties of the President. Send for the new Efficiency Chart. It will help you locate the reason why your Society does not grow.

THE SPRING CAMPAIGN.

Notice the three E's. They will help you remember the points of emphasis.

1. Endeavor—Efficiency and Evangelism.
2. Education—Study and Imitation.
3. Enrollment—Signed cards and connected Friends.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR APRIL 30.

Topic—"Using Sunday for This World and the Next." Isa. 58:1-14.

"If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day: and call the Sabbath a delight—then shalt thou delight thyself in Jehovah."

The word Sabbath comes from the Hebrew numeral seven, which is closely akin to the word meaning to rest.

Very early the number seven came to signify perfection.

The idea of rest became connected with the Sabbath for perhaps two reasons. First, because the early Hebrews regarded God as a man of human limitations who must recuperate after his tremendous task of world building, and second, because the Semitic instincts of quiet meditation before the Deity forbode work on the Lord's day. Experience has proved the value of this ancient religious custom. Physically the body is given a chance to renew tissues, throw off poisons and take in new energy. Mentally the depressing care of business, industry or professional work is set aside and the mind electrified by a fresh theme. Socially, different peoples and interests tend to take ones thoughts from the monotony of business and to stimulate to intellectual enterprise. And spiritually one is greatly benefitted.

If one quietly worships on this day, he is drawn up to a new potential. He opens the East windows of his soul to the fresh red rays of Spiritual day. Aspiration and vision are born with spiritual infilling. Fresh with new zeal a man becomes rich in possibility. No man can afford to ignore the appeal of the Sabbath. Every effort should be made to conserve its worth to the greatest number.

We would willingly have others perfect, and yet we amend not our own faults.—Thomas A Kempis.

A willing childhood is the flower of life—George Macdonald.

Which Do You Prefer?

It is important for reasons of health and practical economy for every housekeeper to ask herself this question:

"Do I prefer a pure baking powder like Royal, made of cream of tartar derived from grapes, or am I willing to use a baking powder made of alum or phosphate, both derived from mineral sources?"

The names of the ingredients printed on the label show whether the kind you are now using or any brand, new or old, that may be offered is a genuine cream of tartar powder, or merely a phosphate or alum compound.

Royal Baking Powder contains no alum nor phosphate.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

AT LYNN, MASS.

Silsbee Street Meeting—"A Community Night" Social, held on February 29th, was an occasion of unusual interest. In response to personal invitations sent to people living in the neighborhood, in which there are many lodging houses, a goodly number accepted, some of whom had never been in the meeting house before. The exercises took place in the large vestry and consisted of instrumental music, followed by group games in which old and young took part and the visitors were made to feel much at home. Ice cream and cake were served. Some who were strangers on that occasion have since become attenders of the Sabbath morning meeting.

Another social event followed on March 14th, when a turkey supper was served by the men of the meeting. One hundred and forty-eight persons sat down to the tables which tested the full seating capacity of the vestry. The guest of the evening was the mayor of the city, whose ancestors were Friends and whose grandmother was a minister. Earl J. Harold, pastor of the meeting, made a stirring address on "Brotherhood," following the mayor and another commissioner of the city. An orchestra furnished the music during the supper.

March 19th was "Go-to-Church-Sunday" in Lynn, and Silsbee Street Meeting had its share in the results, the morning meeting and Bible School having a largely increased attendance. The meeting had more than twice the average number for the winter months. The noticeable increase on "Go-to-Church-Sunday," as well as on other occasions of late in all the departments of church work, has called forth expressions of thankfulness for the blessings we have received from the Great Head of the Church.

Eastern Avenue Meeting—On "Go-to-Church-Sunday," which is generally observed by most all of the denominations of Lynn, the Friends of the Eastern Avenue Meeting reported an increased attendance at both morning and evening services and at the Bible School, on March 19th. The attendance at the school was the largest in its history, 128 being present from an enrollment of 150.

On Sabbath morning, the 26th, 13 persons were publicly welcomed into fellowship with Friends by the minister and the elders, who extended to the new members the hand of fellowship on behalf of the organization. Among this number were three boys, who at their own request were transferred from the associate to active membership.

A community supper was held on March 29th, of which more than 200 persons partook, all being seated at the tables which were spread in the meeting room. The object of the supper was to interest persons not attending any church. Many new faces were seen, and the parents of some of the new scholars were there. Following the supper, remarks were made by Thomas Wood, the Yearly Meeting Superintendent; Perry D. Macey, the Yearly Meeting Field Worker; George C. Herbert, Superintendent of the Bible School, and the pastor, Tom A. Sykes. The program was interspersed with music. The tables were decorated with sweet peas sent by George A. Crosman, an aged member and staunch supporter of the meeting, now in his eighty-seventh year. At present he is in feeble health, and was not able to attend the supper.

The outlook for this meeting is very encouraging. The children attend the morning meeting in large numbers, which is held on the basis of silence. A new class of older boys has just been formed on the Baracca plan, while the primary department is over-crowded with over 40 children. A home department has recently been started and over 30 are now enrolled. The primary department is graded. The Penn Quarterlies are used in the other classes.

NEWS NOTES.

George B. Evans, who for the past six years has been pastor in the Meeting at Yorktown Heights, New York, has resigned. He will close his service there on June 18th.

"The Hope of the World" will be used in an Easter program at Poplar Ridge, New York, on Easter Sunday. Plans are being made to bring a choir from Auburn for an Easter program of song in the afternoon.

L. Hollingsworth Wood gave two addresses recently within the limits of New York Yearly Meeting, one at Oakwood Seminary and one at Poplar Ridge, on the work of the Peace Committee. Both addresses were listened to with the closest attention. Mr. Wood's experience with the peace committee headquarters in Washington City gives him a large fund of interesting and valuable information.

William J. Sayers, pastor of the Meeting at Muncie, Indiana, gave the address to the High School and Eighth Year graduates of Perry Township, Delaware County, Indiana.

The executive committee of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions met in its semi-annual meeting at Richmond, Indiana, last week. Interesting reports were had from all the mission fields. Those in attendance were George H. Moore, Bloomington, Indiana; Carolena Wood, Mt. Kisco, New York; Francis Wright, Sr., Kansas City, Missouri; Ernest L. Gregory, Arnold's Park, Iowa; Charles E. Carey, Fairmount, Indiana, and E. Gurney Hill, Charles E. Tebbetts and Ross A. Hadley, of Richmond.

Asenath Nixon, of Kokomo, Indiana, died week before last at the age of 95 years. She was a pioneer Friend in that city, the Union Street Friends Meeting having been organized in her home many years ago. We hope to have a fuller obituary notice later.

The Young Friends' Conference News-Bulletin for April is a "Booster Number," and has much valuable information about the Young Friends' General Conference to be held at Cedar Lake, Indiana, August 4-13.

The Indiana Yearly Meeting Christian Endeavor Convention will be held at Jonesboro, Indiana, May 18-20.

Morton C. Pearson, secretary of the Church Federation at Indianapolis, Indiana, gave an address last Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. Building in Richmond, Indiana, at a meeting called to consider the organization of a Church Federation in Richmond.

Enos Harvey, of Noblesville, Indiana, general superintendent of Western Yearly Meeting, has been elected treasurer of the Indiana State Federation of Churches.

Edgar A. Wollam, of Cleveland, Ohio, who has been holding revival meetings within the limits of Indiana Yearly Meeting, was a recent caller at the office of The American Friend.

HAVERFORD COLLEGE NEWS.

The Haverford Society, of Maryland, held its annual dinner at the University Club in Baltimore on March 31st. It was the most largely attended dinner that the Society has ever had, 30 Haverfordians being present.

An interesting program was arranged at the College for the annual spring opening on April 14th. The program included a large number of interesting activities in the gymnasium and on the field.

New officers were recently installed in the College Y. M. C. A. The membership committee reported that 96.2 per cent of the College body are enrolled as members of the Association and that the average attendance at the regular meetings has been above forty.

Professor Elbert Russell, of John Hopkins University, Baltimore, was the Y. M. C. A. speaker in the Union Wednesday evening, April 12th.

The Senior-Junior Oratorical Contest for the Alumni Prize will be held late in April.

The subject of the Sophomore-Freshman Debate, to be held late in April, is: "Resolved, that the United States should be committed to a definite policy of resisting, by force of arms if necessary, all territorial aggressions in South America by European or Asiatic powers."

Our business is not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand.—Carlyle.

CHURCH AT WORK.

Berkeley, California—The Whittier College Girls' Glee Club visited the Berkeley Meeting on March 30th, giving an excellent program of vocal and instrumental music, together with other interesting features. They also gave a sacred concert at the Sunday evening service on April 2nd. The Club consists of 19 members, all of whom are students of Whittier College. They were accompanied by Mrs. Mable Douglas and Mrs. Vivian Green, members of the faculty.

Tonganoxie, Kansas—A revival of five weeks' duration in the Friends church here, conducted by O. B. Ong, closed on April 2nd. The interest and attendance were good throughout. The revival eventually resolved itself into a union meeting, the four Protestant churches in the town participating. There were nearly two hundred persons at the altar, and nearly one hundred expect to unite with some church. About twenty are favorable to Friends. Since the meetings closed a weekly union prayer meeting has been started and has been well attended. Also the union cottage prayer meetings have been continued once a week.

Fall River, Massachusetts—Since the first of the year our minister, Murray S. Kenworthy, has given a most profitable and interesting series of lectures on Sabbath afternoons, on the subject of the Hebrew prophets. The members of the meeting feel that in these instructive lectures they have been given an unusual privilege, and have been stimulated to a fresh interest in the Old Testament scriptures.

Portland, Oregon—Friends in the Portland Meeting have continued to be active in the various lines of work. We registered the largest percent of membership of any denomination represented at the Laymen's Missionary Convention held here. Also our per capita contribution to missions and to the support of our local church work was the largest reported. This Convention, which presented a strong educational and inspirational program at every session, was of great value to all of our members who were favored to attend.

Following this, a most important meeting for Oregon Friends was the Convention Triangle, arranged by the Conference Committee of the Yearly Meeting and held in the First Friends Church of Portland. It may be said that Portland Monthly Meeting, most commonly called the Sunnyside Meeting, has been changed in name to The First Friends Church of Portland, and the meeting at Lents is now the Second Church. The first series of sessions of this Convention Triangle was occupied in the discussion of questions relating to the ministry. Vital topics were treated in an intelligent and helpful manner. The second division of subjects pertained to questions relating to the work of the Bible School, and much that will doubtless add to the effectiveness in this great work was brought out in the matter presented. The closing sessions were in charge of the Christian Endeavor and were equal to any of the others in the inspiration which they brought for better service.

Closely following this highly successful Convention, Portland Quarterly Meeting was held in the West Piedmont Church. At this meeting a recommendation was directed to the Monthly meeting which urged the importance of diligent attention to the cause of peace at this time. Homer L. Cox brought a strong message to the meeting on this subject. He made clear the New Testament standard and showed without question what ought to be the attitude of Christians toward carnal warfare. A committee was appointed to arrange for meetings where strong messages of this nature could have a wider hearing.

The last "Feast of Fat Things" it has been our privilege to enjoy was a two week's service of revival meetings which closed April 2nd. Levi Cox, of Winchester, Indiana, the father of Homer L. Cox, the pastor of the First Friends church here, brought to us spirit-filled messages which were the means of edification to many. The spiritual teaching in the types and shadows in the Old Testament was brought out by Levi Cox in a most helpful way. He is much favored in this line of teaching.

Cicero, Indiana—David Commons, pastor of Providence Meeting, one of the congregations in the limits of West Grove Quarter, located in Hamilton County, Indiana, turned the meeting over to the young people of the congregation on the evening of April 9th. The devotional exercises were conducted by Ward Applegate, a young man of our congregation who has only been a Friend for eighteen months. The young people had charge of the song service, while Enos Harvey, Yearly Meeting Superintendent, brought the message from Colossians 3:1-4. The house was crowded and the spirit of the Master was with us. Asa Woodard dismissed the meeting with prayer.

Indianapolis, Indiana—At an open meeting of the Quaker Round Table of the First Friends Church, Tom Jones, of Earlham College, gave an interesting address. He also occupied the pulpit of the First Church on Sunday morning, April 9th. The concert given at the First Church by the Earlham College Glee Club on Sat-

This Waist $1.00

Women's White Voile Waist in the distinctive and fashionable style illustrated. Sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Order this Waist with the understanding that if not satisfactory in every way it can be returned at once and your money will be refunded. Price $1.00, postpaid.

Our Spring and Summer Catalogue will be sent free, on request.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
PHILADELPHIA

urday evening, April 8th, was of its usual high class and spicy variety, and was very much enjoyed by the representative audience.

One of the interesting and enjoyable features of the Sunday School was a dinner given by the Men's Bible Class for the boys' classes who participated in the sports of the Indianapolis S. S. Athletic Association, where they carried off high honors. About 90 men and boys were served, followed by speeches and a general good time.

INDIANA YEARLY MEETING NOTICE.

The Ministers' and Workers' Conference of Indiana Yearly Meeting will be held at Lynn, Indiana, June 5th and 6th. The program and further information will be given later.

Now this love of the brethren is not another from the love of God; it is but the streaming forth of it, or the reflection of it.—Robert Leighton.

APPEAL TO THE PRESIDENT.

Editor, The American Friend:

Much pressure is being brought to bear upon President Wilson by individuals and organizations to take a stand which might plunge this country into war. The following telegram presenting another point of view has just been sent to the President on behalf of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends:

"On behalf of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends we respectfully submit that our country's honor in the present controversies with the European Governments is more involved in the maintenance of justice in all international relations than in immediate enforcement of claims, however confident we may be that our claims are right. Let them be respectfully presented and vigorously pressed, but with willingness to await, if necessary, the conclusion of the war for impartial adjudication and settlement. Our country's honor will always be best safeguarded by referring controverted issues to the Hague and other impartial tribunals. We appeal to you to continue your efforts along these lines.

(Signed) JOHN B. GARRETT,
CHARLES J. RHOADS,
ISAAC SHARPLESS."

NEWS NOTES.

The new church building of Maple Run Meeting near Marion, Indiana, was dedicated last Sabbath. The building cost approximately $6,000. Ira C. Johnson, of Lynn, preached in the morning; President Robert L. Kelley, of Earlham College, in the afternoon, and DeWitt Foster, of Marion, in the evening.

Charles Sweet, of Muncie, Indiana, will take the pastorate of the Meeting at Moreland, Indiana, after May 1.

J. F. Propst, who has been serving the Meetings at Moreland and West River, Indiana, as pastor, has moved to Richmond, where he and his wife will serve as pastors of the North Fourteenth Street Mission. They will continue, however, to serve the Meeting at West River for the present.

Esther Cook will remain as pastor of the Meetings at St. Marys and Spencerville, Ohio, for the remainder of this year. She is doing excellent work in both of these Meetings.

WANTED—By young woman Friend, experienced in Domestic Science, position for summer or shorter period. Will take entire charge of private home and children—or would like institutional, hotel or camp work. Address S. care The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

MARRIED.

Ebrite-Coate—At the home of the pastor, William J. Sayers, Muncie, Indiana, Charles Ebrite, of Muncie, Indiana, to Jermina J. Coate, of Van Wert, Ohio.

BORN.

Beasley—At Mt. Airy, N. C., January 3, 1916, to Bousley and Della Beasley, a son, James Warren.

Brannock—At Mt. Airy, N. C., December 23, 1915, to Charlie and Ella Brannock, a son, Charlie Roy.

DIED

Brown—Lucinda Jones Brown, daughter of Phebe Barnett Jones, of Kansas City, Mo., died in the hospital in that city February 24, 1916, aged 46 years. Her husband died ten years ago, and with the care of her family and business interests, together with a number of charitable enterprises, her life has been a busy one. At the time of her death, she was President of the Board of Managers of the "Old Ladies Home"; also treasurer of the Y. W. C. A. of the city.

Brown—Clayton Brown, son of Samuel and Sarah Bown, was born in Ohio, November 13, 1822, and died at Greenleaf, Idaho, December 14, 1915. He was a birthright Friend. He had an unflinching faith in Jesus Christ and was ever frank in expressing this truth. Nearly forty years were spent near Richmond, Indiana. He was a donor to Friends Boarding School, now Earlham College, and furnished the stone for the Indiana Yearly Meeting House. He married Phebe Roberts in 1853, and in the years following was a conductor on the Underground Railway. He was a pioneer in establishing three Monthly Meetings, at Paton, Iowa; Harmony, South Dakota, and at Greenleaf, Idaho. After the death of his first wife, he married Susanna Knowlton in 1885. He was especially gifted in prayer. He retained his usefulness to the last.

Caudille—Mark Caudille was born in Wilks County, N. C., April 7, 1840, and died in Xenia, Ohio, March 5, 1916, aged nearly 76 years. Six years ago he joined the Xenia Friends Meeting, and he left behind a clear testimony as to a right relationship with God. He died of pneumonia after a week's illness, although he had been a constant sufferer for two years. Funeral services were conducted by Amos Cook, of Harveysburg, Ohio.

Hussey—Mary Jane Hussey was born at Augusta, Ohio, March 3, 1839, and died at her home at Albion, Iowa, February 24, 1916. She was a descendant of King James VII, of the King James version of the Bible fame. Her father came to America from Central Ireland and settled in Ohio. She was married to Milton J. Hussey in 1861, using the Friends ceremony. They lived in the Pennsylvania oil regions for a while, and then moved to Minneapolis, thence to Iowa. She was a life long Friend, and active in missionary and temperance societies. She was among the first to sing in a Friends meeting. She is survived by the husband and three children.

Lawrence—Hannah Coffin Lawrence, wife of Ellis Lawrence and daughter of Elijah and Huldah Mendenhall, was born at Economy, Indiana, August 17, 1837, and died at the family residence in Indianapolis, February 23, 1916. She was a birthright Friend, and until her later years was active in the various departments of the church, especially in educational work. She received her academic education at Bloomingdale Academy, and later was a student at Earlham College, when it was known as Friends Boarding School. She taught several years. Many years were spent at Plainfield, but her later years were spent at Indianapolis. She was a devoted wife and mother, faithful in the world of her daily tasks and duties.

Milner—Harriet H. Milner, daughter of Samuel and Emily Kirk Hollingsworth, was born at Clayesville, Ohio, November 2, 1845, and died at Throntown, Indiana, February 20, 1916. She was a birthright Friend, and was converted while young. She married William W. Milner in 1867. The house of worship was always a delight to her. When unable to attend, she found the family altar and personal communion with her Lord a source of strength and spiritual growth. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, William J. Cleaver and Lydia Hoath.

Minthorn—Laura E. M. Minthorn, daughter of Benjamin and Prudence Miles, was born near Pleasant Hill, Ohio, April 18, 1846, and died at Salem, Oregon, February 27, 1916. She attended a private school at West Branch, Iowa, taught by Joel and Hannah E. Bean. Later she taught in Missouri, two years in a colored school of the Freedmen's Bureau. She married Dr. H. J. Minthorn in 1870. She and her husband spent many years in work among the Indians, and were the first teachers at Friends Pacific Academy, now Pacific College. She was a beautiful Christian character, humble and useful, constantly going about doing good. She was specially interested in missionary work, and gladly gave up her own daughter, Gertrude, to go to India last fall. She was a member of South Salem Meeting. She leaves her husband, two daughters, a sister and two brothers.

Moon—Eunice E. Moon was born near Lexington, Ohio, April 3, 1826, and died at the home of her daughter near Xenia, Ohio, February 24, 1916. She married Aaron Moon, a minister, in 1852. She was a life long Friend and bore living testimony for Christ. She leaves two sons and one daughter, nine grand children and eleven great grand children. Funeral services were conducted at Spring Valley by Amos Cook.

Stone—Phebe Matilda Stone, daughter of Albert and Mary Stone, was born October 17, 1915 and died March 13, 1916, aged 4 months and 25 days. She leaves father, mother, five brothers and three sisters.

Van Blaricom—Mary E. Van Blaricom died at her home in Newberg, Oregon, February 21, 1916, aged 43 years. She joined Friends about two years ago and was made Superintendent of the Primary Department of the Bible School, which place she filled at the time of her death. She had been in active life with her husband for some years. The funeral service, which was conducted at the Friends church, was one of the largest ever assembled in Newberg.

Varney—Sarah Ellen Varney, widow of John Varney, died in Amesbury, Mass., February 18, 1916, aged 82 years. She was a life-long Friend and for many years a minister, having traveled through some of the Western States and Canada in the ministry. Most of her life was spent at China, Maine, but for the past five years had been in Amesbury. A consistent Christian, she daily realized the presence of God, and her hope for the future was to be forever with God.

Woody—Hermion Clayton Woody, son of J. Waldo and Eva T. Woody, died at Wilmington, Ohio, February 13, 1916, aged 13 months and 3 days.

Southland College

— WANTED —

A YOUNG WOMAN TEACHER
Assistant Principal
At Southland, Arkansas.

A SCHOOL CONDUCTED BY
INDIANA YEARLY MEETING.
OF FRIENDS.

For information write H. C. WOLFORD, President, Southland, Phillips Co., Arkansas, or EDWARD BELLIS, Cor. Sec., Richmond, Ind.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON APRIL 30.

Subject—Peter Delivered From Prison.

Lesson—Acts 12:1—19.

Golden Text—The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him, and delivereth them. Psalms 34:7.

On his return to Jerusalem, after the events of our previous lessons, Peter found events leading towards a second persecution of the Church. We are not informed as to the causes of this move against the Christians but we may readily infer two probable reasons. The activity of the new organization was a constant source of concern to the Scribes and Pharisees, and it is quite possible that recent successes were especially irritating to them. Herod Agrippa had recently come to the throne after many adventures and was undoubtedly very willing to do something to please his subjects who were none too favorable to the grandson of the old tyrant, Herod I. This idea is justified, we think, by the statement that, having seen that the death of James pleased the Jews he was very willing to seize Peter and imprison him with the expectation of putting him to death.

In the death of James there occurred the first break in the Apostolic group. James was one of the inner group so near the heart of Jesus. We know very little about him after the death of his Master, but since he was the first one put to death, he must have been very prominent or in some way have been involved in the events which were the cause of the persecution. His fate was very different from that of Peter—another member of the inner circle. The latter might escape, for the present, under very exceptional circumstances, but the Christians thus very early learned that even the apostles were not to escape that fury of the Jews which swept their Savior up to his crucifixion.

The death of Stephen and James must have had a profound influence on the early converts to Christianity. It was a warning to the timid and faint hearted that the path of the Christian was not to be free from danger and death. It had a tendency to deter those who might have sought such fellowship for mere temporal ends.

And "he killed James with the sword." Peter said now I know that the Lord hath sent his angel and delivered me." Why this seeming partiality? This is a situation which many Bible School teachers will be called upon to explain. The facts of the case are we do not know why. Similar situations occur again and again in life." Two women grinding at the mill one is taken, the other left." Three college men riding in the same coach in the same seat, the train is wrecked, two are killed, the middle one of the group spared with scarcely a scratch. One soldier killed in the first battle, his companion goes through a hundred battles without a scar. Why? God alone knows why. Peter once asked Jesus what John was to do. Jesus answered "what is that to thee, follow thou me."

FRIENDS MEETINGS

Stockton Avenue Friends Church, San Jose, California. Take Santa Clara Car to Stockton Ave., walk one-half block west. Visitors always welcome.

Washington, D. C. meeting house, 13th and Irving Streets, N. W. Bible School 9:45, meeting for worship 11 a. m., C. E. 7:30. Mid-week meeting Fifth-day, 7:45 p. m.

West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., Main and West 7th Street. Bible School, 9:00; meeting for worship, 10:30; vesper service, 5:00; C. E., 2:15. Prayer meeting, Thursday, 7:30.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5½% FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever Investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.
Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue. Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY
Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Mission Study Books

1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 53 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot. What One Mission Worker Learned. Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.
Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.
Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for Wills
Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.
Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward
Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
T. WISTAR BROWN, Vice-President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary

MATTHEW WALKER, Acting Mgr.
Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor
WILLIAM S. ASHBROOK, Agency Secretary

DIRECTORS

T. Wistar Brown
Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.
John B. Morgan
Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue
George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 17.

FOURTH MONTH 27, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 17.

The Resurrection

"Out of the night came morning,
Out of the dense, deep night;
Out of the gloom and out of the doom,
Out of it all came light.

"Out of a clod a lily burst,
A dull clod, hard and dry;
Out of the cold a winter old,
When the soft south wind sang by.

"Out of the tomb the Saviour came,
Out from death's narrow door;
Radiant white in the morning light,
Oh, the glorious mein that he bore.

"Out of my sin He led me,
Out of my sin world old;
Out of the night, holy and white,
Out of the tomb 'new souled'."

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.
For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Are You Delinquent?

The management of THE AMERICAN FRIEND will greatly appreciate it if all who know themselves to be in arrears on their subscription will send their check for the same by the first of May. A good many write us that delay in sending money is a mere oversight or forgetfulness. This is a reminder that is necessary, for we need the money. Please do not forget longer. Send all subscriptions and all correspondence about subscriptions to the office at Urbana, Ohio, and all other correspondence to the office at Richmond, Indiana.

Letter From Anna B. Thomas

London, March 27th, 1916.

Editor of The American Friend:

A group of English Friends, M. Catherine Albright, Lettice Jowitt and Septimus Marten, are expecting soon to spend some time in the United States, with the object of making known the claims of the work which has been carried on since the beginning of the war by the Friends War Victims' Relief Committee and the Emergency Committee for the Assistance of Distressed "Innocent Alien Enemies."

The work of both committees in bringing relief to the victims of the war is a large one, and its scope tends constantly to increase. The first mentioned committee has already carried on operations in Holland, France, parts of Belgium and amongst the Serbian Refugees in northern Greece, Montenegro, Albania and Corsica. These are likely to extend still further and a party is leaving for Russia to investigate the great needs of the Polish and other Refugees, hoping to arrange for help to them.

The Emergency Committee is especially anxious to organize industrial work for men whose enforced idleness in the detention camps threatens to overthrow their mental and moral balance. This is only possible so long as a market can be formed for the articles made in the camps, and it is hoped that there may be large openings in America for doing this. Septimus Marten, who has been in close touch with the work of the Emergency Committee, will have samples of the prisoners' handicraft on exhibition and sale at his meetings.

Very sincerely thine,
ANNA BRAITHWAITE THOMAS.

A Call to the Standard

By SARAH J. TROTH.

Revelation 6:2: "I saw, and behold a white horse; and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him; and he went forth conquering, and to conquer."

Isaiah 9:6, 7: "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end."

A King goes forth to conquer
Whose rule is just and right,
He calls on you to follow,
Dear "children of the light."
True holiness His standard,
His watchword,—charity,
Come join the ranks that follow,
He calls for thee and me.

Then rally to His standard
All "children of the light,"
Let not our King ride singly
Against the hosts of night.

By constant word and action
Proclaim His law of love,
His will on earth fulfilling
As in the courts above,
By doing unto others
As you would have them do,
By loving as He loved them,
By being wholly true.

Now rally to His Standard
All "children of the light,"
Let not our King ride singly
Against the hosts of night.

O, bring not to His service
The carnal spear and sword,
But bright blade of the Spirit
His true and blessed word.
All that oppose His kingdom
Shall yield to Him and cease,
For conquering and to conquer
Is Christ the Prince of Peace.

Now rally to His Standard
All "children of the light,"
Let not our King ride singly
Against the hosts of night.

And ye who follow bravely,
Although the way be long,
Some day of glad rejoicing,
Shall join the triumph song.
For to the utmost ages
Shall constantly increase,
With blessings to all peoples,
His government and peace.

Then rally to His standard
All "children of the light,"
Let not our King ride singly
Against the hosts of night.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Love is the strongest and closest of all bonds.
By getting closer to Christ we can increase our love one for another.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 17.

FOURTH MONTH 27, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 17.

The Church and Our Increasing Population

All of the non-Christian world is not found in the Orient, or the dark Continent, or in Latin America or in the islands of the sea. With three out of every five of the population of Greater New York in the roll of the great un-churched masses, it would seem that the followers of our Lord have been negligent of the Master's command: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation." American Christianity is hardly in position to meet its full share of responsibility in making "disciples of all nations" so long as every alternate inhabitant of the United States is not within the fellowship of any church communion.

More men visit the average saloon in this country every day than are found in the ordinary church service on the Sabbath day. It not infrequently happens that more persons will attend a Sunday baseball game than were present at all the morning church services in the community, while there is no comparison between the crowds which throng the theaters and the comparatively meager companies which regularly attend services of divine worship. There are literally multitudes, both among our urban and rural people, who never hear the gospel proclaimed and who never feel the up-lift directly of any Christian service.

It is far easier to state these delinquencies in terms of fact than it is to solve the problem which this condition of things has presented. That the church is confronted seriously with the problem of its responsibility and attitude toward the great un-churched population is not open to question. The ultimate test of the ability of the Church to penetrate the heart of heathenism with the light of the gospel is its willingness to go out into the highways and hedges of the homeland and compel the masses to hear the message of the Lord by the impelling power of brotherly interest and a transcendent love. Christianity cannot continue to command the attention and affection of the heathen world while being negligent of its un-Christian neighbors at home.

A recent writer has called attention to the apparent fact that the church has been more concerned about the ninety and nine within the fold than over the one who has gone astray. But the meaning of the parable is unmistakable. The shepherd's heart was with the sheep that was lost, and he sought no rest until the lost one had been restored to the fold. What shall we say of the stewardship of the Church when more than half our population are wandering afar, and many are not aware of the existence of a sheltering fold anywhere? It is not greatly to the credit of the Church that so much of that which is attempted in the direction of reclamation has been left to independent movements. Apparently the Church is having to learn over again the lesson that came to Peter on that far away day in Caesarea, "that God is no respecter of persons" as regards race or class or condition.

The most serious part of the problem is the indifference and even hostile attitude of multitudes of our population toward the Church and its gospel message. For some reason—possibly for several reasons—the Church has apparently lost the confidence of the masses, who are quick to discern the evidences of insincerity in a method of daily living that does not harmonize with the professions of the sanctuary. The Church must have a revival of spirituality in its own life before it can hope to attract the attention and win the approval of the unbelieving.

Every individual Christian should begin at his own door, and, by allowing the divine energy to envelope his own personality, set out to win another and another and yet another to the path of righteousness. Every local meeting should set to work through individual effort to find avenues of approach to every resident of the community, and with true missionary zeal seek to throw about the indifferent and unconcerned the mantle of religious interest and spiritual purposes. It is not enough that the Church station itself at the threshold to welcome the seekers after truth. It must go abroad with its messages, upon the streets, into the factories, up the rickety tenement steps, down into the dark cellars, into every home, out into the open country, wherever human life surges with its message of up-lift and gospel cheer, bidding men and women to a spiritual feast that will satisfy their deepest needs.

There is need to impress upon the Church everywhere the burning message of Henry Van Dyke:

"I believe that from the national point of view the most important work which our American churches have to do to-day is to preach a simple and efficient Gospel to the multitudes of immigrants who are coming to our shores. America owes her liberty and her prosperity to the spirit of Christianity which ruled and animated her founders. If our country is to remain true to her original aims, and advance along the line of her first development, she must see to it that the Gospel of Christ pervades and transforms the whole of her vastly increasing population."

May One Consistently Approve a Course of Action for Others Which One Cannot Conscientiously Approve for Oneself?

By ALLEN D. HOLE.

Note.—The subject matter and the conclusions of this article are not offered because it is believed that they constitute that phase of the peace question upon which emphasis should be most placed by Friends, but because they bear directly upon a question now before us for solution. The author believes that the particular mission of the church and especially of the Friends' church, is in the propagation of the fundamental doctrine of love as the means for the advancement of the Kingdom of God among men, both as individuals and as parts of an organized society. A second paper dealing with the fundamentals of the Christian view of peace as understood by Friends, will be offered for publication in the near future.—A. D. H.

Those who believe war to be wrong are now finding themselves facing the above question as they attempt to determine what their attitude shall be to the proposed League to Enforce Peace. It will be remembered that the essential features of the proposed League are: (1) a Court for justiciable cases, (2) a Council of Conciliation for cases of dispute which are not justiciable, (3) a Conference of representatives of the signatory powers to codify and formulate rules of international procedure, and (4) a provision to boycott and, if necessary, to use armed force against any signatory power that wages war without first having submitted its case either to the International Court or to the Council of Conciliation.

There is pretty general agreement among those who are trying to find some way in which permanent peace can be secured, that the establishment of some means of securing justice by the application of reason, is necessary if wars are to be avoided. The need of pressure of some kind is recognized in order to make it certain that courts or councils of conciliation will be used. Probably by far the larger number of those who believe in a definite organization of the nations would freely approve non-intercourse as a means of compelling an unwilling signatory power to submit a controversy to an international Court or to a Council of Conciliation. But many earnest advocates of constructive work for peace find themselves unable to approve the taking of human life as a penalty for failure to keep a promise; for that is what is involved in the use of armed force by a group of nations against a nation which has failed to act as agreed upon previously. For the League to Enforce Peace does not as yet propose to punish a nation for going to war, provided the nation in question goes through the prescribed steps first. It does propose, however, to use the boycott and if necessary force of arms for failure to keep a pledge that has been made, not merely for the waging of war.

If we approach the question involved from what is called the practical side we soon find ourselves facing the apparent necessity of sacrificing human life or of allowing all attempts at government to give place to anarchy. This is the argument: So long as any nation stands ready to use guns and other military equipment, other nations must also be ready to use the same kind of weapons, or resign themselves to become tributary provinces of some nation that uses force, either because they have actually been conquered or because without resistance they accede to all demands which may from time to time be made upon them. And no nation is ready to consent to the loss of its dignity and independence even if the effort to maintain its national existence involves enormous losses both in material wealth and human life. Unless, therefore, we are ready to start with what almost all our citizens consider an impossible admission, namely, that the existence of a nation is of less value than the life of any one of its citizens, we cannot well avoid the conclusion that human life must sometimes be sacrificed in order that the greater good—the continued existence of the nation, may be made more secure. And if some human life must be sacrificed, shall any citizen ask to be exempt from the danger for himself or refuse to take his share of responsibility for such action as may be necessary, even to taking the life of citizens of another nation, in order to preserve the independent existence of the nation which he claims as his own? The question may be stated in various ways, but the test always comes when the rights of the nation as against the rights of any single citizen are considered; and if the desirability and necessity of national existence or national integrity be granted, it seems absolutely impossible that a policy of refusal to take human life under any circumstances whatever which can be expected at present, can be a workable plan of government.

Here, then, is the apparently irreconcilable conflict between the demand for the perfection and perpetuation of governments among men and the teachings of the founder of Christianity who has announced the law of love as the great principle which must control men in their actions toward each other if the full development of all man's powers is to be realized.

The great majority of Christian thinkers of the present day believe that the principles of Christianity are not in conflict with the principles which should control in governments, however much the latter may sometimes be found imperfect because of the un-Christian character of many of the individuals making up a state or a nation. Friends, as well as other Christian denominations, have insisted strongly that a Christian must take an active part in the affairs of government; that only by so doing can the principles of Christianity become fully known, fully understood, and fully accepted in the lives of individual men. If this position be correct, one of the most urgent of Christian duties today is the consideration of the various proposals recently made for organizing the world in such a way that wars shall become less and less frequent until they become as little to be expected as other forms of criminal violence.

It is not the purpose of the present paper to take up one by one the different plans proposed, but rather to examine the principles underlying those which seem to give most promise of being accepted by a considerable number of the leading nations of the world at the close of the present conflict. In order to make the consideration definite I shall take as typical of this class, the proposals of the League to Enforce Peace to which I have already referred.

It should perhaps be stated that the various proposals made by different thinkers may be roughly classified as (1) those which involve agreements to use armed force under certain conditions; (2) those which depend upon public opinion to get cases of difficulty into an international court or before a council of conciliation, and rely also upon public opinion to insure the carrying out of the decrees of the court, leaving the nations individually, however, free to wage war if they judge it necessary and find themselves willing to face international public opinion in so doing; and (3) those plans which propose that actual disarmament be made the practice of the nations, with the definite suggestion that the United States take the lead in this method whether any other nation is ready to do so or not; in other words, the adoption at once of an actual, practical policy of international non-resistance. It should also be added that the statesmen of today who are holding the places of responsibility reject the third proposal of non-resistance as impossible or as equivalent to national suicide, and that they also regard the second, reliance upon international public opinion, as practically a continuation of the conditions in force before the present war, and therefore as contributing little if anything to the solution of the problem of establishing a lasting peace for the world.

It is perhaps too much to say that the statesmen of the present who hold responsible positions in the nations of the world, approve the proposals of the League to Enforce Peace, since there are so many details which remain to be settled before the general plan proposed can be called a real working plan; yet it is true that many men who have had wide experience in international affairs do approve the proposals of the League to Enforce Peace, and that many who have had long experience in carrying on negotiations between nations express the judgment that it is quite within the range of possibility that the proposals of the League might be accepted by a sufficient number of the leading nations of the world to form the beginning of a federation of nations through which the peace of the world might be made more secure.

The next step which is possible in the near future looking to a world federation seems, therefore, to be one which includes as an essential part of its plan an agreement to use military force under certain conditions; the conditions stated seem to be such that the probability of war is very much reduced. Indeed, the use of force as suggested is really not war at all in the sense in which that term is now generally understood. But such use of force does involve the use of armaments, guns, and all the equipment of armies and navies, even though the total amount of armament employed might be small as compared with the armaments in use in Europe now. Such use of force does, therefore, imply the taking of human life; it might mean the loss of thousands of lives.

The question confronting the Christian citizen, therefore, is this: Can I approve this next step in world organization while it includes as a necessary part of its plan the use of force to the extent of taking life?

Those who advocate the proposed plan urge considerations such as these:

1. If war is ever to be abolished, there is every reason to believe from the experience of mankind in the past that the non-use of military force in cases of international disagreement must come about gradually. At least, it is certainly true that no nation at the close of the present war will be ready to consent to total disarmament nor to promise that it will not in the future use military force under any circumstances.

2. The plan proposed will certainly lessen the number of wars, since it provides a rational substitute for securing justice, and provides also a means which, if followed, positively prevents hasty and ill-considered action.

3. The plan proposed provides very favorable conditions for the rapid growth of public opinion against the use of military force.

4. It is even quite possible that military force would never actually be used at all, if it is known that it may be used. In other words, the plan proposes to use the powerful influence of force held in reserve as against the invitation to disregard pledged faith which knowledge of helplessness to inflict punishment offers.

5. The plan proposed will lessen materially the total amount of time and money spent in preparation for war.

6. The plan proposed gives its approval in the extreme case to the use of military force for a purpose which all who love justice must approve; for all who love justice must approve the purpose to render sacred and binding promises that have been made.

7. Unless it is known that military force will, if necessary, be appealed to there is no assurance that we may at any time in the near future be secure, no matter what promises are made.

Over against all these considerations every Christian must place the words of Christ, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," together with the whole trend of his teaching which makes it impossible for many Christians in many different denominations to believe that love can remain in the heart of a man while with sword or bayonet at close quarters, or by means of rifle-ball or shell at a distance he mangles and mutilates the body of a fellow man until his life goes out. And so most Friends, and many others, are saying, "The next step in world organization is right: it deserves the support of every good citizen; it will undoubtedly lessen war and lessen the burden of militarism; with the world as it is, the provision for force seems absolutely necessary; and yet I can never be one to carry a gun to kill any human being." Furthermore, such a conscientious objector is obliged to say, "I have no solution to offer except that the right way must surely be found if individuals follow the line of personal duty: the right way for the nation must surely allow and require that the individuals follow the right way for the individual."

This answer is the answer of faith, and is not to be despised; but for the statesman who must make a plan which can be put into words and can be subject to examination step by step, it does not appear other than the impractical utterance of a mind which is not able to grasp the problem as a law-maker must grasp it; it seems in other words to be the expression of a sentiment, and therefore merely adding to the complexity of the problem of government presented rather than contributing anything towards its solution.

Are there, then, any principles which can be stated which can be generally accepted, which will make clear the way by which a man may at the same time be true to his convictions of personal duty as a Christian and also lend his support to the development of world government according to the only plan which can be seen to promise hope of success at this time?

As an attempt to formulate a statement of principles to cover this case, the following suggestions are offered:

1. In matters where intelligent, conscientious convictions are involved, every one must approve such a course as will violate the conscience of no one.

2. As touching the question under discussion this must mean that those who cannot with good conscience knowingly use force to the extent of taking human life, shall be freely allowed to stop in their personal activity in applying force to necessary cases before methods of inflicting death are consciously used or planned for. And freedom in such course should be given to them freely and ungrudgingly. Clauses exempting from military duty those conscientiously opposed to such service have been enacted into law at various times in this and some other countries.

3. As touching the question under discussion it must also be understood that those who believe it to be the plain, though terrible, duty of men to plan at times deliberately to take human life in the support of contracts entered into by the nation, shall be not merely allowed but encouraged to enter personally upon the task which their convictions approve; and against those who thus take up the work of establishing the sacred binding character of pledges made, no syllable of censure should be uttered by those who hold different beliefs.

4. In a country where the form of government is democratic, as with us, the plans and policies of the government must always be such as will command the confidence and support of the majority of the citizens. Therefore, when once the convictions of a majority of the citizens have been ascertained, especially when the majority is overwhelmingly large, even those who are in the minority must approve a course of action for the government, which personally they may believe to be unwise, imprudent, or even un-Christian, as the case may be.

5. In brief, each citizen should encourage every other citizen to act personally in accordance with his own judgment and conscientious convictions, and approve in government action those plans and policies which embody the judgment and convictions of the majority, so long as freedom of conscience is granted to the minority.

If it be admitted that these principles are fundamentally involved in the decisions to be made now and in the near future concerning the proposals of the League to Enforce Peace and other similar organizations, the results which logically follow from adopting them as a guide should be briefly examined. The situation to which we find need of applying these principles seems briefly to be this:

1. The nations of the world are made up in each case of citizens, whose views individually in regard to the use of force in government include many diverse beliefs. In each nation, however, it seems to be unquestionably true that an overwhelming majority believe that the use of force to the extent of taking human life is not only justifiable but a clear duty at times, and that if at any time the refusal of one nation to observe the promises made in a treaty, results in loss of life, or even in serious financial loss to citizens of another nation, the latter is bound to resort to force of arms, if no other means can be found, to compel observance of the conditions specified in the treaty.

2. Any plan, therefore, of international organization which does not specifically recognize the right to use force of arms under certain conditions, cannot at the present time represent the deepest convictions and beliefs of an overwhelming majority of the citizens of all of the great nations of the world.

3. The enactment of any rule or agreement forbidding the use of force of arms in case of repudiation of treaty agreements, would therefore either require a great number of citizens to act contrary to their deepest convictions, or require that they themselves should in the end also disregard the conditions written into treaties. The actual result, as we no doubt all admit, would be the latter alternative. But the attempt to limit a great majority to a course contrary to the convictions of its individual members, must be regarded as a violation of the principle of freedom of action, which even for minorities which are conscientious, sincere and intelligent should never be done.

4. What course, therefore, consistent with the principles of justice and freedom which have been outlined above, can an intelligent citizen take than to approve a plan which, while including the use of armed force, approves of it only under those exceptional circumstances in which, according to the views held by the great majority of citizens it must still apply; especially since its approved use is hedged about with such conditions as to make the appeal to force much less likely to be made than heretofore. And if such approval be admitted to be a logical necessity, shall the approval not be given fully and freely instead of grudgingly, even by members of the minority who feel that individually they must choose ridicule, scorn, contempt, or even death for themselves and possibly for those dependent upon them, rather than to lift their own hands in taking the life of a fellow man.

This, then, would be the answer I would offer to the question with which I began, namely, "May one consistently approve a course of action for others which one cannot conscientiously adopt for oneself?" If freedom of conscience be admitted for all; if it be agreed that the judgment of the majority shall decide the policies of the nation; and if it be true that in all nations the great majority believe that appeal to arms is in certain extreme cases just and right; then, as a plan of world government proposals which include the use of armed force must, it would seem, command the approval of all intelligent, conscientious citizens, whether personally they approve the use of force or not. At the same time, fidelity to one's own individual convictions would require each one who cannot conscientiously lift up his hand to take the life of a fellow man to be diligent to declare his own conception of personal and national righteousness, and to take up with vigor and energy in all the ways which seem possible the work of bringing his own views of truth and right to the consciousness of other men, so that as soon as possible the time may be reached when the majority of men in all countries shall be ready to establish the law of love between nations at least to an extent fully as great as now it has been established between citizens within nations in the civilized countries of the world.

The development of government among the nations is but beginning; but unless this development be fostered, the development of government within the nations can hardly go much farther; indeed, it seems at times that the rights of the individual won especially in the English-speaking countries at so great cost through so many centuries will largely be lost unless international government shall soon grow strong. Let us seek persistently and yet wisely to find the way to place upon a firm foundation a government among the nations, even while we defend and enjoy the rights of personal, individual liberty and freedom of conscience, and seek to do our individual share in bringing to realization those high ideals of life and service which are embodied in the program of love to God and all mankind.

Richmond, Indiana.

Congress On Christian Work In Latin-America

Held at Panama, February 10-20, 1916.

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS

(Continued from last week)

SUMMARY

(Earlier articles in this series appeared in The American Friend of April 6th, 13th and 20th. The representation at the Congress, the personnel of the delegates, a few of the most striking addresses delivered, and other features of the gathering have already been described. Last week's article gave an account of part of the commission reports, which formed the basis of the deliberations during the main Congress sessions. That article closed with the account of the Second Commission report on "Message and Method" of Christian Work for Latin-Americans. The article this week opens with a further description of the report of Commission II., and gives a summary of the report and discussion of Commission III. on "Education," and Commission IV. on "Literature.")

Bishop William C. Brown, of Virginia, who spent twenty years as an evangelical preacher, and who was characterized by one speaker as "an Anglo-Saxon with a Latin mind," "a man of rare spirit, a heart that strives to be as gentle as the Master's decried the indiscriminate and passionate attacks on the Roman Catholic Church. He gave the essential elements of the gospel message as being, (1) 'The blessed truth of the Fatherhood of God,' a truth greatly obscured in these countries where God is put far off; (2) The message of an open Bible; (3) That there is but one mediator between man and God—the man Christ Jesus.

He also said, "I believe most deeply that in order to convey the deepest truths of our religion to the Latin-American mind, there must be developed in all these lands an educated native ministry. I am convinced that the Anglo-Saxon mind, within one generation, cannot thoroughly understand the point of view of the Latin mind."

Mr. Charles D. Hurrey, a secretary of the International Y. M. C. A., emphasized the importance of work for students. There are 50,000 in the universities of Latin-America, only a few of whom study the Bible, none in mission study, and not over fifty in organized social service. A special challenge is presented to Christian people in America in the 2,000 Latin-American students in the United States. What impression are these students receiving of our Christian civilization? Reception committees to welcome and guide these students upon their arrival at our ports and help them in their first touch of a strange country; the opening of Christian homes to them, a welcome in church and social gatherings would do much to win them.

Tolbert F. Reavis, of Buenos Ayres, "made an especially pertinent and original contribution to the discussion. He took the Yankee teacher of religion to task for his bluntness of approach, declaring that this manner antagonizes and disgusts fine-grained cultivated Latins. Courteous manners and fineness of touch will sometimes put one where logic or even eloquence cannot. The Latin soul is sensitive to grace and manner. He affirmed that beauty is the Latin's contribution to civilization, and declared that the Christian teacher must lay aside any indifference to manners which may be tolerated in some portions of the United States, and cultivate the characteristics of a gentleman."

The findings of the Commission report also emphasize this feature as follows: "While emphasizing our belief that the work of a missionary demands special devotion, special gifts and special temperament, it is our abiding conviction that because Latin peoples possess an historic background and atmosphere, gentle and refined manners, and are uniquely susceptible to culture and to the graces culture brings, the work in Latin-America demands as missionaries men of broad vision, wide culture, and diplomatic temperament. In our judgment there seems no place for 'half-baked' men in Latin-America. The Latin is quick to discover the real lack in his rough-mannered brother from the aggressive north or elsewhere, and quicker to resent the implied suggestion that anything or anybody is good enough for them. On the other hand, none is quicker than he to appreciate the effort of sympathetic students of Latin-American customs, traditions and manners. We, therefore, strongly recommend the various Boards to exercise a wise and firm discrimination in their selection of missionaries, to choose men who may measure up to the highest type of missionaries and Y. M. C. A. secretaries already at work in Latin-America, who may be able in college and university centers to command recognition and confidence, and who may be prepared to take a place of leadership, spiritual, social, intellectual and civic, in any locality where they may be called to labor. A Pauline gift of sympathy as well as a Pauline temper of adaptability, seems almost a prerequisite to success in Latin-America."

Again, they say: "Without abating in the least degree our conviction that much of the teaching spirit and influence of the Roman Catholic Church in Latin-America is unscriptural and unhealthy, we find that there is great need and a great call that those who represent the evangelical churches should not only do their work with the full consciousness that they possess the truth and grace and authority of our Lord, the Living Head of the Church, but also that their full strength should be given to the positive and constructive declaration of the Gospel; not forgetting that controversial discussions, when these are rendered inevitable by circumstances, should be conducted not only with firmness, learning and conviction, but also with simplicity, kindness and charity which are in Jesus Christ, who 'openeth the Kingdom of heaven to all believers'."

Commission III.—Education.

President King, in introducing the report of this Commission, said: "Six particularly significant facts stand out from our survey: (1) The enormous illiteracy in Latin-America—60 to 80 per cent; (2) Yet in many places a well organized system of education from elementary to university of high grade; (3) The marked leadership on the part of highly educated men—a leadership out of all proportion to their numbers; (4) These highly educated leaders are very generally abjuring religion as out of date; (5) The inadequate training of the Christian community and especially of Christian leaders, both teachers and preachers; (6) The dire need of industrial training at certain points for the economic lifting of the people. The enormous illiteracy makes it plain that our help is needed. The second fact means we must put missionary schools side by side with the best the government can give and have the schools stand the comparison. Third: The marked leadership of educated men means that we must in some way reach these educated leaders. Fourth: The fact that they generally abjure religion as out of date demands that we make a modern approach, giving them a different conception of religion and of the relation of religion to the modern intellectual world. Fifth: To meet the inadequate training of the Christian communities and leaders, we must obviously make decided gains at this point, and this calls for higher education of the first order, thoroughly permeated by the Christian spirit. Sixth: In view of the dire economic need at many points, mission schools must do something to meet that need as situations demand.

"It is clear we are meeting these needs in an utterly inadequate fashion. It is equally clear that it is impossible to meet them without CO-OPERATION ON THE LARGEST SCALE. Vast sums of money will be required; for these institutions must be thoroughly equipped in every way. They must do honest work in every grade.

"Four special opportunities challenge us: 1st, An education that shall combine in an unusual degree the strength of the Latin and the strength of the Saxon—discipline and freedom; 2nd, An educational system that shall solve more effectively than has yet been solved, perhaps, the paradox of the vocational and cultural; 3rd, True union theological seminaries of a high order, that shall help at least to national evangelical churches, or still better, to a continental Christianity; 4th, The establishment of three great Christian Universities in Latin-America."

The report of the Commission in its Findings states the aims of missionary education to be, 1st, The bringing of children and youth under influences by which they may be led to adopt the Christian principles of conduct, and to become disciples of the Lord Jesus; 2nd, The upbuilding of the Christian community, through the increase of its intelligence and effectiveness, and the development of Christian leaders of spiritual power; 3rd, The permeation of the community at large with the highest Christian ideas and ideals, making for the application of these ideals to all phases of human life, and the creation of an atmosphere favorable to intelligent and sincere Christian discipleship; 4th, The provision of an opportunity for the natural and spontaneous expression of Christianity in its care for all human welfare.

The Findings further declare: "If native leadership of the higher type is to be developed, a primary education should be provided for all children of the Church. Only so will it be possible to secure the material for further training.

"While it may often be necessary to begin the work of training men to be preachers under private instruction, the time has come, or is near at hand, in all the lands of Latin-America when this work should be done in regularly established and properly maintained schools.

"It is of far greater importance that they be thoroughly trained in a method of Bible study which it will be practicable for them to follow with ever-increasing thoroughness and success, than that they acquire a certain store of knowledge in any field without knowing how to acquire more.

"Wherever practicable the several societies working in the same region should maintain union schools, separate classes for different denominations being provided only on subjects on which these denominations hold differing and distinctive views. But whether in union or denominational schools, no undue emphasis should be laid on those doctrines which distinguish the evangelical denominations from one another. The most vital truths of religion are held by all in common, and in the face of a national church that finds in denominational divisions an argument against their common message it is inexpedient to weaken their testimony and influence by any emphasis on their differences not absolutely demanded by fidelity to sacred conviction.

"In no field is there greater need of combination of faculties and union of institutions than among theological seminaries. No more pitiable thing in all our survey has come before us than the condition of theological education in these lands, where professional training is usually on such a high basis. This is, in all probability, why so few of the intellectual classes have been won to evangelical Christianity."

Commission IV.—Literature

The report of this Commission reveals in the matter of literature both a great lack and a great opportunity. The reading public of these lands is almost entirely restricted to the ruling class. Few outside this class can read at all. The books the educated read are written from the standpoint of agnosticism and infidelity. There is a mass of moral rubbish, or worse, of moral poison. To counteract this, little has been supplied that holds their attention. What is supplied has the Anglo-Saxon atmosphere and is written in a type of Spanish that irritates the cultured reader. A severe criticism was made in the discussion by a delegate from Spain, who said: "Latin-Americans are proud of their mother tongues as any other race or people in the world; therefore, when this message is given to them in faulty language, we should not wonder if they only have contempt for the deliverers and indifference for the message itself. They see only the form, they miss the substance. If we cannot send to Latin-America men and women who are willing and able to leave the flag of their country at home, to love and sympathize with the inhabitants of these countries in their present condition, such as they are, and, above all, who are able to reach the innermost part of their hearts and souls by the possession of a full knowledge of their language, their idiosyncracies, their thoughts and their ways of expressing them; in one word, if we cannot produce the right people for the right work, we must not expect to perform it with any measure of success. What we need is people who will show nothing foreign in their work."

Most of the literary work has been done by overworked missionaries. In no other department is there more need of specialists who have made it their life work. "Editorial talent and instinct are not qualities often found among missionary workers, as may be seen from the character of a large number of periodicals." "It is to the Latin-American writers that we must look, not only for the interpretation of Christian doctrine to the Latin-American mind, but also for the exposition of Christian ethics and ideals by means of fiction."

The field of literature is one that is fully ripe for co-operation. Each main field should have one strong religious periodical under the united control of all the forces in that field, instead of a number of weak ones. There should be one strong publishing house or center from which all literature should issue; perhaps one for the entire Spanish-speaking lands, and another for the Portuguese would be the ideal. There should be central depositories at the main centers. Such co-operation would mean large equipments and the best editorial and literary talent at a minimum of cost and a maximum of efficiency. It should soon be self-supporting, if not actually producing income. From this center or centers should issue periodical literature for the Mission Churches, for Sunday Schools, for young people and possibly a special magazine for women. The highest type of literature on Religion, Philosophy, Science and all forms of social service should be produced, whether original or translated. It should be from the highest modern standpoint, in the language and atmosphere most vital to those peoples, and Christian through and through. Religious and moral fiction should have its proper place.

The temper of the Congress was such as will probably see great progress made in this direction at an early date.

(To be continued.)

Feeds 5,000,000 Persons a Day

(Under the above heading Mollie Best has the following interesting article in The American Magazine concerning Herbert C. Hoover, an Iowa Quaker boy).

It is no more possible to give an idea of the work of Herbert C. Hoover and the Belgian Relief Commission in a few words than it would be to describe in a short space the operations of Sears-Roebuck or the United States Steel Corporation.

Under Mr. Hoover's charge, and under his responsibility, the business of over one hundred millions of dollars is conducted. He is responsible director of it. This money comes in at the rate of about ten million dollars a month. Indeed, the French bankers turn over to the Commission five million dollars a month in cash to be used for food and clothing for the people in northeastern France, behind the German lines. You see, this is a great business, and while there can be no guarantees, no bonding, no certainty, except the certainty of character and devotion, it is directed with great exactitude. The accounts are kept to the penny. When this stuff is distributed in northeastern France an account is made of each commune. The accounts are sent back to the Paris bankers, and they charge this commune with the cost of the food.

Imagine distributing ten or twelve million dollars of food a month to some millions of people through unofficial civilian organizations, without power, with no telegraph, no telephone, and little use of the railroads! The main transportation is by canal, lighters going down the canals through Belgium, clear into northern France, to carry this food, which is distributed in rations that will just sustain life.

These rations are far under the nominal rations supposed to be necessary for sustaining life, but the Commission never has had enough money. Food is doled out to these millions exactly as it might be to a shipwrecked crew on a desert island where there were only a dozen and they measured up every item of food. It is simply a huge business directed in a masterly manner under the most difficult circumstances in the world, and H. C. Hoover is the man who is chiefly responsible for its organization and its execution.

Mr. Hoover, American Quaker, director of the Belgian Relief Commission, holder of one of the most difficult positions in the whole world-war zone, is one of the few neutrals in existence, as is proved by the fact that the Germans suspect him of being entirely too pro-English and the English of being entirely too pro-German.

Mr. Hoover was "raised" on an Iowa farm, in a Quaker community. His ambition to go to a non-sectarian university was frowned down by pious Friends, who refused to allow him money for an education unless he went to one of their own schools. The lad determined to go to Leland Stanford and finance the undertaking himself. He worked in an office and saved up his money. At night he high-schooled himself and prepared himself for the university.

When he had the good fortune to be admitted to Stanford, with the promise of a chance to work his way through college, he found that dining-room work was almost the sole occupation offered to a working student. Now, among the Iowa farmers nobody ever had any help except a neighbor boy or girl whose hopes and fears and aims were one with the family's. Table service went against the lad's grain, and he turned his attention to creating a job that suited him. There was no university laundry. Young Hoover soon supplied that lack and earned enough to put himself through the university.

Then, because there is an organizing wheel continually turning in his head, he collected all the student activities into one central organization. To this day the standard for comparison at Stanford is "the way Hoover did back in '95."

After the young Quaker got his diploma from the School of Mining and Engineering, he married one of his classmates. Besides being a mining engineer, Mrs. Hoover is a woman of extraordinary charm and beauty. Together they have adventured into the remotest parts of the world, and Mr. Hoover has achieved fame and fortune as a successful engineer in Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia. Always, when Mr. Hoover had made a rough job smooth, he has looked round for a harder one. Therefore, when the hardest job was looking round for a man, it was natural that it should come upon Herbert C. Hoover. To manage the Belgian situation is a full-size man's job.

It was a fortunate thing for millions of human beings destined to abject misery that the Hoovers chanced to be in London when war was declared. Perhaps Americans have more generosity in overlooking national barriers than any other people; at any rate, when the money appropriated by Congress for the relief of our country people stranded in Europe at the outbreak of the war could not properly be used, the Relief Committee went out and got the money from private individuals.

And now, when people talk calmly of wastage, casualties, and use phrases intended to smooth or veil facts, Hoover thinks only in translation—men, women, children, neighbors. He sees Belgium neither as Germany's foe nor England's friend, but only as a trampled people.

No language in Europe has ever been adequate to express the contempt of foreign diplomats for American shirt-sleeve diplomacy. Yet in Belgium, in a situation of extraordinary delicacy, two Americans of the most uncompromising democratic type have held the fort for eighteen months without any explosion. The British government positively refused to allow any food to go into Belgium until Brand Whitlock, the American Ambassador, offered himself as hostage for its proper disposal. The Relief Commission is checked up on the one hand by suspicious Germans, alert for the incoming English spy, on the other hand by the suspicious English, determined that no one gram of nutriment shall go to increase German efficiency, so long as they are able to prevent it.

Mr. Hoover's headquarters are in London, but he is on the actual scene of distribution a good part of the time.

A few months ago at a London dinner party a member of the Foreign Office opened a leak in that most water-tight compartment of the British Empire. In order to keep in good condition, the Foreign Office had sent a long communication making suggestions of change in the methods of the Relief Commission. The stationery of H. M. Government used up a lot of alphabet in making the suggestions and all the stock phrases of circumlocution offices. Take one look at Mr. Hoover's photograph and you will suspect that when he is right and going ahead, he is apt to be impatient of interference. The suggestions, if followed, would have postponed the war meals of seven million persons for two days. Mr. Hoover is shadowed by his own private secretary and the Commission has an adequate clerical staff, but the letter received by H. M. Government, a letter which has caused more chortles in the British Foreign office than any official communication connected with the world war, is written in Mr. Hoover's own hand. This leaves it open to a suspicion of heat and haste. It reads as follows:

"Dear Blank:

"It strikes me that trying to feed the Belgians is like trying to feed a hungry little kitten by means of a forty-foot bamboo pole, said kitten confined in a barred cage occupied by two hungry lions.

"Yours sincerely,

"HERBERT C. HOOVER."

Give me the comforts of God and I can well bear the taunts of men.—C. H. Spurgeon.

The Brand-Marks of Jesus

God does not make a man holy without using means. God does not make a man holy as the result of a prayer-meeting or a convention. A man is put into attitude there, it may be, but God takes up a common thing like loss of money, lack of employment, or the dreaddest of all things, the death of one loved most; and though that experience apart from God would leave no sanctifying mark upon your life, yet in the mighty power of the Holy Ghost, that rude instrument heated to white heat by his blessed power will leave the mark of the Lord upon your lives, and you will be a holier man or a more patient woman; the one in whom love shines, and longsuffering is seen, because God Himself has taken you at your word when you said, "Lord, I would be thy bond-slave, thy servant." He branded you and will brand you. Your testimony, with no lack of becoming modesty, God forbid, and with no lack of the right humanity, will be the testimony of Paul—"I bear in my body the brand-mark of the Lord Jesus."—J. Stuart Holden.

Why Not Order Today?

If you do not order today, you will forget it, sure. We are talking about the orders for the printed proceedings of the International Men's Conference of Friends held at Richmond, Indiana, last October. It is a book of 160 pages and ought to be in every Friend's private library, in every Monthly Meeting library and in every Friends' Sabbath School library in America. There is no other such compilation of able addresses of direct interest to Friends anywhere. Send orders to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana. Not only do you need them, but we want to sell them all. Better order them at once, before all are gone. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 75 cents.

Men's Conference Continuation Committee

The Committee of Seven, appointed by the Men's Conference at Richmond, Indiana, in October last, to confer with the Boards of the Five Years Meeting about any desirable changes and combinations in the plan of organization, is making commendable progress, but will probably not be able to report finally before next autumn. The Committee is making an extensive study of the general subject.

Third Federal Council Meeting

The Third Quadrennial Council of the Federal Council of Churches will convene for a week in St. Louis, beginning on the evening of December 6th next. The headquarters will be in the commodious Second Baptist Church. Further announcements will be made later.

By rooting out our selfish desires, even when they appear to touch no one but ourselves, we are preparing a chamber of the soul where the Divine Presence may dwell.—Ellen Watson.

Rupel's New Easter Aunt

By GERTRUDE WALTON

(This was received too late for the Easter number last week. We think the children will enjoy it just as well this week).

So many houses with little patches of yards and no fences between looked very strange to Rupel as he sauntered around the yard of his Aunt Amy's city home. He had come after dark the night before, in the big automobile, from his country home, and the clanging, whirring, zizzing noises this Easter morning were different and deafening after the "baa-baa," "moo-moo," "ugh-ugh" in the barnyard at home.

After a late breakfast he dressed for church, for he was going with Aunt Amy to a big church where there was to be beautiful singing by numbers of children. Aunt Amy had said, "You may play outdoors while I'm getting ready, or until my other boy comes. I will have two boys today. A little city waif, who lives down the street here, who has no mother, pleasant home or kind father, who never sees inside of a church like we will see today, or hears beautiful music, will go with us. Some kind women have planned for these children to attend Easter services. I promised to take one street-boy with me this morning. I have two lilies, one for each of my boys to wear. See them in the vase?"

After watching the street-cars and wishing he could ride in one of them, he rushed up the front steps, for he suddenly remembered that his aunt had said at breakfast, "I will bring some toys from the attic after breakfast."

Yes, there were the toys, right in the center of the living room. He could hear his aunt upstairs, but he was so interested in the toys that he did not look up when she came downstairs, until she—why, it wasn't his aunt at all, but a strange woman—said, "Oh, are you here already? Well, we'll take the next car. The other will be more crowded."

Before Rupel had time to think, with his surprised, bewildered, "cryie" feelings, he was hustled into a street-car, where they rode a long way, then out, and into a large, very large and grand building, where there were rows of boys and white-dressed girls who sang, oh, so sweetly, and waved Easter lilies and then they marched and gave them to a row of smiling old ladies and gentlemen who sat in the front seats.

Once, in the street-car, Rupel had asked, tearfully, "Where is Aunt Amy? I want her." And the strange woman had answered, "Can't I be your Aunt Amy today, dear? You're not afraid to go with me, are you?"

It was all very strange and he wished he was home, where he would ask "mother" if he had two Aunt Amys, and why she had never told him of this one.

During the program, Rupel almost forgot about his new aunt, who was kind, until one of the ushers whispered to his strange aunt, who looked surprised, then frightened, then she hurried out and left him alone.

When she returned, in a few moments, she said, smilingly, as she placed her arm around his shoulders, "Your Aunt Amy wanted me. She is hunting you. I have made a mistake. I will tell you after this is over."

Oh, how glad Rupel was when, a little later, he, with his new "aunt," was in the big automobile with his "old," or rather, his "real" Aunt Amy and two strange little boys with white lilies pinned on their coats.

Rupel had, by mistake, gone into Mrs. Hall's—his strange aunt's house, who lived next door north to Aunt Amy's. Mrs. Hall had also promised to take a boy waif to church, so when she found Rupel in her home, she supposed it was the boy that was to accompany her. Mrs. Hall had never seen the strange boy who was sent from the mission-house, two blocks down the street, by one of the kind women who had planned it, and where all the street children who wished to go to Easter programs in any part of the city were to meet. Nor had Mrs. Hall ever seen Rupel, or even knew of his visit to Aunt Amy's. When Rupel mentioned "Aunt Amy" she thought that perhaps he lived with some one by that name.

When the lad had knocked, and received no answer at Mrs. Hall's door—she and Rupel had already gone—he went on to Aunt Amy's with the boy that she was to take, for they had come together the short distance from the mission-house, where one of the kind ladies had pointed out Mrs. Hall's and Aunt Amy's houses to them as they started.

Aunt Amy had not missed Rupel until the boys came. Then, after the waifs' explanation of their appearance, and inquiry among the neighbors, she decided there had been a mistake and started with the boys in the automobile to hunt Rupel. For one neighbor and a policeman told her they had seen Mrs. Hall and a boy get into the street-car. She knew the church that Mrs. Hall usually attended and soon found them. Nor did they miss much of the Easter service.

The three boys had dinner together, for Mrs. Hall came over and she and Aunt Amy read and told stories to them that afternoon.

"I'm glad Mrs. Hall's boy wore my lily. He wouldn't have had one, ever, perhaps in his life. And that he had a ride in an automobile, for he said that he never had been in one before. He laughed, too, when he told me. And I'm glad that I had a new Aunt Amy on Easter morning, 'cause it made him happy," Rupel whispered as he was climbing into bed that night.

"Remember, dear, that the real Lily—the Lily of the Valley, you know, had first to be given to us from death, that Easter morning long ago, and that He has to be worn by us in our lives. Yes, we have to wear Him before we can have a "new"—an "Easter morning life." Didn't He bring happiness and "all things new" into the world that Easter morning?"

Earlham, Iowa.

(The following poem was crowded out of our Easter Number last week.—Editor).

EASTER.

By LOUISA WICKERSHAM.

Lament and weep, there is gloom today.
There were shouts and cheers in the city old
By men who were fierce and wicked and bold;
They had put the Christ forever away,
For Judas, himself and his Master had sold
For thirty pieces of silver or gold,
And Christ had been crucified that day.

Lament and weep, there is gloom today.
The wife of Pilate had sought in vain
To save his soul from the awful stain.
He washed his hands in water that day.
The howling mob would not be denied,
They called for Christ to be crucified,
And he let them lead the Savior away.

Lament and weep, there is gloom today.
They platted a crown of thorns for his brow,
A purple robe, and a scepter, now
They smite with their hands and call and say
Hail, king of the Jews, who smote thee then?
They mocked in vain, for the Serior of men
Answered them not, so they led him away.

Lament and weep, there is gloom today.
On the heavy cross they laid him down,
His head still wearing the thorny crown,
He murmured not but they heard him say,
Those soldiers rude as they nailed him fast,
And set the cross in its place at last,
"My father, thy will, not mine, I pray."

Lament and weep, there is gloom today.
On the weeping women the Christ looked down,
His head still pressed by the thorny crown;
And they who listened could hear him say,
To John the beloved, "Behold thy mother."
To her he said, "He is my brother,"
And he took his mother home that day.

Lament and weep, there is gloom today.
For darkness has fallen on all the world
Like a thunder bolt from the heavens hurled;
For men have forgotten, to God, to pray.
And the son of God, who came to save,
Shall be laid away in an earthly grave,
For the Jews have slain their king today.

Lament and weep, there is gloom today.
The Christ still hangs on the cruel tree.
But there comes no shout of victory.
The Lord of heaven seems far away
And the son of God can only call,
"My father to thee I commend my all."
And so Christ died on that Passover day.

Lament and weep, there is gloom today.
For the Christ still hangs on the bloody tree,
Where he died to save both you and me.
But they come to bear his body away,
They pierce his heart and the blood flows out;
He is dead they see, beyond a doubt,
And they bear him away to the tomb today.

Rejoice, rejoice, there is hope today.
The Savior has risen, he walks again
The paths of earth with the sons of men.
The bands of death have yielded their sway
To the Son of God who came to save
From death and hell and the power of the grave,
And who reigns with God in heaven today.

Rejoice, rejoice, there is hope today.
The Savior is seeking today to win
The souls of men from the paths of sin.
If we but hear his voice and obey,

He will lead us out on the hills of light
Where all things are new, and all things are bright,
And crown us as heirs this very day.

Rejoice, rejoice, there is hope today.
For Christ is alive forever more,
And has set before us an open door,
And placed our feet in the King's highway,
Which the vulture's eye has never seen,
And no ravenous beast can enter in,
Where the sons of God can walk today.

Rejoice, rejoice, there is hope today.
Though there be sin and sorrow and death,
Though men grow weary and faint of breath,
The darkness has rolled from the earth away;
All things forever are bright and fair,
Our spirits are light as a breath of air,
For Christ arose on that Easter day.

Rejoice, rejoice, on this Easter day.
For Christ has risen no more to die,
He lives and reigns forever on high,
Where a thousand years are as a day.
He has promised to us eternal life
If we walk with him and cease from strife,
The Savior who rose on an Easter day.

Rejoice, rejoice, there is hope today.
There is joy and peace, there is glad surprise,
As the glories open to our wondering eyes,
While the things of earth fade in mist away;
And our souls soar up to realms above,
And delight themselves in the boundless love
Of the Christ who rose on that Easter day.
Spiceland, Ind.

A Word For Tired Ones

A blacksmith, about eight years after he had given his heart to God, was approached by an intelligent unbeliever with the question, "Why is it you have so much trouble? I have been watching you. Since you joined the church and began to 'walk square,' and seem to love everybody, you have twice as many trials and accidents as you had before. I thought that when a man gave himself to God his troubles were over. Isn't that what the parsons tell us?"

With a thoughtful but glowing face, the blacksmith replied:

"Do you see this piece of iron? It is for the springs of a carriage. I have been 'tempering' it for some time. To do this, I heat it red-hot, and then plunge it into a tub of ice-cold water. This I do many times. If I find it taking 'temper,' I heat and hammer it unmercifully. In getting the right piece of iron, I found several that were too brittle. So I threw them into the scrap-pile. Those scraps are worth about a cent a pound; this carriage spring is very valuable."

He paused, and his listener nodded. The blacksmith continued:

"God saves us for something more than to have a good time—that's the way I see it. We have the good time all right, for God's smile means heaven. But He wants us for service just as I want this piece of iron. And He has put the 'temper' of Christ in us by testing us with trial. Ever since I saw this I have been saying to Him, 'Test me in the way you choose, Lord; only don't throw me in the scrap-pile.'"—The Evangelical.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA

Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

LATE NEWS FROM THE FIELD JAMAICA.

East Indian Orphans.

"I took the ten little ones to the Indian Barracks, about a mile and a half from here, one Sunday evening, for them to sing in Hindi a couple of songs they had learned. How delighted the Indians were to hear and see them! They had to sing some in English, too, as the Indians begged so for them to sing more. Miss Andrews and I thought it would be a good thing for them to go, as the Indians think the girls ought not to be educated and will hardly ever send them to school."

MARY E. ALLEN.

Happy Grove School Results.

"Thirteen of those winning prizes for faithful attendance at Seaside Sabbath School the past year were Happy Grove girls. Nine of them were present at every session of the Sabbath School. Nearly all of them took part in an excellent Christmas program given in Seaside church. One of the most impressive parts of the service was a tableau given by six Happy Grove girls during the singing of "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." It was the means of deepening the spiritual life of many in the audience, including those who gave it. The increased interest shown by the girls in spiritual things is cause for thankfulness. Four have confessed conversion."

ALSINA M. ANDREWS.

AFRICA.

Items of Interest at Ketosh Station.

The Chief Murunga has called twice at the station and three calls have been made on him. He seems quite interested in the work.

A start has been made at self-government among the boys. A Baraza is held each Saturday afternoon, in which cases of disorder, breach of discipline, etc., are heard and dealt with. Thus far, the decisions have been quite satisfactory. And the idea seems to take well among the boys. Some of the boys when they came were inclined to feel that they did not want to work. But when they found all the others boys doing it voluntarily, and that they were getting cents for it, these also came and requested work. Every boy in the school has been on the weekly pay roll. They are also required to buy everything obtained from the Mission (save salt.)

Mmbwanga, the assistant teacher referred to in the report, is a Maragoli boy. He and his wife seemed to have a concern laid on his heart to come up and help with the work of the Lord here. He made his request to E. J. Rees, and after due consideration was accepted. Thus far he has done fairly good work and gives promise of development into a useful worker.

J. W. FORD.

A LETTER FROM MATEHUALA.

Matehuala, Mexico, in the state of San Luis Potosi, had to be evacuated by our missionaries in the summer of 1913. But the work at Matehuala went on. Nearly three years have passed, and day school, Bible School and Christian Endeavor are still held regularly under the direction of Maria L. Castillo and other Mexican workers. We are able to print below a translation of part of a letter written in Spanish by Miss Castillo to Miss Sarah A. Lindley at Banes, Cuba.

"Matehuala, S. L. P., Mex.,

January 12, 1916.

Miss Sarah A. Lindley,

Dear Friend: How did you pass the Christmas time? We had our little entertainment, and although we had no tree, we had a nice time, remembering other days that had gone by. On the 25th, we went out into the streets and gathered up a lot of the children that had nothing to eat—children that are dressed in rags and starving, begging from door to door, and some of them even sleeping on door-steps. At first some of them were distrustful and thought that we were going to take them to jail. Finally we succeeded in getting about twenty-five of them into the college year; this was sufficient to convince them, and in a little while there were 150. Some of them were pitiful looking, being almost naked. We gave them bread and coffee, then in the evening we had a little supper and there were about 200 then. We had them repeat the Lord's Prayer, then had a little talk with them. Poor children! How they devoured the food, and how their eyes danced with joy as it became their respective turns to receive a bite to eat. One of them, a wee tot, broke a cup and then he began to cry, no doubt thinking that he would be punished or scolded. Don't you think it rather touching?

Two hundred children of either sex, clothed in rags, misery and sorrow; 200 children with all the childish lustre gone from their eyes, their faces all pinched, pale and dirty; 200 boys and girls that must be the men and the women of tomorrow! Believe me, when I was telling those children goodbye, I thought of your country where the children are the kings and the princes of the home; of your country (though it grieves me to say it) where, while they uphold the majesty of the law, they magnify even more the majesty of the child.

"As I had previously stated, I went to San Luis Potosi to see to the matter of the registration of the College, in order that we might be able to avoid any difficulty. I remained two days, and had a pleasant and profitable time after my two years of almost prison life. It did me much good, and I now feel strengthened for my work. San Luis is rather a pretty place, though not so pretty as I had imagined it. That which seemed to abound most is fanaticism. I even saw men with long-tailed coats, in the midst of the cathedrals, saying their prayers out loud. The Catholic temples are numerous and very pretentious, and their high walls and towers overshadow and hide our poor Protestant temples. The fields are broad and ripe, and need many laborers, and great faith; work and prayer is what we need. In truth, God was with me, and I was very well received, though I had to base my information on the things that I had in my memory. With the visit of the President at the State Capital there was a great deal of extra work there to be done. They asked me to send them a plan of the course of study that we were following. The part that seems difficult to me is that they require that the teaching be entirely lay, or free from religious instruction, and I am accordingly petitioning that we be permitted to use the Bible as a text book since it contains the purest of philosophic and moral teaching and the deepest of wisdom.

"I have opened the College again, beginning on the 10th of the present month. We have 57 entered on the roll. Notwithstanding the restrictions, I have not ceased to pray." * * *

YOUNG FRIENDS BOARD

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR OFFICER AND COMMITTEE HELPS.

President—The President is the engineer, agitator and executive of the entire Society. He is the stoker for the C.E. boiler. He should be a great friend of the telephone. That is, he should use it often. His special duty is to see that committee chairmen, with himself, think out new plans for their work, and that leaders for the prayer meetings are prepared for their tasks at least a week before the date of their public appearance. He must never lag in his work. If your President is deficient tell him to get busy or give up the office. One cannot be too serious in this matter.

Secretary—Keep a clear, short, interesting record of the business meetings; help the President get out new plans for the Society and see to it that he is active in his task of putting life into the whole group.

Corresponding Secretary—This is one of the most important offices. This is the throat through which the Society gets food from the outside. Or change the figure, it is the wireless office that keeps the vessel in connection with the rest of the world. Choose a person for this position who is (1) a permanent resident; (2) one who will answer letters. Send us the name of your corresponding secretary. We need to know you and you need our help.

Treasurer—Work out some new and more adequate scheme for financing the work of your Society. Don't wait for people to bring funds to you. Go to them, adopt the "every member canvass" plan. Make out an annual or semi-annual budget for the entire work of your society. (This should include local expenses, home and foreign missionary work, denominational support and United Society help as well as a surplus fund to pay the traveling expenses of any one who may be invited to your meeting). After this budget has been made out it should be placed before members of the Society with definite plans of what the Meeting wants to accomplish during the coming year or half year. A date should be set for a canvass and people notified that such a canvass is to be made. Teams should then be sent out. Two in a team is enough. The boys should canvass the boys, and the girls should look after the girls. The pastor can help greatly in working out the details of this scheme. (Plans for the Lookout and Prayer Meeting Committees will appear next week.)

THE STUDY CLASS.

To organize a Study Class—The first requirement is a Promoter. That person is you. Send to us for our Study Class manual, which will tell you just the steps necessary to organize a class. This 14-page booklet is priced at 3 cents. Don't you want to know why you are a Friend? Undertake a Study Class in Friends Principles! If George Fox were living today, what would be his attitude towards some of the questions our denomination is facing? Study Quakerism! (The second requirement for a Study Class will appear next week.)

NOTICES.

Buy all Christian Endeavor and other young people's supplies from the Young Friends' Board. This literature is the same as what you get from the United Society with the exception that it has our imprint. Give us the advantage of the commission.

The Young Friends Conference, which is to be held at Cedar Lake, Ind., August 4-13, promises to be by far the largest yet held. We have excellent accommodations. Talk this up in your Society. Appoint a delegate and begin now to raise funds to send him. Let's have a representative from every Young People's Society.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MAY 7.

Topic—Consecration of Talents. Matt. 25:14-30.

I. Finding One's Talents—Every person has some talent, but not every person finds just what that is. This can be done by analyzing his likes and dislikes; trying out various kinds of industrial, athletic, social, intellectual and religious activity; daily or weekly overhauling self and asking the advice of one's closest friends.

II. Strengthening One's Talents. This can be done by seizing every opportunity to exercise one's gift; by refusing to listen to the voice of timidity or false humility and by mediating on some gripping theme until one becomes so enthused over it that he forgets to be timid.

III. Multiplying One's Talents—Every man should increase the number of talents God has given him.

This can be done by putting into practice what he has. Each piece of work well done invites many more tasks. These are often enough different to call out one's reserve genius and make him conscious of new talents. The number of one's talents may be increased in proportion to the richness of his imagination. This can be strengthened through reading, meditation and conversation.

IV. Maintaining One's Talents—The way to keep a talent is to put it to work. Idle gifts soon atrophy, active talents expand. A seed lies dead until it loses itself in the life of a new plant. Merely putting a good gift to work is not sufficient, it must work in harmony with the laws of nature. It must take up into itself forces that lie without. The seed takes sunshine, moisture, air and chemical transformation into its cell forms as it grows. Within each of us is the "Divine Seed" which God can warm, feed and water if we but let Him. He can reveal, strengthen, multiply and maintain our talents if we but follow His plan for each of our lives.

NEWS NOTES.

Mercer Brown of Spiceland, Indiana, visited at Citrus Heights, California, recently.

Tom Jones, Young Friends Secretary, spent Saturday and Sunday, April 15th and 16th, with various Meetings in and around Vermilion Grove, Illinois.

Austin Marriage of Mullinville, Kansas, is planning to move to Citrus Heights, California, this summer. The work is growing and people are looking to Friends to take care of this work.

Mary Ann Jenkins, well known to Friends throughout Indiana Yearly Meeting, died at her home in Richmond, Indiana, April 17th. We hope to have a fuller obituary notice later.

Richard Simms and wife have returned from their sojourn in Chicago to their home in Chester, Indiana, north of Richmond, and have resumed their work in and for that Meeting. Richard Simms is the resident minister there.

The Journal of the Friends Historical Society of London, England, for the first quarter of the present year is at hand and is an interesting number. It contains an article on "Pilgrims and Puritans as Persecutors" by Allen C. Thomas, and one on "An Old Botanic Garden" in Pennsylvania by Ella Kemp Barnard. It contains also a partial reprint of an article on "The Old National Road" from The Century Magazine, December, 1911. Price per number, fifty cents; for the year, $1.25.

Patronize our advertisers.

CHURCH AT WORK

Fairoaks, California—The San Juan High School, located one-half mile from the site of the Friends Church, expects to add two more teachers to the faculty next year, making seven in all. We would be glad to have Friends' teachers make application. This is a new $35,000 building located on a ten-acre tract, three miles to the nearest town, country environments, up-to-date equipment, all new.

Newmarket, Canada—Our work is forging ahead splendidly. Under a new scheme introduced by our pastor the S. S. is steadily and surely growing, members are being added, collections are increasing. The attendance is much more regular and punctual, and everything is encouraging. Our cottage prayer meetings on Tuesday evenings have grown from the twos and threes to the twenties and a great spiritual awakening is taking place. For the first time under the new order of things our Monthly Meeting was held in the evening and was a great success. Twenty-five members were present and there was so large an agenda of business to be dealt with, it was found necessary to appoint an assistant clerk. Said an old member of the Meeting, "It is the best Monthly Meeting I have attended here in twenty years." To God be the glory.

On Sunday, April 16th, by special request, the Song Service, "Eva", was repeated. Double rows of chairs down both aisles, overflowing into the entrance porch, were necessary to accommodate all who sought admittance. Alfred Young explained the object for which service was to be rendered, and boldly asked for a $20.00 collection. When it was counted, it was discovered the audience had risen to the call, and responded with $20.22. The proceeds are to be devoted to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Chester, Indiana—Chester Monthly Meeting in New Garden Quarterly Meeting is endeavoring to keep in line with the work of our Yearly Meeting committees. To that end we are planning to hold an all day gospel service in May. Our Bible School is ordering all its supplies through our own Bible School Board. We are organizing our classes gradually and endeavoring to grade them as far as is best in a small school. A boys' class of the intermediate grade recently held a meeting at the home of the resident minister, Richard Simms, for the annual election of their class officers. Their class secured its charter last summer. The teacher of the class, Frank Pickett, surprised the boys by framing their charter for them and by furnishing ice cream at the close of the meeting.

Pleasant Ridge, Kansas—During the last days of March a very good meeting was held at Inavale school house, four miles east of Pleasant Ridge. Levi Johnson, pastor at Walnut Creek, and J. O. Copeland began the meeting, but the former had to leave on account of sickness and A. E. Wooten, pastor at Glen Elder, continued the work. About twenty-five persons were at the altar and a very precious season of revival was experienced. A Sabbath School with about sixty members was organized and a preaching appointment arranged for Asa Dillon, pastor at Pleasant Ridge, at three o'clock on Sabbath afternoons. Walnut Creek Quarterly Meeting is surely thankful for this opportunity to enter a new and needy field.

Colorado Springs, Colorado—A series of meetings conducted by Lindley A. Wells, of Portland, Oregon, closed on the evening of April 9th. The plain, definite teaching of scriptural truth by the evangelist, impressed on the hearts of the hearers by the Holy Spirit, resulted in the conversion, reclaiming and sanctification of quite a number. The church, as a whole, was greatly blessed and goes on with the work with a renewed courage and with much unity. Brother Wells returned to his home from here.

Lynn, Massachusetts—The monthly business meeting of the Society of Friends, comprising all the members of that denomination residing in Lynn, East Lynn and Salem, except a small group known as the Primitive Friends, was held April 13th at the Silsbee Street meeting house. The principle business enacted was the launching of a campaign to secure funds for the purpose of making extensive alterations and improvements on the Eastern Avenue meeting house, to better accommodate the growing Bible School and the increasing activities of the church along social and religious lines. The Bible School now numbers 150. The attendance at the meetings on the Sabbath are steadily increasing under the leadership of the minister, Tom A. Sykes. The Friends of the Eastern Avenue meeting are endeavoring to make their influence felt in that community as a factor in the social uplift. A community supper, held recently for the people of the neighborhood not affiliated with any church, was attended by 256 persons, and argues well for the hopeful outlook and prosperous future for the Friends in East Lynn.—Daily Item.

Perry City, New York—The Friends Meeting at Perry City anticipate celebrating the centenary of Friends in this locality. The Meeting was formerly known as Hector Monthly Meeting and is in Scipio Quarterly Meeting. All Friends who have ever labored in this Meeting or who have visited here or been members, and any who for any reason may feel interested in the work are invited to send a message to be read at the birthday party to be held some time between the tenth and twentieth of May. The local Friends will at that time make their birthday thank-offering, which goes toward the parsonage fund. Any other Friends who feel like taking part in this project can do so, and it will be appreciated. Newton R. and H. A. Franklin are the workers in this Meeting and all communications may be sent to them or to Charles Tripp, clerk of the Monthly Meeting. The Post Office address of all the persons named is R. F. D. 31, Trumansburg, New York.

Poplar Ridge, New York—William J. Reagan has resigned the pastorate here to accept the principalship of Oakwood Seminary at Union Springs, New York. Levinus K. Painter, of Indiana, now at Hartford Theological Seminary, has accepted the invitation of the pastoral committee to come to Poplar Ridge, and expects to take up the work here about July first. The Friends at Poplar Ridge are most loath to lose Mr. and Mrs. Reagan, both of whom have gained a firm hold on the hearts of the people of the entire community. They have done splendid work since coming here. Former non-church attenders have become interested and the church is in a thriving condition, spiritually as well as numerically.

The average attendance at the Sabbath morning service has increased more than fifteen per cent, at the evening service above one hundred per cent, and at the mid-week prayer meetings above two hundred and fifty per cent. The great majority of those present at the prayer meetings take an active part, either by testimony or in prayer. The increase of attendance and interest is explained, in part at least, by the fact that Mr. Reagan is a man among men, does not seek to exalt himself or his position, and meets men on equal terms. While we regret the loss of their valuable services, we are glad they are to remain within the limits of our Monthly Meeting.

Poughkeepsie, New York—The final service in the series of three evening meetings, conducted by the Poughkeepsie Friends Brotherhood, was held on Sabbath evening, April 9th. The speaker was Errol D. Peckham, pastor of the Meeting at Brooklyn, his subject being, "Opportunities for Manhood in the Church." At the preceding meetings in February and March the speakers were, respectively, Homer L. Morris, speaking upon "The Fallacy of Preparedness," and S. R. Shear, Superintendent of Public Schools in Poughkeepsie, his subject being "Three Great Factors of Modern Life" (the home, the school and the church). The subject of the April Meeting was ably presented by Mr. Peckham, being a direct and straightforward appeal for more courageous Christian life among men in the church. The Brotherhood is increasing regularly in membership, numbering about sixty now. A very entertaining program was rendered recently, each member being privileged to invite one lady guest.

TOM JONES AT VERMILION GROVE.

Thomas E. Jones spent from Friday until Monday, April 14-17th in Vermilion Quarterly Meeting, Illinois. One of the C. E. societies of the Quarter desired to have him come and voted to suggest to the President of the Union of the Quarter, that she confer with the other societies in regard to the matter. The President of the Union gladly acted upon this suggestion and was able to arrange for each society in the Union to guarantee their portion of the expense of the visit.

Two other points at which he spoke in the Quarter where there are no societies also helped with the expense of his trip. A special effort was made to have each of his meetings well advertised. On Friday night he spoke at Friends Chapel, Saturday night at Henderson Chapel, Sunday morning at Hopewell, Sunday afternoon at Vermilion Grove, and Sunday night at Georgetown to appreciative audiences, aggregating about 350 people. On Saturday an all day rally of the Quarterly Meeting C. E. Union was held at Ridgefarm and was attended by about 70 people.

At this rally Mr. Jones delivered two splendid addresses. The message he brought in the morning on "The necessity of Christian Endeavorers being missionary in belief and practice" was unique and convincing. In his talk on "C. E. Efficiency and the Young Friends Movement" he told us how the Young Friends movement was now able to help each Friends Society to be efficient. Dinner was served by the C. E. Society of Ridgefarm. Mr. Jones spoke to the high school pupils at Georgetown on Monday morning.

We feel his visit has been of such value that we consider any Quarterly Meeting C. E. Union fortunate that may be able to secure his services.

EFFIE M. NEWLIN, President.
MARY MADDEN, Secretary.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

That an increase of some thousands in the regular army will be provided for in the final army measure seems to be taken for granted at both ends of the Capitol. How large the increase will be depends upon how many voices are raised in the country against augmenting the size of the nation's military establishment. A Senator from Missouri, Mr. Reed, says "we need a big increase in the army, the country is demanding a big increase and we are going to have it." He said this in connection with an argument for a more complete utilization of the National Guard and other citizens' forces in the plans for military preparedness. Now is the time for Friends and all other believers in the policy of fostering the spirit of brotherhood and justice and fair dealing in international relations as opposed to the policy of force to let their opinions be known clearly and emphatically. Letters to Congressmen and Senators will do this.

As we go along with the work of the Friends Peace Headquarters, we get more and more of an insight of the state of mind of the Society of Friends on this momentous question. It is probably a fact that Friends have not been confronted with such a test of their principles of universal brotherhood since the days of the Civil War as they now face in this "preparedness" peril. Judging from the correspondence of the headquarters, the preponderance of sentiment at this time is on what we believe to be the right side of the question. And we cannot help feeling that too many of those Friends who are standing with the advocates of increased armaments and the flourishing of the "big stick" in our dealings with other nations have been sadly misled by the sophistry of the arguments for a "greatest navy" and a big army.

That there is much of sophistry in the "preparedness" propaganda cannot be denied. This was made plain once more on the floor of the Senate at the end of last week. Friends, at least, justify changing our policy of moderate military preparedness and the establishment of a big army and an enormous navy on the ground that we ought to be protected from possible attack, the assumption being that we are now utterly defenseless. This has been shown by one high military authority after another at hearings before Congressional committees to be absolutely false. General Weaver, in charge of the Coast Artillery of the country, made a statement before a Senate committee, in which he said that in point of personnel and equipment and general efficiency the coast defenses of this country are without a rival in the world. His only recommendation by way of improvement was for an addition of a few thousand men—11,000 to be exact.

Assuming the possibility of attack by some foreign army upon our coasts, which the General believed to be a very remote possibility because of the very great difficulties involved from a military point of view, he stated in reply to questions that with guns now mounted and contemplated in plans underway and with the addition of the men asked for by him, "we would have an entirely satisfactory defense." This kind of information is carefully kept out of the papers and off the moving picture screens and away from the notice of the people.

CLEVELAND CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

The Conference for pastors, evangelists and Christian workers, that was planned for Cleveland the first part of May, has been postponed until next year, that being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Bible Institute.

The things near by, not things afar,
Not what we seem, but what we are—
These are the things that make or break,
That give the heart its joy or ache.

Patronize our advertisers.

THE IOWA PAGE

BIBLE SCHOOL NOTES.

The 51st Annual Iowa State S. S. Convention will be held at Dubuque, Iowa, June 27-30. Plans are being made for an especially strong convention.

Programs and full information may be secured by writing to the State Secretary, Mr. W. D. Stem, 403 Youngerman Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Our Field Secretary visited the Bible Schools at Albia and Hiteman on Sabbath, April 9th. The School at Albia has an enrollment of about 80, with 51 present on the day visited. There are six classes with a large number of boys and girls as members of the school. A very helpful half hour's conference was held immediately following the lesson hour. The school is now taking steps toward organizing a Cradle Roll Department.

The Bible School at Hiteman meets at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon and is carrying on a very interesting work. This is a mining town with great possibilities for service. About 60 are now enrolled in the School. A special Conference was held with the workers here just following the lesson period. Particular interest was manifested in the Departmental Graded Lessons for the Primary Classes.

The Secretary spoke at Hynes on the evening of April 9th and found the Bible School there also doing very good work.

A serious situation, however, which affects our meetings both at Hynes and Hiteman, has recently developed. The mines at Hynes have been worked out and large numbers of the people are moving away. One of the largest mines at Hiteman, where many of our men have been working, has been shut down, throwing almost 500 men out of employment.

Our workers in each of these meetings are facing the very critical problem of continuing the work in the future. These faithful workers need, and deserve, special prayer and help from the church at this time.

Pleasant Plain—It was a very enjoyable occasion to the Young Men's Bible Class when on the evening of April 15th they met at the home of their pastor and teacher, C. C. Halloworth, for a good time together. Pres. David M. Edwards of Penn College, was present and gave much sound advice in his talk on "Elements of Success." Dainty refreshments were served by the pastor's family. Twenty of the young men were present and when they started home they felt that they had spent a very profitable and enjoyable evening.

C. E. DEPARTMENT

Lynnville, Ia.—Our C. E. prayer meetings are regularly held, and the attendance is generally very good. Ethel Renand, one of our faithful members, has been unable to attend on account of serious illness.

The Penn College Male Glee Club gave a very good entertainment, April 5th, to a large and appreciative audience. The Club came under the auspices of the C. E. Our share of the proceeds, which was a little over $12, will be used for home missionary work.

The Missionary Committee recently planned a social, which was held at the home of Robt. P. Ladd. Various games were played, which were along missionary lines. One of the main features of the evening was having our height measured—five cents for the first five feet and one cent for each inch above. After expenses are paid, the remainder will be used for Home Missionary Work. We expect to have Miss McPherrin with us May 11th.

FIELD NOTES.

Special services were held at Springdale Meeting, Iowa, April 16th. Five persons were received into membership. Charles W. Mesner, pastor at West Branch, was present and preached from Romans 6:11. The work at Springdale is growing nicely, plans for a new church building are being prepared and work will start soon.

TRANSIENT BOARDERS DESIRED
in a private home in Washington.
Convenient to car line and Union Station.
Laura N. Wilson.
46 Bryant St., Washington, D. C.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure
No Alum—No Phosphate

C. E. CONVENTION.

The Indiana Yearly Meeting C. E. Union Convention will be held at Jonesboro, Indiana, May 19-21. Societies are asked to appoint their delegates at once and send the names to Mrs. John R. Thomas, Jonesboro, Indiana, before May 10th. Jonesboro is on the C. & O. of Indiana, six miles south of Marion, just across the river from Gas City. It is also on the Interurban, running between Anderson and Marion.

The speakers announced thus far are John R. Walter of New Castle, Ethel Faulkner of West Milton, Ohio; Professor Allen D. Hole of Earlham College, William J. Sayers of Muncie, Ancil Ratliff of Fairmount, Thomas R. Kelly of Pickering College, Newmarket, Canada; Walter R. Williams of Ohio; Milo S. Hinckle of Richmond, and Tom Jones, Young Friends' Secretary. Eldon Mills will be the leader of music.

SOCIAL SERVICE WORK.

An interested Friend sends us the following suggestions: "The questions set out by the committee of our Yearly Meetings inquire as to visits had, letters written, and many other good things that may and ought to be done, but they make no printed inquiry as to how many people we have entertained in our homes.

"A member of one of our local committees, not being able to get very far away from home very often, has conceived the plan of inviting different groups of congenial people to her own home. This has given her the opportunity of companionship of all ages, from the children of the primary class in the Sabbath School, the classes of boys and girls and the young people's class, etc., to scattered older people who could not otherwise visit one another very often. It is fine. Try it for yourselves."

Patronize our advertisers.

RAILROAD MEN'S MEETING.

The Annual Easter Railroad Men's Meeting was held in the Friends Memorial Church at Muncie, Indiana, last Sunday. This has been a fixed service for thirteen years. There was an elaborate program of music, with scripture reading by G. W. Bonnell, prayer by J. N. Penwill of Tipton, an address of welcome by Joseph A. Goddard, response by John W. Allen, and the sermon by the pastor, William J. Sayers. There were twelve musical numbers.

RURAL CHURCH CONFERENCE.

The second annual Rural Church Conference under the auspices of the Agricultural Extension Department of Purdue University, will be held at that institution. Lafayette, Indiana, May 8-10. The program will include the consideration of a wide range of subjects incident to the rural church problem. President R. L. Kelly and Morton C. Pearson are among those upon the program.

Friends in Indiana should be liberally represented at this important and timely gathering.

MARRIED.

Brazleton-Randolph—At the home of Oliver P. Underwood, Des Moines, Iowa, April 18, 1916, Justus Brazleton to Rachel Randolph, both of Ankeny, Iowa, Oliver P. Underwood officiating.

Hodgson-Hockett—At Cincinnati, Ohio, April 17, 1916, Carrie Vandervort Hodgson and Edith Hockett, C. B. Heistand officiating.

BORN.

Farr—At Oskaloosa, Iowa, April 10, 1916, to Willard H. and Mayne Farr, a daughter, Alice Mary.

Leonard—At Citrus Heights, California, April 8, 1916, to Walter and Gertie Leonard, twin daughters, Annie Angelo and Fannie Agelo.

Tolson—At Chicago, Illinois, April 16, 1916, to Norman J. and Magdalena Tolson, a son, Norman Welty.

DIED.

Burch—Anna Burch, wife of Charles Burch, was born in 1858, near Valley Mills, Indiana, and died near Haviland, Kansas, March 18, 1916, aged 56 years and 3 months. She was a life-long Friend and was converted in early childhood. She lived a devoted Christian life, and when not able to attend church she would observe the hour of worship in reading the Bible and in prayer. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, L. C. Hinshaw.

Coggeshall—Eli Coggeshall, son of Nathan and Gulie Coggeshall, was born in Grant county, Indiana, March 20, 1841, and died at the Grant County Hospital, Marion, Indiana, March 22, 1916, aged 75 years and 2 days. He was a birthright Friend and a member of South Marion Meeting. He was always true to his convictions and faithful in the performance of duty, taking active interest in the welfare of the church and community. He served acceptably as an elder for many years and gave liberally to the financial support of the church. Perhaps his greatest work was done in quiet, admonishing the indifferent, encouraging the timid, relieving distress and giving timely counsel. He leaves a widow and five children. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, DeWitt Foster.

WANTED 50,000 FARM HANDS

of experience at once on the farms of
Western Canada

To replace the young farmers who have enlisted for the war. Good wages and full season's work assured.

There is no danger or possibility of Conscription in Canada

References required from all applicants For special railway rates and other information apply to

G. W. Aird, 215 Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

Authorized Canadian Government Agent.

No passports are necessary to enter Canada.

Cook—Eliza Williamson Cook was born in Harford County, Md., in 1834 and died at Washington, D. C. March 6, 1916. Most of her life was spent in the neighborhood of her birth, although she resided for some years at Poplar Ridge, N. Y., and later at Washington, D. C. She was a life-long Friend and led a consistent Christian life. She was faithful in attendance at church as long as health permitted.

Newby—Martha White Newby, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca White, was born in Perquimans County, N. C. April 8, 1835, and died at Lynville, Iowa, March 23, 1916. She was a life-long member of the Friend's church and for 32 years a faithful member of Lynville Meeting. She married John T. Newby in 1854. She entered into rest peacefully. She is survived by six sons and three daughters.

FRIENDS COLONY.

Located in Sacramento county, fifteen miles N. E. of state capital, a fruit colony. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and nuts. Perhaps no better place in the state for profitable investment. Good roads, water, climate and scenery. A new, well equipped High School, with rural environments. This year's enrollment, 94. Special inducement to Friends, who have the only meeting in the colony. We invite all Friends coming to California to come and see us. For further information, write A. W. Leonard, R. F. D. No. 1, Fair Oaks, Calif.

FRIENDS MEETINGS.

Colorado Springs, Col., Friends Church, Teajon and Fountain Streets, on car line. Bible School 10:00, meetings for worship, 11:00 and 7:30. Prayer meeting, Wednesday 7:30. Visitors welcome.

Lynn, Massachusetts meeting house, Eastern Avenue, near Essex Street, five minutes walk from Swampscott Station, ten minutes from Lynn Boulevard. Sabbath morning 10:30, evening 7:00.

Stockton Avenue Friends Church, San Jose, California. Take Santa Clara Car to Stockton Ave., walk one-half block west. Visitors always welcome.

Washington, D. C., meeting house, 13th and Irving Streets, N. W. Bible School 9:45; meeting for worship, 11 a. m., C. E. 7:30. Mid-week meeting Fifth-day, 7:45 p. m.

West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., Main and West 7th Street. Bible School, 9:00; meeting for worship, 10:30; vesper service, 5:00; C. E. 2:15. Prayer meeting, Thursday, 7:30.

This Waist $1.00

Women's White Voile Waist in the distinctive and fashionable style illustrated. Sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Order this Waist with the understanding that if not satisfactory in every way it can be returned at once and your money will be refunded. Price $1.00, postpaid.

Our Spring and Summer Catalogue will be sent free, on request.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
PHILADELPHIA

The time to fulfill a promise to obey made in time of trouble is right now. Any delay tends to cause one to disregard his promise.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON. MAY 7.

Subject—The Missionaries of Antioch.

Lesson—Acts 11:19-30; 12:25-13:12.

Golden Text—Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations. Matt. 28:19.

There are a number of significant references in the passages before us. First is the statement that the persecution following the death of Stephen resulted in the scattering of the Christians, and led indirectly to the founding of a number of churches outside the boundaries of Christ's ministry. This early preaching was limited to the Jews. We need not be surprised at this for Jesus himself seldom did otherwise and it was but natural for his converts to follow his practice. The exceptions seem to have called forth apologies on the part of those departing from the rule.

The workers from Cyprus and Cyrene were the bold innovators, and to them is the credit due for having launched the movement which was destined to change the course and history of Christianity. This is the beginning of that movement which ultimately made the Christian church a Gentile instead of a Jewish organization. The significance of this step is too seldom appreciated. We must not make too much of the fact that they first preached to the Greeks, but to the student of religious history it suggests the wonderful influence the Greek mind has had on Christian thought. There was with them the teaching that through the death and coming to life again of a God the possibility of being initiated into him in such a way that the initiate would partake of his eternal life. In at least one case this was to be accomplished by eating cakes made in a certain way. There are other striking similarities to traditional Christian teaching.

We note, too, that the Jerusalem church was concerned with the situation as reported to it and that it assumed a responsible jurisdiction over these converts and sent Barnabas to them. Fortunately for Christian history, Barnabas was liberal minded, and was pleased with what he found. But how did he happen to go searching for Paul? Had he ever known him? What had Paul been doing those ten or more years since his conversion? Had he, too, shown this early a liberal spirit in his preaching, and having made a reputation for himself was now thought to be the man of the hour for the new work in Antioch? These are questions for which we have no present answer, but the events indicate a history of which we would like to know more.

The coming of Agabas, his message, and the subsequent journey of Paul and Barnabas to Jerusalem are significant events in this history. How Paul must have recalled old events to mind as he returned to the city in which he was once a terror to the Church. On their return to Antioch they continued their services for a time until it became evident that God would have them go abroad and preach the gospel to a larger circle.

This is the beginning of those wonderful missionary journeys which have meant so much to the Church, not only in the founding of congregations here and there, but the resulting literature due to his correspondence.

This assignment contains a great mass of material for study and meditation, and we have barely listed the various themes a Bible class may profitably discuss. In it all, we may see the leading of God's Spirit, how to his glory and the betterment of the world, the first policy of the church—to preach only to the Jews—was overcome.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5% FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever Investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.

Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue. Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

Patronize our advertisers.

WANTED—By young woman Friend, experienced in Domestic Science, position for summer or shorter period. Will take entire charge of private home and children—or would like institutional, hotel or camp work. Address S. care The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

Mission Study Books 1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingstone, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ching China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co. OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.

Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.

Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for Wills

Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.

Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward

Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President

J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer

J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer

DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary

SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer

C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary

MATTHEW WALKER, Acting Mgr.

Insurance Department

WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer

JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer

J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor

WILLIAM S. ASHBROOK, Agency Secretary

DIRECTORS

Asa S. Wing

Marriott C. Morris

Robert M. Janney

Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.

John B. Morgan

Frederic H. Strawbridge

John Thompson Emlen

Morris R. Bockius

Henry H. Collins

Levi L. Rue

George Wood

Charles H. Harding

J. Whitall Nicholson

Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 18.

FIFTH MONTH 4, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 18.

Earth's Toilers Sing

By ELISHA SAFFORD.

Hark to the song earth's toilers sing
As they bow at the festal board!
Hark to the song the reapers bring
With the wealth of their golden hoard!
From fair, lush prairies gemmed with flowers
Or a-ripple with billowy grain,
Where smoke-wreathed cities lift their towers
At the call of the foaming main—
This is the song earth's toilers sing,
This is the song the nations bring
As they bow at His shrine again:

"Father of all, great giver of all,
Hear, as we cry unto thee;
Where the wind-tossed pines unheeded call
To the lonely, ice-locked sea;
Where the scorching desert's tawny sands
Burn red in the sunset's glow
And the mountains cling with titan hands
To their diadems of snow—
We lift glad hearts with one accord,
We hymn thy praise, O gracious Lord,
For gifts that unceasingly flow.

"Thanks for the home whose welcome door
Swings wide to our vagrant feet;
Thanks for the rest from the strident roar
And the rush of the blinding street.
Thanks for the fields whose splendor fills
Our hearts with a joy serene,
For flocks and herds on a thousand hills
Enisled in their seas of green.
Thanks for the faith of answered prayer,
The cup to give, the crust to share
And the hope of a life unseen."

—Exchange.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

All papers are continued until there is a specific order to stop, in which case all arrearages must be paid.
For advertising rates address the Manager.

Entered as second-class matter at Urbana, Ohio, June 10, 1915, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Lines Written for the Sixtieth Marriage Anniversary of John Henry Douglas and Wife.

Fourth Month 23rd, 1916.

By ALICE EARLE STEVENS

Dear aged Friends, yet with perennial youth!
Beneath fair California's southern skies,
Abide these faithful "valiants for the truth,"
Watched over with a daughter's love-lit eyes.

How fit! A two-fold celebration this.
When all the world glad Easter anthems raise,
They reckon sixty years of wedded bliss,
On this fresh April morn with added praise.

Yes, sixty years their hearts have beat as one.
Together wrought through life's long, busy day.
Her lot to keep the home till set of sun,
And his, the great commission to obey.

Through vales 'mong rocky hills from shore to shore,
In clarion tones he has proclaimed the call
Of Christ, for fallen race the only Door
To freedom, from sin's baleful wretched thrall.

What favored meetings, wheresoe'er he came,
When contrite hearts were led, deep Spirit-stirred,
To seek for cleansing from their scarlet stain,
While listening to this spokesman of the Word!

How many wanderers from the Father's face,
Have heard from him the gospel's joyful sound;
And in his God-sent message of free grace,
How many sorrowing souls have comfort found!

In all his labors at the Lord's behest,
His willing helpmeet had her quiet share,
The mercy seat she sought, with her request
For daily strength, for tender Shepherd care.

Their prayers of faith brought heavenly bounty down,
A full supply for every need, to give.
May each alike receive the fadeless crown,
For each has proved how blest for Christ to live.

Hark! Hear, "Come ye apart and rest awhile,"
'Tis the Master's voice, and earthly sounds grow dim.
Just waiting now, they bask in Jesus' smile,
Till lifted up to be complete in Him.
"Sunnycote," Tillson, New York.

Love is the strongest and closest of all bonds.
By getting closer to Christ we can increase our love one for another.

Are You Delinquent?

The management of THE AMERICAN FRIEND will greatly appreciate it if all who know themselves to be in arrears on their subscription will send their check for the same by the first of May. A good many write us that delay in sending money is a mere oversight or forgetfulness. This is a reminder that is necessary, for we need the money. Please do not forget longer. Send all subscriptions and all correspondence about subscriptions to the office at Urbana, Ohio, and all other correspondence to the office at Richmond, Indiana.

Correspondence

Muscatine, Iowa.

Editor of The American Friend:

Will the government's program of preparedness jeopardize the survival of the Society of Friends?

The war in Europe placed the Society of Friends in England in a very delicate position as to its relations to the reigning power. The present demand for preparedness in this country will likewise place the Society in the United States in a similar position as to our own government.

Our government will undoubtedly enact laws requiring army service preparation on the part of our young men and finally our young women. What are we, as a church organization, going to do about it? This Society cannot survive unless it remains a strong advocate of peace as opposed to war. Likewise, it cannot survive unless it remains loyal to the government and teaches our young people to be patriotic. Will it be possible to accomplish this and at the same time give the most efficient aid to our government in time of trouble such as England is now passing through?

The solution of this problem will require the best that is in us. It should become a matter of great solicitude to the Society everywhere. It should be studied while the present conflict is on and at close range. Every Friend visiting in England should make diligent inquiry as to how the Friends in England met the issue, how successfully, and advise as to what improvement we can make over the course pursued by them. Shall we not invite English Friends to bring us a message and advise as to our best course? Yet, the solution for them may not be a solution for us at all.

Will it not be a move in the right direction for each one of our Yearly Meetings, at its next session, to appoint at least one delegate from its body to visit England at an early date and study the question while the war is in progress? Subsequently these delegates as a whole could formulate a plan suitable to the occasion and country.

And why will it not be well for our colleges to establish courses or so alter the present curriculum that our young people may be trained as nurses and in other like avocations so that they may assist the government, remaining loyal to it, and at the same time avoid taking life?

N. ROSENBERGER.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF QUAKERISM IN AMERICA

S. EDGAR NICHOLSON, Editor and Manager

Old Series
Vol. XXIII, No. 18.

FIFTH MONTH 4, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV, No. 18.

Changing of Human Nature

We read recently the statement of a Christian man to the effect that among the guests whom he delighted to welcome into his home were a gambler, a thief and a drunkard. It was a startling utterance until the reader understood that these appellations were characteristics of the old days of sin which had passed away, and that these men had become new creatures in Christ Jesus.

The editor of The Methodist Protestant, of Baltimore, Maryland, gives in part what he calls the "indirect results" of the Billy Sunday evangelistic campaign which closed on Easter Sunday in that city:

"A lady who was addicted to card playing heard the sermon on 'Amusements,' and at the solicitation of a friend went down the trail, and gave her hand to the evangelist. On the way home she said to her friend, 'You do not realize what this means to me. I belong to a card club of fourteen. My father and I are always partners. We play for money. I began gambling at fourteen. Now I am on my way home to tell father that I have cut it out.'

"A lawyer was one of a party of six or eight who spent their Sunday nights in a private room in a down-town hotel playing whist for money. That lawyer heard Mr. Sunday and decided not to play again. He met two of his chums on a car who said, 'We have cut it out.' That gambling club disbanded and will gamble no more.

"An officer of a steamboat company said to his wife, 'The changes going on along the wharves is marvelous. Profanity has almost entirely ceased among the men. One man said, 'I took about a dozen drinks a day, but I have quit for good.' When asked why he quit, his answer was, 'Billy Sunday got me.'

"'Happy!' said a woman, 'well, I have reason to be happy. My husband was converted and I know home will be a different place now.' A man from Los Angeles came to Baltimore by way of Mississippi, where he had a brother, and brought him that he might fall under the influence of Mr. Sunday's sermon. He hit the trail, then both knelt at the altar, the one to confess that he was a sinner and the other to rejoice that the brother was converted.

"A lady in the upper circles of society said: 'I have been in the habit of serving wine to guests in my home, but from now on there will be no more liquors kept in my house.'

One only has to go into the numerous "Missions" in the degraded districts of our cities to witness the transforming power of redeeming grace. It is a tragedy almost that a Christian civilization has permitted such a defilement of the social order as to strew the highways of life with such multitudes of polluted derelicts. This age above all else needs an impelling, constructive movement in the direction of social regeneration that will incorporate the divine idea of righteousness into the whole mechanism of human activities. Therein lies the fundamental test of the power of the gospel to change the tendencies of man's thought and work a moral revolution in the wide realm of his collective relationships. The rescue of individuals from the depths of moral leprosy is proof of the power of God to save society and to transform the world order into the kingdom of our Lord.

Apparently the Church has yet much to learn about its responsibilities as a Christian organization toward the alien and the outcast. By reason of our social and racial prejudices, the fine sense of our spiritual obligations towards others is dulled to the point of indifference and utter helplessness, with the result that at our very doors there are multitudes who have no conception whatever of the transforming power of the gospel. We turn aside somewhat contemptuously from the "Chink," the "Dago," the drunkard and the scarlet woman as being uncleanly or debauched or below our social standing. Yet, if the Church would only find avenues of approach to these with the transforming power of the gospel that saves to the uttermost, many of them would be so changed into beings of respectability and attainments as to contribute substantially to the enjoyments and the refinements of our civilization.

Peter had to learn the lesson that the Jews had no exclusive copyright upon the new gospel of his resurrected Lord. Today the Church needs to learn that the gospel is not alone for the socially refined, and that its responsibilities have not been fully met until the message of redemption has actually found its way to those who are farthest away from the Father's house. It is time that through an awakened Church the wide chasm between Christian theory and Christian practice were bridged and the gospel, operating through revolutionized personality, given a chance to reach the vilest and the most despised. Reform, social service, settlement work, the renovation of the slums, municipal betterment, world peace, are each and all primarily gospel problems, for it is the province of the gospel to change human nature and lift humanity up to God.

It is necessary to have both a foundation and strength in order to stand. A weak man can not stand upon a rock, neither can a strong man stand on quicksand.

The Realm of Law

By ANDREW F. MITCHELL

When Archimedes drew upon his sand floor figures of the ellipse, the hyperbola and parabola and related them to law, he was unconsciously tracking the pathways of God. He did not know that such figures were to be found in nature, but when Galileo turned his telescope into the starry night, he found heavenly bodies traveling through pathways anticipated by Archimedes. This Greek mathematician had discovered law. He did not make it.

It is a law that the sum of the angles of a triangle is equal to two right-angles. When that great truth was first seen it was the discovery of a pre-existent law. The discoverer may be credited with insight and the demonstration of proof, but not with the creation of the law. All of the blessings of modern science are the discovery and conformity to law.

The astronomer lives among the stars, observes their movements, discovers law, and comes back with the trophy of his findings and lays at our feet the science of astronomy. The wide-awake farmer is a discoverer and when he commits the seed to the ground in anticipation of a harvest, he does it in conformity to law, which becomes his co-laborer and friend.

Electricity is one of the imponderable agencies to be reckoned with. Treat it with intelligence and it will gladly shoulder the colossal burdens of a busy planet, become our obedient servant and promptly deliver the goods, but if you treat it with ignorance, carelessness, indifference or disregard your discourtesy may cost you your life.

William H. Seward declared that there was a "higher law than the constitution," and Gamaliel said in effect that a constitution not in harmony with that "higher law" would come to naught, but the "higher law" could never suffer overthrow or defeat.

Law is not man made, but is an eternal verity proceeding out from the bosom of the eternal God. That law is beneficent and for our good. "Ye are co-laborers with God." Little man, though he may be called a legislator or statesman, is powerless to make law. He can make little rules and call them laws, but unless they embody the divine code they will be burdened with exceptions and provisos, and sometimes require centuries to prove to his stupidity that they will not work.

Europe was combed once to find wisdom with penetration enough to draft a constitution and John Locke undertook the task. He drew together all that his archives could furnish; he rounded out a document as complete as a poem with all the finished touch of earthly wisdom and put it on trial, but it went to the junk heap before the grass grew on John Locke's grave. You can discover law but you cannot make it.

The jar and discord of this old world today is because we are trying to substitute the jugglery of ledgerdemain and try to make it work in harmony with the beneficence of divine law and it will not work. Our only way of safety either in the administration of national or personal life is in searching out the pathway of the divine will and then walking loyally in it. As well try to grow cod-fish and dromedaries on the same pasture as to try to harmonize wrong with right.

In our brief national history our little legislators have tried to legalize slavery, the liquor traffic and war. Our long and useless struggle to regulate these giant wrongs has covered us with humiliation and utter failure. Our national administration is now engaged in the folly of trying to regulate the evil of war and to require the impossible—to make belligerents fight according to law. It cannot be done. War itself is anarchy. The world has never yet, nor never will see war waged without the violation of law. To declare war is to repeal the ten commandments, and repudiate the golden rule, and the Sermon on the Mount. Our present business, herculean as it may be, is to lead the Christian church up the mount, high enough to really hear and heed the matchless master sermon uttered there. The world cannot build dreadnaughts big enough to bluff the commandments of God. One great sea gurgle and twenty minutes of time completes both death and burial of these marine monsters, and yet men otherwise intelligent seem to be willing to listen to the insidious voice of commercial greed and the avarice of privilege and repeat the age-long tragedy. War, like the liquor traffic and slavery, is wrong, and no diplomacy can fit it into the divine system of righteousness. Like them, it is a destroyer of everything it touches and offers no constructive policy whatever.

Who dares to say that the Quaker Church has no need to exist? This one colossal enterprise of incorporating into Christian faith and practice the great fact that the Head of the church should be honored as the Prince of Peace would justify the existence of any church.

Long Beach, Calif.

What Think Ye of Christ?

No. 3.

By LUKE WOODARD

While the true believer's answer to the question: "What think ye of Christ?" takes account of all the inspired record makes known concerning Him, yet to him Christ is more than a person of history. His faith brings to him the realization of His spiritual presence, in fulfillment of His promise: "Lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Our Lord brings out this phase of experimental truth in His discourse with the Jews as recorded in the sixth chapter of John, where He compares Himself to bread, saying: "I am the bread of life." This is a very apt and suggestive figure. Let us elaborate it. Bread is bread, and remains such, whatever one may think about it. It is food, but it is evident no one will partake of it so long as he believes it to be only a sawdust imitation. But the testimony of trustworthy witnesses who had tasted a genuine loaf should be sufficient to remove all doubt. And yet, all doubts removed, and the individual becoming satisfied that it is a genuine loaf, it is left to his choice to eat or not to eat. If he realizes any benefit he must eat of it.

In like manner, the man who, while he gives the assent of the intellect to scripture statements concerning Jesus Christ, yet remains unrepentant and unsundered, will not be saved, as truly as the man who, because of unbelief, refuses offered salvation. As He is the Bread of Life, there must be a spiritual partaking in order to be saved by Him. This is the meaning of His words: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in you." This was to some who heard Him utter it, "a hard saying." It remains such to some in this day. Failing to understand that He spake of partaking spiritually by faith of His broken body and shed blood, there are those who connect such eating with material symbols, and one class terms it transubstantiation, and another class names it consubstantiation, while other spiritualize it, but put the figure on the wrong word, and spiritualize the flesh and blood, instead of the eating and the drinking. Christ said in this discourse: "He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." So it is by faith in Him that we are made partakers of that life which is dependent on eating (spiritually) His flesh and blood. It is faith alone that brings to us the indwelling Spirit. "He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive." In accordance with this, it was when Christ was preached that the Holy Ghost fell on them that heard.

In this sixth of John not only is the person of Christ set forth as the object of faith, His sacrifice, the shedding of His blood, must likewise be included as the means of our salvation. What else mean the words already quoted: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood, ye have no life in you"? A most emphatic testimony of the necessity of the Atonement, and of faith in the same. It is Christ crucified, which the apostle said he preached as the wisdom of God and the power of God. The blood of atonement was, with all the apostles, a leading theme: "We are justified by His blood," Rom. v:9; "We are redeemed by the precious blood of Christ," I. Peter 1:18-19: "We have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins," Colossians 1:14; "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin," I John 1:7.

So it is the Spirit and the blood, co-working by the power of perpetual faith, that avail for our present and eternal salvation.

Christ, in the capacity of mediator, is both priest and sacrifice: "He gave Himself for us, the just for the unjust," and has gone to appear in the presence of God for us, where He is our Advocate and intercessor, fulfilling His promise. "I will pray the Father and He shall give you another Comforter." In oneness with the Holy Spirit, He fulfills His promise: "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come again to you." Thus He is "Christ Our Life." "Wherefore He is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them."

In thus receiving the Holy Spirit the believer becomes the temple of the living God. What concession! "If any man love me he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him," John 14:23.

The love and companionship of congenial and worthy human friends, with all their limitations, are much. How much more the love and companionship of One who is infinite in wisdom, power and goodness!

We are not exempt in this probationary state from trials, but looking to Him, "our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." To the Zion-bound traveler He makes sure His promise. "Fear not for I am with thee, be not dismayed for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, yea I will help thee, yea I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." His all-sufficient grace is the warrant for the supply of all our need.

"O thou bounteous giver of all good,

Of all thy gifts thou art thyself the crown,

Give what thou wilt, without thee we are poor,

But with thee rich, take what thou wilt away."

Fountain City, Indiana.

A Challenge From Africa to American Friends

By EDGAR T. HOLE

This is the time when the thought of preparedness against immediate or future events is filling the minds of men all over the world. It is a time when momentous challenges are either implied by certain given conditions, or directly flung down. To disregard the challenge would frequently mean the courting of defeat. To meet the challenge wisely often requires more than human understanding. If these things are true in the affairs of armies, navies and nations, are they not equally true in the affairs of the Church?

The conditions which have gradually evolved in our British East Africa mission field constitute a challenge to the American Friends which calls for counsel and leadership of the very best quality.

In many respects the conditions are now entirely different from those of fourteen years ago, when our workers first entered the field. Kavirondo country, away from the shores of Victoria Nyanza, was comparatively new to the government official and entirely untouched by any other outside influence, except the occasional wandering Swahili native or Arab to gather up hides, ivory, etc. There the country and its people lay as it had lain for ages; a fertile and choice realm for the powers of darkness which had held undisputed sway; but naked, illiterate, arid and desolate as to knowledge of the things of the Spirit of God.

To the African, the novelty of the white men's presence has somewhat worn off as it is apparent he has come to stay. The strangeness of the Gospel message and of the assertion that the native himself can live an acceptable Christian life is giving place to a realization that this, or some other unheard-of ideal, has got hold of some of their sons and daughters. The native amazement at the remarkable and mysterious art of communicating thoughts from mind to mind without the use of spoken words is fading away in the light of the feat of reading and writing being performed by their own flesh and blood. The skill and medicines of the white doctors are slowly but surely winning out in the task of undermining superstitious belief in the wizards who delight in their magic charms and incantations. The once almost unbelievable assurance of the white men that natives can learn to be useful and efficient artisans is being verified, more or less, wherever stations have been opened.

The above changes are among those which are taking place because of the presence of the missionaries; but there are other forces at work. The Indian trader, with civilized advantages and disadvantages, has not only followed the Uganda Railway, but is penetrating the bush in every direction. Over against the teaching of the Protestant missions, which first entered Kavirondo, is the blighting influence of Romish forms, which are being vigorously propagated in schools better equipped than our own. Mohammedanism is also making its presence felt more and more.

In all these innovations, for better or for worse, what constitutes a challenge to American Friends? To answer this we need to understand something of what all these altered conditions mean to the native population. In general, it means that the people fully realize that the old regime of their fathers is destined to gradually pass away. To many of the younger ones it begins to mean that they must seek to learn many things that the older generation had neither opportunity nor inclination to learn. Whereas, until recently, the young people who cared to attend our very modestly equipped schools numbered a few hundred, they have risen to more than four thousand.

The more progressive of these are asking why we do not provide more buildings, materials and teachers like some other missions which they know about; and why we do not spend more hours in helping them to learn the things they want to know. In other words, why do we not pay more attention to education? Other departments of the work are important, but if we neglect the education of youth, we do it to our very great peril. It is possible for a young person to become soundly converted through contact with an individual missionary or any department of the work; such an one may be very zealous and useful; but zeal without knowledge is always a dangerous thing. The most seaworthy vessel needs a cargo for ballast.

In reading a copy of the "Proceedings and Addresses of the International Conference of Men Friends" recently held in Richmond, Ind., it is most encouraging to note the determined purpose of men to meet the challenges of the times. The homeland needs the very best that the church can produce; but this foreign field in Kavirondo has been brought up to the place where its present needs must be taken seriously or allow irreparable loss to ensue. Even more than to extend our borders in Kavirondo, we need trained leaders to educate and mould, mentally and spiritually, those within our sphere of influence. Africa is full of brawn, but needs our best brand of Christian-encased brains to direct in its development.

The standards of efficiency are rising all over the world. The Colonial Office of the British Government has wisely elevated its requirements for appointees to posts in the British East Africa colony. In this rapidly developing colony mission work is constantly brought under closer surveillance, and the workers into closer contact with the Government's representatives. It is obvious that we must choose and send forth men of a high order in every respect to adequately care for the great opportunities which have opened up before us. It is essential that the work and workers seek to commend themselves to those under whose jurisdiction the mission operates, as well as to God.

Africa's challenge, then, to American Friends is—Send your best commanding officers, with armaments, to this front, and we will see that the Kavirondo trenches of illiteracy are taken and manned with Christian intelligence.

Real believers are always thinking they believe not, therefore they are fighting, wrestling, striving and toiling without ceasing, to preserve and increase their faith; just as good and skillful masters of any art are always seeing and observing that something is lacking in their work, whilst bunglers and pretenders persuade themselves that they lack nothing, but that all they make and do is quite perfect.

Congress on Christian Work in Latin America

Held at Panama, Feb. 10-20, 1916.

By CHARLES E. TEBBETTS

(Continued from last week)

INTRODUCTION.

Charles Tebbetts has related in preceding issues of The American Friend the occasion for holding this great Missionary Congress at Panama and has given an account of the reports and discussions which took place. His account of the work of the Congress is continued below and will be concluded one week hence. This week's installment deals with the very important topics, "Women's Work in Latin America," and "Co-operation and Unity." Although dealing primarily with Latin America, the discussions of these subjects at Panama represent the latest, best thought of missionary specialists and is largely applicable to work on the other foreign mission fields of Africa, Asia or the islands of the sea.

Commission V.—Women's Work.

This report and its discussion brought the women well to the front. The report traced historically the work done by women and for women and children in Latin America. It spoke of the position and influence of women in those lands. Their life is largely isolated. They are patriotic, and willing to sacrifice for their country. They are as a rule under the absolute power of the priests through the confessional, and because of this fact the problems of reaching them with the Gospel is especially important. This must largely be done by women who are able to enter their homes and into sympathy with them and their needs. It is especially important to reach the women of the higher class. The women are very hospitable and easy to approach in social ways. The temptations to which young girls are subjected are very great. They can scarcely go on the streets without being subject to insult and indignity. There seems little disposition to train boys to respect them. The condition of childhood in these lands is pitiable; twenty-five to forty per cent, and in some sections much higher, are illegitimate and, therefore do not know a proper homelife. From forty to ninety per cent die under two years of age. In spite of all this, there are many noble traits. "They have strong natural affections, both to their families and their friends. Filial love is universal and brings about a gentle attitude to old age. Grown sons and daughters take all their earnings home and are satisfied with the part that is allowed them by their parents. They do their best to care for dependent relatives even when the relationship may not be very close."

The findings of Commission V. emphasize the inadequacy of forces now at work, and that the present is a special time of opportunity. They plead for women of courage, faith, adaptability, special gifts, thorough training and marked spirituality; women of culture and refinement, with the ability to enter into the life of the beautiful, loving, artistic, impressionable Latin women. They must present the truth as it is in Jesus Christ, rather than attack the Roman Catholic faith.

Provision should be made for kindergarten, primary, secondary, vocational and college training. Opinions differ as to co-education. There is a prejudice in these lands against it. Those who have tried it generally recommend it.

There are great opportunities for evangelistic work, along the lines of Bible women, visitation in homes, following up the students of mission schools, district nursing, teaching and preaching. Latin-American women must be trained for this work in larger numbers, for they are able to work with far greater efficiency.

This commission also strongly emphasizes co-operation and unity. "The urgency of the task should permit no waste. The task cannot be accomplished by divided ranks."

The discussion was very lively. The daily report says: "More than once the delegates who heard the wise and incisive words of the wives of the distinguished men whose voices are so familiar, were perplexed to know which, after all, is 'the weaker sex.' The unbidden and pertinent inquiry would not keep out of mind: 'Does she write her husband's speeches, I wonder?'"

"One of the most remarkable stories of the Congress was told by Miss Coope of her work among the San Blas Indians, who live 100 miles east of Colon. At first she was opposed by the priest and dragged off the island. Later she returned and is carrying on her work there now in peace. President Porras, of Panama, advised her not to go, but she went anyhow. A year ago His excellency 'risked his neck among the Indians and knocked at my door.' She has instructed many children and even the chief himself. There were ten saloons on the island when she went; there are none now. The chief himself has become a Christian." She had two of her Indian boys with her.

Mrs. Allison, of Guatemala, told of organizing mission work among the servant girls and reaching some of the homes through them.

Commission VIII.—Co-Operation and Unity

Thursday was given to the report of this Commission. All discussions focused themselves in this theme. Every Commission report had shown how impossible it is to evangelize Latin-America with divided forces. The daily report thus tells the story: "Protestantism, divided into unrelated and uncooperative denominations, cannot meet the demands of the great social and missionary opportunity presented by Latin-America—that is the unanimous conviction, expressed again and again in the Congress on Christian Work at the session yesterday. Again and again the policy of independent denominational activity was indicted by earnest speakers who came from the various fields and brought with them convincing facts showing the waste and friction and misunderstanding and ineffectiveness, as well as other evils due to the lack of intelligent co-operation by the various denominational mission boards."

"Rev. Charles L. Thompson, of New York, chairman of the commission, laid the whole situation with great frankness and earnestness upon the minds and consciences of the delegates. Dr. Thompson, like Dr. Speer, the chairman of the Congress, is a Presbyterian. Turning to the chairman at one place in his address, he recalled an utterance which he heard Dr. Speer make some two years ago, to the effect that he would not be surprised if by the close of the century there would be no such thing as a Presbyterian Church at all. Dr. Thompson wondered if Dr. Speer still cherished the hope that denominationalism was to be displaced by a united Church of Christ. In quick reply Dr. Speer said that he would stand by his original statement, except that now he would shorten the time. This brought prolonged cheers from the delegates."

"Probably there has never been so free an interchange of sentiments by leaders of so many denominations on the subject of Christian unity as that which took place in the discussion yesterday. The supersensitiveness which usually characterizes reference to one another's denominations in conferences like this was conspicuously absent. Presbyterians referred to Baptists and Disciples, and each one speaking humbly made a confession of the mistakes of his own denomination in living too much to itself and in not putting the Kingdom of God ahead of its own sectarian interests."

The discussion proceeded during the day with intense earnestness and deep feeling. Strong native leaders from the great nations of South America pleaded for unity in the face of the united forces of Roman Catholicism. Leading business men expressed their gladness at this hour. Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, declared with earnestness that nothing had cheered his heart during the days in this Congress more than this note of sensible sane co-operation among the churches. Mr. Fleming H. Revell, of New York, declared that all considerations of expediency and loyalty to the Kingdom of God demanded the co-operation of Christ's followers.

Rev. James I. Vance, of Nashville, Tenn., expressed the wish that the delegates might take home to their churches the spirit of unity which they feel in this Congress. Mr. Harry Wade Hicks said that at all costs the evils of non-co-operation at the home base must be avoided on the foreign field.

Dr. John W. Butler, of Mexico, urged the importance of the immediate adoption on the field of the plan proposed by the various boards at Cincinnati a year ago last June. He declared that its present application would set forward the Kingdom of Christ a whole generation.

Sometimes a little humor relieves the tension and at the same time scores a point, as was shown when Dr. Goucher told the story of a visitor to an insane asylum, who was distressed when his guide, the superintendent, had to go among several hundred inmates to separate two belligerents. "Aren't you afraid," asked the visitor, when the superintendent returned, "that these insane people will some day get together and attack you?" "Not at all," was the quick and complacent reply; "if they had had intelligence enough to unite, they would never have been sent to an asylum."

As the day advanced the Spirit of God melted all hearts into a deep sympathy with our Lord in his prayer, interceding for the oneness of his disciples, and Dr. Thompson closed the discussion with words spoken out of a full heart. He said: "I should be untrue to the state of mind in which the Commission approached this question, and in which it has come to its conclusions, if I did not speak frankly, because we go to republics which have an older religious faith, our relation to that faith must be considered. We cannot escape this responsibility. But the inherited faith of these republics is not the only faith they have; they have Christian Science, Theosophy, Free Thought and Spiritism. Some of these we North Americans may have sent them. Toward all of them, what attitude shall we maintain. First, we are

Charged With a Definite Message

If we have none, we have no business there or anywhere. If we are not ambassadors of the King, bearing his commission, our message is sounding brass. Let us stay at home and go into some other business. We must be true to our message as we understand it. Intellectual honesty is the prime requisite of a missionary. Christ required this first of all. Because this failed among the Pharisees, He used the scorpion whips of the twenty-third chapter of Matthew. We must be true to the truth—the evangelical message, the Gospel of repentance from dead works and faith in Jesus Christ. This is our clarion note. This cannot be toned down. It must ring out as it rang out from the lips of John the Baptist on the Jordan; and the minister who trims this Gospel, who, in the face of any opposition compromises the message, compromises his manhood.

"But it should be spoken positively and constructively, tenderly, not controversially. I do not say there should be no controversy, but it should not be sought. Paul says, 'Give to every man who asks you a reason for the hope that is in you.' That may bring controversy, for you must be true to your convictions. But let the responsibility for invoking the controversy be not in you. Especially in going to minds less matured, let the simplicity that is in Jesus rule the message. In that kind of preaching one may often find acceptance and co-operation which he had not expected.

"The message must not stand alone. It must have an incarnation. The people must be made to feel that we have come to give our lives for them. To that end we must enter into their lives, in all that it means, in a spirit of brotherhood. We will often find acceptance for our Gospel when it walks into lowly doors—physical ministries—when it weeps with those who weep; when it becomes solicitous for the sorrows of overburdened people and for crushing social conditions; when otherwise it would encounter doors that are barred. If any inquire as to the emphasis, if they would know what thing should be stressed—the message to the individual, or its application to life, to social or moral conditions—I reply by inquiring of the birds that fly over and around this hotel: Which wing do you emphasize in your flight? The finest chance for co-operation is in the social ministries of the Gospel. Only common endeavors can lift communities. Union movements in matters eleemosynary, educational and for moral reform are absolutely essential.

"This brings me to one plain and direct word about co-operation with the inherited faith of Latin-America. In response to a general demand from the field, we have modified our approach to the point of declaring that there is not now any hope of co-operation of any kind, or in any degree with the Roman Catholic Church as an organization. We accept it as a present fact. We do not accept it as an ultimate fact. It is not even now a fact everywhere. When Cardinal Farley occupies the platform with Bishop Greer and other evangelists in New York to promote some civic or social reform, it is a declaration that sometime such a scene may be witnessed in Buenos Ayres or Rio de Janeiro. We even dare to cherish the hope of an ultimate union of Christendom. We do not believe in the perpetual postponement of an answer to Christ's prayer.

"We are bound to believe, and our correspondence warrants us in saying that there is a chance for some co-operation with individuals of any faith in Latin-America. Many in Latin-America are ready to say, as a South American ambassador at Washington said to us, 'Our burdens are too heavy for us—we need your help.' And we can help people who do not believe in us.

"Now is the time, the psychological time for this Congress. The Americas may yet be driven together by pressure from the outside. At any rate, we must stand together. So said business men at the Latin-American Congress in Washington. So said scientific men at the same place. So said Secretary Root to the Southern Republics. For even higher reasons, we must say it. We have a vast and common enterprise. I think we must sink or swim together. Spencer said: 'The finest type of a man is to be developed on American shores.' But he will not be an Anglo-Saxon. God is challenging that idea at every port of entry in North America. He will not be a Latin-American. God has a bigger idea. For that we must work together with Latin-American idealism and culture, with Anglo-Saxon doctrine and evangelism. President Wilson, a while ago, expressed the hope that America would yet have a word to say that would be for the peace of Europe. If she shall ever have a word to say that shall be for the peace of the world, it will be when she is Christian through and through, from the top of Alaska to the Straits of Magellan.

Divine Power Available

"Our victory waits on our complete surrender of ourselves through prayer to the Spirit of God. In that should this Congress culminate. It would save us from disharmony among ourselves. We cannot trust our poor twisted intellects, but we can trust the spirit-filled heart. Am I speaking academically? Nay, we have witnessed it here. God has wrought the impossible in answer to our prayers. Let no man henceforth say there is no power in united intercession. This will enable us to meet our tremendous task with quiet minds and unfailing courage. What else could hold us steady as we face what we have talked about? This will call down a power not our own. Rather, it will give us vision to see that we have power, and will enable us to act upon it. Oh! discouraged prophet, lift up your eyes! See that the mountains are full of the horses and chariots of fire.

"He who handles the Gospel sincerely has the dynamite of the Almighty. So with our mind, baptized into our spirit, let us give ourselves to the grandest task ever given to the church of God—to save a whole continent, may I not say the world's central continent, from materialism, agnosticism and superstition. What a chance for the angels of God to envy. We shall not see the consummation of our dream. It is a long enterprise, but to begin that work with a common march is glory enough for one generation. Nothing, then, will discourage us. We shall be sure of God, and that will be enough.

"Coming down on our ocean trip, we came in sight of the lights of San Salvador. We thought of Columbus. How sternly he kept the prow of his caravel towards sunset. By his courage quelling the mutiny of his sailors, he cried out defiantly in the words of Lowell:

"'One faith against the whole world's unbelief,

One soul against the flesh of all mankind.'

"Let that faith be ours, and from the direction in which we have started today, we will never turn back."

(To be concluded)

What It Means to Me to Be a Young Friend

By SUSIE L. DOW

If I could talk to you, I think I could tell you something of what it means to me to be a young Friend. Lacking the inspiration of an audience, it remains to be seen whether I can put my thoughts on paper.

First, we have a marvelous heritage. A long line of heroic souls from George Fox to these later days have honored the name of Friend. They have been leaders in many lines: Elizabeth Fry in prison reform, William Penn in dealing with the Indians, Whittier among the poets, Mary Dyer, one of the martyrs. If we knew the history of our church, we would find a host of these men and women, whose firm conviction of the truth, calm courage in danger, and burning sympathy for the needy held them true to duty through difficulty and suffering. Who can fail to feel a thrill of exaltation when he realizes that these are his church fathers?

And not alone do the great characters among the Friends arouse our admiration. "The Quaker of the Olden Time" was the personification of honesty, justice and integrity in all things. The name Quaker was its own passport and was adopted into the business world to represent a high grade product in many lines. The inspiration of simple lives so nobly lived is an inheritance we need never lose.

Yet our greatest heritage lies not in the remembrance of the men and women who have lived before us, but in the faith by which they lived and died. They were pioneers in promulgating so many principles that have met the world's need that it is possible to speak of few of them. The same strong belief in the equality of all men, which led George Fox to use the plain language and to refuse to remove his hat in the presence of royalty, inspired the Friends of the South to encourage anti-slavery agitation and to free their own slaves in spite of financial loss. The equality of men and women, first recognized in our own church, has become an established fact in the social world. In business few doors have hinges that respond to man only, and even in politics woman is now being granted the same standing as man. And nearly every church has taken some steps toward her emancipation.

The gospel of peace—what is more needed in the world today? Friends have preached this gospel by word and deed till myriads of Christ's followers in all denominations join hands with us in declaring that war is eternally wrong. The history of William Penn's Pennsylvania Colony stands as a monument to the possibility of peaceful dealings even with savage tribes.

Friends have also led the world's thought in simplicity of creed. Persecuted for failure to "conform," they held to their faith and suffered without resistance. And gradually the Christian world has approached our idea of what is essential, till now we are looking with confidence for the day of church federation when with no feeling of jealousy or rivalry, all Christ's followers will work for the coming of His kingdom.

But an inheritance of necessity brings with it the duty of using what is received. Because of the richness of our Quaker heritage, heavy responsibility is ours as individuals, and we are glad to have it so. More and more, as the years pass, the fact that I am a Friend means to me that my life must measure up to the Quaker standard of integrity, a standard high enough to employ all one's effort in these days of doubtful business methods, of questionable amusements, and of rapid living. And our responsibility does not end with the building of our own characters. We live today in a needy world. It is our part to fit the Quaker message to the present time. There was never ampler opportunity to express in real living the great doctrine of the brotherhood of men of all nations, of all classes, and of all conditions; Never was the cry for peace so universal: warring nations, countries torn by revolutions, industries crippled by striking employes, all are longing for peace. We, the Friends of today, must find the way to bring the Gospel of Christ in its simplicity to those who need it. We have a message, the world needs it. "There is a light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," yet numberless souls are groping in the dark. Blessed with so rich a heritage, will we not gladly meet our responsibility?

Being "a young Friend" brings to me clearly one other fact—that this is not merely an individual task. All over the United States and England groups of young Friends are rallying. Together they are studying their inheritance and studying the needs of today. In our own Yearly Meeting, 200 and more young Friends are striving to interpret the Quaker message in terms adapted to twentieth century problems.

Briefly then, being a young Friend means to me; first, a marvelous heritage in heroic lives, in a high standard of personal integrity, in a faith of wondrous simplicity and universality; second, it means responsibility to live my own life uprightly and to serve my fellowmen,—and lastly, it means comradeship.

Bolton, Mass.

Men's Conference Continuation Committee.

The Committee of Seven, appointed by the Men's Conference at Richmond, Indiana, in October last, to confer with the Boards of the Five Years Meeting about any desirable changes and combinations in the plan of organization, is making commendable progress, but will probably not be able to report finally before next autumn. The Committee is making an extensive study of the general subject.

We toil and sweat and doubt and worry and strive, when Jesus wants us to take the water of life freely.

John Woolman Memorial

JOHN WOOLMAN HOUSE, MT. HOLLY, N. J.

(At the request of the American Friend, Amelia M. Gummere has furnished the following concerning the John Woolman Memorial.)

On the outskirts of Mount Holly, New Jersey, along what was once the Springfield Road, now Branch Street, stands a little old brick house, gable-end to the road, which tradition for a century past has called John Woolman's house. An occasional visitor has been in the way of doing reverence there to the memory of the Quaker philanthropist, and going his way, to be told of the doubt as to Woolman's ownership. Several years ago the New Jersey Legislature started a movement to purchase the quaint old place as a Woolman Memorial, but failing to find any deed for his purchase, that body gave up the attempt. Private individuals have from time to time become enthusiastic over the possibilities of such a memorial to Woolman, but until the present nothing has been accomplished.

Confirmation of the persistent tradition was recently found in the discovery of the original specifications for this house in John Woolman's own handwriting. They are contained in his manuscript account book, which is now owned by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, together with his folio Journal, his marriage certificate, etc. Measurements and description tally so exactly that no doubt is left as to the identity of the house.

A three months' option was secured last summer, and the purchase price of $1,800 was obtained by subscription. Clear title to the property was taken, and the deed signed October 9th. An independent association has been formed with the contributors as the original members. Nine trustees, of whom a majority must be residents of the State of New Jersey, have been appointed, and the certificate of incorporation has been recorded. The premises are vacated, and repairs, which were greatly needed, are already nearing completion.

The house is very small, but will have a single guest room. Two good rooms and a one-story kitchen comprise the lower floor. A corner staircase leads with an abrupt turn to three small bedrooms, and by some contrivance, a tiny bathroom has been added. The attic will have a good bedroom partitioned off, and will be accessible from one of the bedrooms. All rafters were originally exposed, and will be so restored. Two large fireplaces on the lower floor and one above have hooks; for two of these fireplaces we have the original cranes. Two secret closets have been opened, and in the kitchen wall has been discovered the old brick oven, connected with a large chimney. The cellar floor is well paved, and a fine brick arch supports the chimney above.

The bricks of which the house is built are solidly set, and repointing has restored the chimneys. The original front door with enormous strap hinges of iron is in place, and the tin roof is now replaced by a good shingle one of dipped cypress. It is not proposed to change any smallest feature of the house, but to place it in good weatherproof condition, as nearly as possible as it stood originally, when it was built.

1771 was the year in which Mary Woolman married John Comfort. Their marriage certificate was beautifully written by her father, and is now owned by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. They lived in this house, and her mother made her home with them until her death. The family later removed to Fallsington, John Comfort's former home. These specifications would seem to indicate that the house was built for Mary on her marriage. Very brief must have been her father's residence there, since he sailed on his voyage to England on May 1st, 1772, never to return. But a house built by Woolman is more characteristic of him than one in which he lived, built by another; and in the absence of any vestige of his birthplace or other home, we are glad to preserve this as his Memorial.

There is an opportunity to raise some special product on the acre and three-quarters of ground in the rear of the house, which the trustees hope may aid in its upkeep. Good crops have been raised there the past summer. Fences are down, the barn has been condemned, and the only water supply for the entire place came from a well in the garden. A little simple plumbing, therefore, was necessary to the equipment.

The trustees are pleased to announce that they hope to have as resident caretaker, Caroline Ladd Crew, of Wilmington, Del., who, with an English friend, will assume the charge of the property, and will open a tea-room and entertain guests. Miss Crew is a student of horticulture, and will develop the garden resources. We trust it will also be available for weekend conferences, and become a social center.

The spirit of John Woolman would be little revered or understood if this house, hereafter to be known as the John Woolman Memorial, were to be of interest merely to the antiquarian. Valuable as the historical associations are, the act of incorporation recites that it shall also be preserved for "the purposes of social service in the spirit of John Woolman."

Enough has been said to indicate that interesting possibilities open out before the association, if the property can be placed in habitable condition.

We shall require at least $600 within the next month. If we can obtain that sum, it will be possible to be ready for guests in the spring. Generous friends have given us our bathroom fittings, and Wilmington Meeting has presented us with one of their old benches.

It is hoped that our interested Friends may feel that they can aid in what we much hope may develop along helpful lines. Enough furniture, most of it of historic Quaker associations, has been given us to equip our guest and living rooms, and several firms have generously furnished the material needed for doing up the interior. One highly appreciated gift is that of an entire orchard, to be located on the lower third of the long and narrow lot.

We need, however, a little more money to equip our kitchen, and purchase china and linen, and to put in order the grounds in front, and to fence in the property. Some grading is needed and a few more repairs inside.

AMELIA M. GUMMERE.

Pres. John Woolman Memorial Assn.
Haverford, Pa.

PHEBE ANNA TOWNSEND.

Phebe Anna Townsend, daughter of Merrick and Anna Crampton, was born September 29, 1844, and died at her home at Fountain City, Ind., March 20, 1916, aged 71 years, five months and 21 days. Virtually her whole life was spent in the same community, from which her helpful influence has radiated far and wide.

In her girlhood days school facilities were meager, but she utilized the opportunities for acquiring sufficient education to meet all the demands of a practical and useful life. Toil and privations were many, but luxuries were few. Naturally modest and quiet in demeanor, she possessed a wealth of abilities and virtues which only shone more brightly as the hardships and trials of life gave them continuous exercise.

On January 18, 1867, she was united in marriage with James Townsend, and they began their married life in the home of her parents, on the spot where death came to her with its summons. Here were born to them two daughters and one son, and these increasing bonds of affection and added responsibility developed in her, naturally, the patient and self-sacrificing graces of motherhood. It was her privilege later to visit these in widely separated fields of labor. In recent years, four months were spent in Mexico with the oldest daughter, Anna Kelsey, (wife of Prof. W. I. Kelsey, now of Penn College). Two years were spent with the other daughter, Lorena Hodson, in Oregon, and one winter with the son, Dr. M. L. Townsend, in North Carolina.

She might almost be said to have been the personification of unselfishness and the embodiment of self-sacrifice, seeming always to be thinking of the welfare of others, and pouring out the life streams of her heart in unending service for all to whom she could be helpful. She never spoke or seemed to think ill of any one, and perhaps no one ever lived in the community freer from giving occasion for others to speak ill of her. It is scarcely needful to say that such a life could only be lived by continued dependence on God's grace for assistance. She was reared and trained in the Friends Church, but could not tell a definite time when she was converted, but knew that from girlhood she had served the Lord as faithfully as she knew how. At about forty year of age she experienced a deeper work of grace in her heart, by a more definite consecration of herself to God.

She served both the Monthly and Quarterly Meeting as Clerk for a total of 28 years, and died in the faith and doctrine of the Church in which she had a birthright membership.

CHARITIES AND CORRECTION

We remind our readers again of the Forty-Third National Conference of Charities and Correction, to be held at Indianapolis, Indiana, May 10-17. The program is a most elaborate one. The Conference lasts eight days and brings together about 2500 delegates. It is divided into nine sections, covering the major fields of practical social work. Churches and other religious organizations are cordially invited to send delegates.

AT LAWRENCE, KANSAS.

The monthly report of the pastor of Lawrence Monthly Meeting, held at Lawrence, Kansas, April 12th, was so satisfactory that the clerk was directed to send a copy of the same to The American Friend, thinking it might be of interest to some of its many readers. William P. and Abigail C. Haworth, pastor and assistant, informed the Meeting that they felt that their work in Lawrence would be completed at the time of Yearly Meeting, next October. By that time they will have spent two years as pastors very pleasantly and profitably, and the best wishes and prayers of the membership will follow them wherever they may go. The pastoral committee of the Monthly Meeting holds a business session the first Wednesday following the last Sunday of each month, at which time the pastor submits, in writing, a similar account of work done during the preceding month.

Pastor's Report for March.

Dear Friends: We are glad of the privilege of presenting the following report of church activities for the month just closing. The weather, on the whole, has been favorable for active progressive work, yet quite a number of our people have been sick during much of the month. Our Quarterly Meeting occurred at Kansas City from the 10th to the 12th and a very creditable delegation attended from our local church, most of whom remained throughout the entire meeting. Mrs. Wilcox very acceptably supplied the pulpit during our absence at the Quarterly Meeting.

We have made forty-one family visits during the month, a number of whom live remotely from the church. Eight sermons have been preached, including one at Haskell Institute on Sabbath afternoon, the 5th, and the funeral of Mrs. Bunton at the home of Mrs. Long, on the afternoon of the 8th. The funeral of Mrs. Mellinkopf of Chicago, daughter of Daniel Mendenhall, was held at the church on the morning of the 10th, with Rachel C. Woodard in charge. Cottage prayer meetings have been held Thursday evenings of each week, with quite a good degree of interest, yet we regret the limited number of our members, and especially of this committee who have been in attendance.

Teachers' meetings and Bible study class have been maintained on Wednesday evenings throughout the month with creditable interest, when we remember the sickness of our Superintendent and so many of the teachers in the Sunday School. Carl Byrd, of the C. E. work of the Yearly Meeting, was present and preached very acceptably on Sabbath morning the 26th and called a meeting for the young people at the parsonage at 7:30, at which time a small committee was nominated to assist in such an organization as might best serve the interests of the young people. For the further accomplishment of said purpose, a meeting is called for next Sunday at the church at 7:30.

Prayerfully submitted,

W. P. & A. C. HAWORTH.

By direction of the Meeting.

LYDIA M. HARRIS,

Recording Clerk.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN FRIENDS BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Working in MEXICO, JAMAICA, CUBA, BRITISH EAST AFRICA
Home Office, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Ind.

EDGAR F. HIATT, TREASURER

CHARLES E. TEBBETTS, GENERAL SECRETARY

ROSS A. HADLEY, ASSISTANT SECRETARY

A CHALLENGE FROM AFRICA TO AMERICAN FRIENDS.

An article bearing the above title, written by Edgar T. Hole, appears elsewhere in this issue. It is a stirring challenge and will doubtless be read from beginning to end by most of those who see the American Friend.

To the many friends of our African work, we are glad to be able to say that there are at present before the Board more volunteers for foreign service of the high quality Edgar Hole describes than there have been at any time in the past. These young Friends are well equipped mentally and spiritually, and are determined to secure the best training, both of mind and heart, which it is possible to have. We feel confident that all whom the Lord shall call into service abroad will be thus determined to give Him their best.

But the challenge comes thus at present more directly to the home church. Will we, by our enlarged gifts to the missionary work of the church, make it possible for these young Friends, whom God has called and who are securing preparation for the difficult service of the foreign missionary, to go to the field? Will we provide proper houses for them to live in, and will we supply the schools, hospitals, and other equipment which will enable them to work effectively?

LATE NEWS FROM THE FIELD. AFRICA.

Asena, the Headman—In the district of Kaimosi, there is a headman, or petty chief, whose name is pronounced "Asena." He is trying to live as a Christian, but finds it a hard fight. The other headmen make fun of him and, of course, ridicule isn't agreeable to an African chief. Then, too, Asena has an appetite for drink. Difficult to overcome even in Christian America, in Pagan Africa this craving gives its possessor a terrible struggle. We of the west have sent out liquor to Africa; how much more, therefore, are we obliged to send now the remedy for intemperance—the Gospel of the living, saving Christ.

House, Hospital, Corncrib and Road.—With the last African reports came a brief account of the building which is going on in the Mission. The far north station, Ketosh, has never been connected with the others by a proper road. At certain seasons, the trail was impassable and, at best, transportation was difficult and very expensive. The missionaries have, therefore, been obliged to give a great deal of time to road building and they soon hope to have a good road running all the way from Lirhanda to Ketosh, a distance of 40 miles. The hospital at Kaimosi is ready for the roof. The brick work is finished or nearly so. The second permanent dwelling house at Kaimosi is partly shingled and, when the report was written, floors were being laid. For the corncrib, only the stone foundation has been laid. This work, however, was all done by four of the native boys, products of the Industrial Department of the Mission. The crib will measure 8 x 24.

CUBA.

Exercises of Holguin Bible School.

The graduation of fourteen little ones from the Cradle Roll Department into the Primary was an interesting event in Holguin Bible School, March 26, 1916. Being National S. S. Observance Day, also Quarterly Review, made the session of two hours a bit strenuous, yet happy faces of little ones, boys, girls and older ones, were obvious to the end.

A written invitation including the parents had been sent to each member of the graduating class. The mothers who attended seemed much pleased, especially one who for the first time was present at our Bible School. Her eight children are members and all were present except the oldest, a student in college. It was interesting to watch the mother's happy face as her second son, who is secretary of the Bible School, filled his place, and as other members of the family came forward in the program exercises.

In the graduating group were Gilberto and Argelio Hidalgo, who live in a remote part of Holguin. These boys are great grandchildren of Don Pancho, a devout member of our Monthly Meeting. Though his home is far in the country and he is not often able to attend meeting, yet he has a living interest in our work, gives liberally and regularly to its support. He is deeply concerned that these great grandchildren be educated in our school, and has expressed a desire that the older one, Gilberto, be prepared for the ministry at his expense.

There were 113 present and good order to the close. SUSIE J. MARTIN.

JAMAICA.

A Phonograph Doing Missionary Work.—"We were very much surprised and pleased by a Christmas present of a nice, new Edison graphophone for the work. This added much to our special services as well as attracting many to the Mission home. It was pleasing to the Alms House people, eighty in all. Mary Booth, a Jamaican woman, who lives in my home visits this institution twice a week, teaching the Sunday School lesson and holding a service. On Christmas day the matron gave a special dinner to the inmates, not making any great change in the food but serving it in a large, new ward which she converted into a chapel and dining hall for the day. A program was given before and after dinner, in which the graphophone played the most important part."

MARY E. WHITE.

MEXICO.

Interviewing a Secretary of State.

A decree has been issued in the State of Tamaulipas prohibiting "religious" instruction in schools. In order to find out the real meaning of the decree, Solomon Tice, our missionary at C. Victoria, had an interview with the Secretary of State. "He said," writes Mr. Tice, "that the decree did not include the Bible as among religious books, but regarded it as the best text book on morals in existence, and that we could continue to teach it as we always have done. The purpose of the decree is to put an end to teaching the confession, reciting of prayers, exacting alms and the tenth from the people, points which the decree specifically mentions as the religious teaching prohibited in the schools. This man has had several of his relatives in our schools and for that reason is very sympathetic with our work, though he himself is not a Christian, and is thoroughly delighted with the results obtained.

"It may be of interest to know that one of those he referred to as having been in our school was a boy that they could do nothing with in the public schools. He was a chronic truant and took no interest in school work. His mother brought him to us to take as a boarder. I refused him on the ground that he had a home in the city and could come as a day pupil, but that if he took no interest in school work we didn't want him even as a day pupil. But after much persuasion on the mother's part, I consented to take him upon the condition that the boy wanted to come of his own accord and would promise to comply with the requirements of the school, but on a month's trial he 'made good,' and remained with us until the taking of Victoria. He became an earnest Christian, though he didn't join the church because his parents wouldn't consent. But even the Secretary of State could see that something had happened to that boy that didn't spoil him for usefulness in society. He has since graduated from a business college in Monterey and has a position in Tampico as bookkeeper. The Secretary assures me that the Governor is in hearty accord with our school work and that they both are using their influence to prevent its being interfered with."

EDGAR T. HOLE WILL VISIT FRIENDS' MEETINGS.

Fourteen years ago, the Society of Friends started missionary work in equatorial Africa under The Board of the Friends' Africa Industrial Mission. Four years ago, this work was taken over and has been considerably enlarged by the American Friends' Board of Foreign Missions.

Work in this field is carried on along four general lines; viz., Evangelistic, Educational, Medical and Industrial.

Edgar T. Hole and family arrived in the home land a short time ago. In coming home by way of India, China and Japan, they not only avoided the European war zone, but visited the work of Friends' and other missionary agencies in these countries. In every place visited, as well as in their own African field, the triumphs of the gospel of Jesus Christ have made a deep impress upon their hearts and minds.

For a time, at least, Edgar T. Hole is available for visits and will be glad to share with American Friends, as way opens, the inspiration that has come through personal contact with the work in other lands.

Arrangements may be made by correspondence with the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, Second National Bank Building, Richmond, Indiana.

RAILROAD MEN'S MEETING

We take the following account of the Annual Railroad Men's Meeting, held in the Memorial Friends' Church at Muncie, Indiana, from the Muncie Star of April 24th:

Likening the various department employes of a railroad and the different religious denominations of the world to the differently-named coaches of the Pullman train of Life, all on the same track for heaven and pulled by the same all-powerful power and all under the orders of the same General Superintendent, Wm. J. Sayers, of the Friends' Memorial Church, preached a strong sermon last night, the occasion being the thirteenth annual Railroad Men's meeting that has been a feature of the Friends' Church for thirteen years.

The church edifice was crowded to its capacity. The railroad men and their families occupied the main auditorium and three rows of chairs in the Sunday School room were necessary to provide seats for the railroad men. Many out-of-town officials and employes were in attendance.

"Another year, with its records of joy and sorrow, sunshine and shadows, happiness and misery, good and evil, has gone into history," said Mr. Sayers. "Another milestone passed. I trust we are learning how to live better each year. Tonight let us consider together the Golden Rule, which is a part of the by-laws and constitution of life. The Sermon on the Mount and complete use of the Golden Rule would end all war, even rumors of war.

Yes, the Golden Rule is the golden key of the golden age. Common prudence demands that we do as we would be done by because in the long run, we are done as we do. It's like the rule of physics, which states that action and reaction are equal. Like a novice who hits the punching bag and gets reaction with what measure he hits.

"The world is a looking glass which gives back to every man a reflection of himself. Smile and it will smile back at you, frown and a frown will greet you. Do not break the mirror because it shows ugly. If some one should ask you to teach them the law while they stood on one foot, what would you say? Wouldn't that be enough? Do not to thy neighbor what is offensive to thyself. Who is my neighbor?

"God is our Father. Therefore, any man in need is my brother. Therefore, I cannot pass by on the other side. If I do, I go against my orders and neglect my signals. Be thou neighbor to every man. The rapid transit of all in sympathy and in helpfulness. Whatsoever a man can reasonably expect of others, he is bound to accord to them. You expect fair dealings from others, deal fairly with them. God deals fairly with us. Let's deal more fairly with Him.

"Let us know more fully the generous pleasure of kindly deeds. Any word of mine can make my brother's smile the brighter. God is not merchant that says, 'Do this and I'll give you this.' Christ went about doing good, not for reward, but for helpfulness, unselfishness. We only save ourself when we give ourselves in helpfulness. Win our life when we lose it. Have what we give."

The Temple Octet rendered beautiful music for the occasion. The members are Henry W. Thomas, Robert C. Huston, Clarence Witt, Luther P. Young, Harry K. Thomas, Homer D. Fidler, Clarence G. Wood and J. D. Miltenberger. A solo by J. A. McDonald, of Indianapolis, was also much appreciated. One of the features of the musical program was a solo by Mrs. Laura K. Hastings, who sang "A Voice Is Calling," the words of which were arranged by Walter Hastings.

Chief Engineer Osborn, of maintenance of way department of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, gave two wicker vases to the Friends' Church. A telegram of well wishes was received from Daisy Barr, of Edinburg, Indiana.

RURAL CHURCH CONFERENCE

Last week we noted the holding of a Rural Church Conference, under the auspices of the Agricultural Extension Department, Purdue University, at that institution, May 8-10. Such subjects as the following will be considered: "Centering Community Interests in the Church;" "Week-Day Activities of the Church" (illustrated); "Co-operation of Church and School;" "The Problems and Possibilities of Federation;" "The Church and Problems of Agriculture;" "Team Work in the Rural Community." Some district Rural Church Conferences will be held and Round Tables will be conducted on the following subjects: "Rural Church Surveys and Their Utilization;" "Harnessing Rural Social Forces."

Many of the Friends' Rural Meetings in Indiana ought to have representations in this Conference. No membership, enrollment or other fees will be charged.

For further information, programs, etc., address Agricultural Extension Department, Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana.

PEACE DEPARTMENT

NOTE—It is hoped that this page may present in brief form a record of activities typical of the work Friends are doing for peace. News items, short, pointed arguments, suggested plans, all will be welcome, and will be used subject to the limitations of space and the proper distribution and arrangement of the matter received. All communications intended for this page should be addressed to Allen D. Hole, President, 615 National Road, West, Richmond, Indiana.

INDIANA YEARLY MEETING.

Moses Votaw, superintendent of the Peace work in Puget Sound Quarterly Meeting, sends the following report of work done in the far Northwest:

In common with Friends generally, the members of Puget Sound Quarterly Meeting are taking a lively interest in opposition to the military spirit which is gripping this country. Literature furnished by Eastern Friends has been judiciously distributed. Letters have been written to our senators and representatives in Congress, and other influential persons. The newspapers have responded to our request and published a number of letters and other matter against military preparedness. Of the workers here Robert E. Pretlow, pastor of Friends Memorial Church of Seattle and an officer in the Washington Peace Society, has been especially active in forwarding Friends' principles on the peace question. Aside from his pulpit utterances, he has used the opportunity afforded as a member of the peace committee of the Ministerial Alliance of the city of Seattle. It may be noted that the State of Washington has a law providing that the State University maintain a military department according to which the male students are required to be drilled in the arts of warfare. In the pursuance of his work Robert Pretlow visited the large cities of the state, where he met the ministers of Spokane and Tacoma, as well as those of Seattle. In this work he reports meeting with most gratifying results, one of the tangible evidences being that by the co-operation of the Ministerial Alliances, the Socialists and the Labor Unions, the law requiring compulsory military drill was partially suspended in its operation. In spite of the encouraging signs of a rational view of these matters, however, there is evidently a strong demand among the people of this northwestern coast for an increase in our army and navy. All the large newspapers are for it, as well as the politicians, while too many of the pulpits are neutral or stand with educators for better preparedness.

This is the time for Friends to work for their principles as they have never worked before. This is the climax of their opportunity. Their position among the churches is impregnable. They occupy the hilltops where their banner has stood for two hundred and fifty years and the gates of Hades have not been able to prevail against it.

NEW YORK YEARLY MEETING.

Edward Thomas, of New York City, writes as follows:

Since the first of the year representatives of the joint Committee on Peace in New York have addressed twenty meetings on Preparedness outside their meeting houses, comprising several thousand people. The meetings have ranged from Episcopal Church services to Young Men's Hebrew Associations, and Methodist Bible Classes, Men's Clubs; etc. Arrangements have been made for other meetings in the autumn.

Friends were represented by having one of their number, a vice chairman, at the great anti-preparedness mass meeting in Carnegie Hall, where several thousand people responded to, and loudly applauded, the appeals of such speakers as John Haynes Holmes, Stephen S. Wise and Charles Jefferson. These men and some others presented a truly Quaker forum of peace teaching. It was the Quaker teaching which made the strongest appeal to this audience, for the people are evidently hungry for the message of idealism, and of good fellowship as the ruling motive among the nations of the world.

The New York Monthly Meeting approved of the revision of the Sixth Query, which was reported in the American Friend of Fourth Month sixth, and the proposition now goes before the Quarterly Meeting.

THE CHURCH AND WAR.

To almost anyone who really thinks about the question it must seem strange if indeed not most distressing that representatives of the church of Christ have in so many instances no better suggestions to offer, no higher appeal to make to the citizens of our country than do representatives of the purely business and commercial interests of the nation.

In a recent number of the New York Evening Post, Simeon Strunsky, referring to a memorial on preparedness submitted by 88 clergymen of New York, arraigns such representatives of the Church in terms at once forcible, satirical and artistic. Following is one sentence from the article:

"It goes without saying that the memorial of the eighty-eight was a plea for adequate preparedness. Not that the signers were in favor of war as against peace; only in common with the president of the du Pont Powder Works, the directors of Bethlehem Steel, the publicity manager of the National Security League, and Senator Fall, of New Mexico, they believe in arming for peace, for righteousness, and for the brotherhood of man."

GEORGE HENRY EMMOTT

We have received announcement of the death of Professor George Henry Emmott, of Liverpool University, who died suddenly at his home, Oakdene, Park Road, West, Birkenhead, England, on March 8th. Of Quaker parentage, he was all his life intimately associated with the Society of Friends, and though his failing health in later years prevented him from attending the Meetings, he took a great interest in all matters affecting the Society, and always remained a true Friend.

In 1881 he married Elizabeth, daughter of the late Joseph Bevan and Martha Braithwaite. Later there came a call to a professorship in the Johns Hopkins University, at Baltimore, Md., where for ten years he held a Chair, entering into all the activities of the university life, his work being largely with post-graduate students in Roman Law and Comparative Jurisprudence. For five years he was lecturer on Civil Law in the Columbian University at Washington, D. C.

During his entire stay in America, he paid an annual visit to England to see his parents, and in 1896, having been offered the Queen Victoria Chair of Law in University College, Liverpool, he decided to return permanently.

He was a great lover of books and had a large and well-chosen library. He loved to hear hymns sung or repeated. He was never a theologian, but his faith was that of a child, and he passed into the life beyond in that simple trust in the divine love and forgiveness which was his comfort here.

YOUNG FRIENDS BOARD

Dining Room, Cedar Lake Conference.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Lookout Committee—The Chairman of the Lookout Committee has three distinct duties, viz: to find material for membership; to follow this material up, and to make the prayer meetings attractive enough to justify an effort in gaining members.

1. He should think out plans for attracting young people to the Society. Suggestions for this can be found in the Christian Endeavor Manual, the new Efficiency Chart, C. E. Reisner's "Workable Plans" and Committee Helps, issued by the Young Friends Board. The Lookout Committee should make a community survey. It should know exactly how many young people do not attend church, and what are some of their reasons for not doing so. Data should be gained about each young person, which should be laid before the Lookout Committee. Each member of the Committee should then be assigned so many people for which he is responsible. Each one of those under his charge should be invited to attend the meetings. This can be done by sending post cards, by telephoning and by personal solicitation. This latter point is perhaps the most important of all. No society can advance without a great deal of personal work.

2. This Committee should follow up the members it has succeeded in winning for the Society. It is not enough to bring a man to meeting once. You must never let go of him. "Follow up" should be the watchword of a Lookout Committee chairman. Assign a delinquent attender to seven different members of the Society. On each day of the week, let a different person suggest to the delinquent that he is losing a great deal by not attending and urge him to come. Another thing, make out a prayer list of these delinquents which will be remembered every day. Send them some little token of regard as a birthday card, a flower, an announcement of an Endeavor Meeting until they respond by attending.

3. The Lookout Committee chairman should work with the Prayer Meeting committee chairman to make attractive the religious meetings. A Lookout committeeman will be greatly embarrassed to work hard for attendance at a meeting and then be able to offer them nothing when they arrive.

NOTICES.

Have you seen the little pamphlet, "The Community Survey?" It is an excellent help for the Lookout Committee.

Has your Society undertaken the Enrollment Campaign? Every Meeting that will persuade all of its members between the ages of 14 and 35 to enroll in the Young Friends Directory will be rewarded by either free tuition at the Summer Conference at Cedar Lake, Ind., for one delegate, or five paid up yearly subscriptions to the Young Friends Conference News-Bulletin.

The following societies have reported starting Study Classes as suggested in the Spring Campaign: Damascus, O.; Wilmington, O.; New Burlington, O.; West Milton, O.; Fairmount, Ind.; New Castle, Ind.; Ivor, Va.; Valley Mills, Ind. Four new Efficiency Charts have been placed by the Young Friends Board.

A wide-awake group of young Friends in Vermillion Grove Quarterly Meeting set up a series of young Friends Conferences that were well attended. Thomas E. Jones met six Meetings with a total attendance of 650 people. He held conferences on Missions, Peace, Personal Work and Christian Endeavor Methods.

Iowa Christian Endeavors are awake. Six new Societies have recently been formed. They will hold conferences in connection with the Yearly Meeting on August 30, 31, September 1.

Indiana Yearly Meeting Christian Endeavor Union has recently sent out folders advertising their Convention to be held at Jonesboro, May 19-21.

It is very attractively headed "Stop! Look!! Listen!!!"

Wilmington Yearly Meeting has just completed plans for their Yearly Meeting Young Friends Conference, which will be held May 26-28.

Study Class plans will appear next week.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC APRIL 14.

"What Does Christ Want Us to Do?" John 15:12,16.

(Union meeting with the Juniors.)

One of the chief marvels in this chapter, as in the one preceding it and the one following it, is that throughout the stretch of them Jesus lays the whole stress of what He says upon His disciples rather than upon Himself. The ties between that little circle and Himself had been very close and He can well call them friends.

But there was a condition upon which that friendship was based, that was Obedience. Obedience, regardless of previous plans, feelings or desires.

We have a friend. We are watchful and thoughtful about his needs so that we know just what to do to meet them. We love him so much that we know just what to do to please him. Are we as eager to please Christ? Are we as eager to know what is His wish?

God said to Moses, "Speak to the children of Israel, that they go forward." And they obeyed. Christ wants prompt obedience. He wants, not how little we can do, but all. To offer him less is to give him none. To give half-hearted service is not serving. Whatever we do we should do with our might. Christ wants us to do more for him today than we did yesterday, more tomorrow than we can do today. Yet, He does not expect impossibilities.

Our duty is made plain. It looks impossible, but "I can do all things" includes this particular task; and if we keep in mind His words, "Apart from me ye can do nothing," we will be able to rise to our task. In the first words of our pledge we promise obedience. "Trusting, I will do whatever He would like."

"I have called ye friends." If friends, we will be obedient and do His will. We will not try to improve upon His plan by substituting one of our own, but we will know His will so well that we will have no doubt what He wants us to do in any particular case, and we will do it without His telling us.

THE IOWA PAGE

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT.

The Meeting at Earlham, Iowa, affords an excellent example of what one meeting may do in behalf of our missionary work in Jamaica.

The Meeting here, for a number of years, has been supporting Sada F. Stanley as their special worker, contributing annually $400.00 for her support.

A special, or Every-member Canvass for Missions was begun in one of the Sabbath morning services last August. Those present made their pledge, while members not present at this service were seen personally afterward.

Following this special effort, which resulted in a very satisfactory offering, but which did not raise quite all of the amount needed, the first Sunday in March was observed as Jamaica Day. In the morning the pastor, Richard Haworth, spoke definitely on our Mission Field and its work. A large map of Jamaica was displayed, on which were shown all our Mission stations. The Church work the Schools and the Missionaries, both native and those sent by our Yearly Meeting, were all described. The financial situation, both at home and on the Island, was carefully explained and a basket collection taken for the work. In the evening, stereopticon slides of the work and workers were shown.

Previous to that day, the Meeting had not subscribed all of the $400.00 needed for Sada Stanley's support. The offerings that day, without asking for any subscriptions, paid all expenses and made up the deficiency, with a little surplus.

In addition to these special efforts the Meeting at Earlham is continually at her job. They have organized a Church Missionary Committee, made up of representatives of the various organizations of the Church, and are using the Pledge and Envelope System. Besides this, they have monthly talks in the Bible School on Missions and occasional sermons, with special missionary meetings and study classes. Members of the Christian Endeavor and W. F. M. S. are also active along missionary lines.

The methods and plans in use at Earlham may well be adopted by other Meetings in the Yearly Meeting.

BIBLE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT

South Muscatine—A conference was held by our Field Secretary, Ora W. Carrell, with our workers here on Thursday evening, April 13. Mr. Carrell had formerly served as pastor of the church here while pastor in Muscatine and was able to make a number of suggestions for our Bible School work in view of the general condition of the work. As a result of the evening's conference we expect to make a religious survey of the district and also organize a Cradle Roll Department. Our faithful superintendent, Anna Mary Pinkham, is now at the Hershey Hospital, being compelled to give up her work for a few weeks.

Muscatine—A largely attended and interesting Bible School conference was held at our church on the evening of April 14. Ora W. Carrell presented the various lines of work as outlined in our Bible School Standard and urged especially the adoption of the graded lessons, the organization of a teachers' training class and the necessity of the evangelistic emphasis in Bible School work. Besides taking steps to meet these points of the Standard, the Bible School moved to expend a sum not exceeding $5.00 to purchase books for the formation of a Workers' Library. A selection of books has been made and will be ordered soon.

Our new workers, Mr. and Mrs. John Bowles, have organized a Home Department and a Cradle Roll Department in our school. Already they have secured nine members for the Home Department, while the names of twenty-four babies have been entered upon the Cradle Roll. The outlook for the future of the school seems very encouraging.

Bloomington—A very helpful conference was held with the workers of our Bible School on Saturday evening, April 15. Various departments of Bible School work were taken up and discussed with special emphasis on organized class work, teachers' training, home and cradle roll department work and the evangelistic emphasis in Bible School work. Mr. Carrell also attended our school on Sabbath morning and spoke briefly.

C. E. DEPARTMENT.

Our field secretary held a conference after the evening service at Hynes, April 9. This is one of our newly organized societies. They have a membership of seventeen, and are getting along nicely.

On April 16, he held a conference at Muscatine. There he discussed the Young People's Work.

Every society should plan to have delegates at the State C. E. convention to be held at Sioux City, June 27-29. These meetings are always inspirational and give a new impetus to the home work.

The District conventions will be meeting soon. Here, too, we should see that we are represented. Have you sent in your report to your district secretary? These are needed to make out the reports for the conventions.

How is your society measuring up in the Campaign for Millions?

Are you talking about the Cedar Lake Conference for Young Friends? The Friends will have control of the grounds during the conference, August 4-13. Our Executive Committee set as a standard, "At least one from every Quarterly Meeting." Will you boost in your society?

If you are interested, as much as we should all be, in peace, will you not write to your Representative and two Senators in U. S. Congress asking them to use their influence against the immense increases in the army and navy?

NEWS NOTES.

Sunday, April 16, the Friends of Oskaloosa Monthly Meeting had the privilege of having Dr. Ira Landrith of Nashville, Tenn., present at the morning service. He brought a message suited especially for young people. He emphasized the necessity of being prepared mentally, morally and spiritually.

D. M. Edwards preached at the morning meeting on April 23. He mentioned the different theories that have been advanced to refute the Resurrection, and then he showed how each of these has been proved ungrounded. It was a strong sermon.

In the evening, the Bible School and choir gave a musical program which was much enjoyed.

INDIAN MISSIONS.

The Associated Executive Committee on Indian Affairs is called to meet at Friends Institute, 20 S. 12 Street, Philadelphia at 2:00 o'clock P. M. Third Day the 9th of Fifth Month continuing throughout Fourth Day, the 10th. All authorized delegates are requested to be in attendance. Other interested Friends will be welcome.

E. M. WISTAR, Chairman.

In the old castle at Edinburgh the way to the crown jewels leads through a very humble doorway and through a very dingy and circuitous passage. The humble doorways of common duties are frequently the way to the room where God keeps his jewels.—Rev. J. H. Jowett.

CHURCH AT WORK

Carthage, Indiana—On April 7th and 8th, Walnut Ridge Quarterly Meeting held a three-session Missionary Conference at Carthage, Ind., which was in the nature of an Echo Meeting of the recent Laymen's Convention at Indianapolis. Owing to the fact that one of the worst blizzards of the year raged all day Saturday, the attendance was not as large or as representative as it would have been, but those who were present were amply repaid for the extra efforts required to brave the storm. The ladies of the Carthage meeting provided an excellent dinner on Saturday. There were ninety-nine who sat down to this feast of good things. Milo S. Hinckle, pastor of East Main Street Church, Richmond, and Professor Edwin Morrison, of Earlham College, were the principal speakers and their addresses, both in content and enthusiasm, ranked well with the speeches at the Indianapolis Convention. They gave us abundant material to think about and good, sound advice to put into practice in our local meetings. The program was interspersed with good music and a dialogue debate on interest in missions was also well given. We trust much good may come from these meetings. The members of this Quarterly Meeting seem to be awakening to the greater possibilities and opportunities for Christian service both at home and abroad and are becoming more active. While there were but three of our nine ministers at this conference, we were glad to have that many and hope to be able to count on all of them the next time. If they only knew how hungry the membership is for something new and fresh from the field, and knew what a wonderful source of inspiration and information the fields of missions are, surely they would quickly fall in line and help push this great work along to its greatest possibilities.

Muncie, Ind.—On Easter Sabbath at the Friends Memorial Church we had a class of eighteen boys and girls who graduated from the Primary Room. They gave the Church Catechism in concert in a way that reflected much credit to their teachers. Each one was presented with a Bible.

At the morning service of the Church presentation of the Cradle Roll members was observed. Those who had not been brought before, fourteen, were present with their parents. Our Cradle Roll had an enrollment of 80 members, eleven promoted into the Sabbath School. The collection was for Foreign Mission, Sabbath School, $19; Church, $26.46; Christian Endeavor, $15.40. Total, $60.86.

Richmond, Indiana, East Main St.—Interesting and appropriate exercises were given Easter evening at 7:00 o'clock by the Bible School of East Main Street Friends. The program consisted of selections by the Sunday School orchestra, numbers by the choir, and an exercise by a number of children, entitled "Why Didn't You Tell?" The little Mote Sisters sang, remarks were made by Jesse Parshall, President of the Christian Endeavor, and a class of girls sang a song. Each number on the program was well given, and a large audience was present.

Paonia, Colorado—Revival services in the Friends church here closed April 20. Evangelist, O. B. Ong, of Pasadena, California, was in charge. Deep conviction was present all the time and the Holy Spirit was faithful in revealing sin. Sixty souls were definitely blessed at the altar. Twenty were sanctified wholly and baptized with the Holy Ghost. The church in general has received a wonderful uplift and we are believing God for great things. The union cottage prayer meetings started during the revival have been continued. Brother Ong preached the Word and as a result God has sent us a revival of old time religion.

Bloomington, Ind.—Our Bible School observed Easter by giving the exercise, "The Hope of the World." Sabbath evening, before a large audience. The offering was divided between Foreign Missions and Friends' work among the Indians in the homeland.

Chicago, Ill.—The Chicago Friends' Bible School observed Easter with a special program. An effort was made to secure the attendance of every Friend in Chicago. Roy Wollam spoke at the meeting for worship that followed. This was his closing service with Chicago Friends. He has completed his course at the McCormick Theological Seminary and will begin pastoral work at Spiceland, Ind., the first of May.

The things near by, not things afar,
Not what we seem, but what we are—

These are the things that make or break,

That give the heart its joy or ache.

Practical Economy

Baking powders made from alum or phosphate may be bought for a trifle less than Royal Baking Powder, which is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes.

Alum powders are not only cheap, but they differ greatly in leavening power.

If a cheap baking powder is used for a fine cake and the cake turns out a failure there is a waste of costly materials worth more than a whole can of the cheap baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder produces the finest food, and its use therefore, results in an actual saving.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

NATIONAL MISSIONARY CONGRESS.

Seldom has there ever been presented such an array of talent upon any religious program as was presented at the National Missionary Congress, which convened at Washington City April 26-30. It was the climax of the great missionary campaign which has been carried on by the Missionary Laymen's Movement in seventy-five great meetings in as many cities of the country since last October.

With about 1300 delegates enrolled from almost every state in the Union, the Congress assumed a practical national form, and concerned itself vitally and with startling practicality with the attitude of Christian America toward the suffering, non-Christian world. The appeals of men like Mott and Eddy and Oldham and Cary and McConnell, who have already appeared upon the program at the time these lines are written, will live long in the memory of those who were privileged to hear them, and they must find incorporation into the Christian life of the nation, if America is to rise to her highest destiny.

The viewpoint of the Congress is distinctly a world vision of the mission of the church, and the call to help sorrowing Europe, no less than China and India and Africa and Japan is the call of a new day and a new hope in Christendom. The accomplishments in missions by the various church communions since the Laymen's Missionary Movement began ten years ago are a promise of what the church may now do in a great world crisis.

Friends are fairly well represented in the Congress, one or more delegates being present at the opening from California, Indiana, Kansas, Ohio, North Carolina, Baltimore, New England, New York and Canada Yearly Meetings. A fuller account of the Congress will be given next week.

S. E. N.

What we do today is more important than what we intend to do tomorrow.

MOSES BROWN SCHOOL

Calls the attention of Friends who are seeking a school for their sons and daughters, to its strong moral and religious influence, its complete equipment, its unusually able faculty, and its unique record as a college preparatory school.

For catalogue with full information address
SETH K. GIFFORD, Ph. D., Prin.
Moses Brown School, Providence, R. I.

NEWS NOTE.

We have received the announcement that Emily Hollingsworth Wood, wife of James Wood, died at their home at Braewold, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., on April 24. We hope to have a fuller obituary notice later.

Cowgill—Electa Cowgill died at her home, near Kennard, Ohio, March 28, 1916, aged 88 years and one month. She was a birthright Friend and through life was a steadfast believer in the principles and doctrines of Friends, exemplifying the teachings in daily Christian life. She was active and useful in the church for many years, but her later ones were years of suffering and weariness. Through it all, however, she maintained a spirit of patience and cheerfulness.

Elliott—Isaac Elliott, a member and Elder in Fairmount Quarterly Meeting, was born May 20, 1838, and died at the home of his son-in-law, near Fairmount, Indiana, March 21, 1916. He was a loyal Friend from childhood and was devoted to the Church. He was of strong convictions and had the courage to express them. For nearly 35 years, he served as a Trustee of White's Manual Training Institute, also as Trustee for a number of years of Fairmount Academy, and filled other useful places in the Church. He valued highly the true Christian standard of discipleship, urging all to attain it.

Frazier—Isaiah Frazier, son of Francis and Lettie Frazier, was born near Lynn, Indiana, April 29, 1837, and died at his home in Indianola, Iowa, March 23, 1916, aged 78 years, 10 months and 24 days. He was a birthright Friend and was converted when but a boy. Though never recorded a minister, he did much service in holding revival meetings, and many were brought to Christ and into the church through his ministry. He married Mary Emily Johnson in 1860, and after her death married Mattie Bowers in 1890. He taught school in early life and also learned the blacksmith trade. During the War he was drafted into the army, but was not compelled to go. He served as Justice of Peace at Dover, Indiana for four years. He later moved to Iowa and then to Kansas where he did much work for the Master and participated in the prohibition movement in Iowa. He leaves the widow, two sons, two daughters, two brothers, seventeen grand-children and ten great grand-children. Funeral services were conducted by Charles T. Moore, the pastor and E. H. Parish of Central City, Neb.

Haisley—Millicent R. Haisley, sister of the late Nixon P. Rush, died at her home in Fairmount, Indiana, March 20, 1916, aged 77 years 5 months and 9 days. For 44 years she had been a recorded minister and had also been a very active member of the W. C. T. U. for about the same length of time.

Harris—Zechariah M. Harris, son of Thomas and Mary Harris, was born in Randolph County, Indiana, September 13, 1834, and died in Colorado Springs, Colo., on March 14, 1916, aged 81 years, 6 months and 1 day. He married Sarah Beatty in 1857. Ill health brought him to Colorado in 1877, where he has spent his time, his talents, his money in the up-building of God's kingdom. He organized many Sabbath Schools in Colorado. One daughter and 3 grand-children survive him.

Hoover—Mary Jay Hoover, daughter of Eli and Ann Jay, was born at Pleasant Hill on January 10, 1836, and died at West Branch, Iowa, December 17, 1915. In 1855, she moved to Iowa and was married to John Y. Hoover, according to Friend's ceremony, her husband afterward becoming one of the best-known ministers in the United States. She was a firm believer in the gospel of work, urging her children to live busy and useful lives. She became a recorded minister and her ministry was greatly valued, but conscientiousness of wifehood and motherhood was so complete that she found but comparatively little time for public ministry. Her last hours were free from suffering. She leaves two sons, one daughter, and a brother. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Charles Mesner.

Stranahan—John H. Stranahan, son of William and Mary Sanfit Stranahan, was born in Milford Center, Ohio, April 1, 1848, and died at the home of his son in Oskaloosa, Iowa, March 16, 1916, aged 67 years, 11 months and 15 days. He married Othelia R. Kemp in 1871. During the late nineties he with his wife, united with the South Eighth-Street Friends' Church, of Richmond, Indiana. His wife died in 1911. He continued to reside at Richmond until 1915 when, because of failing health, he moved to Oskaloosa. He is survived by his son, one brother, one sister and five half brothers.

FRIENDS MEETINGS.

Colorado Springs, Col., Friends Church, Teajon and Fountain Streets, on car line. Bible School 10:00, meetings for worship, 11:00 and 7:30. Prayer meeting, Wednesday 7:30. Visitors welcome.

Lynn, Massachusetts meeting house, Eastern Avenue, near Essex Street, five minutes walk from Swampscott Station, ten minutes from Lynn Boulevard. Sabbath morning 10:30, evening 7:00.

Stockton Avenue Friends Church, San Jose, California. Take Santa Clara Car to Stockton Ave., walk one-half block west. Visitors always welcome.

Washington, D. C., meeting house, 13th and Irving Streets, N. W. Bible School 9:45; meeting for worship, 11 a. m., C. E. 7:30. Mid-week meeting Fifth-day, 7:45 p. m.

West Richmond Meeting, Richmond, Ind., Main and West 7th Street. Bible School, 9:00; meeting for worship, 10:30; vesper service, 5:00; C. E. 2:15. Prayer meeting, Thursday, 7:30.

Greensboro, N. C. Asheboro St. Meeting, Cor. Asheboro and Lee Sts. Fred E. Smith, Pastor. Meeting for worship every Sunday, 11 a. m.

CITRUS HEIGHTS FRIENDS' COLONY

Located in the north part of Sacramento County, 14 miles from state capitol. Well adapted to the growing of both citrus and deciduous fruits and almonds. Climate healthful and delightful. Terms liberal. Special inducements to Friends. Write for information to A. W. Leonard, Representative, Fair Oaks, California.

Nicholson & Bro., Richmond, Ind.

Friends' Marriage Certificates—

On Parchment, postpaid.....$3.00

On Bond Paper, postpaid.....$1.10

Books at publishers' prices, postpaid.

Remit by P. O. order.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON.

May 14.

Lesson—Acts 13:47.

Golden text—I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth.

It is hard to realize that our accounts now turn from Judean to Gentile Christianity. A little reviewing of the matter will show that this is, in the main, true. We hear from now on little of Jerusalem and the Apostles except as Paul has some dealings with them. Christianity with Paul is journeying Westward, it is passing beyond the boundaries of the land of its origin, it is ceasing to be a religion of one people, it is becoming a world religion. This does not mean that Christianity ceased in Palestine or the East. It did not, but it does mean that Eastern Christianity had no one to write its history or that, having been written, it has been lost. Mohammedanism crushed much of it but it has lived on in Syria, Armenia, possibly in India and until modern times in Western China. But with little exception authentic history, as we have it, tells us only of the Church West of Syrian Antioch. And that is Gentile in membership.

Barnabas and his companions—we ought to keep in mind that officially he is the head of this mission party—most naturally visited the synagogues as they went, so they entered the one in Antioch in Pisidia. Here they were kindly received and listened to with attention. It is interesting and valuable to compare this sermon with the one credited to him at Athens, noting the methods used. In both instances he uses material suited to the situation and the people. With the Jews he refers to their past history and seeks to show how Jesus and his mission were the natural development of national life and religious history. There are at least three ways of showing this development. The book of Hebrews makes him a greater high priest. The transfiguration and his own frequent references associate him with the prophetic line. Here he is in Paul's discourse the descendant of the royal line—the son of the hero king David—a savior of his people.

The hour came when they were no longer permitted to use the synagogue. They then turned to the Gentiles. Much of the early success of the Christian preachers was made possible because of the work previously done for them by the Jews. Their efforts had won many proselytes and favorably disposed others so that when the Christians came with a religion less attached to the Jews' hopes of Nationalism, these readily accepted the new teaching. George Fox's early success was in a somewhat similar way made possible because many seekers after truth followed him because his message supplemented the conclusions which they had already reached.

The church at this place became one of a number that marked the success of Paul and numbered him among the greatest propagators of the Gospel in the church.

NEW ENGLAND YEARLY MEETING comes to Vassalboro, Maine,
June 26 to July 2.

FRIENDS, OLD AND YOUNG,
plan to attend this year. Business, Conferences, Sunset Meetings, Recreation, Tent Life, Camp-fire Talks for Young People. All these to make the greatest week of our Quaker year. Come prepared to get and be a blessing.

Send requests for rooms or tents to ELDA R. HENDERSON,
West Falmouth, Massachusetts.

WESTTOWN
SCHOOL

is conducted by Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends and is attended by the children of about sixteen Yearly Meetings. It has all the attributes of an efficient high school and successfully prepares for College some twenty pupils a year.

Will Friends kindly bear Westtown in mind in laying plans for their children's education? If their current plans have been interrupted, perhaps Westtown will satisfactorily fill out the balance of the year. The school is unusually large, but there is room for a few more.

Thomas K. Brown, Principal.
Westtown, Pa.

5 $\frac{1}{2}$ %

FARM MORTGAGES

ON IOWA AND MINNESOTA FARMS ARE THE SAFEST FORM OF INVESTMENT. Tested by our customers for forty-four years. We collect and remit interest wherever investors desire. Write for booklet and list.

ELLSWORTH AND JONES.
 IOWA FALLS, IOWA.

The Oakwood Seminary

Union Springs-on-Cayuga Lake, N. Y.

Endowed boarding school for boys and girls under management of New York Yearly Meeting. Eighth grade, high school and college preparation work. Strong Christian faculty of 11 teachers. Board and tuition, $275.00. Capacity 75. Patronage not limited to Friends. Send for catalogue.

Eliezer Partington, A. B., Principal.

WANTED—By young woman Friend, experienced in Domestic Science, position for summer or shorter period. Will take entire charge of private home and children—or would like institutional, hotel or camp work. Address S. care The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

Mission Study Books

1915-1916

Foreign Mission Study Books

The King's Highway, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. How to Use, 10 cents.

Leaflet Helps: A Living Force in a Dying Land, incidents of Leavening, Cho-son-a-ky, White Fields in Korea, 2 cents each.

Around the World with Jack and Janet, Junior, 29 cents; Guide Book 5 cents; Round Trip Tickets, 2 cents each; Steamer Trunk (mite boxes) 20 cents per dozen; Jack and Janet Buttons 5 cents. Jack and Janet paper dolls with costumes for America, Egypt, India, Burma, China, Korea and Japan, 27 cents. Set of Postal Cards for Foreign and Junior Books (24) 25 cents; Missionary Helps for Junior Leaders and Primary Class Teachers, 25 cents; Talks on David Livingston, Girls and Boys of India, Africa, Chang-ing China, 25 cents each.

Home Mission Study Books.

Home Missions in Action, cloth 58 cents; paper 36 cents. Teacher's Supplements, 5 cents.

Leaflet Helps, America's Melting Pot, What One Mission Worker Learned, Story of a Virginia School, 2 cents each. Don Felipe Gloria, 3 cents.

All Along the Trail, Junior, 29 cents; Teacher's Manual, 10 cents.

Federation Bulletin, issued quarterly, 25 cents a year. Everyland, issued monthly, $1.00 a year. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands, paper 40 cents; The Churches at Work, paper 40 cents; Comrades in Service, cloth 60 cents; Thy Kingdom Come, 25 cents; Missionary Hymnal, 10 cents; Five Missionary Minutes in the Sunday School, 50 cents.

Sec'y of Literature, W. F. M. Union, 2137 Park Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Provident Life and Trust Co.
OF PHILADELPHIA

Office, Fourth and Chestnut Sts.

Capital, $1,000,000. Surplus belonging to Stockholders, $5,000,000.
Insures Lives and Grants Annuities. Collects and Remits Incomes.
Pays Interest on Deposits. Receipts without charge for Wills
Acts as Executor, Administrator, deposited.
Trustee, Guardian, Committee, Rents Safe Deposit Boxes, $5 upward
Assignee, Receiver, Agent, Etc. Assumes Care of Real Estate.

All Trust Funds and Investments are kept separate and apart from the Assets of the Company

OFFICERS

ASA S. WING, President
J. BARTON TOWNSEND, Vice-President and Assistant Trust Officer
J. ROBERTS FOULKE, Trust Officer
DAVID G. ALSOP, Actuary
SAMUEL H. TROTH, Treasurer
C. WALTER BORTON, Secretary

MATTHEW WALKER, Acting Mgr.
Insurance Department
WILLIAM C. CRAIGE, Assistant Trust Officer and Title Officer
JOHN WAY, Assistant Treasurer
J. SMITH HART, Insurance Supervisor
WILLIAM S. ASHBROOK, Agency Secretary

DIRECTORS

Asa S. Wing
Marriott C. Morris
Robert M. Janney
Joseph B. Townsend, Jr.
John B. Morgan

Frederic H. Strawbridge
John Thompson Emlen
Morris R. Bockius
Henry H. Collins
Levi L. Rue

George Wood
Charles H. Harding
J. Whitall Nicholson
Parker S. Williams

The American Friend

Old Series
Vol. XXIII. No. 19.

FIFTH MONTH 11, 1916.

New Series
Vol. IV. No. 19.

He Shall Not Strive Nor Cry

* From "The Word and The Way."

Why is the Master so patient yet
In the world where wrong is wrought?
Takes He no heed of the riot of sin
While His will is treated as naught?
Could He not thunder His judgments down
Where men His power defy?
Oh, the Master is great through His gentleness—
"He shall not strive nor cry."

Not in the whirlwind, not in the storm,
But the still, small voice of love
Is His power to reach to the world's hard heart
And its rebel will to move;
He finds His way through the silences,
He hears the prayer of a sigh;
In wooing whispers the Master pleads—
"He shall not strive nor cry."

How does the Kingdom of Heaven grow?
Never through War and noise;
But as the snowdrops do in spring,
And as love through household joys.
No blatant trumpet, no rush of war,
Proclaims the Christ-King nigh;
Though the kingdoms of earth shall all be His,
"He shall not strive nor cry."

He shall not fail nor discouraged be,
For Him the isles shall wait,
And He shall reign ever from sea to sea,
All nations shall call Him great.
And thus shall His kingdom be ushered in,
As the light in the eastern sky.
He shall save the world by the might of love,
"He shall not strive nor cry."

—Author Unknown.

THE AMERICAN FRIEND

A Religious Family Paper Published for the Friends of America

Authorized by the Five Years Meeting.

Published Weekly by

THE FRIENDS PUBLICATION BOARD

URBANA, OHIO

Executive, Manager's, Editorial and Advertising Offices,
309-310 Second National Bank Building,
RICHMOND, INDIANA.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year.

Headley Brothers, 136 Bishopsgate, London, E. C.,
Agents for Great Britain and Ireland.
Foreign postage, 50 cents extra.

All checks, drafts and Postoffice orders should be made payable to The American Friend and sent to Urbana, Ohio, as should all changes of address and all correspondence relating to subscriptions.

All other correspondence should be directed to The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana.

